YOUNG MEN GAVE A RECEPTION

Young Men's Guild Had Succesful Event—Good Programme

The Young Men's Guild of St. Andrews church scored a big success in their reception to the men of the church last night. In spite of the bad weather a large number assembled in the lecture hall and enjoyed a good programme.

Mr. Ernest Reid occupied the chair and after one or two items of necessary business called upon Misses Tully and Dawson to render an instrumental duett which was well received. The other musical numbers were as follows;

Miss Olive Howell, "When May Comes In."

Mr. Gordon Wright, "Promise Me."

Mr. Lewis Acheson, "Skippers of St. Ives."

Rev. J. G. Potter, "Rocked in the Cradel of the Deep."

These numbers were all encored with the greatest enthusiasm.

The address of the evening was delivered by the Rev. Mr. Riddiford of Park street Baptist church, who complimented the Guild on the successful event and eulogized their object in taking such a deep interest in the practical work of the church as well as in the measure of sport in which they had indulged. He held before them the highest idsom by hich the life of young men was made strong and highly successful.

Rev. J. G. Potter, Messrs. Lees and Andrew McFarlane, honorary members of the Guild, gave words of encouragement.

The thanks of the Guild was tendered all who took part by neat speeches from Messrs. Cornish and Rutherford.

At the conclusion of the programme refreshments were served and a very interesting and delightful meeting was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem.

ANYTHING FURTHER?

The Board of Trade held a meeting last night at which it was decided to thank the minister for favours received, and to ask for more. To tell the truth the conserving of the waters of the whole Trent system, at the estimated expense of $250,000, is little enough for any government, Liberal or Conservative, to expend upon so much more useful an object than—"take your choice of a dozen."

But what of the Power question? Did anybody report on the outcome of the late great citizens' mass meeting in the institute building, where the speakers spoke to the accompaniment of a tin horn (next door), or is the project not dead, but merely sleeping been left over from a precisely similar meeting and precisely similar good resolutions of one year ago?

THE TRUE POLICY

The Montreal Star, in a leading article, shows how utterly insufficient the Canadian cruiser navy would be if a sudden attack on Britain developed in the North Sea, especially, it may be added, when authority would have to be got to move "the Canadian fleet out of Canadian waters." It concludes its article thus (our capitals):

"Consequently the net result of the Globe's laboured argument is to emphasize the fact that the British Admiralty—whatever they may have agreed to UNDER PRESSURE at the Defence Conference—is really convinced that a Canadian navy will be quite useless if a sea Armageddon has to be fought in the next three or four years. So that the Globe has unwittingly again made it clear that the best thing for us to do—if we want to see the Empire kept intact—is to send John Bull "the sinews of war," or PRESENT HIM WITH DREADNOUGHTS or super-Dreadnoughts, which he may use in the most effective way for strengthening the navy which protects us in the act of protecting the Empire. This is the Globe's first attitude on the naval question, from which it receded at the behest of its masters.

"Since then the Globe has been "boxing the compass" in all directions. If a naval officer were as irresponsible a steersman as the naval expert of the Globe, there would be shipwreck and mutiny. But it all depends, we suppose, whether one steers by the magnetic needle or the weather cock."

No doubt Sir Wilfrid will stick to the "independent Canadian navy, not allowed without Canada's consent, to move out of Canadian waters." It is the policy that comes nearest placating those who rule him and wish to rule Canada, but is it the best policy?

The best policy is, undoubtedly, as the Star recommends, and it has the additional merit of being the cheapest, both in the beginning and the end Canada cannot afford to court financial disaster to please any section of her people, however estimable.

SURE WAY TO STOP MASHERS

Miss May Ward "The Cash Girl Has Way of Her Own of Handling them

Miss May Ward, the Dresden Doll Comedienne, who is playing the principal part in the big musical success, "The Cash Girl," is noted for her love of a good joke, and the following is her latest prank, and one of the several sure-cure receipts for those chronic fascinators of the male persuasion who try to make a killing with every pretty girl they pass on the street.

Not long ago, as she was crossing Thirty-fourth street and Broadway, coming from a prominent New York store, she was quickly conscious that a well-dressed man was following her. He was a well-bred man apparently, and was of middle age. At Fifth avenue he came abreast of her, and, lifting his hat and bowing, said: "Good morning; out for a little constitutional?" Without betraying the anger she felt, Miss Ward stopped, faced the man who fancied that he was making progress famously, quietly opening her purse, she took therefrom a quarter and extended it. "There, you poor man," she said, with sympathetic intonation, and loud enough for passersby to be attracted, "I am sorry that you have had nothing to eat for two days. Take this and buy yourself a square meal.

WEDDING BELLS

GREENLEESE—HALL

The marriage was solemnized at St. Paul's church this morning at eleven o'clock of Miss Helen Mary Hall, daughter of James A. Hall, sheriff of Peterborough county, to Mr. Fuller Laird Greenleese, of Montreal, son of Mr. George W. Greenleese, of that city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. Pogue, in the presence of only the members of the families of the contracting parties, and a few intimate friends. The bridal pair were unattended, and the wedding was of a very quiet nature. The bride, who was given away by her father, was attired in a travelling suit of amethyst with marabout hat with amethyst trimmings. She carried a bouquet of mauve chrysanthemums. The wedding march was played by Mr. John Crane, organist of St. Paul's church, and Miss Helen Davies sang "O Fair, O Sweet, O Holy" in beautiful voice.

Mr. and Mrs. Greenleese left on the 11.45 Grand Trunk train on a wedding trip to Quebec city and other points east. On their return they will reside in Montreal. The bride received many beautiful presents, as she was popular among a wide circle of friends.

CAMERON—CONNAL

A wedding of considerable local interest was celebrated this afternoon at 2.30 o'clock at the residence of Mr. P. Connal, 270 Brock street, the contracting parties being Miss Elizabeth Henderson Connal, only daughter of Mr. P. Connal, and William George Cameron of New York. Rev. R. Pogue of St. Paul's Presbyterian church was the officiating clergyman. Only immediate friends were numbered among the guests. The bride was given away by her father. "Lohengrin" wedding march was played with sympathetic expression by Miss Gladys Cameron

The bride was unattended except by her two little nieces, Margaret and Jeanette Collins as flower girls. They carried pretty baskets of daisies and lilies of the valley.

The bride was charmingly gowned in white liberty satin trimmed with baby Irish lace and carried a sheath bouquet of lilies of the valley.

After the wedding supper the bridal pair left on the 4.58 train for New York where they will reside. The bride's travelling suit was of walnut lady's cloth with amethyst draped toque hat.

WINTER COMMENCED ITS RULE TO-DAY

The first real touch of winter came to-day, and was received with regret by the average citizen and with joy by the coal men and fur dealers. The temperature took a decided drop yesterday afternoon, and has been doing down ever since. Some snow fell this afternoon, but not enough to make the ground white.

THE MARKET

Peterborough, Nov. 18.—There is a considerable move on the live stock market this week. A very large number of loads of live hogs of good quality being delivered at Matthews' factory, both by waggon and car load. The price still holds at nearly last weeks figure, $7.50 to $7.60, being paid for selects, a somewhat higher price than that obtained in Toronto. Prices in other sections remain about the same as last week.

We Are Responsible for the Furs We Sell

Your confidence in our integrity of judgment and of statement in the matter of Furs is absolutely necessary to gain for us your trade.

It would be folly on our part to lose the trust of any of our many patrons by an indiscriminate guarantee of everything that is sold as Furs, but we do guarantee such Furs as we know to be good, and we stand back of our guarantee by making them right at any time should they not prove to be as represented.

With a guarantee like this you are assured of your money's worth every time, as it entails upon us the greatest care and the most careful examination of all Fur skins which enter into a job, so that the possibility of extra expense for making good later on is not forthcoming. The lowest priced Furs are not by any means the cheapest, as it pays to pay for quality.

TO TAKE NO ACTION ON REQUEST FROM LAKEFIELD

In Regard to Petitioning Dominion Government for an Extension of the Wharf at That Place.

The Lakefield Board of Trade, through their secretary, Mr. J. W. Lillicrap, recently requested the Peterborough Board of Trade to join with them in petitioning the Dominion Government for an extension of the wharf there. The matter came up at the meeting of the Board of Trade last night and it was decided to take no action in the matter.

Mr. J. H McClellan, superintendent of the Trent Canal, said that Lakefield have 535 feet of wharfage at the present time. They wanted it extended north to the Grand Trunk station. While Lakefields request might be all right, Peterborough had more need of a dock than Lakefield. There was only 200 feet of wharfage here and Peterborough would have enough to do to get more wharfage for itself.

Mr. E. G. Patterson said it was the Grand Trunk's business to build the extension at Lakefield if it were needed.

On motion is was decided to take no action on the communication from the Lakefield Board of Trade.

CONSERVATION OF THE TRENT WATERS IS STRONGLY FAVORED

Board of Trade Passes Resolution Urging on Government the Importance of Continuing Policy of Conserving Waters in Rivers and Lakes North of Peterborough—Move to Secure More Wharfage Here.

The Peterborough Board of Trade is strongly in favor of the policy of the Dominion Government in conserving the Trent waters, and at a meeting last night passed a resolution expressign appreciation of what has been done, and asking that the good work be continued. This resolution will be sent to the proper officials at Ottawa. Another resolution was passed appointing a committee to gather information regarding the benefits to be derived from a further conservatio nof the waters to the north of Peterborough, and to present such information to the department at Ottawa. All the speakers at the meetign referred to the importance of conserving the waters and to the marked improvement that had been brought about in the flow of the river at Peterborough by the buildings of dams on the Gull, Burnt and Mississagua rivers during the past four years. The superintendent of the Trent canal, Mr. J. H McClellan, was also complimented on the good work he head done in this connection since his appointment. The meeting also decided to urge on the government the necessity of extending the wharfage at Peterborough as soon as possible. Plans were prepared two or three years ago for a wharf along the river front between the C.P.R. bridge and Hunter street. This matter , was left with the committee appointed to deal with the question of securing information in connection with the conservation of the waters.

The meeting was held in the city council chamber and was well attended. The president, Ald. G. A. Gillespie, was in the chair, and about thirty of the members were in attendance.

The main resolution passed was as follows—

Moved by J. H. Larmonth, seconded by W. H. Denham:

That the members of the Board of Trade of the city of Peterborough desire to place on record their sincere appreciation of the manner in which the water in the Trent canal, above Peterborough, has been regulated and conserved under the direction of the capable Deputy Minister and Chief Engineer, Mr. M. J. Butler, C.E., affording, as it has, a regular flow at all times during the year, thereby enabling the various companies to supply electrical energy to the manufacturers in such a satisfactory manner as to enable them to operate their factories and mills without interruption for want of power.

We also approve of the policy of the Department in building new dams and renewing old dams on the Gull river, Burnt river, Mississauga creek and other tributary waters recently taken over from the Ontario Government, and we hope that it may be the determination of the Government to continue this satisfactory policy of conserving the waters.

We wish to thank the Honourable Geo. P. Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals, and Mr. Butler, for the great interest they have taken in pushing to completion the Trent canal, and also in conserving the back waters for the purposes of navigation, power and the lumber interest, and also in improving and beautifying the canal, and we hope that they may be long spared to fill the honorable positions they now occupy, which we consider will not only be for the welfare of the Trent canal and this section generally, but will be to the benefit of the whole Dominion at large.

Mr. Gillespie asked Mr. McClellan to open the discussion on the question of further conservation of the Trent waters.

Mr. McClellan said the Government had done considerable during the past five years towards the conservation of the waters in the country north of Peterborough. The question at Peterborough was to have a good flow of water at all times. To have this the government had been building dams to conserve the waters of the Gull river Burnt river and Mississagua river, and good results had been obtained. They had been spending from $15,000 to $20,000 each year for this purpose, and the speaker had requested them to make an appropriation for this purpose again next year. It was decided that the Board of Trade should press this claim strongly.

Mr E. G. Patterson said everyone remembered the shortage of water and power at Peterborough last year. Industries were hampered by the lack of power at that time. This was a most important matter to Peterborough, and the speaker would heartily endorse any action towards a further conservation of the waters. The Dominion Government had decided on a policy of conservation of water powers, and Peterborough would be perfectly within its rights in asking the Government to continue the work of conserving the waters of the Trent waters.

Mr W. H. Denham endorsed Mr Patterson's remarks, and added that in the spring there was too much water and in the fall sometimes there was hardly enough. More dams would mean a steadier flow of the river at Peterborough, and greater development of power as a result. The government had done good work in this respect and Peterborough should let them know that what they had done is appreciated and that a continuation of the policy, is desired.

Mr. W. H. Moore said that he understood that dams had been built on the Burnt and Gull rivers this year. There was an immense ramification of lakes and rivers to the north of Peterborough, and they could be utilized to splendid advantage to have a steady flow of water at Peterborough. Mr. Moore said there had been a marked improvement in the control of the water in the Otonabee river at Peterborough since Mr. McClellan took charge of the Trent canal.

Mr. J. H. Larmonth referred to the good work of Mr. McClellan in regulating the water at Peterborough. The flow of water at the Peterborough Hydraulic Power Company's dam had been steadier this year than ever before. Twenty-seven hundred square miles of territory drained into the Otonabee river. The speaker had gone into the question to some extent, and he had found, that taking the average rainfall for the past thirty years, and figuring it out from this basis there would be sufficient water come down to provide 6,000 horse power per year at the Hydraulic Power Company's dam. This was a big increase over the present development.

Mr. Denham pointed out that the conservation of the waters would result in the development of more power at all the dams at Peterborough and between the city and Lakefield.

Mr. D. O'Connell said the conservation of the waters to the north of Peterborough was one of the most important questions that had come before the Board of Trade in a long time. He was strongly in favor of pressing the matter at Ottawa and moved that a committee be appointed to secure information on the subject, put it into shape and present it to the proper officials at the Capital.

Ald. Duffus seconded the motion and in doing so referred to the importance of the power question here. Lindsay and Fenelon Falls were working out a scheme that they considered would enable them to supply electric power at less then $15 per horse power. In view of this fact it was imperative that Peterborough should lose no time in getting cheap power. Mr. Duffus considered that the conservation of the waters to the north had an important bearing on the water power question at Peterborough. He congratulated the Board of Trade on the recent successful citizens' meeting held in the Collegiate Institute.

Mr. McClellan did not think that it was necessary to secure more information to present to the government regarding the conservation of waters. They had already gone into the matter very fully and were well aware of the conditions and the importance of the work.

Mr. W. H. Moore said he understood the Deputy Minister had complete information about the conditions in the north country as he had spent considerable time in that district for that purpose.

Mr. Larmonth moved the resolution given above and it was seconded by Mr. Denham and carried unanimously.

Mr. O'Connell's motion also carried unanimously and the following committee was named to do the work: Messrs. D. O'Connell, chairman, D. Hughes Charles, R. W. Travers, J. H. Larmonth, W. H. Moore, W. H. Denham, with power to add to their numbers.

Mr. D. O'Connell referred to the importance of following up the good start that had been accomplished at the citizens' meeting last week. It had been decided then that Peterborough should have an Industrial commissioner. This view should be presented to the city council as soon as possible. A deputation should wait on the council in committee of the whole and present to the aldermen the views of the citizens on this matter.

It was decided to leave this matter in the hands of the committee appointed to look after the securing of the information regarding the conservation of the waters.

Mr. Denham drew attention to the necessity of pressing on the government the need for more wharfage at Peterborough. The plans had been prepared two or three years ago and the government should be asked to execute them as soon as possible. Mr. Denham's suggestion was heartily endorsed by the meeting and the matter was left to the committee already appointed.

A motion was also passed expressing appreciation of the good work done by Mr. J. H. McClellan in the control of the Trent waters.

The BLACK BAG

By Louis Joseph Vance

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

"Why, there was a black pearl scarfpin"—

"W'y, don't you remember? You gave that to me, 'count of me 'avin' syved yer life. 'Twas me throwed you that line, you know."

"Oh," commented Kirkwood briefly. The pin had been among the most valuable and cherished of his belongings.

"Yes," nodded the captain in reminiscence. "You don't remember? Likely 'twas the brandy slagin' in yer 'ead. You pushes it into my 'ands—almost weepin', you was—an' sez, sez you, 'Stryker,' you sez, 'tyke this in triflin' toking of my gratichood; I wouldn't hinsult you,' you sez, 'by hofferin' you money, but this I can insist on yer acceptin', an' no refusal,' says you."

"Oh," repeated Kirkwood.

"If I for an instant thought you wasn't sober when you done it— But no; you're a gent, if there ever was one, an' I'm not the man to offend you."

"Oh, indeed."

Captain Stryker thoughtfully measured out a second drink, limited only by the capacity of the tumbler, engulfed it noisily and got up.

"Guess I'll be turnin' in," he volunteered affably, yawning and stretching.

"I was about to ask you to do me a service," began Kirkwood.

"Yes?" with the rising inflection of mockery.

Kirkwood quietly produced his cigar case, a gold matchbox, gold cardcase and slipped a signet ring from his finger. "Will you buy these," he asked, "or will you lend me £5 and hold them as security?"

Stryker examined the collection with exaggerated interest strongly tinctured with mistrust. "I'll buy 'em," he offered eventually, looking up.

"That's kind of you"—

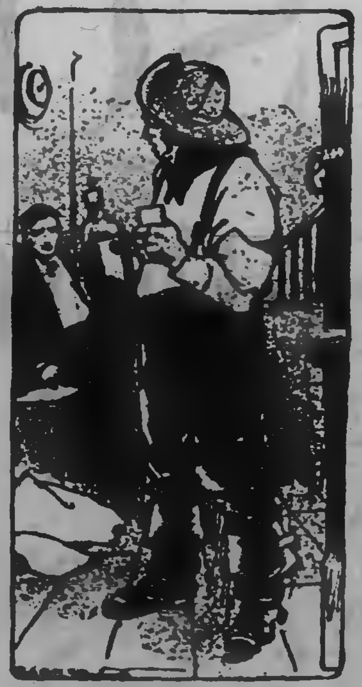
"Ow, they ain't much use to me, but Bill Stryker's allus willin' to accommodate a friend. Four quid, you said?"

"Five."

"They ain't wuth over four to me."

"Very well. Make it four," Kirkwood assented contemptuously.

The captain swept the articles into one capacious fist, pivoted on one heel at the peril of his neck and lumbered



"Ow, there you are, eigh, little bright eyes!"

unsteadily off to his room. Pausing at the door, he turned back in inquiry.

"I sye, 'ow did you come to get the impression there was a party named Almanack aboard this wessel?"

"Calendar"—

"'Ave it yer own wye," Stryker conceded gracefully.

"There isn't, is there?"

"You 'eard me."

"Then," said Kirkwood sweetly, "I'm sure you wouldn't be interested."

The captain pondered this at leisure. "You seemed pretty keen abaht seein' 'im," he remarked conclusively.

"I was."

"Seems to me I did 'ear the nyme sumw'eres afore." The captain appeared to wrestle with an obdurate memory. "Ow!" he triumphed. "I know. 'E was a chap up Manchester wye. Keeper in a loonatic asylum 'e was. That yer party?"

"No," said Kirkwood wearily.

"I didn't know but mebbe 'twas. Excuse me. Thought as 'ow mebbe you'd escyped from 'is tender care, but, findin' the world cold, chynged yer mind an' wanted to gow back."

Without waiting for a reply he lurched into his room and banged the door to. Kirkwood, divided between amusement and irritation, heard him stumbling about for some time, and then a hush fell, grateful enough while it lasted, which was not long, for no sooner did the captain sleep than a penetrating snore added itself unto the cacophony of waves and wind and tortured ship.

Kirkwood, comforted at first by the blessed tobacco, lapsed insensibly into dreary meditations.

Of one or two things he was convinced—for one, that Stryker was a liar worthy of classification with Calendar and Mrs. Hallam. His impregnable conclusion was that those whom he sought had boarded the Alethea, but had left her before she tripped her anchor. That they were not stowed away aboard her seemed unquestionable. The brigantine was hardly large enough for the presence of three persons aboard her to be long kept a secret from an inquisitive fourth—unless, indeed, they lay in hiding in the hold, for which, once the ship got under way, there could be scant excuse. And Kirkwood did not believe himself a person of sufficient importance in Calendar's eyes to make that worthy endure the discomforts of a 'tween decks imprisonment throughout the voyage, even to escape recognition.

With every second, then, he was traveling farther from her to whose aid he had rushed, impelled by motives so hot headed, so innately chivalric, so unthinkingly gallant, so exceptionally idiotic!

"What else could I do?" he defended himself against the indictment of common sense. "I couldn't leave her to the mercies of that set of rogues. And heaven knows I was given every reason to believe she would be aboard this ship! Why, she herself told me that she was sailing!"

Heaven knew, too, that this folly of his had cost him a pretty penny, first and last. His watch was gone beyond recovery, his homeward passage forfeited. He no longer harbored illusions as to the steamship company presenting him with another berth in lieu of that called for by that water soaked slip of paper then in his pocket—courtesy of Stryker. He had sold for a pittance, a tithe of its value, his personal jewelry and had spent every penny he could call his own. With the money Stryker was to give him he would be able to get back to London and his third rate hostelry, but not with enough over to pay that one week's room rent, or—

"Oh, the devil!" he groaned, head in hands.

The future loomed wrapped in unspeakable darkness, lighted by no least ray of hope. It had been bad enough to lose a comfortable living through a gigantic convulsion of nature, but to think that he had lost all else through his own egregious folly, to find himself reduced to the kennels!

Stryker, emerging from his room for breakfast, found the passenger with a hostile look in his eye and a jaw set in ugly fashion. His eyes, too, were the abiding place of smoldering devils, and the captain, recognizing them, considerately forbore to stir them up with any untimely pleasantries. To be sure, he was autocrat on his own ship, and Kirkwood's standing aboard was nil, but then there was just enough yellow in the complexion of Stryker's soul to incline him to sidestep trouble whenever feasible. And, besides, he entertained dark suspicions of his guest—suspicions he scarce dared voice even to his inmost heart.

The morning meal, therefore, passed off in constrained silence. The captain ate voraciously and vociferously, pushed back his chair and went on deck to relieve the mate. The latter, a stunted little cockney with a wizened countenance and a mind as foul as his tongue, got small change of his attempts to engage the passenger in conversation on topics that he considered fit for discussion. After the sixth or eighth snubbing he rose in dudgeon, discharged a poisonous bit of insolence and retired to his berth, leaving Kirkwood to finish his breakfast in peace.

CHAPTER XVIII.

TO the tune of a moderating wind the morning wearied away. Kirkwood went on deck once for distraction from the intolerable monotony of it all, got a sound drenching of spray and was glad to dodge below and dry himself.

He had the pleasure of the mate's company at dinner, the captain remaining on deck until Hobbs had finished and gone up to relieve him, and by that time Kirkwood was through.

Stryker blew down with a blustery show of cheer. "Well, well, my little man!" (It happened that he topped Kirkwood's stature by at least five inches.) "Enj'yin' yer sea trip?"

"About as much as you'd expect," snapped Kirkwood.

"Ow!" The captain began to shovel food into his face. Kirkwood watched him, fascinated with suspense. It seemed impossible that the man could continue so to employ his knife without cutting his throat from the inside. But years of such manipulation had made him expert, and his guest, keenly disappointed, at length ceased to hope.

Between gobbles Stryker eyed him furtively.

"Treat me all right?" he demanded abruptly.

Kirkwood started out of a brown study. "What? Who? Why, I suppose I ought to be—indeed, I am grateful," he asserted. "Certainly you saved my life, and"—

"Ow, I don't mean that." Stryker gathered the imputation into his paw and flung it disdainfully to the four winds of heaven. "Bless yer 'art, you're welcome. I wouldn't let no dorg drownd 'f I could 'elp it. No," he declared, "nor a loonatic, neither."

He thrust his plate away and shifted sidewise in his chair. "I 'uz just wonderin'," he pursued, picking his teeth meditatively with a penknife, "'ow they feeds you in them as-ylums. 'Avin never been inside one myself, it's on'y natural I'd be cur'us. There was one of them institootions near where I was borned—Birming'am, that is. I used to see the loonies playin' in the grounds. I remember just as well! One of 'em an' me struck up quite an acquaintance"—

"Naturally he'd take to you on sight."

"Ow! Strynge 'ow we 'it it off, eigh? You myke me think of 'im. Young chap 'e was, the livin' spit an' himage of you. It don't happen, does it, you're the same man? 'E was allus plannin' to run awye an' drownd 'isself."

He wore the joke threadbare even to his own taste and in the end got heavily to his feet, starting for the companionway. "Land you this arternoon," he remarked casually, "some 3 o'clock or thereabouts—p'raps later. I don't know, though, as I 'ad ought to let you loose."

Kirkwood made no answer. Chuckling, Stryker went on deck.

In the course of an hour the American followed him. The Alethea was within the wide jaws of the western Scheldt. Kirkwood approached the captain, who, acting as his own pilot, was standing by the wheel and barking sharp orders to the helmsman.

"Have you a Bradshaw on board?" asked the young man.

"Steady!" This to the man at the wheel; then to Kirkwood, "Wot's that, me lud?"

Kirkwood repeated his question. Stryker eyed him suspiciously for a thought.

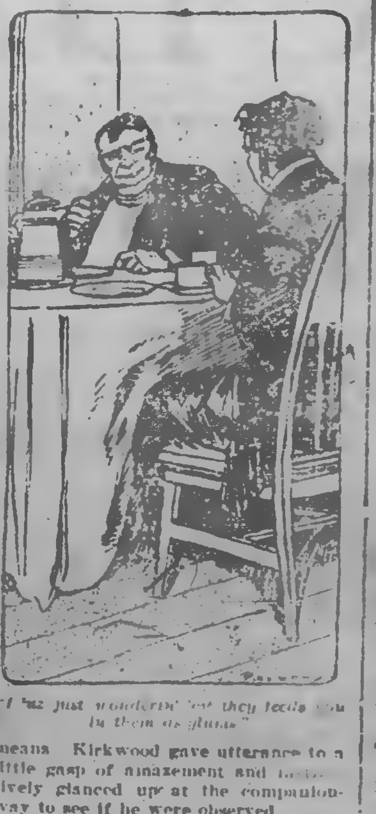
"Wot d' you want it for?"

"I want to see when I can get a boat back to England."

"H-m-m! Yes, you'll find a Bradshaw in the port locker, near the forward bulkhead. Run along now an' pl'y, an' mind you don't go tearin' out the pyges to myke pyper boatses to go sylin' in."

Kirkwood went below, found the designated locker and, opening it, saw first to his hand the familiar bulky red volume.

The strap removed, the book opened easily, as if by force of habit, at the precise table he had wished to consult. Some previous client had left a marker between the pages—and not an ordinary bookmark by any manner of means. Kirkwood gave utterance to a little gasp of amazement and furtively glanced up at the companionway to see if he were observed.



"I 'uz just wonderin' 'ow they feeds you in them as-ylums."

He was not, but for safety's sake he moved farther back into the cabin and out of the range of vision of any one on deck—a precaution which was almost immediately justified by the clumping of heavy feet upon the steps as Stryker descended in pursuit of the ever essential drink.

"Find it?" he demanded, staring blindly with eyes not yet focused to the change from light to gloom at the young man, who was sitting with the guide open on his knees, a tightly clinched fist resting on the transom at either side of him.

In reply he received a monosyllabic affirmative. Kirkwood did not look up.

"You must be a howl," commented the captain, making for the seductive locker.

"A—what?"

"A howl, readin' that fine print there in the dark. W'y don't you go over to the light? I'll 'ave to 'ave them shutters tyken off the winders."

"I'm all right." Kirkwood went on studying the book.

Stryker swigged off his rum and wiped his lips with the back of a red paw, hesitating a moment to watch his guest.

"Mykes it seem more 'omelike for you, I expect," he observed.

"What do you mean?"

"A Bradshaw's first cousin to a halmanack, ain't 'e? Can't get one, take t'other—next best thing. Sorry I didn't think of it sooner; like my passengers to feel comfy. No, don't you go traipsin off to gay Paree an' squanderin' wot money you got left. You 'ear?"

"By the way, captain!" Kirkwood looked up at this, but Stryker was already halfway up the companion.

Cautiously the American opened his right fist and held to the light that which had been concealed, close wadded in his grasp, a square of sheer linen edged with lace, crumpled, but spotless and diffusing in the unwholesome den a faint, intangible fragrance, the veriest wraith of that elusive perfume which he would never again inhale without instantly recalling that night ride through London in the intimacy of a cab.

He closed his eyes and saw her again as clearly as though she stood before him—hair of gold massed above the forehead of snow, curling in adorable tendrils at the nape of her neck, lips like scarlet splashed upon the immaculate whiteness of her skin, head poised audaciously in its spirited, youthful allure, dark eyes smiling the least trace sadly beneath the level brows.

Unquestionably the handkerchief was hers. If proof other than the assurance of his heart were requisite he had it in the initial delicately embroidered in one corner—a D, for Dorothy!

Quivering with excitement, he bent again over the book and studied it intently. After all, he had not been wrong! He could assert now, without fear of refutation, that Stryker had lied.

THE LINE UP OF THE HAMILTON TEAM

Hamilton, Nov. 16.—With the exception of one or two changes on the wing line the Tigers will play the same team against Ottawa on Saturday at Toronto for the inter-Provincial championship as walloped the Rough Riders here by 30-5.

George Smith will be back at full with Moore, Simpson and Burton on the half-back division.

Big "Rajah" Wigle will probably be unable to play, as he injured his foot in the Argo game. Jack Grey will be back on the wing line. If Bramer is moved back to the scrimmage Loftus or Turner will replace him as wing. Otherwise Gerrard, of the intermediates, will play centre scrimmage.

ANNUAL MEETING OF CITY HOCKEY LEAGUE TO-NIGHT

The annual meeting of the Peterborough City Hockey League takes place to-night in the Oriental Hotel parlours at eight o'clock and it is important that all teams interested send representatives so that the business which will come before the meeting may be properly dealt with. It is likely that the ticket system will be discussed to-night and as this has considerable to do with the financial end of the league the question should receive serious consideration. It is understood that all of last year's teams, with the possible exception of Lakefield, will be in line again and with a capable body of officers the league should have a very successful season.

Collingwood will have a junior and intermediate hockey team this year.

Jack Oldham claims to have a bunch of fast ones picked up for the West End City League team this season.

Does anybody know how many points Parkdale really scored against the Peterborough fourteen? Some say a great deal more than forty.—News.

"Hay" Miller has been elected to the executive of the Edmonton hockey team.

The grandstand to be built for the grounds where the Toronto Baseball team will play next year will seat 9,600.

The rugby cup is gone and now the hockey mug is to go too. Lindsay's star in the athletic world is on the wane. Ichabod! Ichabod! Her glory hath departed.

Nothing remains to be done but to start all over again and rebuild a hockey and rugby team from the foundation of numerous small boys at present frequenting the Public schools. From these future teams may arise which again will make the province re sound with the name of Lindsay.—Lindsay Warder.

It is said that Laseur, who guarded the nets for Ottawa last year, will work at the same position for the Wanderers this season.

According to Fred Whitcroft, the line-up of the Edmonton hockey team is not known as yet.

There is a bowling team in Hamilton called the "Scoundrels." It would be an easy matter to get members for a similarly-named organization in Peterborough.

The Quakers expect to have a strong team this season to defend the championship of the Mercantile Hockey League won by them last year. With most of last year's team available and some new ones the "smile" is likely to broaden considerably.

HOCKEY

WILL PLAY WITH WATERLOO.

Joe Oulette, the Fenelon Falls hockey player, was in town to-day. He is going to play pro. hockey with Waterloo this winter.

"Not going out west this winter?" he was asked.

"Not much," Joseph replied, "this weather puts me in mind of the forty below out on the plains last winter. Lots cold enough around Ontario, thank you."

Buck Irving is gathering the nucleus of a professional team in Waterloo, and Oulette will cast his fortune with that team. A number of other well-known professionals will also play in that town.—Lindsay Warder.

With five teams in the game this year the supporters of the City League have every reason to be enthusiastic over the city's prospects. It would be more satisfactory in the matter of arranging the schedule if there were six aggregations in the league and another team to complete the sextette is looked for. There should be plenty of material for another seven.

LOCAL BOARD OF TRADE NOT IN FAVOR OF CHANGE

At the meeting of the Board of Trade last night a letter was received from the Hamilton Board of Trade asking for the views of the local Board in reference to a movement to have civic holiday on the same date throughout the province of Ontario. The letter pointed out that a uniform date was advisable, as having the holiday on different dates in different towns and cities interfered with business, especially the commercial trade.

In reference to the above Mr. D. Hughes Charles said the railways would likely be opposed to such a move.

Mr. W. S. Dodds was asked his opinion, and said that the railways would be opposed to a change being made, as if the same date was observed all over the province the railways would find it difficult to handle the passenger traffic.

Mr. W. H. Moore asked Mr. Dodds how the railways got along on Thanksgiving Day and Mr. Dodds said the traffic was not as great on that day as on civic holiday.

On motion of Mr. Charles, seconded by Mr. J. H. Larmonth, a resolution was passed to the effect that the Peterborough Board of Trade did not approve of the idea suggested by the Hamilton Board of Trade.

YOUNG LADIES' GUILD HOLD, VERY SUCCESSFUL BAZAAR

The Bridgenorth Church Benefits – A Most Successfu Gathering.

As announced in the Review some weeks ago, the Young Ladies' Guild held their bazaar in the Foresters' Hall, which was beautifully decorated with autumn leaves, flowers, etc. Besides the beautiful and useful fancy articles which they had made, there were cream candy of every variety; grapes, ice cream, and a lunch which would have compared favorably with many a "tea." The net proceeds of the evening were $110.

For some weeks the church has been closed, owing to the thorough renovation and decorating that was going on. A splendid roof of steel shingles has taken the place of the cedar one, which was beginning to show signs of old age. The seats in the rear part of the church are elevated, allowing a full view of the pulpit. The whole church, from ceiling to basement, inside and outside, has been repainted, the pews and wainscoting being done in dark oak. The Ladies' Aid saw to the carpeting of the aisles, pulpit and choir platforms, and the young ladies of the Guild installed a gasoline gas plant, so that we now have one of the most chaste, neat and beautifully-lighted churches to be seen anywhere. The reopening services were held on Sunday, Nov. 14. The sermons, morning and evening, were preached by the Rev. D. S. Houck, of Wellington, chairman of the Picton District, who was the pastor of the church when it was dedicated, some twenty years ago, and were appreciated by all. A statement of the cost and an appeal for contributions were made by the pastor, Rev. S. Crookshanks. The total cost, he said, was over $750. To meet this there was on hand about $250, leaving a balance to be provided for of $500. The congregation was asked to to put $250 on the plates. A free-will offering was taken at both the morning and evening services. At the close of the evening service it was found that the offerings for the day were $308.61, which showed how thoroughly the congregation appreciated the excellent work that had been done.

Messrs. Johnston and Edwards, of Peterborough, did the decorating.

SUCCESSFUL OUTING OF CHAWANAGA HUNT CLUB

The Chawanaga Hunt Club returned to the city last evening after having spent their fifth annual outing at the hunting grounds in Parry Sound. Twenty-four fine deer were secured by the party, twelve of which weighed together over 1,400 pounds. This season has been an unusually successful and enjoyable one, and is one which the members will remember for a long time to come. During the outing a large lumberman's shanty was occupied by the club and Mr. Sam Long acted as cook. A special car was engaged to convey the party to Chawanaga station, which is only a short distance from the camp and the return trip home was made in the same manner. Several fine heads were secured to be mounted and kept as souvenirs of the trip.

Those who made up the party were Messrs. Chas. Gladman, captain, Sam Ray, Judge Rogers, W. D. Best, secretary, Charles and Albert Curtis, John Bradley, Norman Bradley, Dr. Cole, Toronto, John Bennet, North Monaghan, Wm. and Talbot Bothwell, D. Evans, Jas. H. Metherel, George Metcalfe, Peter Kerr, Martin McFadden, Arthur Morrow, Parry Sound.

POLITICAL CONSTERNATION; PEERS WILL REFUSE BUDGET

Special to the Review.

London, Eng., Nov 17.—A whirlwind political campaign unequalled in the history of England, began to-day following the announcement of Lord Lansdowne that the peers will reject the budget. The Liberals are furious and denounce the intended action as revolutionary and unconstitutional. It is admitted that the rejection will mean financial chaos to the Government and mean a loan of five millions.

FRESH AIR AND SUNSNINE AND LOTS OF IT FOR CHILD IN PLACE OF HOMEWORK

Dr. Sheard's Interesting Lecture on "School Hygiene" Shows Him Opposed to Artificial Methods of Retaining Health; is Against Cramming Brain with Unnecessary Data.

St. Thomas, Nov. 13.—Dr. Sheard, medical health officer of Toronto, is an ardent advocate of fresh air and sunshine and lots of it and healthful play and exercise for the growing child, utterly opposed to cramming and home-work in connection with the public schools, believes in plenty of congenial employment for the development of a sturdy manhood, but is as strongly opposed to overwork and believes in the rest cure for brain fag and overtaxed nature before it is found necessary to call in a physician and the irreparable damage is done.

"School Hygiene" was the subject of an able, instructive and eloquently delivered lecture by the doctor in the auditorium in the public library building last night. It was an effort that deserved a much larger audience than the auditorium could accommodate, and one which every citizen might listen to with profit and pleasure, but there was only a very sparse audience, a case of "two or three gathered together," consisting of most of the school teachers, a few trustees and half a dozen others, about 75 in all.

MANY PHYSICAL DEFECTS.

Dr. Lipsey, chairman of the Board of Education, presided, and in his introductory remarks said that the ancient Greeks believed in the development of a sound body and a sound mind. We to-day had departed from this idea as an examination of the schools of England showed that from 19 to 25 per cent. were diseased, while an examination in Philadelphia a short time ago showed that 35 per cent. suffered from some physical or mental defect. He thought good results would follow a medical examination of the school. He was sorry that those who should be educated along these lines were not present. He felt that the parents had not turned out and said that the lecturer would not feel flattered by such a small audience.

A RADICAL OF RADICALS.

Dr. Sheard was received with applause and at once launched right into his subject. He described himself as a radical of the radicals in regard to school methods. First of all he aimed to develop the characteristics of the child and the great characteristic of man is his brain. Man's brain was heavier than that of any other animal excepting the mastodon or elephant. The teacher in handling a child is not making records on a piece of marble, but impression on a soft, pliable organism, the brain, the construction of which the doctor scientifically described. It is no use attempting to store too many facts on this warehouse floor. When you press one thing in you press something else out. The idea of education is not to cram the minds full of dates and all the old happenings before and since the time of the flood. That is a waste of time. The world does not want general information. It wants specification.

SPECIALIST A SUCCESS.

The man who is a specialist. He is the man who can do one thing in life a little better than somebody else. That's what we want. We do not want the paragon who can tell you off-hand everything that has occurred since the time of the flood. The first thing is to consider the brain; next the creature who has the brain, and then consider the conditions that surround its highest possible development. A great brain does not necessarily show great mentality. Very often smaller brains show the greatest mentality and the teacher should educate and develop all the nerve endings, so as to receive impressions through these educated nerves to the brain. Then there is volition. The determination, the "will" of the man to do something and he does it. That is something independent of educative faculties at all. Then comes intelligence or the capacity of summing up, determining and developing anything. The fictitious, the imaginary ideas, the result of the stimulation of the grey matter of the brain.

THE FAULTS OF IMITATION.

The lecturer read authentical instances of where persons who imagined they were injured, but were not and suffered great pain until disillusioned. Then there was imitation. We copy one another, we imitate in fashions of dress, in speech, etc. Some have not the strength of character to act for themselves on the merits or demerits of a thing. If this is true of adults what can be expected of children? They imitate their parents and their teachers, and they copy one another. The child who stutters or stutters from nervousness should not be harrowed and distressed by a teacher and copied by other children and then injured by them, but should be sent to some place where they would be freed from nervous excitement. But he had known of teachers to whip a child for stuttering and spank a child for nervous shaking.

FRESH AIR AS MEDICINE.

"Don't take medicine," said the doctor, "go and take nature's remedy," fresh air and sunshine, the best cure for the home and the school-house." It was only lately we had learned this and now, instead of keeping the consumptive carefully away from every draft and in a warm place we now put them in a tent out in our cold winter air. We wrap up and keep their bodies warm and give them an abundance of fresh air day and night. Yet the school teachers and the trustees do not seem to realize this, but make every arrangement to keep out the sunlight and the air. There were many elaborate systems of ventilation, but he never knew one of them that worked and they never would. The best system of ventilation was to open the windows and let in the air and sunshine.

VACATIONS TOO SHORT.

The school hours are too long and the vacations too short. The children become wearied and fagged from the long hours and overwork. He would make a penal statute on the teacher that would give the child home-work.

When the child becomes pale and wan, instead of rest its studies go on and more is piled upon it because of its inability to keep up. Then sickness and fever comes and in its delirum the child is generally found to be doing homework. The trouble was there in the brain before the child got the fever.

DENOUNCES HOME-WORK.

He denounced the practice of keeping a child in school after hours to accomplish the unsuccessful lesson and then crowding upon it more home-work so that it might catch up, but in effect causing mental and physical wreckage. It was the delicate tissues of the child that need development. Throw away the books, said the lecturer; let the boy play football, get his chest expanded, his limbs strengthed, let him go and get rest, and get up bright and strong, a better boy, who will grow up a better man. Only two per cent of medallists make a success in life. It is not the prize boys who make the prize men. He referred to the men who by overwork and over-taxing their energies had made money, anxious for more still kept on until at last nature calls a halt. Nature and nature's forces are the master. The collapse comes. a hysician is called when it is too late and he can do nothing. What is wanted long before is rest. What the child wants is to rest, to grow and to develop.

DON'T OVERLOAD CHILD.

It is a most dangerous policy to overtax the young child. It is criminal to overload the young child's brain. The school house should provide the best sanitary conditions, the surroundings the best and brightest possible, with plenty of room for playgrounds and plenty of grass to play in. The rooms should be above ground and let the light and air in. He did not want the artificial system of ventilation. He had never seen one that was a success. You can't make warm air go down any more than you can make water run uphill. Open the windows and let in the air and sunlight. Provide an abundance of facilities for calesthenics and drill and enable our children to grow up well shaped, well formed and don't be so careful as to their intellectual attainments. He preferred calesthenics before grammar. If there was a foolish thing in the world it was the rules of grammar. If brought up in a grammatical environment the child will speak grammatically and not otherwise.

MEDICAL INSPECTION

As to the medical inspection schools the doctor was not over enthusiastic, but thought the system in vogue in Toronto, a medical inspection twice a year, might be followwed in this city. What is wanted is good air and sunshine, good food and good water drank from glasses or chin acups and not rusty tin cups. He denounced the free free school book system in so far as it was an aid in spreading contagious diseases by the indiscriminate use of pencils, books, etc. He liked individuality and wanted the children kept separate and not seated in pairs at school. They should think and act

HOMES MAKE A NATION

The crowning glory of womanhood was motherhood and he said that the United States would not always be a great nation because its homes were disappearing and they were now living in rooms and flats. All the old stock were passing away and their places being taken by foreigners. What made England great was her homes and the associations around the hearths in these homes. Congenial labor was one of the best things to develop the condition of the brain. Congenial work was the great physical and mental tonic. The doctor concluded his interesting lecture with an eloquent peroration on the dignity of labor, in which he said that the man without work is a miserable thing at best.

Arthur Baxter Received Various Amounts From Policy-holders, But Did Not Turn Money Over to Company, According to Evidence Given.

Four witnesses, who are policy holders in the Union Life Assurance Company, testified at the police court this morning, during the hearing of the case of Arthur Baxter, who is charged with appropriating funds of the company and converting them for his own use, that they paid him money for which he gave a receipt. Inspector Heath, who also gave evidence, stated that the monies had not been paid over to the company by Baxter.

The amount of $24.00, not returned by Baxter, had not been included in the charge when first read to the accused, but was added this morning, and Mr. F. L. Kerr, who appeared for Baxter, pleaded not guilty and elected to be tried summarily.

At one o'clock, and after Mr. Kerr had concluded his cross-examination of the last witness, an adjournment was made until four o'clock.

THE EVIDENCE.

Julian Dingman said he carried insurance in the Union Life Insurance Company, and on July 23rd, 1909, he paid Baxter $3.00, for which a receipt was given.

John T. Robinson testified to having paid Baxter $3.00, the amount being a quarterly payment. The receipt was given by Baxter, but no other had been sent by the company, as was usual.

A lady witness stated that she had made a quarterly payment of $13.00 at the Company's office on July 28. The signature on the receipt given was A. Baxter.

Hyman Zacks, another policy holder in the Company, said he had paid his last premium on the 31st of July, at the office of the Union Life. Baxter had given a receipt for $5.10. When asked for a formal receipt Baxter replied that he had none.

Ira H. Heath, Inspector of the Union Life Assurance Company, said he visited the Peterborough agency in August last. Baxter was then in charge, as direct agent, and he had been notified of the intending visit, but when he (witness) arrived, Baxter did not put in an appearance. On making enquiries at a boarding house he was informed that Baxter had left with his baggage. Returning to the office an inspection showed that the collections during the week in the Industrial department had been about $30.00. Later he arrived at the conclusion that Baxter had left. The following week an inspection of the books showed a shortage in the accounts. A visit to the policy holders showed that while the payments had been made, the money had not been paid into the company. Baxter received a salary of $12.00 per week and a commission. The full amount for which Baxter was indebted to the Company was $51.76. The payments of the four witnesses amounting to $24.10 had not been paid into the Company, and this amount was the sum of which the accused was charged with stealing.

THEATRICAL

May Ward-"The Cash" Girl Co.

That jolly musical comedy success called "The Cash Girl," with May Ward, the Dresden Doll Comedienne, will be the attraction at the "Grand" next Friday, Nov. 19th. This new musical comedy with the Dresden Doll Comedienne, is something of an innovation in the amusement world, embracing as it does a musical comedy with a real plot, musical numbers of original composition, and a musical element that amuses. Naturally a large company is necessary to properly produce this success, and the management have engaged a thoroughly talented company of players, and in conjunction, a bevy of spirited and pretty girls who give color to the ensembles and tuneful musical numbers. When the producers of "The Cash Girl" Company secured Miss May Ward, the Dresden Doll Comedienne to star in the big musical comedy success, "The Cash Girl" they knew what they they were about and at the same time what the public wanted, something new in the musical comedy line. "The Cash Girl" is decidedly new, it offers a thoroughly good and interesting play with original music and catchy songs. "The Cash Girl" is filled with dashing girls, who are good dancers and wear beautiful wardrobe. A competent cast also help to make the play a winner from start to finish.

Scene from the big musical attraction "The Cash Girl," with May Ward and 50 others, at The Grand Friday evening, Nov. 19. Plan now open. Biggest $1.00 show ever in Peterboro'.

Lacked Common Sense

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—A New Orleans despatch in your issue of the 9th contains the statement that J. C. Wilson, of that place, threw himself in front of a street car, and allowed himself to be run over, in order to prove his faith in Christian Science. If such an event occurred, it not only proves Wilson lacking in common sense, but in any true understanding of Christian Science teachings.

Christian Scientists everywhere repudiate entirely any such reckless and foolhardy action.

ADRIFT ON LAKE

Crew of Barge Ottawa Had Terrible Fight For Life.

Calumet, Mich., Nov 18.—The steel barge grain carrier Ottawa, lost in Lake Superior on Monday, was valued at $150,000, covered by insurance.

The cargo was worth about the same.

About six o'clock Monday morning it was noticed that the cargo was shifting, causing a heavy list to port. This placed all on board in great peril for hours, but the condition could not be remedied, as it would be necessary to take off the hatches to do anything, which would mean the swamping of the steamer by the seas, which ran fifty feet high. All the boats excepting one had already been reduced to splinters.

Shortly before ten o'clock the boat commenced to turn on its side, and although the yard was quickly dropper over the side, she had almost turned before the last of the crew could be taken off. Two firemen who stuck till the last by the furnaces, escaped only in their underclothing. The captain also had to jump into the boat, suffering internal injuries.

The captain and his crew of sixteen men reached Copper Harbor in an open yawl, after sixteen hours of terrible experiences, battling for life with mountainous seas. They were blown most of the way across Lake Superior, being carried at least fifty miles by the gale. The weather was bitterly cold, and at periods the snow was blinding.

NEW PLANS FOR PANAMA CANAL

Panama, Nov. 18.—The latest for the Panama Canal provide for a six-mile cut from the Atlantic coast near Colon to Gatun, where a great dam and triple flight of locks are being built. The dam is really an artificial mountain thrown across the Chagres Valley and will dam that river up to a height of 85 feet above the sea level, causing a vast lake to form which will cover the greater part of the Isthmus. This lake will have an area of not less than 165 square miles, and will reach as far as the cordillera near the Pacific side, where a passage is being cut through the mountain range at Culebra.

Mrs. Talbot, a former opera singer, shot her husband on Oct. 28. The petition for the injunction obtained by the dead man's brother was based on the ground that Talbot desired the burial "according to rites of his religion."

THE PROPOSED EXPENDITURE FOR NAVY ABOUT $2,000,000

Defence Conference Report Submitted to the House of Commons Shows That Canadian Representatives Disagreed With British Experts.

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—The official report of the Imperial Defence Conference, held at London, in July and August, was submitted to Parliament yesterday. Canada was represented at the conference by the Ministers of Militia and Marine, and also present during the proceedings were Sir Percy Lake, inspector-general of the Canadian militia, and Rear-Admiral Kingsmill.

It will be seen that the Canadian representatives would not agree to the suggestion of the British experts, and it is evident that the Canadian plan will be limited to the expenditure of two million dollars a year. This will allow two cruisers of the improved "Bristol" class to be placed on the Pacific coast, and one cruiser and four destroyers on the Atlantic coast.

The summary of expenditure, at British rates, on the Canadian plan of $2,000,000 per annum, is: Three Bristols; building and arming, $5,665,000; annual maintenance, $2[illegible],500; interest and depreciation at 3 per cent., $379,500, personnel, $402,000; total $1,080,000. Four destroyers: Building and arming $1,600,000; annual maintenance $214,000; interest and depreciation at 3 per cent., $134,000; personnel, $110,000; total, $458,000; grand total, $1,538,000.

That this plan is in conflict with the British idea of a naval unit will be observed from the Admiralty memorandum to the Imperial Conference which is in part:

"If the problem of naval defence were considered merely as a problem of naval strategy, it would be found that the greatest output of strength for a given expenditure is obtained by the maintenance of a single navy, with the concomitant unity of training and unity of command. In furtherance, then, of the simple strategical ideal, the maximum of power would be gained if all parts of the Empire contributed, according to their needs and resources, to the maintenance of the British navy.

"It has, however, long been recognized that, in defining the conditions under which the naval forces of the Empire should be developed, other considerations than those of strategy alone must be taken into account. The various circumstances of the overseas dominions have to be borne in mind. Though all have in them the seeds of a great advance in population, wealth and power, they have at the present time attained to different stages in their growth.

"A simple contribution of money or material may be to one Dominion the most acceptable form in which to assist in Imperial fence. Another, while ready to provide local naval forces and to place them at the disposal of the crown in the event of war, may wish to lay the foundations upon which a future navy of its own could be raised. A third may think that the best manner in which it can assist in promoting the interests of the Empire is in undertaking certain local services, not directly of a naval character, but which may relieve the Imperial Government from expenses which would otherwise fall on the British exchequer.

"The main duty of the forthcoming conference as regards naval defence will be, therefore, to determine the form in which the various Dominion Governments can best participate in the burden of Imperial Defence, with due regard to varying political and geographical conditions.

"In the opinion of the Admiralty, a Dominion Government desirous of creating a navy should aim at forming a distinct fleet unit; and the smallest unit is one which, while manageable in time of peace, is capable of being used in its component parts in time of war.

"Under certain conditions, the establishment for local defence of flotillas, consisting of torpedo craft and submarines, might be of assistance in time of war to the operations of the fleet, but such flotillas cannot co-operate on the high seas ... ... wider duties of protection of trade and preventing attacks from hostile cruisers and squadrons. The operations of destroyers and torpedo boats are necessarily limited to the waters near the coast or to a radius of action not far distant from a base, while there are great difficulties in manning such a force and keeping it always thoroughly efficient.

"The fleet unit to be aimed at, therefore, should in the opinion of the Admiralty at least consist of the following one armored cruiser (now Indomitable class, which is of the Dreadnought type); three unarmored cruisers (Bristol class); six destroyers, three submarines with the necessary auxiliaries, such as depot and store ships, etc., which are not here specified.

"Such a fleet unit would be capable of action not only in the defence of coasts, but also of the trade routes, and would be sufficiently powerful to deal with small hostile squadrons should such ever attempt to act in its waters.

"Simply to man a squadron, omitting auxiliary requirements, and any margin for reliefs, sickness, etc., the maximum numbers required would be about 2,300 officers and men, according to the Admiralty scheme of complements.

"The estimated first cost of building and arming such a complete fleet unit would be approximately $18,500,000, and the cost of maintenance, including upkeep of vessels, pay and interest and sinking fund, at British rates, approximately $3,000,000 per annum.

"As the armored cruiser is the essential part of the fleet unit, it is important that an "Indomitable" of the "Dreadnought" type should be the first vessel to be built in commencing the formation of a fleet unit. She should be officered and manned as far as possible by colonial officers and men, supplemented by the loan of Imperial officers and men who might volunteer for the service. While on the station, the ship would be under the exclusive control of the Dominion Government as regards her movements and general administration, but officers and men would be governed by regulations similar to the King's regulations, and be under naval discipline. The question of pay and allowances would have to be settled on lines the most suitable to each Dominion Government concerned. The other vessels when built would be treated in the same manner.

"All requirements might be met according to the views of the Dominion Governments, in so far as the form and manner of the provision made are concerned. But as regards shipbuilding, armaments and warlike stores, etc., on one hand, and training and discipline in peace and war, on the other, there should be one common standard."

"It was decided to limit the plan to an expenditure of $2,000,000 a year, the Admiralty suggested that one Bristol, the Broadica, and two destroyers should be omitted, in which case only 1,408 officers and men would be required. Two Bristols would be required. Two Bristols would then be placed on the Pacific, and one Bristol and four destroyers on the Atlantic coast.

Pending the completion of the new cruisers an arrangement might be made for the loan by the Admiralty of two cruisers of the Apollo class, so that training might be proceeded with at once. The vessels would be fitted out and maintained at the expense of Canada, and the officers and men provided by volunteers from the royal navy, paid by the Canadian Government, until they could be replaced by qualified Canadians. The Admiralty would be willing also to lend certain officers for organizing duties, and arrangements would be made to receive Canadian cadets at Osborne and Dartmouth.

SEGREGATE CONVICTS

F. D. Monk Introduces Resolutions for Better Penal System in Canada.

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—In the House of Comons yesterday a resolution by F. D. Monk, Jacques Cartier, which asked for the appointment of a select committee of the House to inquire into the question of proportional representation was carried.

Mr. Monk also moved a resolution which called for "a judicious classification and segregation of the convicts in our penal institutions and reformatories." The placing together of all classes of convicts was highly detrimental to the reclamation of younger offenders. He asked for the appointment of a special committee to obtain reports.

Hon. A. B. Aylesworth replied that hardened criminals were dealt with in the six penitentiaries. The younger and new offenders was sent to jails, reformatories and provincial prisons. There, more than in the penitentiaries, would be room for better methods.

The best way would be to have a meeting of wardens and inspectors from the penitentiaries for an interchange of ideas. The result would probably be better than a commission.

Mr. Foster was informed that the five largest national immigration contributors to Canada from 1897 to 1909 were: Great Britain, 541,056, United States, 425,611; Galacia, 83,627; Italy, 49,695; Russia, 47,286.

REGRETS INACTIVITY IN THE DOMINION

London, Nov. 18.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Welcoming Principal Lloyd of Saskatchewan, the Bishop of London Tuesday night said he was sorry to say the church had not been in time in the country districts in Ontario, in which he stayed when in Canada. The church was well planted in the cities, but she had been forestalled in the country districts. His own brother's family had attended services in a little Wesleyan chapel because there was no church within eight or nine miles. They must not make the same mistake in the great Northwest.

QUEEN WILHELMINA AND HER ARMY. —From the Bystander.

The Queen of Holland made her first appearance since the birth of the Princess Juliana, in order to present the First regiment of hussars with a new standard, according to the Bystander. In the above picture the adjutant of the regiment is seen receiving the standard from the hands of the Queen, after Her Majesty's speech.

Head of Mine Workers, Who is Condemned to Prison for Disobeying Injunction Rouses Delegates to Enthusiasm in Address.

Toronto, Nov. 18.—It has been freely conceded by the delegates of the A. F. of L. that the present convention is likely to go down in history as the most memorable in the annals of the federation. The fact that three of their leaders stand in imminent danger of losing their liberty has imparted to the proceedings a dramatic touch which has been plainly in evidence since the first session. Yesterday's afternoon proceedings, which up to a certain point had been characterized by unusual sluggishness, were enlivened by a speech from Vice-President John Mitchell, one of the "martyred three," which roused his hearers to a pitch of enthusiasm never approached at any former stage of the convention.

The committee on boycotting, in concluding its report, made an impassioned declaration of the inalienable right of the worker to use his prerogative of the boycott, and it was in emphatic concurrence with this declaration that the representative of the mine workers arose and delivered his speech.

"No amount of physical or mental suffering will convince me that I have not the right to spend my money where I will. Speaking generally, the boycott properly used is the best weapon in the hands of organized labor. I deny emphatically that any merchant or manufacturer has a right to claim my patronage. It is my own to bestow, and any attempt made by the law to the contrary must be opposed to the utmost limit.

"I propose, when I come from jail, to declare again that I shall not purchase any product of the Buck Stove Co. I make this declaration, not to tickle the ears of those present, but as a record of my inward convictions."

Further, he declared that the whole injunction proceedings should prove a lasting lesson to the working men of America. If all working men had been true to the union cause, there would have been no non-union cause there would have been no non-union product on the market. He believed that the time would come when every working man would demand the union label. Hitherto, the difficulty has been that they have not insisted on that hall mark of union produce.

The declaration which John Mitchell so heartily concurred in was contained in the boycotting committee's report, submitted by Delegate Lynch, and it most emphatically upheld the system of boycotting as the most effective weapon in the hands of unionism. In part it was as follows:

"Under present conditions the boycott is a necessary, legal and moral weapon, and one that as the president well said, there should be no hesitation to resort to when other remedies fail and the occasion demands the usual drastic antidote.

"Lawyers' associations, medical associations, scientific bodies, even fraternal societies, all forms of human endeavor—all resort to the boycott to achieve their legitimate, and, in some instances, illegitimate ends. Why, then, should not the labor unions have that right?

"We say that when your cause is just and every other remedy has been employed without result, boycott; we say that when the employer has determined to exploit not only adult male labor, but our women and children, and our reasoning and appeal to his fairness and his conscience will not away him, boycott; we say that when labor has been oppressed, brow beaten and tyrannized, boycott; we say that when social and political conditions become so bad that ordinary remedial measures are fruitless boycott; and, finally, we say we have a right to boycott, and we propose to exercise that right.

"In the application of this right to boycott, to paraphrase the president, we propose to strive on and on."

The report of the committee and the above declaration were adopted unanimously.

BALFOUR DECLARES HIMSELF IN SPEECH AT MANCHESTER

Leader of British Opposition Takes Stand That Protective Duties are the Only Alternative to the Budget —Asquith May Have New Peers Created to Whip Lords Into Line.

London, Nov. 18.—Walter Runciman, president of the Board of Education, speaking at Hull last night, made the important announcement in behalf of the Government, that it would refuse to entertain any negotiations or compromise with the peers over the budget.

Beyond this announcement all is conjecture regarding the development of the political situation. Some prominent Liberals still are of the opinion that Premier Asquith will resign on the rejection of the budget. Others believe that he will ask the King to create a large body of Liberal peers, recalling that the Irish Church disestablishment bill was allowed to pass the Lords on Gladstone's threat to create new peers.

The Liberals in the election campaign will evidently concentrate their whole attack on the House of Lords, in which they will have the energetic assistance of the Irish party. John E. Redmond, leader of the Irish party, speaking in Dublin last night, declared that they refused to throw themselves into the arms of the tariff reformers or to break up the House of Lords, Ireland's deadly enemies. The Nationalists had long waited to strike a blow at the Lords.

Mr. Balfour's speech at Manchester last night satisfied his followers, inasmuch as it adopts tariff reform as the party cry, but it cannot be regarded as an election manifesto, since it fails to define what he understands by tariff reform. As to his exact views on tariff reform, Mr. Balfour was silent, except to say that he would not touch tariff reform "if it were to increase the ordinary cost of living of the working classes."

The striking point in Mr. Balfour's speech was the admission that tariff reform is the only practical alternative to Chancellor Lloyd-George's budget—an important admission, which seems to indicate that the leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons, has at last been won over to acceptance of tariff reform as a plank in the Unionist platform.

The rest of the speech was mainly a repetition of Mr. Balfour's denunciation of the budget, which has figured in previous Unionist speeches, and a special appeal to his audience by the representation that tariff reform would be especially beneficial to the cotton industry, which was seriously threatened by European, American and Japanese competition and the growing difficulty of obtaining sufficient supplies of raw material. Mr. Balfour contended that German and American prosperity had grown contemporaneously with the imposition of high protective duties.

ROBBERY CHARGE AGAINST AUSTRIAN

Kingston, Nov. 18.—Charged with highway robbery, Hiram Smith, aged 18, an Austrian, is under arrest. John Scott of Cataraqui has identified him as the person who on Saturday midnight held him up at the point of a revolver, and relieved him of $6. Smith denies the charge. He had a revolver and cartridges in his possession.

ILLEGAL LIQUOR SELLERS GO DOWN

Cobalt, Nov 18.—Unable to raise the money to pay heavy fines imposed for selling whisky here, six men were taken down to North Bay yesterday afternoon. Their sentences were: S. Sawyer, three months; Lewis Lawson, three months; S. Buchanan, three months; Henry Finnigan, three months; Ben Smith, fifteen months, and Charles Tripp, twelve months.

SHOCKED COREANS

Alice Roosevelt Created a Sensation at an Empress's Graveside.

Berlin, Nov. 17.—Fraulein Emme Kroebie a German woman who was the chief mistress of ceremonies at the Court of the Emperor of Corea in 1905, appears as the author of a book published here to-day, which contains sections dealing with the visit of the then Miss Alice Roosevelt to Corea in that year. In her account of the official reception to Miss Roosevelt, she says:—

"Learning that the Rooseveltian party had been invited to the Court of the Mikado, the Corean Emperor hastened to extend the hospitality of his modest establishment to the distinguished American travellers. Acceptance of His Majesty's invitation came with such astonishing promptness that the court was in a dilemma how to get a suitable welcome ready in time.

"The Emperor finally decided to bestow upon the daughter of the President of the United States the highest honor at his command, namely, a reception at the graveside of his departed consort, the Empress. An imposing suite of dignitaries and flunkeys was accordingly despatched to the grave in a picturesque and secluded spot a mile outside Seoul, with utensils for a state banquet.

"Shortly after the suite arrived a tornado of dust burst upon us, out of which a cavalcade of equestrians emerged. At their head rode a dashing young horsewoman, clad in a scarlet riding habit, beneath the lower extremity of which peeped tight fitting red riding breeches, stuck into glittering boots. In her hand she brandished a riding whip, in her mouth was a cigar.

"It was Miss Alice Roosevelt. We were flabbergasted. We had expected a different sort of apparition, in the most approved Corean court fashion, but the Rough Rider's daughter seemed to think it all a joke. As the mistress of ceremonies I stammered out a few words of greeting, and the guest of honor mumbled a word of thanks, but nothing more. She was mainly interested in the colossal effigies of gods and the mammoth stone images of animals which hold watch over the graves of the departed members of the Corean dynasty.

"Spying a stone elephant, which seemed particularly to strike her fancy, Alice hurtled off her horse in a flash, was astride the elephant, shouting to Mr. Longworth to snapshot her. Our suite was paralyzed with horror and astonishment. Such a sacrilegious scene at so holy a spot was without parallel in Corean history. It required, indeed American ways to produce it.

"It was a critical moment. The suspense was relieved only by the passing of tea and other refreshments. Alice remained oblivious to what was going on around her. Not a word of thanks for her reception was forthcoming. She chatted casually, with the wife of the American minister, Mrs. Morgan, and partook bravely of the champagne and other delicacies.

"Suddenly she gave orders for the saddling of her horse and galloped away with her male escorts like a Buffalo Bill."

RICHARD KRAFT SENT TO CENTRAL

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 18.—Richard Kraft, charged at Sandwich Assizes with attempted murder, and convicted of shooting with intent to wound three policemen, was sentenced to 23 months in Central Prison.

Peter Shea of Detroit, who shot Harry Norrie at Windsor Roller Rink last April, was also charged with attempted murder, but was acquitted by the jury after fifteen minutes deliberation. Norrie had visited the rink to pick a quarrel with Shea.

HANGED HIMSELF IN MONTREAL JAIL

Montreal, Nov. 18.—Deprived of his hypodermic syringe, and with a five-year sentence to serve, a criminal sentenced a couple of days ago, under the name of Lamonte, hanged himself in the jail yesterday while waiting to be sent to the penitentiary. He went into Powers' shoe store some weeks ago and made a bold daylight attack on the clerk.

IS ARRESTED IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

Dover, N.H., Nov. 18.—Malcolm C. MacLennan, formerly a Presbyterian clergyman and later the Halifax, N.S., manager of an insurance company, was arrested here yesterday charged with the embezzlement of $3,000 of the company's funds. MacLennan said that he would return to Halifax without extradition papers.

Early Snowstorm on Mars.

Flagstaff, Ariz., Nov. 18.—Director Lowell of the Lowell Observatory, reports the first apparent antarctic snowfall of the season on Mars. This is said to be exceptionally early for the first Martian antarctic snow.

One Drowned In Wreck.

Sturgeon Bay, Wis., Nov. 18.—One life was lost and nine sailors were barely saved when the lumber steamer Louis Pahlo was wrecked in the lower end of Lake Michigan.

The Daily Review

THURSDAY, NOV. 18, 1909.

HOW IT IS DONE

There came into the Review's hands lately one more evidence of how plunderers are preparing to plunder again at the next general opportunity, for that is what a general election is getting to be. This bit of evidence consists of the secret weekly political news letter of the machine part of the Liberal party at Ottawa. This precious document is made up privately and sent out to those trusty newspapers which will print it as their own. It gives the press of the country such a correct account of the doings at Ottawa, "you know," and does not require any mental effort on the part of the already overworked country editor, who between sawing his winter's wood and setting type has all he can do without writing articles on political pot-boiling at Ottawa. The issue that came into the Review's hands was addressed to a northern weekly, and "proved conclusively" that Mr. Borden, the Conservative leader, was after all just a plain, ordinary, every day perjurer and prevaricator. It charged him, in capital type, with having "lied" about the mismanagement and corruption amongst contractors and government employees on the various railway sections now under contract between Winnipeg and Moncton on the G.T.P.—as if any human being could tell anything worse than the actual facts about it and the sudden, but not unexpected attitude of the Auditor-General at Ottawa abundantly shows.

Yet this miserable sheet, sent out at the public expense, is utilized to prepare the minds of the people in the outlying districts to vote the contractors' representatives in again at the next general opportunity, as an honest and much-maligned class of people. So much for the inspired articles of a duped press! It is only one more evidence of the abominally low standard of Canadian life, which at the present moment is in the first convulsion of an attempt to rid itself of an octopus that extends from Prince Rupert to Moncton, and is known as the G.T.P., and all that it has generated, the behumsed rival of the unbenumed Canadian Northern, and the cause of the depression of Ontario's agriculture to the extent of over twenty-five per cent. this last twelvemonth!!

THE FRENCH TREATY

Boston Herald:—"If Canada agrees to the French treaty it will give concessions in its tariff to France which it cannot offer to the United States and as a consequence the higher duties of the Payne-Aldrich tariff must go into operation against imports from Canada. . . . The high protectionists on this side of the border would rejoice in a tariff war with the United States, because they would then secure higher duties against manufactures imported by Canada from the United States. Canadian manufacturers have profited by the tariff war between the Dominion and Germany which has been going on since 1899. It has given them a much larger measure of protection against German imports, and a tariff war with the United States fought with the same weapons would bring in its train much more gain for the protected manufacturers than has accrued to them from the tariff war with Germany, which grew out of the granting of tariff preference by Canada to Great Britain in 1897.

Consumers all over Canada are practically interested in the avoidance of a tariff war with the United States, but in these days the Government at Ottawa evinces little more concern for the ordinary consumer than the Republican party at Washington showed in the Payne-Aldrich bill."

PRETTY WORK

On receipt of the announcement of the first result the Globe declared that it might "be safely taken as an indication that the farmers of Ontario as a class are not opposed to the creation of a Canadian navy." When North Essex elect an opponent of the Government the same journal asserted that the result had no significance whatever so far as the naval question is concerned.—Weekly Sun.

The Weekly Sun is tearing the Canadian navy policy of Sir Wilfrid Laurier to tatters. Incidentally it shows up the inconsistency of the Globe. Of course it will be said that it is not hard to do that. But it must be remembered that the Globe is the Ontario organ of the party and a real out-and-out party organ must never play out of tune.

APPLIES TO CANADA

Washington, Nov. 16.—James J. Hill, the railroad magnate, who called on President Taft to-day, declared that the high cost and the extravagant manner of living to-day was the greatest problem that faces the American people. Economy on the part of the Government and individuals as well, he said, was the only method he could suggest for remedying matters. "History shows," said Mr. Hill, "that the high price of living is the beginning of every national decline."

Mr. Hill did not mean to say that the American nation was entering upon a decline. He did not wish to suggest this in any way, but he added with considerable emphasis, that he thought a word of caution thrown out at this time would not be misunderstood or fail of appreciation.

Mr. Hill said that he thought the brains of the nation should be turned to a correction of the habit of extravagance, rather than to legislation of various sorts. He declared that what was needed was a "conservation of business." "We need to quiet down, he said, "and let things go on smoothly for a while."

MR. HAGGART M. P. ON MANITOBA

(From Hansard)

"It was thought at the time of the formation of those new provinces, that it would be a proper thing to increase the boundaries of Manitoba and settle the whole question, with the three provinces made as nearly, equal in size and importance as possible. But Manitoba was turned down. The provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan were created and were given a reasonable financial assistance for their development, and I have no doubt it is being wisely expended. But there is no reason why the province of Manitoba should not have received the same treatment. Manitoba did the pioneer work in the early days when it was a question whether or not agriculture was a profitable occupation in that country. Manitoba was there when it took the price of two bushels of grain to transport the third bushel to market. Manitoba solved the transportation problem. She mortgaged her future for the purpose of getting reasonable rates and running lines of railways all over the province. She could not help herself without incidentally benefiting the other provinces, and I submit that it is not right that Manitoba should be treated as she has been.

The right hon. the prime minister then admits that there is cause for irritation, and that that cause has not been removed. Well, if it be not removed the irritation may develop into a chronic sore, into positive, absolute hostility, and if there be any reason for it, must there not be delinquency in some quarter in connection with this business?

The greeting to the members from Manitoba was certainly not a pleasant one. I do not think that the right hon. gentleman would have greeted us in that way if he had known the real facts. He told us we were here by virtue of stuffed lists, Sir, the reverse is the fact. We are here by virtue of honest lists, but when we learned the source of the right hon. gentleman's information, we were not surprised. I shall not say a word about the ex-Minister of the Interior, as it would be contrary to the rules to say anything that might be offensive to a member of this House, but I will say that in Manitoba he had a lot of the rankest registration scamps to be found anywhere at work in any province. And when he resigned as attorney general and left Manitoba, he left us as a legacy his election law, and that law was a beauty and was beautifully administered. The lists for Manitoba were a disgrace. At great expense of time and trouble we had those lists revised before a judge, and the result of that revision, which occupied about three weeks, was to strike off about 5,000 names of bogus voters. There were about 900 names of men who had been improperly left out. After we had cleaned the lists, we were not very long in cleaning out those who were responsible for them. We are not here by virtue of stuffed lists. The people had before them these matters I have spoken of and the result was they elected members to sit on this side. The people had, right under their very eyes, the maladministration of the Department of the Interior, and if the hon. gentleman had been out there during the election, he would have had ample evidence to satisfy him that it was not stuffed lists but a strong political club in the hands of an indignant electorate which returned the Conservative party in that province."—Hansard.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The latest combine is the steel-coal-Wood combine.

Mr. Lewis, M. P., has moved that babies should have ballot or rather that mothers should vote. Now, look out for squalls.

The agricultural output of Ontario last year was $164,000,000. The apple crop was worth $11,000,000. What's all this talk about the West?

It will take a good deal more than the "magnificent perorations" of Sir Wilfrid to induce the taxpayer to assume the burden of a navy. Common sense beats orations hollow.

To judge by the ill-feeling generated over the Tiger-Ottawa football match it looks as if football were as injurious to reputations as to arms, legs and noses. It was prohibited game in James I.'s time and this necessity may arise again.

By the going into force of a recently passed law, the Viceroy of India will have a council of 370 members, one-half of whom will be elected. The new body will have power in matters of taxation and expenditure as well as in the making of general laws. It is the beginning of a change, the end of which, if the future is to be judged from the past, will be a parliament of India. Those who are declared fit to govern themselves a little have a good ground for claiming the power to govern themselves altogether.—Montreal Gazette.

"In the West of England, which was a great centre of broadcloth manufacturing and of weaving of other woollen goods, the output is less than a quarter of what it was twenty-five years ago. Germany is taking the cutlery trade of Sheffield. The German people, who have cared jealously for their farming industry at the same time that they were learning economy and efficiency in all other forms of production, to-day lead the world, or any period in its history, in scientific industral ntelligence and systematic management." — Mr. J. J. Hill.

It seems particularly interesting just now to recall a striking passage on the Old Testament from Principal George Adam Smith's inaugural address, when he came as professor to the Free Church College, Glasgow. He then said:—

"For us preachers of Christ the supreme sanction of the Old Testament is that which is received from Himself. The Old Testament was the Bible of Jesus Christ—the Bible of His education and His ministry. He grew out of the Old Testament, and He taught His disciples to recognize Him in it. . . He took for granted all its fundamental doctrines. . . He accepted its history as a preparation for Himself. He drew from it most of the categories of His Gospel. He enforced its righteousness, and vindicated its spirituality. . . But above all He fed His own soul upon it, and expressly set Himself to the fulfilment of its calls and ideals."—Public Opinion, Eng.

There never has been such a pronounced difference of opinion, regardless of party politics and political affiliations as in the case of the Laurier navy scheme. A large number of Liberals are breaking away from Sir Wilfrid and a large number of Conservatives from Mr. Borden on the issue. —Peterborough Review."

How many Liberals have "broken away" from "the Laurier navy scheme?" which is commended by other Conservative papers as being the policy which was "forced" by the Conservative Opposition upon the Government. If the Peterborough Review is looking for signs of discord on "the navy scheme" it might well investigate the condition of its own party. Then it would have something to consider.—Ottawa Free Press.

We do not deny that similar conditions exist in the Conservative party but the issue of "independent and sole Canadian control" by Canada is a Liberal idea.

CAT TRIES TO HATCH EGGS

Shelbyville, Ind.—A rooster, owned by Mrs. John Leech, drove a sitting hen from her nest and tried the job himself. A cat ousted the rooster and is now taking the hen's place on the eggs.

The substitution of the rooster for the hen, and cat for rooster, will probably not affect the eggs.

Substitution, however, is dangerous where our health is concerned. There can be no excuse for a dealer offering something which is said to be "just as good" when "Fruit-a-tives" are asked for.

"Fruit-a-tives" have proved their great value in all cases of Indigestion and Dyspepsia, Constipation and Biliousness, and in troubles arising from disorders of the Liver, Bowels, Kidneys and skin.

They are the only remedy made of ripe fruit juices, and they tone up Liver and Kidneys, and regulate the Bowels, even more effectively than fruit itself. Thousands swear by them.

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c.—At dealers, or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa, Ont.

SAVINGS

THE wisdom of Saving money must be apparent to every thoughtful person.

A little money saved enables one to take advantage of opportunities for making more money.

TO BUY A LOT.

TO MAKE THE FIRST PAYMENT ON A HOUSE.

TO START IN BUSINESS.

These and other opportunities are ever before the person with capital. Saving small sums is the creation of capital. You can start an account with the Toronto Savings & Loan Company, 437 George-st., Peterborough, with One Dollar. 3½% interest added quarterly, from date of deposit to date of withdrawal. Debentures issued in periods of from one to five years, on sums of $100 and upwards, bearing interest at four per cent. per annum.

COW TESTING ASSOCIATIONS

Information That Will Interest Agriculturists—Good and Poor Cows

To what class does each of your dairy cows belong? A business man bends his energies towards making every dollar expended earn as much as it possibly can. From some October records received from members of cow testing associations it would seem that many cows are not expected to earn anything above the bare cost of feed from now till next spring. But here and there are cows in another class altogether, giving as high as 750 pounds of milk and 23 pounds of fat in October, not freshly calved cows, but cows that freshened in April or may. Supposing the ordinary factory patron divides his cows into just two classes, those that pay and those that do not pay. Is he, even then, in a position to place each cow unerringly? Has he records to show how much milk or fat each cow gives month by month and how much her feed costs? Such records are not only very easily kept, but are invaluable in determining which cows are paying the best profit, and which are just on the pension list. With this information at hand it will be but a natural step to let one or two go off to the butcher, thereby saving unprofitable labor, while the grain they would have consumed may be used in further development of those that are naturally fitted for turning it economically into milk and butter fat. Keep records, keep no drones, but keep only such cows as prove themselves by the records to be in the top class, producing plenty of milk from a reasonable amount of suitable feed.

INTENSE INTEREST IN NAVAL PAPERS

Ottawa, Nov. 17.—The production of papers and documents respecting the naval defence conference, which has been promised for this afternoon, is awaited with much interest by the members.

Hitherto, the proceedings have been kept from the public by both governments. It is thought the documents will exercise an important bearing on the character and extent of the debate.

HYPNOTIZED GIRL KEPT ON SINGING

Vassar College Girls Could Not Get Her "Out" and Became Excited.

Poughkeepsie, N.Y., Nov. 18.—Because several girls at Vassar College put one of their number under the influence of hypnotism and were unable to awaken her, the president of the college has forbidden any more practice of hypnotics at this famous girls' school.

Several of the Vassar students who have manifested great interest in telepathy, agreed to test the strength of their wills, as pitted against the mind of another young woman.

IT WORKED ALL RIGHT.

Gathered in a room half a dozen of girls decided that the next person who entered the room should be their subject. Presently a girl entered. She was told to seat herself in a chair in the centre of the room, and the battery of mental power was turned upon her. The subject soon began to act queerly. Several of the girls in turn directed the subject to sing different sons and perform other queer stunts.

After about an hour an effort was made to arouse her, but this failed, despite continued attempts. Instead the girl kept on singing, and finally the pupils called in a member of the faculty. It was then found that as all the girls had helped to place her in a trance, all of them would be compelled to release her at one time, and the girls, acting in unison, succeeded in bringing their subject to her senses.

In the meantime the young woman exhibited symptoms of hysteria, and for a time one of the dormitories was alive with excitement.

RICE LAKE BOATS ARE STILL BUSY

Navigation is still open on the Otonabee river and it is ot likely that the locks will be closed for several days yet as there is considerable produce at Rice Lake to be brought to Peterborough. Last year the locks closed on November 14th. The Monarch came up last night with a load of hogs and returned early this morning to bring up a cargo of grain and potatoes. The tubers are selling at the wharf at forty-five cents per bag.

MAKES HAIR GROW

Wm. Madill Has an Invigorator That Makes Hair Grow in Abundance or Money Back

If your hair is thinning out gradually it won't be long before the bald spot appears.

The time to take care of the hair is when you have hair to take care of.

For thin falling hair the best remedy known to mankind is Parisian Sage. It is compounded on scientific principles and furnishes to the hair root a nourishment that acts quickly and promptly and causes the hair to grow.

But remember this: It kills the dandruff germ, the pest that appropriates all the natural nourishment that should go to the hair root.

Parisian Sage is sold by Wm. Madill, druggist, of Peterborough, under a positive guarantee to banish dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

It gives to women's hair a lustre and radiance that is most fascinating and causes it to grow abundantly.

Parisian Sage is now sold in every first-class town in Canada. A large generous bottle costs 50 cents, and the girl with Auburn hair is on every bottle.

A Real Skin Food

Olive oil is a wonderful flesh builder. Physicians recommend it for massage in wasting of tissues. The choicest olive oil we can obtain is one of the principal ingredients of

Infants' Delight Soap

Cocoanut oil is recommended by the doctor for chapped lips and hands,—and in all cases where the skin is roughened and made tender by exposure. The choicest cocoanut oil the Orient can provide is used in Taylor's Infants' Delight.

You wrong yourself and may work permanent injury to the delicate skin if you are so unthinking or unknowing as to use a harsh, ordinary soap for baby's bath.

You will be surprised and delighted to notice how soft and velvety the tender skin becomes, and how chafing and irritation are overcome after you have begun to use this mildest of soaps and most perfect of cleansers.

Your druggist has Taylor's Infants' Delight, and you will add much to the baby's comfort if you decide to use it today.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Hogs Slow and Easier at Buffalo; Other Markets Steady.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—Liverpool and London cables for cattle are firm, at 12½ to 13½c per lb. for live cattle, dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted lower, at 10c to 10½c per lb.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Nov. 17.—(Special.) At the Canadian Pacific market this morning offerings were 1100 cattle, 900 sheep, 64 lambs, 1100 hogs and 150 calves. Cattle prices show an advance of ½c per pound, attributed to the smaller run, colder weather and improvement in demand. There was also a firmer undertone to the market for sheep and lambs on account of the smaller supplies. Sheep sold at 3½c, and lambs at 5½c to 5¾c per pound. The demand for calves was good at prices from $3 to $10 each. A weaker feeling developed in the market for hogs, and prices declined 25c per cwt.

Theft of $7,000 From Registered Mail.

Rose Isle, Man., Nov. 18.—A robbery of the registered mail has just come to light. Two packets, containing two thousand and five thousand dollars respectively disappeared from registered mail of the C.N.R. Hartney train on Nov. 1. They were addressed to Fairfax and Belmont, Man. The mail clerk was momentarily absent from the car while transferring some mail to the Winnipeg train at Leary Siding.

Clever Escape From Policeman.

Tilbury, Nov. 18.—Breaking away from a constable with whom he was standing at the M.C.R. station waiting for the train which was to convey him to jail for a term of three months, Joseph Wilson jumped on a train which was moving out in the opposite direction. Passengers notified the conductor who decided he could do nothing because the man had paid his fare.

Open Trial of Divorce Cases.

New York, Nov. 18.—State Senator Robert F. Wagner of Manhattan will as soon as the Legislature meets at Albany in January, introduce a bill restricting present divorce methods.

"I wish," he said, yesterday, "soon to see a system whereby all cases shall be tried in open court, concealment of nothing, the suppression of no sort of evidence."

Three Years for Bean.

Toronto, Nov. 18.—In the County Criminal Court yesterday, Judge Denton sentenced Albert Bean to three years in the penitentiary for stealing a letter containing $3.50 from the mails. The prisoner's wife threw both arms around him and tried to fight off Constable Clarke who moved Bean to the cells.

S. Holmes Outdone.

"You seem to be deeply interested in your book."

"Yes; it's awfully exciting."

"The hero is a college athlete, isn't he?"

"Why, yes. How did you know? Have you read it?"

"I never saw or heard of it before. He has been temporarily disowned by his wealthy father, has he not?"

"Of course. Don't tell me that you haven't read it."

"And when he first meets the heroine she thinks she has cause to hate him—tells him he is a cad or something of that kind—and he, sad at heart, swears that if he can't have her he will never marry."

"Oh, Jack! What do you mean by sitting there and pretending you have not read it? That's exactly the way it reads."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Doubtful Compliments.

The colonel who, taking his leave at a garden party, inquires, "Have I had the pleasure of saying goodby to you, Miss Mary?" the hostess sweetly assuring a distinguished pianist who has risen abruptly from the instrument with a sarcastic protest lest he should disturb the conversation that he does not do so at all; the young man who, on being told that a possible rival had taken the lady who is speaking hi to dinner the previous evening, declares that "that's all he's fit for"—these are decided instances of this class of left compliment, while for a well meant but lukewarm one poor Newman Noggs' reply to the collector's query respecting the Kenwigs' new baby, that it wasn't a very nasty one, may be cited.—London Academy.

Speakers Next Sunday

The local option speakers in Peterborough next Sunday will be Rev. T. Beverly Smith, of West Toronto, and Mr. J. A. Paterson, K.C., of Toronto.

"Your Sight is Priceless"

Good Glasses are worth all you pay for them.

The constant increase in eye defects is partly due to improperly fitted glasses. There is no guess work with us, we give your eyes a thorough examination, and advise glasses only when absolutely necessary.

We are not transient, but permanent residents of the city, and all our glasses are guaranteed. We do not make it a practice of remaining for a few days in a place, and then leaving for parts unknown

We have never sought to delude the unwary by advertising cut-rates on glasses. Those who do business in this way, either deceive the public, or sooner or later come to grief themselves. Any business to be a lasting success, must be conducted at a fair rate of profit; expert service and enduring articles cannot be furnished at or below cost. Intelligent people appreciate these facts, and this is one of the principal reasons why we have been so successful in the Optical business.

TOO ANXIOUS FOR A FIGHT

A Young Man was Fined $2.00. Had Been Molesting Another Young Fellow.

A fine of two dollars was imposed on a young man at the police court this morning for displaying an eagerness to fight, which, in the magistrate's opinion, was unwarranted. The complainant, another young man, stated that on Tuesday morning he was approached by the accused, who asked him when he would be ready to fight. As he (witness) had just recovered from an operation for appendicitis, he answered that he was not ready. This was not the first time he had been molested, as on another occasion he had been accosted, but others had interfered and put a stop to the trouble.

The accused's version of the affair was that he had been struck in the face by the complainant, and as a result he wanted an apology but this was refused, and instead an offer to fight "as soon as he was able" was made.

RE-ARRANGEMENT IN THE BOOKING

Causes Postponement of "The Cash Girl's" Appearance at Grand

The management of the Grand regret to announce that owing to a re-arrangement in the booking of the show on the Canadian circuit, they have been forced to temporarily cancel the local engagement of "The Cash Girl." The company was to have played at the opera house to-morrow night and as the attraction is said to be an excellent one effort will be made to arrange for its appearance here for a later date.

Those who have secured seats may get their money back by applying at the box office.

THE SECRET REVEALED

Sir Wilfrid Laurier yielded to the pressure of hostile sentiment and declined to share in an all-imperial navy. He declined through his accredited representatives at London last summer to agree to the realization of every true British Canadian's dream, viz.; that Canada shall be a unit in a federation of units, a true part of a great united British empire. Sir Wilfrid has declined to allow Canada to follow this destiny. On the contrary, in direct opposition to the expressed wishes of the British Admiralty, as recorded at the great Navy Conference, he would allow nothing but an independent Canadian Navy, wholly controlled by those in power at Ottawa and hampered by every specific limitation that ingenuity could devise to forestall the possibility of its taking part in the empire's defence.

Is this what the people of Canada want?

Is it not rather that we shall contribute a ship or two as we are able, an efficient fighting unit, one unit amongst many and not a separate and independent Canadian Navy.

The question is of the utmost importance to Canada. Why the proceedings of the Conference were kept secret is now apparent.

There never was a crisis in Canadian history like this one. It has been slowly developing for half a century. The moment of deciding has at last come. Are we for a united empire or against it?

TO "OPERIZE" THIS DRAMA

Giacomo Puccini, the Italian composer, would like to write a grand opera around "The Wolf." He has examined the manuscript of the play, and thinks he has discovered a capital story for an opera. The noted composer who arranged "Madame Butterfly," and "The Girl of the Golden West" will arrive from Europe early this fall to look over the manuscript. It might be added that Signor Puccini is very critical, and only selects that which, in his judgment, is certain to be an unqualified success.

WEDDING BELLS

OTTENOT---CUNNINGHAM

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at the George St. Methodist parsonage yesterday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock, when Miss Eda M. Cunningham, youngest daughter of Mr. James Cunningham, Fraserville, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr Edward Ottenot, of Buffalo.

The bride was attired in a traveling suit of navy blue broadcloth, with hat to match, and carried a bouquet of white carnations, and was attended by Miss E. Argue, who wore a suit of mauve, with hat to match, and carried pink carnations. The groom was assisted by Mr. F. Sanderson.

The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome set of furs, and to the groomsman a gold stick pin.

Mr. and Mrs. Ottenot left on the 4.38 C.P.R. for Buffalo, where they will reside.

KINNEE—TYSALL

Miss Florence Louisa Tysall and Mr. Thomas Ellsworth Kinee, both of Smith township, were united in marriage yesterday afternoon at three o'clock, at St. Andrew's manse, Rev. J. G. Potter officiating. Miss Lena McIvor was bridesmaid and Mr. Russel Austin Kinee acted as groomsman.

After the ceremony a wedding supper was held at the residence of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Kinee, Smith township. Mr. and Mrs. Kinee will reside in Smith.

CLARKE — HUTCHINSON

At the George Street Methodist parsonage yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock the wedding of Miss Ethel Hutchinson of Millbrook and Mr. Alexander Wellington Clarke was celebrated. Rev. E. A. Pearson was the officiating clergyman. Both the bride and groom are from Millbrook, where they will reside.

They were supported by Miss Edith Hutchinson of Cavanville and Mr. Walter Mitchell of Millbrook.

IT RECALLS OPEN SEASON OF 1883

A Storm Ends Remarkably Long Spell of Fine Weather--When Snow Fell in Other Years

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—A strong northwest wind, accompanied by rain, which now and again turned to sleet, made last night the stormiest night of the autumn. Almost as much rain dropped from the trees as from the clouds and as soon as it fell it froze and made walking difficult.

Before this weather vagary the season had been delightful.

Men who have lived in the city a number of years say that it is the most open fall that Ottawa has seen since 1883. On New Year's Day of that year the Ottawa river was open and the steamer Empress commanded by Captain F. Bowie, made an excursion down the Ottawa. A large number of Ottawans took it in.

KEEPS A RECORD.

Mr. Wm. Baldwin, of the Baldwin Bros., grocers on the corner of Besserer and Nicholas streets, has kept a record of winter weather for the last twenty years and a careful perusal of the records by a reporter showed that in 1908 snow fell on the 4th of November and that on the 1st of December dust was blowing on the streets. In 1907 snow fell on the 5th of November, which, however, did not stay. In 1906 snow fell on the 9th of November and sleighing commenced on the 16th.

The heavy blow of the mighty tree as it came down with great force instantly killed Mr. Varty. He was a middle aged man and has three brothers residing in Belmont township, namely, George, Louis and German Varty. The lumber camp had just got nicely started when the accident occurred.

A MODERN AND CONVENIENTLY PLANNED DEPARTMENTAL STORE

One of Peterborough's best appointed, most up-to-date and most conveniently arranged departmental stores is the "Beehive," 392 George street. Mr. T. C. Elliott, the proprietor, may well congratulate himself on having a complete and attractive place of business now that he has occupied his commodious new premises.

The altering and remodelling of his two establishments into one large departmental store in order to properly accommodate his varied lines of business has been undertaken regardless of expense or building difficulties, while a large business was going on at the same time. Mr. Elliott's one aim has been to perfect his place from a structural standpoint and to evolve a shopping centre where the general arrangements were as complete as modern skill could accomplish.

It was particularly gratifying therefore, to note the many improvements made and others still in progress. The ground floor is now a well equipped show room for the lines of goods allied to women's wear. Special offerings were being made this week in ladies' coats, skirts, suits, and waists, as well as in underskirts, underwear, stockings, gloves, corsets, wool goods and fur muffs, stoles, etc. The second floor is devoted to a display of ladies' mantles and ready-to-wear garments. The room which was formerly used as the fancy goods section, is now filled with children's goods, such as misses' coats, skirts, millinery, ladies' whitewear and flannelette wear. The third floor, which was used for reserve stock, is being fitted up as an additional sales room. It will be known as "Toyland," in which a splendid shipment of toys direct from Germany, will be displayed, in anticipation of the approaching Christmas holidays. A new elevator is being installed and will run to all the different floors. This elevator, which it was stated is the only one of its kind in Peterborough runs on precisely the same principle as our great hydraulic lift lock. There are no ropes to manipulate, and it is as safe as human skill can make it. The elevator rests on a cushion of water; it has no jerk or jar, and its movements is so easy as to be almost imperceptible.

SUCCESS OF THE WINTER POULTRY SHOW IS ASSURED

In the second annual winter show of the Peterborough Poultry Association, which will be held January 4, 5 and 6, is not a success, it never will be in the future. Everyone connected with the association has been working overtime for the past several months, and as a result of the hearty co-operation of those, both directly and indirectly interested in the poultry business, the preliminary work in connection with the show is in such a satisfactory condition as to warrant the officers feeling assured that success will crown the efforts put forth. On Tuesday evening a meeting of the directors was held, at which the prize list was revised and a number of new classes added. Fully 1,400 birds are expected for exhibit, and besides these, eggs and dressed fowl will be conspicuous by their number and variety. Included in the fine list of prizes is one of $10, which will be offered for the best dressed turkey, $6 for first, $3 for second and $1 for third. A large number of special prizes will also be offered, and the show should attract large crowds during the three days it will be held.

RATEPAYERS BEGINNING TO DISCUSS MUNICIPAL ELECTION IN JANUARY

Ratepayers are beginning to talk about the municipal election in January. Voting will take place on January 3rd, and the polls will be open from nine o'clock in the morning to 7 in the evening.

There are four by-laws to be voted on as follows;—

1 To raise money for an Isolation Hospital

2 To return to the Ward system for electing aldermen.

3 To grant a 30 year franchise to the Peterborough Light and Power Co.

4 To introduce local option.

Six aldermen to be elected for a term of two years.

Five members of the Board of Education to be elected for two years.

One member to be elected to the Water Commission for three years.

Altogether there will be seventeen ballots to mark, and may be more, as there is talk of a couple of the aldermen who were elected for two years, retiring to run for the Mayor's chair. In that case other aldermen would have to be elected to finish out the term.

Those whose term expires with this year are;—

Mayor—H. Rush.

Aldermen—Ald. McIntyre, Turner, Metheral, Duffus, Bradburn, Duncan.

Water Commission.—Mr. W. H. Moore.

Board of Education—Messrs. Dumble, Nelson, Dr. Burnham, Hill and Crane.

In the case of the by-laws a majority will carry them, except the local option, when a three-fifths majority of the votes cast is necessary.

THE COMMITTEE WAS FAVORABLE

To Granting Fixed Assessments to Wm. Hamilton Co. and Ackerman & Son

The Wm. Hamilton Manufacturing Company have applied to the City Council to have their fixed assessment extended from three to ten years. The request came up at the meeting of the Manufacturers' Committee last night and the committee were favorable to it and will recommend to the Council that a by-law be prepared increasing the period to ten years.

B. F. Ackerman & Son have put in an application for a fixed assessment of $20,000 for ten years. They intend erecting an addition to their factory and to increase their lines of manufacture. If the addition is gone ahead with the company will employ 120 hands all the year around. The committee will recommend that the request be granted.

The members of the committee present were Ald. Gillespie, chairman; Mayor Rush and Ald. Duffus and Metheral.

MUCH TIMBER YET

A gentleman interested in the lumber business remarked to the Review to-day that several of the lumber companies have extensive limits in the north country, the timber on which they have not been able to get out on account of the lack of transportation facilities. There are no streams in the limits to carry the logs out and as yet the railways do not touch them. [illegible]

WAS ARRESTED IN SUDBURY

Indian, Charged With Serious Offence Brought to the City to Stand His Trial

High County Constable Cochrane has returned from Sudbury, bringing with him an Indian named Alfred Simpson, who is charged with a serious offence; the complainant being a young Indian girl, who alleges that the offence was committed on the 4th of March last. The accused has managed to keep clear of the authorities for some time past but the news of his arrest was received here last week, and Mr. Cochrane left Monday afternoon for Sudbury.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and is is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

THE PREMIER AWARD GOES TO CHRISTOPHER HOWSON, KEENE

In Peterboro Fair's Standing Field Crop Competition—Judge Homer Pleased With Crops—The Standing of Competitors.

The awards in the standing field crop competition, under the auspices of the Peterborough Fair, have been announced, and the first prize is obtained by Mr. Chris. Howson, of Keene. The competition was for farms within a radius of fifteen miles of Peterborough, so an area of considerable extent was included.

The government judge, Mr. R. F. Homer, of Perth, was much pleased with the condition of the crops in this vicinity, and said he came across several very fine fields of grain during his judging tour. He also commented favorably on the large list of competitors.

The Fair Society is to be commended for the introduction of the competition and the publicity they gave it.

The list of the prize winners, with their standing and prizes obtained, is as follows—

First—Christopher Howson, Keene; $15 and a barrel of Quaker flour, the latter contribution being kindly donated by the Quaker Oats Co.

Second—Bruce Savigny, Peterborough, $12.

Third—John Armstrong, Jermyn P. O.; $10.

Fourth—John Buckhorn, Bensfort; eight dollars.

Fifth—R. A. Deyell, Smithfrank P.O., five dollars.

Highly commended—G. W. Hatton, Peterborough.

Commended—C. F. Moore, Peterborough.

The scores obtained were as follows:—

Mr. Howson, 92 1-4; Mr. Savigny, 89; Mr. Armstrong, 84; Mr. Buckham, 83 1-2; Mr. Deyell, 80 1-2; Mr. Hatton, 79 1-2; Mr. Moore, 79.

SUSPENDED SENTENCE CHANGED TO THREE MONTHS

Three months in the County gaol at hard labor was the sentence meted out to Arthur Baxter by Magistrate Dumble at police court yesterday afternoon. Following the arguments of F. D. Kerr, counsel for the accused, who at the conclusion of his remarks asked that Baxter be allowed out on suspended sentence, His Worship found the prisoner guilty and imposed a suspended sentence, and ordered that he report to the Chief of Police once a month for one year. County Crown Attorney Wood, however, would not consent to this judgment being given on the grounds that he regarded the offence committed as a serious affair. The magistrate then gave the three months sentence. The defence offered no evidence when the court resumed proceedings yesterday afternoon, but the prisoner made statements from the dock in which he endeavored to show that all he owed the company was $6.00. The remainder of the amount he was charged with stealing was balanced by a debit of his against the company.

The Magistrate was disposed to give Baxter another chance to make good, but the statute in regard to a suspended sentence sets forth that the counsel for the Crown must agree to this sentence being given, when the prisoner has been found guilty and the offence is punishable by more than two years.

NUMBERS AND LOCATIONS OF FIRE ALARM BOXES

Fire Chief Howard has frequently been asked the numbers and location of the fire alarm boxes. For the benefit of the public the Review publishes the list to-day. Persons would do well to clip it out and preserve it.

The numbers of the boxes and the locations are as follows;—

Ward No. 1—
12—Lock and McGill.
14—Westcott and Aylmer.
15—Perry and George.
16—Perry and Bethune.
17—Park and Townsend.
18—George, at C. P. R.

Ward No. 2—
21—George and King.
22—Simcoe and Queen.
23—George and Hunter.
24—Hunter and Quaker
27—Water and McDonel.

Ward No. 3—
31—Park and Sherbrooke.
33—Charlotte and Stewart.
35—Park and Hunter
38—McDonel and Reid.

Ward No. 4—
41—Park and London.
42—George and Dublin.
43—Edinburgh and Stewart.
45—George and Smith.
48—Water and Hilliard.

Ward No. 5—
52—Burnham and James
53—Rogers and Sophia.
54—Hunter and Mark.
57—Concession and Hazlitt.
59—Auburn.

DIRECTIONS FOR SENDING IN ALARMS

A key for the alarm box will be found hanging in a small box, with glass front, adjoining the alarm box. Break the glass, remove the key, and open the box; pull the lever down, when the alarm is at once transmitted to the Fire Hall, Pumping Station, and residences of the firemen. Do not attempt to remove the key from box, as this can only be done by the use of a small relieving key.

HOW ALARMS ARE SOUNDED

The number of the Ward from which the alarm is sent in is always sounded on the bell, which also constitutes the first number of the box nearest to the fire, and when an alarm is sounded, the Ward number is given first, then a pause, and then the remaining numbers of the box.

ILLUSTRATIONS

15 is the number of the box at the corner of Perry and George streets, in No. 1 Ward; the alarm is given by sounding 1, then a pause, then sounding 5 distinct strokes. Or take box 23, at the corner of George and Hunter streets, in No. 2 Ward; the alarm would sound 2 strokes, then a pause, then 3 distinct strokes, indicating the fire to be in No. 2 Ward, and in the vicinity of box 23.

When the fire is out 2 strokes of the bell are given.

SIX INCHES OF SNOW IN SUDBURY

The Mining Town Had a Fall of "the Beautiful" All Day Tuesday.

Mr. George Cochrane, who has just returned from a trip to Sudbury, stated this morning that six inches of snow fell in that place on Tuesday. Remarking on the past hunting season, he said that the weather had been a big disadvantage to the hunters, as the meat of the deer could not be preserved for the length of time necessary. The stations and trains in that locality were crowded with parties of men, dogs and guns, and amongst the spoils he saw a specien of the white deer.

Richard Kraft, who shot two Windsor constables, was convicted of shooting to wound.

AN INDUCTION AT LAKEFIELD

A MAGISTRATE'S EVIDENCE IN FAVOR OF ZAM-BUK

Zam-Buk wins favor wherever tried! The Magistrate whose words are quoted below tried it thoroughly and now tells the result. If you suffer from any skin disease or injury mark well his words!

The Pavilion, Gold Fields, B.C.

After a very fair trial I have proved Zam-Buk eminently satisfactory. It cured me of a skin rash of five years standing which no doctor had been able to do any good for. I do certainly encourage any person to keep Zam-Buk in their homes. It truly does more than you claim for it. Yours very truly.

ROGER F. PERRY, Justice of Peace for B.C.

Chronic Sore Quite Healed.

Mrs. M. A. Harris of 69 Chestnut St., St. Thomas, Ont., says:—"My husband had a running sore on his ankle for about two months. Zam-Buk showed satisfactory results from the first application (although other salves had failed), cleaning and healing the open wound. We have also found Zam-Buk unequalled for Cuts, Burns, Sores, etc., and have great confidence in recommending it to others."

ZAM-BUK CURES eczema, ringworm, scalp sores, ulcers, chronic sores or open wounds, barber's rash, blood-poisoning, cold-sores, cracked hands, cuts, scalds, salt rheum and all skin injuries and diseases. It is also a sure cure for piles.

Of all stores and druggists 50c a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price 3 boxes $1.25.

The BLACK BAG

By LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

Some one had wielded an industrious pencil on the page. It was, taken as a whole, fruitful of clews. Its very heading was illuminating, "London to Vlissingen (Flushing) and Breda," which happened to be the quickest and most direct route between London and Antwerp. Beneath it, in the second column from the right, the pencil had put a check mark against "Queensborough—dep—11a10."

And now he saw it clearly. Dolt that he had been not to have divined it ere this! The Alethea had run in to Queensborough, landing her passengers there that they might make connection with the 11:10 morning boat for Flushing, the very side wheel steamer doubtless which he had noticed beating out in the teeth of the gale just after the brigantine had picked him up.

A third check had been placed against the train for Amsterdam scheduled to leave Antwerp at 6:32 p. m. Momentarily his heart misgave him when he saw this in fear lest Calendar and Dorothy should have gone on from Antwerp the previous evening but then he rallied, discovering that the boat train from Flushing did not arrive at Antwerp till after 10 at night, and there was no later train thence for Amsterdam. Were the latter truly their purposed destination they would have stayed overnight and be leaving that very evening on the 6:32. On the other hand, why should they wait for the latest train rather than proceed by the first available in the morning? Why but because Calendar and Mulready were to wait for Stryker to join them on the Alethea?

Very well, then. If the wind held and Stryker knew his business, there would be another passenger on that train in addition to the Calendar party.

Making mental note of the fact that the boat train for Flushing and London was scheduled to leave Antwerp daily at 8:21 p. m., Kirkwood restored the guide to the locker lest inadvertently the captain should pick it up and see what Kirkwood had seen.

An hour later he went on deck. The skies had blown clear, and the brigantine was well in land bound waters and still footing a rattling pace. Antwerp was in sight.

A troublesome care stirring in his mind, Kirkwood looked round the deck, but Stryker was very busy, entirely too preoccupied with the handling of his ship to be interrupted with impunity. Besides, there was plenty of time.

Up past the dockyards, where spidery masts stood in dense groves about painted funnels and men swarmed over huge wharfs like ants over a crust of bread; up and round the final great sweeping bend of the river, the Alethea made her sober way, ever with greater slowness, until at length in the rose glow of a flawless evening her windlass began to clank like a mad thing and her anchor bit the river bed near the left bank between old Forts Isabelle and Tete de Flandre, frowned upon from the right by the grim pile of the age old Steen castle.

Kirkwood sought Stryker, his carking query ready on his lips, but the captain impatiently waved him aside.

"Don't you bother me now, me lud juke. Wyte until I gets done with the custom hofficer."

Stryker, smirking benignly and massaging his lips with the back of his hand, followed the official on deck, nodded to Kirkwood an intimation that he was prepared to accord him an audience and strolled forward to the waist. The American, mastering his resentment, meekly followed. One cannot well afford to be haughty when one is asking favors.

Advancing to the rail, the captain whistled in one of the river boats, then, while the waterman waited, faced his passenger.

"Now, yer r'yal 'ighness, wot can I do for you afore you goes ashore?"

"I think you must have forgotten," said Kirkwood quietly. "I hate to trouble you, but—there's that matter of £4."

Stryker's face was expressive only of mystified vacuity. "Four quid? I dunno as I know just wot you means."

"You agreed to advance me £4 on those things of mine."

"Ow!" Illumination overspread the hollow jowled countenance. Stryker smiled cheerfully. "Garn with you!" he chuckled. "You will 'ave yer little joke, won't you, now? I declare I never see a loony with such affech'nit, pi'yful wyes!"

Kirkwood's eyes narrowed. "Stryker," he said steadily, "give me the £4 and let's have no more nonsense or else hand over my things at once."

"Daffy," Stryker told vacancy, with conviction. "Lor' luv me if I sees 'ow he ever 'ad sense enough to escype. W'y, yer majesty," and he bowed, ironic, "I 'ave given you yer quid."

"Just about as much as I gave you that pearl pin," retorted Kirkwood hotly. "What do you mean"—

"W'y, yer ludship, £4 jus' pyes yer passyge. I thought you understood."

"My passage! But I can come across by steamer for 30 shillings, first class"—

"Aw, but them steamers! Tricky, they is, an' unsyfe. No, yer gryce, the W. Stryker Packet line, lim'ted, London to Antwerp, charges £4 per passyge an' no reduction for return fare."

Stunned by his effrontery, Kirkwood stared in silence.

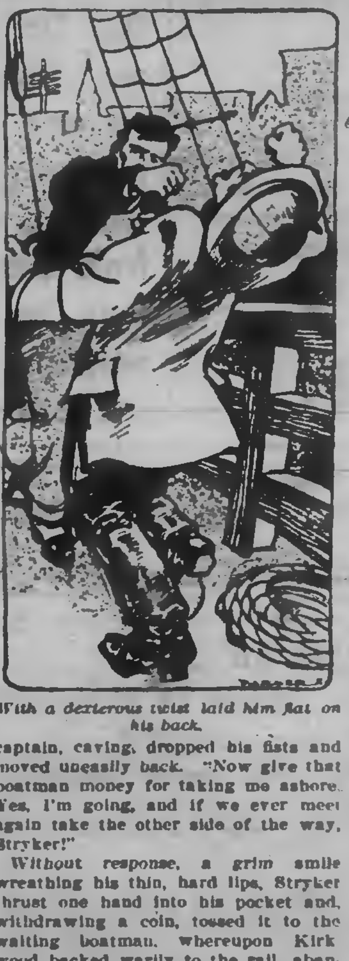
"Any complynts," continued the captain, looking over Kirkwood's head, "must be lyde afore the board of directors in writin' not more'n thirty dyes arfter"—

"You d——d scoundrel!" interpolated Kirkwood thoughtfully.

Stryker's mouth closed with a snap; his features froze in a cast of wrath; cold rage glinted in his small blue eyes. "W'y," he bellowed, "you bloomin' loonatic, d'ye think you can sye that to Bill Stryker on 'is own vessel?"

He hesitated a moment, then launched a heavy fist at Kirkwood's face. Unsurprised, the young man sidestepped, caught the hard, bony wrist as the captain lurched by, following his wasted blow, and with a dexterous twist laid him flat on his back with a sounding thump upon the deck. And as the infuriated scamp rose, which he did with a bound that placed him on his feet and in defensive posture as though the deck had been a spring-board, Kirkwood leaped back, seized a capstan bar and faced him with a challenge.

"Stand clear, Stryker!" he warned the man tensely, himself livid with rage. "If you move a step closer I swear I'll knock the head off your shoulders! Not another inch, you contemptible whelp, or I'll brain you! That's better," he continued as the captain, caving, dropped his fists and moved uneasily back. "Now give that boatman money for taking me ashore. Yes, I'm going, and if we ever meet again take the other side of the way, Stryker!"



With a dexterous twist laid him flat on his back.

Without response, a grim smile wreathing his thin, hard lips, Stryker thrust one hand into his pocket and, withdrawing a coin, tossed it to the waiting boatman, whereupon Kirkwood backed warily to the rail, abandoned the capstan bar and dropped over the side.

Nodding to the boatman, "The Steen landing—quickly," he said in French.

Stryker, recovering, advanced to the rail and waved him a derisive bon voyage.

"By-by, yer bexcellency. I 'ope it may soon be my pleasure to meet you again. You've been a real privilege to know. I've benjoyed yer comp'ny somethin' immense. Don't know as I ever met such a rippin', ay No. 1, all round, entertynin' ass afore!"

Rapidly as he was ferried across the busy Scheldt, the white blaze of Kirkwood's passion cooled, but the biting irony of his estate ate, corrosive, into his soul. Hollow eyed he glared vacantly into space, pale lips unmoving, his features wasted with despair.

They came to the landing stage and swung broadside on. Mechanically the American got up and disembarked. As heedless of time and place he moved up the quay to the gangway and so gained the esplanade, where, pausing, he thrust a trembling hand into his trousers pocket.

The hand reappeared, displaying in its outspread palm three big, round, brown, British pennies. Staring down at them, Kirkwood's lips moved.

"Bedrock!" he whispered huskily.

CHAPTER XIX.

Without warning or presage the still evening air was smitten and made softly musical by the pealing of a distant chime calling vespers to its brothers in Antwerp's hundred belfries. Like the beating of a mighty heart heard through the rushing clamor of the pulses, a single deep throated bell boomed solemnly six heavy, rumbling strokes.

Six o'clock! Kirkwood roused out of his dour brooding. The Amsterdam express would leave at 6:32, and he knew not from what station.

Striding swiftly across the promenade, he entered a small tobacco shop and made inquiry of the proprietress. His command of French was tolerable. He experienced no difficulty in comprehending the good woman's instructions.

Trains for Amsterdam, she said, left from the Gare Centrale, a mile or so across the city. Monsieur had plenty of time and to spare. There was the tram line if monsieur did not care to take a fiacre. If he would go by way of the Vieille Bourse he would discover the tram cars of the Rue Kipdorp. Monsieur was most welcome.

Monsieur departed with the more haste since he was unable to repay this courtesy with the most trifling purchase. After a brisk walk of some fifteen minutes he reached the station.

A public clock reassured him with the information that he had the quarter of an hour's leeway. It was only seventeen minutes past 18 o'clock (Belgian railway time, always confusing). Inquiring his way to the Amsterdam train, which was already waiting at the platform, he paced its length, peering brazenly in at the coach windows, now warm with hope, now shivering with disappointment, realizing as he could not but realize that, all else aside, his only chance of rehabilitation lay in meeting Calendar. But in none of the coaches or carriages did he discover any one even remotely resembling the fat adventurer, his daughter or Mulready.

Satisfied that they had not yet boarded the train, he stood aside, tortured with forebodings, while anxiously scrutinizing each individual of the throng of intending travelers. Perhaps they had been delayed—by the Alethea's lateness in making port, very likely. Perhaps they purposed taking not this but a later train. Perhaps they had already left the city by an earlier or had returned to England.

On time, the bell clanged its warning, the guards bawled theirs, doors were hastily opened and slammed, the trucks began to groan, couplings jolting as the engine chafed in constraint. The train and Kirkwood moved simultaneously out of opposite ends of the station, the one to rattle and hammer round the eastern boundaries of the city and straighten out at top speed on the northern route for the Belgian line, the other to stroll moodily away, idle hands in empty pockets, bound aimlessly anywhere—it didn't matter!

Nothing whatever mattered in the smallest degree. Ere now the outlook had been dark, but this he felt to be the absolute nadir of his misfortunes. Presently—after awhile, as soon as he could bring himself to it—he would ask the way and go to the American consulate. But just now, low as the tide of chance had ebbed, leaving him stranded on the flats of vagabondage, low as showed the measure of his self esteem, he could not tolerate the prospect of begging for assistance.

He found himself, neither knowing nor caring how he had won thither, in the Place Verte, the vast venerable pile of the cathedral rising on his right, hotels and quaint old world dwellings with peaked roofs and gables and dormer windows inclosing the other sides of the square. The chimes (he could hear none but those of the cathedral) were heralding the hour of seven. Listless and preoccupied in contemplation of his wretched case, he wandered purposelessly half round the square, then dropped into a bench on its outskirts.

It was some time later that he noticed, with a casual, indifferent eye, a porter running out of the Hotel de Flandre, directly opposite, and calling a fiacre in to the carriage block.

As languidly he watched a woman, very becomingly dressed, follow the porter down to the curb.

The fiacre swung in, and the woman dismissed the porter before entering the vehicle, a proceeding so unusual that it fixed the onlooker's interest. He sat rigid with attention. The woman seemed to be giving explicit and lengthy directions to the driver, who nodded and gesticulated his comprehension.

The woman was Mrs. Hallam.

The first blush of recognition passed, leaving Kirkwood without any amazement. It was an easy matter to account for her being where she was. Thrown off the scent by Kirkwood at Sheerness the previous morning, she had missed the day boat, the same which had ferried over those whom she pursued. Returning from Sheerness to Queensborough, however, she had taken the night boat for Flushing and Antwerp, and not without her plan. She was not a woman to waste her strength aimlessly. Kirkwood believed that she had had from the first a very definite campaign in view. In that campaign Queensborough pier had been the first strategic move, the journey to Antwerp, apparently, the second, and the American was impressed that he was witnessing the inception of the third decided step. The conclusion of this process of reasoning was inevitable—madam would bear watching.

Thus was a magical transformation brought about. Instantaneously lassitude and vain repinings were replaced by hopefulness and energy. In a twinkling the young man was on his feet, every nerve a-thrill with excitement.

Mrs. Hallam, blissfully ignorant of this surveillance over her movements, took her place in the fiacre. The driver clucked to his horse, cracked his whip and started off at a slow trot—a pace which Kirkwood imitated, keeping himself at a discreet distance in the rear of the cab, but prepared to break into a run whenever it should prove necessary.

Such exertion, however, was not required of him. Evidently Mrs. Hallam was in no great haste to reach her destination. The speed of the fiacre remained extremely moderate, and Kirkwood found a long, brisk stride fast enough to keep it well in sight.

Round the green square, under the beautiful walls of Notre Dame d'Anvers, through Grande place and past the Hotel de Ville the cab proceeded, dogged by what might plausibly be asserted the most persistent and infatuated soul that ever crossed the water, and so on into the Van Dyck quay, turning to the left at the old Steen dungeon and, slowing to a walk, moving soberly up the drive.

Beyond the lip of the embankment the Scheldt flowed, its broad, shining surface oily, smooth and dark, a mirror for the incandescent glory of the skies. The life of the river was gone, and at their moorings the ships swung in great quietness, riding lights glimmering like low, wan stars.

In the company of the latter the young man marked down the Alethea, a sight which made him unconsciously clinch both fists and teeth, reminding him of that rare wag, Stryker.

To his way of thinking the behavior of the fiacre was quite unaccountable. Hardly had the horse paced off the length of two blocks on the quay ere it was guided to the edge of the promenade and brought to a stop. And the driver twisted the reins round his whip, thrust the latter in its socket, turned sidewise on the box and began to smoke and swing his heels, surveying the panorama of river and sunset with complacency—a cabby, one would venture, without a care in the world and serene in the assurance of a generous tip when he lost his fare. But, as for the latter, she made no move. The door of the cab remained closed—like its occupant's mind, a mystery to the watcher.

Twilight shadows lengthened, darkling, over the land. Street lights flashed up in long, radiant ranks. And still the fiacre lingered in inaction; still the driver lorded it aloft in carefree abandon.

In the course of time this inertia where he had looked for action, this dull suspense when he had forecast interesting developments, wore upon the watcher's nerves and made him at once impatient and suspicious. Now that he had begun to doubt he conceived it as quite possible that Mrs. Hallam, who was capable of anything, should have stolen out of the cab by the other and to him invisible door. To resolve the matter finally he took advantage of the darkness, turned up his coat collar, hunched up his shoulders, hid his hands in pockets, pulled the visor of his cap well forward over his eyes and slouched past the fiacre.

Mrs. Hallam sat within. He could see her profile clearly silhouetted against the light. She was bending forward and staring fixedly out of the window across the driveway. Mentally he calculated the direction of her gaze, then moved away and followed it with his own eyes and found himself staring at the facade of a third rate hotel. Above its roof the gilded letters of a sign, catching the illumination from below, spelled out the title of "Hotel du Commerce."

Mrs. Hallam was interested in the Hotel du Commerce?

Thoughtfully Kirkwood fell back to his former point of observation, now the richer by another object of suspicion, the hostelry. Mrs. Hallam was waiting and watching for some one to enter or to leave that establishment. It seemed a reasonable inference to draw. Well, then, so was Kirkwood no less than the lady. He deemed it quite conceivable that their objects were identical.

He started to beguile the time by wondering what she would do if—

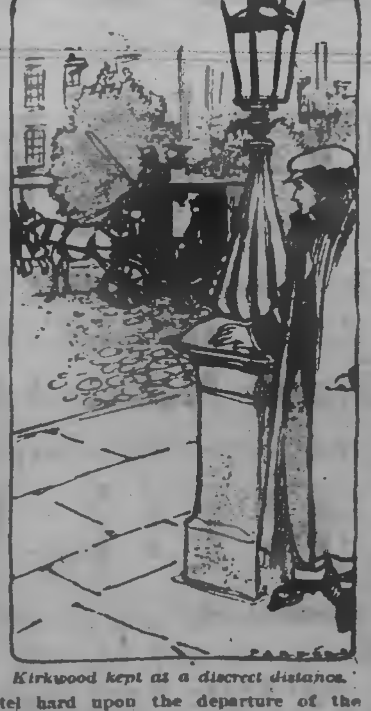
Of a sudden he abandoned this line of speculation and, catching his breath, held it, almost afraid to credit the truth that for once his anticipations were being realized under his very eyes.

Against the lighted doorway of the Hotel du Commerce the figures of two men were momentarily sketched as they came hurriedly forth, and of the two one was short and stout and even at a distance seemed to bear himself with an accent of assertiveness, while the other was tall and heavy of shoulder.

Side by side they marched in step across the embankment to the head of the quay gangway, descending without pause to the landing stage. Kirkwood, hanging breathlessly over the guard rail, could hear their footfalls ringing in hollow rhythm on the planks of the inclined way, could even discern Calendar's unlovely profile in dim relief beneath one of the waterside lights and he recognized unmistakably Mulready's deep voice, grumbling inarticulately.

At the outset he had set after them with intent to accost Calendar, but their pace had been swift and his irresolute. He hung fire on the issue, dreading to reveal himself, unable to decide which were the better course—to pursue the men or to wait and discover what Mrs. Hallam was about. In the end he waited and had his disappointment for recompense.

For Mrs. Hallam did nothing intelligible. Had she driven over to the hotel hard upon the departure of the men he would have believed that she was seeking Dorothy and would, furthermore, have elected to crowd their interview if she succeeded in obtaining one with the girl. But she did nothing of the sort. For a time the fiacre remained as it had been ever since stopping; then, evidently admonished by his fare, the driver straightened up, knocked out his pipe, disentangled reins and whip and wheeled the equipage back on the way it had come, disappearing in a dark side street leading eastward from the embankment.



Kirkwood kept at a discreet distance.

DECLINE IN POULTRY

Hamilton, Nov. 13.—The decline that was looked for in prices of poultry came this morning when turkeys were quoted 5c. per lb. less than they were las tweek, and other lines of poultry were considerably cheaper. Mild weather and a big supply brought about fair prices. Meats and produce were steady at prices that ruled during the last couple of weeks. The market was not so large as that of last Saturday, but business was lively. Ruling prices were: Beef, first quality, 7c. to 7 1-2c; second quality, 5c. to 6c.; third, 3 1-2c. to 4c. Lamb, 10c to 11c. Live hogs, $7.75 to $8 per cwt. Dressed pork, $10.50 to $10.75. Chickens, 60c. to $1.25 pair. Ducks, $1 to $1.50 pair. Turkeys, 10c to 12c. Butter, creamery, 30c. to 32c; dairy, 28 to 30c; fresh eggs, 40c; late gathered, 30c. Hay, $16 to $17 ton. Straw, $9 to $10. Wheat, $1 to $1.02. Oats, 42c to 43c.

SPORTING NEWS

SIX TEAMS HAVE ENTERED IN CITY HOCKEY LEAGUE

Mr. C. G. Graham, Again Elected to the Presidency. Keene Will Again Be Represented While Collegiates and Chieftains are New Entrants. Ticket System Will Be Done Away With.

Perfect harmony marked the annual meeting of the Peterborough City Hockey League, held last night in the Oriental hotel parlors, and the preliminary work of this organization was transacted in a thorough sportsmanlike and pleasing manner, and it is safe to predict that this coming season will be the most successful that the league has known. Six teams were represented, viz., Keene, Strathconas, T. A.S., West Ends, Chieftains and Collegiates, the last two named being new entrants, although the work of their hockey teams is well known to the many lovers of the hockey game in this city.

Lakefield, who are the present holders of the championship, were not represented, although it was understood and hoped that the northern village boys would be enabled to defend the title. Keene, after an absence of a season, will again be a welcome addition to the City League ranks, while Norwood, on account of the departure of the majority of the players for other localities, will not enter. A slight change in the constitution was made and will no doubt be of benefit to the league. The clause relating to players being allowed to perform on the O.H.A. teams was made to read for all time, and not for the one season, as was the case last year.

The ticket system will be abolished, and in the future none will be issued for admission purposes. This change is a much needed one, and it will place the teams in a better financial condition at the close of the season.

OFFICERS

A splendid body of officers were elected, and they are as follows—

Patrons and Patronesses—Mayor and Mrs. Rush, Dr. and Mrs. Gibson, Lakefield; Dr. and Mrs. Wightman; Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Merrill; Dr. and Mrs. McWilliams, Keene.

Hon President—Mr. J. R. Stratton,
Hon. Vice-Pres.—Mr. R. A. Morrow,
President—Mr. C. G. Graham.
Vice-Pres.—Mr. E. N. McWilliams
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mr. Jack Oldham.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. F. D, Craig

OTHER BUSINESS

On motion, the minutes of the last annual meeting of the Peterborough City Hockey League were read and confirmed.

Mr. F. D. Craig read the secretary-treasurer's report, which was, on the whole, satisfactory. It showed the gate receipts of the games to have been $220.

Mr. Russel Pearse, representing the Norwood hockey team, stated that that place would not be able to place a team in the Peterborough City Hockey League this season, as the majority of last year's team had left Norwood. Remarking on the ticket system Mr. Pearse said to his mind it was a failure.

Dr. McWilliams moved that all city players be allowed to play with O.H. A. teams without interference to their standing in the City Hockey League. The motion was seconded by Mr. F. D. Craig.

On motion the secretary-treasurer was notified to get the necessary playing permits issued; the same to be given out to the managers of the teams at the time of the drawing up of the schedule.

The president and secretary-treasurer were appointed a committee to make arrangements for the use of the Brock street rink for the league games.

Mr. Metheral moved that the date of the league games be changed from Thursday to Wednesday night. Dr. McWilliams seconded the motion and it carried.

The secretary-treasurer read an account from the caretaker of the rink, asking for reimbursement for services given in taking tickets. On motion the account was ordered to be paid.

REPRESENTATIVES

SHRUBB BEAT FRED. SIMPSON IN FORT WILLIAM RACE

THE RACE BY MILES.

Miles.	Shrubb.	Simpson.

3	16.00	16.40
3	21.40	22.40

7	39.10	40.15
8	44.50	46.50
10	55.35	—

Five hundred people saw Alf. Shrubb defeat Fred Simpson at the Arena Monday night in a ten-mile race, in fast time of 55 minutes and 35 seconds. At the finish Shrubb was leading by four laps, and was going at a great clip. The race was a good one, and despite the fact that Shrubb won easily, was interesting from the spectator's standpoint, as the little Englishman's many sprints and the big Indian's game efforts to regain lost ground kept the crowd on tip-toe most of the time.

The styles of the two runners presented the greatest possible contrast. Shrubb has a short, choppy gait, and runs at all sorts of paces, from a terrific burst of speed, when he sprints, to a comparatively slow trot when he is resting up. Simpson, on the other hand, had a regular Simpson style, a long, loping, tireless stride that eats up the miles without apparent effort. He runs at much the same pace all the time, only occasionally indulging in a sprint. His style and gait very closely resembles those of Longboat, and even in physical appearance there is a marked similarity between the two men.

In the race last night Shrubb adopted his usual tactics, and started right off the reel to lap Fred, but the latter stuck to him for over a mile, and it was about the two-mile mark before the Englishman finally reached the Indian. Then he stuck behind Simpson for a few laps more, but on the thirteenth lap, ducked his head and started one of his famous sprints. Simpson tried to stay, but soon began to drop back. For the next three miles the positions of the two men did not change much. On the sixth mile, however, Shrubb again brought the crowd to its feet by tearing away after the lanky Indian, and then after catching him, pass him at a terrific clip. Simpson paid little attention to him and did not lengthen his stride at all, but kept on at the same old resistless lope.

The seventh mile was uneventful, as Shrubb dropped in behind the Indian, and contented himself with trailing him for about fifteen laps.

When the eighth mile was reached, however, the crowd began to call for Shrubb to do something, and he did it with a vengeance, passing Simpson at the eight-and-a-half mile mark, and then keeping up the sprint, he gained another lap on him. Simpson aroused the crowd by his determined sprint, and the way in which he kept Shrubb from making the lead larger. Shrubb was not to be denied, however, and half a mile further on, he again passed Simpson, and soon had four laps to the good. Simpson again woke up the crowd in the last mile by his repeated and determined efforts to regain his lost ground, but Shrubb still had lots of go in him, and stalled off the Indian.

The time of the race was remarkably fast, considering all the circumstances. The track was twelve and a half laps to the mile and although some attempt had been made to bank the corners, the dips were not long enough to prove very successful. The wood floor was also pretty hard on the runners' feet.

When the race was over both men received quite an ovation, a big crowd of enthusiastic Englishmen in particular surrounding Shrubb in their efforts to shake hands with him.—Fort William Times-Journal.

RUNNING

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 17.—Alfred Shrubb, world's champion long distance runner, is trying to arrange for a race between himself and either Tom Longboat or Acoose.

Tom Longboat, the bronzed wonder, is expected to arrive in the city tonight. Alf. Shrubb is at present at Fort William, and may come in with his Indian rival. Two other Marathon men that will be here this week are John D. Marsh and Henri St. Yves. They are returning from the Pacific coast, where they cleaned up a number of big Marathon races. Paul Acoose is also casting his eyes this way, and may join the running stars before the week is over. A number of races between the big men will likely be arranged.

RECEIPTS WERE SMALL

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 17.—The merry Marathoners, including Johnny Hayes, St. Yves, Johnny Marsh and others, are here trying to collect some $3,000 from Mr. Robert Guggenheim, the young New York millionaire. St. Yves broke the world's record here, running for an association of which Guggenheim is president. The runners claim to have obtained a contract from Guggenheim, through his secretary, Laury Walker, whereby they were guaranteed $3,000 to run twenty miles at Spokane on November 7th, Guggenheim to get all the box office receipts. Guggenheim and his secretary understood there was to be no race if it rained. It rained heavily last Sunday, but they insisted on staging the race. Guggenheim's secretary forbade them to do so, but they insisted the contract carried no stipulation about rain. The race was run in the rain, and the box office receipts were just $218.

EXPENSIVE PAIR OF ATHLETES

Gotch and Jeff on Tour — Sam Langford's Claim to Title

New York, Nov. 17.—It requires some loose change to keep a grand op'ry troup out on the road, but there are other things equally expensive.

Jeffries' contract calls for a salary of $3,250 a week, while he must be provided with a private car, containing a complete gymnasium outfit. His contract allows him to return to New York in December, when bids for his fight with Johnson are opened.

The aggregation must expect to clean up all the money in the world, for besides Jeffries the others must be paid good salaries, and Gotch is noted for his catch-as-catch-can grip on coin of the realm.

LANGFORD'S LATEST CLAIM.

Boston, Nov. 17.—Sam Langford, the "Boston Tar Baby," is to-day setting up a claim for the middleweight championship of the world.

As soon as Langford heard that Ketchel had announced himself in the heavyweight class Sam landed on the middleweight championship which Ketchel relinquished, and challenges anyone to take it away from him in the prize ring.

Langford's only rival for the claim is Billy Papke, but as the latter has consistently refused to fight a negro, Langford declares Papke's claims are nil.

Joe Woodman, Langford's manager, has written to sports in New York a formal challenge for any fighter to meet Langford. He says a fight with Papke would be the means of settling the championship. It is hardly likely, though, that Papke will consent to meet the "Tar Baby."

GOSSIP OF THE FIGHTERS

Welsh and Nelson May be Matched--Jeff Must Get Busy

New York, Nov. 17.—If Battling Nelson means what he says he will agree to a match of 45 rounds with Freddie Welsh, of England, for the lightweight championship of the world. Nelson, who refereed a ten-round fight between Bert Keyes and Matty Baldwin, at Schenectady, New York, Tuesday night, announced that he had decided to take Welsh on and that as soon as the Englishman arrives here next month a match can be arranged.

"Welsh is a first-class boxer," says Nelson, "but that lets him out. If we fight he will probably run many miles around the inside of the ring to keep out of harm's way, at the same time jabbing out the points, for which he is famous, but in a 45-round battle he can't keep running for ever, and I will finally land him.

Welsh, who cleaned up $11,000 on his mill with Summers, will sail from England about Dec. 10. He is quoted in the London sporting papers as saying that as soon as he arrives in this city he will post a $5,000 forfeit to bind the match with Nelson and will agree to any fair terms. Promoter James Coffroth, when he learned that a Nelson-Welsh fight was possible after all, declared that the Colma A. C. would go after the match with a handsome offer.

According to William Madden, Jeffries' chances for beating Johnson will be very slim unless he indulges in several real fights with second and third raters before he enters the ring with the negro. Madden argues that the mere reduction of weight by dint of constant exercise cannot fit a pugilist after a four or five years' idleness.

BOWLING AT Y. M. C. A.

A well-known business man who visits this city occasionally and is a native of Hamilton, made the remark yesterday that he would bet that the score of the Hamilton-Ottawa game will be around the figures of 30—8, with Ottawa on the small end.

On the 30th of this month Longboat is due in Chatham for a race with Billy Sherring, and this will mark the first appearance of the pair in a series of races that are being arranged in the various towns in western Ontario and the border cities.—Toronto Telegram.

A rooters club has been organised to accompany the Ottawa team to Toronto on Saturday. They should start at once, rooting a hole in the ground to bury the remnants of their favorites after the Tigers are through with their work.

Much interest is being taken in Peterborough in the game between Ottawa and Hamilton at Toronto on Saturday, when the championship of the "Big Four" will be decided. The Tigers are the favorites here, and some bets are being made that they will win by at least five points. A number of local rugby enthusiasts are going to Toronto to see the game.

PARCELS HAVE TOO MUCH OF A DROP

The manager of a local manufacturing concern has asked the Review to draw attention to a matter at the post office that he would like to see remedied. He says that there is too much of a drop when parcels are dropped into the office through the receptacles for receiving mail matter. The Review's informant states that catalogues frequently break loose from the wrappers when they strike the bottom of the basket or box at the end of the "chutes."

Weighted Himself; Jumped In Lake.

Rochester, N.Y., Nov. 18.—Clayton Tyler, 50 years old, proprietor of the Crystal Lake Hotel, at Crystal Lake, New York, yesterday morning rowed in a boat to the centre of the lake, tied a heavy weight around his waist and jumped overboard.

ENDOCARDITIS.

Forms and Dangers of This Affection of the Heart.

By "endocarditis" is meant an inflammation of the endocardium or membrane lining the cavities of the heart. It is caused by the presence of poisonous material, usually of living germs, in the blood and is therefore most often associated with or a consequence of some general disease, such as rheumatism, typhoid fever, scarlet fever, diphtheria or pneumonia.

There are the usual two forms found in most diseases, acute and chronic, the last following upon the first, and there are also the more important divisions into simple and malignant endocarditis.

In the simple kind the lining membrane of the heart presents numerous points of inflammation—little red areas with a tuft or ball of fibrin, or clotted blood, in the centre. These inflamed spots are not large, and the clots attached to them are also small in the simple form. But in malignant endocarditis the area inflamed is much more extensive, and the clots are larger, sometimes almost filling the cavity of the heart. In some cases of malignant endocarditis, then called ulcerative endocarditis, the inflammation is so acute as to cause ulceration of the affected parts.

The dangers of endocarditis are twofold—danger to the heart itself and danger to the brain or lungs or one of the other organs of the body. The danger to the heart is from injury to one of the valves. This almost always happens except in the mildest form of endocarditis, because the inflammation most often affects the edges of the valves. Even when the disease subsides without giving any sign of valvular injury at first, this often appears later through a fibrous thickening or scarlike contraction of the part originally inflamed. This interferes with the complete closure of the valve, and the result is a heart permanently crippled by valvular disease.

When there is actual ulceration of the valves injury is inevitable.

The danger to the brain or other organ is from detachment of the little blood clot from the inflamed spot and its carriage into the general circulation, where it plugs one of the smaller arteries. If this happens in the brain it gives rise to symptoms of apoplexy.

The first principle of treatment is absolute rest in bed, and this inaction must be insisted upon long after the patient feels well and is well, and for the rest of life anything that may cause heart strain must be carefully avoided.

Useful as Well as Informing.

A newspaper which can be eaten after its information is absorbed, thus affording nourishment for the body as well as the mind, is being published in Paris, and is called The Regal. It is printed with an ink guaranteed non-poisonous, on thin sheets of dough.

Another freak newspaper, The Luminaria, is published in Madrid. The ink with which it is printed contains a small percentage of phosphorus, so that the letters are visible in the dark, and the reader does not need to make a light to enjoy its contents.

At two French seaside resorts newspapers, called Le Courier des Baigneurs and La Naide, are printed on waterproof paper, so that the subscriber can take his morning paper with him into the sea and read it while taking his bath.

In Paris a paper, Le Mouchoir, or the handkerchief, is printed on paper such as the so-called Japanese napkins are made of, and may become useful in case the reader has forgotten or lost his handkerchief or napkin.

The climax of utility is reached in Norway, where some of the newspapers use so tough a quality of paper that is can be cut into strips and twisted into serviceable rope when all the news is read.

The Almanac.

The word "almanac" is derived from the Arabic "aland manah," which means to count and thus aptly applies to measurements of time. In ancient days almanacs were employed by the Alexandrian Greeks, but it is uncertain as to when they were actually introduced in Europe. In 1150 A.D. Solomon Jarchus issued an almanac in script, but the first printed one was brought to Vienna in 1457 by the great astronomer, Purbach. The most celebrated almanac maker was an adept in the so-called black art, Nostradamus, and since his time, somewhere toward the middle of the fifteenth century, almanacs with predictions have been in vogue, and their pictorial prophecies and weather lore have invariably appealed to a large number of people.

A Lesson In Grammar.

Hetty's uncle, who was a schoolteacher, says The Lutheran, met her on the street one beautiful May day and asked her if she was going out with the Maying party.

"No, I ain't going."

"Oh, my little dear," said her uncle, "you must not say 'I ain't going.' You must say 'I am not going'." And he proceeded to give her a little lesson in grammar. "You are not going. He is not going. We are not going. You are not going. They are not going. Now, can you say all that, Hetty?"

"Sure I can," she replied, making a courtesy. "There ain't nobody going."

Flowers as Food.

The old time epicurean was as enthusiastic over flowers and herbs as is the modern vegetarian over a cabbage. He mixed all kinds of buds, leaves and flowers with loving care and gave them all the common name of "sallets." Violets and cowslips he put into custards. Elder tops, burdock roots, broom buds and marshmallows he used for pickling. For concocting coloring syrups all manner of flowers were used. To-day a cooked flower is a curiosity.

WHERE IS THE OLDEST TREE?

A Mooted Question as Many Localities Lay Claim to It.

The most ancient living thing on earth is a tree. Exactly where that tree stands is a mooted question, for many localities lay claim to it; but there have been scientists curious enough to investigate the various claims, and we can probably arrive at a pretty exact result by a few comparisons, says The New York Times.

Recently somebody has put forth the claim of the so-called "Old Green Tree of the Mississippi Valley," which stands near the river in Le Claire, Iowa. Its trunk is more than 100 feet in circumference, and its branches shade a circle of more than 300 feet. It was an ancient tree when the first white man stood under its branches, and has a place in the traditions of the Indian tribes of the Mississippi valley dating back long, long before the first white face was seen on the shores of the western world.

There are certain yews in England that were stalwart trees when Caesar landed on her shoes. More than a century ago a scientist named Decandole proved to the satisfaction of botanists that a certain yew standing in the churchyard of Fortingal, Perthshire, was more than 2,500 years old, and he found another at Hedsor, in Buclas, which was 3,240 years old at that time.

Humboldt refers to a gigantic baobab tree in Central Africa as the oldest organic monument in the world. This tree had a trunk 29 feet in diameter, and Adamson, by a series of careful measurements, demonstrated conclusively that it had lived for not less than 5,150 years—and it lives today. But even Humboldt was wrong in his premise. It has recently been proved that there is a tree in the new world which, of a verity, has lived to "green old age," for it antedates the Scriptural flood about 2,000 years!

There is a cypress tree standing in the province of Chapultepec, Mexico, with a trunk 118 feet and 10 inches in circumference. This has been shown to be (as conclusively as these things can be shown) about 6,280 years of age. Nor is this so remarkable when one stops to think that given favorable conditions for its growth and sustenance, the average tree will never die of old age. Its death is merely an accident, without which it may flourish for century upon century.

NEW UNION IN GREAT BRITAIN TO OPPOSE INFLUENCE OF PAPAL REPRESENTATIVES IN OLD LAND

The Nonconformists of Great Britain have organized a Protestant union under the leadership of Sir R. W. Perks, the well-known Methodist layman. The reasons for this organisation coming into existence are set out in a circular which reviews the increasing influence gained by Roman Catholicism in the old land. It has been made necessary, they think, by the growing influence of papal representatives in the social and political life of the country.

The advance made by clerical leaders in the Old Country, it will be seen, has had the effect of developing Protestant sentiment to a point which, unfortunately, it has not yet reached in the Dominion of Canada. There, at least, they seem to be alert to the dangers that confront them. They appreciate what the growth of monastic institutions means, and they are demanding that all monasteries shall be subject to government inspection. If this is necessary in the Old Land it is much more necessary in Canada, where Rome exercises greater power than in almost any country in the world. Why should not the Protestant denominations in Canada organize in this same way for the protection of those same liberties which are jeopardized by the increasing power of the Roman Church in this country.

We read that upwards of seven thousand Nonconformist ministers and laymen have already signified their desire to join the society. If a similar state of affairs could be brought about in Canada—a great union of the Protestant churches for defensive political action—we would have a means of checkmating the successes which Rome has wrung from our politicians during the last few years.—The Sentinel.

PATHETIC SCENE IN POLICE COURT

In Toronto Yesterday — Wife Threw Arms Around Sentenced Husband

Judge Denton had an unpleasant duty to perform yesterday morning in the County Criminal Court when he was forced to sentence Albert Bean to three years for stealing a letter from his Majesty's mail.

The sum was only $3.50, and had been put in a decoy letter by Mr. James Henderson, the Post Office Inspector.

Mr. Robinette, counsel for the defense, made a strong but hopeless plea to have the charge changed to plain theft. Mr. Robinette maintained that the Act in the Criminal Code covering the stealing of letters did not cover this case because he had not opened a letter and extracted the contents.

Bean has only lived in this country a short time and has been in the employ of the Post Office for six months; he was married less than three months ago and his young wife was in court.

When his Honor passed sentence of three years on the prisoner, which by the way is the smallest sentence allowed, the wife rushed to the prisoner's box and threw her arms around her husband. Constable Clarke attempted to stop her but she shoved him aside. The scene was a very pitiful one.

VIRILE ROMANCE OF THE NORTHLAND

"Two Women and That Man" Offers Great Possibilities for Dramatic Action

"Two Women and That man" is a drama of the far North, telling a vivid story of life in the Klondyke during the rush for gold to that country in 1898. The story chiefly concerns Neil McClain, a young miner who marries a dance hall girl. Two years after his marriage his wife leaves him and is reported drowned at Caribou Run. McClain after mourning his wife for dead, falls in love with the girl, Alaska, the daughter of San Mixer, keeper of a general store. His attentions to Alaska are opposed by Mixer but the girl favors him, so much so, that she decides to marry. She leaves Mixer's home and goes to McClain's cabin with a prospector, Rainbow Rawlins. As they are about to take the sled team to the mission up the river, McClain's wife, Kate, returns. As can be imagined this makes a most delicate and intense scene.

The action of the play from then on is cleverly worked out, working out a most stirring and virile romance. Incidental of this numerous characters are introduced in the way of miners, prospectors, etc. A character of compelling interest is the part of Tagish Jim, a Chilcat Indian, who speaks the genuine Chilcat language all through the play. The stage pictures are all on a large scale, each of the four acts giving an excellent picture of the country in general. The entire action of the play takes place in Alaska, in fact the whole piece breathes of Alaskan atmosphere. The company presenting the play is guaranteed as the same seen at the Majestic Theatre, New York, where much favorable comment and success was met with. The sale of seats will open on Saturday, Nov. 20th, and with the prices as advertised no doubt a big house will greet the appearance of this another big Shubert success.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

Here's a Question

To the Editor of the Review;—

Sir,—I attended the Scotch concert at the Grand Opera House on Monday evening and noticed that the audience took a great deal of pleasure out of the number "Willie Brewed a Peck o' Malt" in which the singers gave a representation of becoming "tipsy" to a marked degree before the song is finished. I have heard no protests from Scotsmen about their race being represented on the stage in this manner. I consider this worthy of note in view of the fact that many Irish citizens objected to the way "The Hat My Dear Old Father Wore" was sung in "The Honeymooners." Where does the difference come in? Is it that the Irish drink less than the Scotch? Or is it that the Scotch do not give a continental as to how they are represented on the stage?

3 BURNED TO DEATH

Horrible Fate of Collingwood Family—Fire Caused by Overheated Stove

Special to the Review.

Collingwood, Nov. 18.—Jim Dand, his wife, and his mother-in-law were burned to death this morning on a farm located in Poplar Side road, a few miles from Collingwood. Neighbors saw the fire about five o'clock and went over to help, but found the flames had made such headway they could do nothing, the roof falling in within a short time. One body has been recovered so far.

It is supposed an overheated stove caused the fire. A fierce northwest wind raged all night.

Dand was an elderly man. His barn was burned only a few weeks ago.

TEACHERS AT OTTAWA GET GOVT. GRANT

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—A substantial cheque from Ontario Government officials has reached the Ottawa Public School Board and will be divided among 150 or more of the teachers on the staff of the Public Schools. It has been here some time, but could not be divided and distributed to those concerned until some additional information needed by member of the management committee was available.

The management committee, it is expected, will deal with the matter at its next meeting. As the grant has been made some of the teachers have been wondering why there is delay about paying the money, but according to the information given The Journal to-day it was only because the division could not be made until some further details were available.

LOCAL GRANT

It is estimated that the amount that will be paid out here will be between $1,500 and $3,000. Officials refused to say just what the cheque sent here amounted to.

Some time ago a distribution of $60,000 was made by the Ontario Government to teachers in Ontario. This was to be on such a basis that those who had five years' experience by July, 1910, and had first class certificates would receive $20; those with second class certificates, $15, and there would also be a number of $10 bonuses. It is estimated that 150 Ottawa teachers will benefit by the gratuity.

Fresh Tips On Modish Things

Women have refused to consider the thick, hunched up draperies essayed tentatively early in the summer. The dressmakers refused to give up their interests in draperies, and the compromise effected gives us drapery and added fullness without any great change of general line.

So beautiful are the soft silken stuffs this fall and so exquisitely do they drape that flowing draperies seem a matter of course.

The tunic is already firmly established. But it is seen chiefly on house gowns of more or less elaborate character. Some of the rough wool walking skirts still cut on scanty lines have a suggestion of tunic often in a contrasting plain cloth, with satin finish for the flat pressed plaits of the lower skirt.

The use of net or fine veiling or chiffon over a lace foundation is very prevalent, and often the creamy lace foundation has glinting threads of gold in its pattern.

Colored net is laid over gold or silver net or over metallic lace, the whole upon a white foundation, or perhaps the colored net matching a gown is made over a fine white net embroidered boldly in metal and in tones of the veiling color.

Brooches are made in fragile designs, such as a silver or gold transparent leaf set with gems, or a little spray of frosted silver buttercups, each cup holding a yellow topaz.

RIFLE BALL BROKE GLASS

And Lodged in Wall of House at Campbellford

Campbellford, Nov. 17.—One day recently Mrs. R. A. Linton was alarmed by the smashing of a window in the front of their residence on Queen street. Upon investigation it was found that the damage was caused by a rifle ball, which evidently had been fired across the river by a boy, and which lodged in Mr. Linton's front hall. Fortunately no human being happened to be in the way of the ball, or a life would have been sacrificed. Is it not time that a stop was put to the handling of firearms by mere children? It is the duty of every one knowing of such a case, to report to the police, as boys with guns are a menace to the community.

PERSONAL

Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, of Ennismore, is in the city to-day.

Mrs. Ernest A. Greene will receive with her mother, Mrs. W. H. Meldrum, at "Fairview," on Friday afternoon, Nov. 19th.

Mrs. Homer O. Fisk, will not receive again till the fourth Friday in the month, and after that not till the new year.

Mrs. Joseph Mills and Mr. and Mrs. Basil Hall, of Peterborough, attended the Black—Mills wedding at Kingston on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Mills wore a gown of primrose satin with white lace and gold trimming.

Mrs. Huycke, wife of His Honor Judge Huycke, will receive on Thursday and Friday, November 18th and 19th, at her residence, 559 Aylmer st., and afterwards on the first and third Thursdays of each month.

Open Meeting

There was a good turnout of the members and their friends at the open meeting held last night in the S.O.E. hall under the auspices of Queen Alexandra Circle, A.O.F. There was plenty of music and games. Fruit and candies were supplied and a most enjoyable evening spent by those present.

An incendiary at Elk Lake attempted to burn Moxley & Joy's mill and opera house.

SPECIALIZING

"Knowledge is safety" and the specialist to whom you entrust your eyes cannot have too much college training experience. We do not know everything—we know more about the focal and muscular powers of the eye than anything else. We believe we can serve our patrons better by thus specializing. There is a lifetime of study in supplying right lenses to the eye. Every case has it's peculiarities, and is a new experience. We have records of over 25,000 eye examinations, yet every case is a study—New Books new Instruments and new Methods, ever add to our fund of knowledge—This is why we enjoy our profession and take such pleasure in it's practice.

OVER A MILLION AND A HALF IN ESTIMATES FOR TRENT CANAL

$1,750,000 For Canal And $30,000 to Pay Damages to Property by Flooding, Both Chargeable to Capital — Nearly Ninety-Two Millions Will Be Chargeable to Consolidated Fund.

Ottawa, Nov. 19.—Hon. W. S. Fielding, Finance Minister, laid on the table of the House of Commons yesterday afternoon the main estimates of expenditures for the year which will close March 31, 1911, or, in other words, the 1910-11 fiscal period. These call for a total expenditure, exclusive of any supplementary estimates which may be brought down, of $127,670,993. Of this, $91,891,578 will be chargeable to consolidated fund and income, an increase of $10,752,940 over the current fiscal year. The remainder, $35,779,415, will be charged to capital expenditure an increase of $5,294,675.

The capital expenditure will include the large sum of $31,981,415 for railways and canals, of which $27,000,000 is for the National Transcontinental Railway, an increase of $7,000,000 over the current year.

The total amount to be voted for Canada's naval service will be $3,676,500. For the navy proper, the vote will be an even three million dollars, the expenditure to include "the purchase, construction and maintenance of ships, the maintenance and upkeep of dockyards at Esquimault and Halifax, and the establishment and maintenance of training schools."

Other items included in the naval vote are $220,000 for hydrographic surveys, including a survey of the Hudson Bay, $281,580 for the fisheries protection service, and $75,000 to provide for the construction of a steamer for surveying the Gulf and River St. Lawrence.

Following is a statement of the proposed expenditure, under various heads, as proposed and compared with the sums voted for the current fiscal year:

	1909-10.	1910-11.
Civic government ..	$4,227,983	$4,436,953
Administration of justice	1,267,983	1,307,983

CENTURY MAGAZINE EDITOR DIES AFTER OPERATION

New York, Nov. 19.—Richard Watson Gilder, editor in chief of The Century Magazine since its foundation in 1881, and widely known as an author and lecturer, died unexpectedly of angina pectoris last night at the home of his sister, Mrs. Schuyler Van Reasselaer. All of his children, with the exception of his daughter Rosamond, who is convalescing from an operation for appendicitis at the house of a friend, were at the bedside.

Richard Watson Gilder, A.M. (Harvard); L.H.D. (Princeton and Yale); LL.D (Dickinson and Wesleyan), was born at Bordentown, N.J., in 1844. When twelve years old, he was writing, setting the type for, and publishing The St. Thomas Register, at Flushing, L.I. Four years later he united with two young men in the production of a campaign newspaper supporting Bell and Evarts for Presidential honors. His interest in politics carried him into the great civil struggle then raging, and while still in his teens, he enlisted with Landis' Philadephia battery, and served during the campaign of '63, when Pennsylvania was invaded by the confederate forces.

The death of his fatchr cut short a subsequent novitiate in the law, and thrown on his own resources, Gilder became first a railway paymaster and later editor of The Newark Morning Register, a daily, and "Hours at Home," a New York monthly published by Scribners. As The Register was losing money, Gilder sold out his interest, but the acquaintances he had made stood him in good stead, and when Scribner's Monthly was started, absorbing "Hours at Home," Mr. Gilder found himself, at the age of 26, in a position of honor, and high literary influence. For eleven years he was managing editor of Scribner's under Dr. Holland, and after Dr. Holland's death, the magazine underwent a further re-organization and change of ownership. Mr. Gilder became, in 1881, editor in chief of The Century Magazine, a position he held until his death.

Mr. Gilder published six books of verse among which are sonnets and lyrics that have found a setting in the American anthology, and have been rated by critics as sure to pass into the heritage of language. His best works are "The Celestial Passion," "Lyrics," "The Worlds," "The Great Remembrance," "In Palestine," "Poems and Inscriptions," "A Christmas Wreath," "A Book of Music."

SNOW SAVED ARDEN FROM DESTRUCTION

Kingston, Nov. 19.—The village of Arden, on the C.P.R. suffered $19,000 damage by fire early yesterday morning, and had a narrow escape from being wiped out.

Work of the villagers saved a great deal, and a fall of snow also helped.

It broke out in a barn owned by John Detlor, completely destroying it, his carirage, storehouse and his residence, with Mond's general store. George Mond was in the store, endeavoring to secure papers, when the building caved in, and he had a narrow escape. W. Pringle's hotel was scorched and all the windows broken.

The fire is claimed to be of incendiary origin.

MOTHERS OF PUPILS DESTROYED BOOKS

Paris, Nov. 19.—Mothers of the Catholic pupils at the Young Girls' School at Chaseigny-Sous-Dun, in Saone-et-Loire yesterday, made a public bonfire of the interdicted text books used by their daughters. At other places in that commune Catholic girls withdrew from the schools.

At Bayonne, where the priests have refused absolution to children attending schools in defiance of the clergy's warning, the parents have retaliated by refusing to contribute to the support of the church.

BLEACHED FLOUR SEIZED BY THE GOVERNMENT

Washington, D.C., Nov. 19.—Open defiance by millers of the U. S. Government's warning to cease the manufacture of bleached flour on the pain of seizure, has led the Secretary of Agriculture to notify inspectors to seize all of the bleached flour in the country. Fourteen consignments, comprising several hundred carloads, were taken in the west Tuesday.

REGULATING THE RAILWAY RATES

Washington, Nov. 19.—Cost accounting must be applied to railroad accounts if supervision of rates by public officers is to be intelligent and fair. This was the position taken yesterday by Associate Justice O'Brien of the Supreme Court of Minnesota, in addressing the convention of the national association of railway commissioners.

Big Dirigible Blows Away.

New York, Nov. 19.—The Briggs-Rice dirigible airship, American Eagle, the largest ever built in the United States, was wrecked at the Morris Park aviation grounds late yesterday, when a northeasterly gale tore away the big tent which sheltered it and rent the 34,000 feet gas bag.

DISASTER AT COLLINGWOOD

Three People Lose Their Lives —House in Flames When Neighbors Arrived.

Collingwood, Nov. 19.—Mr. and Mrs. James Dand, and Mrs. S. Fowler, mother of the latter, were burned to death while sleeping in their home on a farm, two miles from Collingwood, yesterday morning. The house, a two-storey roughcast, was destroyed and only the bones of James Dand were found.

The fire seemingly broke out in the second storey and was first seen at 6.30 by a neighbor, John Dalis, who called John Zeiggel, and at once ran to the fire. The top of the house was a mass of flames. The doors and windows were all closed and no person around. They broke in the door, but were forced back by smoke and fire. A window was next broken and they reached the bedroom down stairs, but it had not been occupied. The stairs leading to the other bedrooms were in flames. They started to remove the furniture but the fire compelled them to leave.

A search around the premises showed that no one had entered or left the house, as snow fell heavily Wednesday night and there were no tracks to be seen.

After the floors had fallen in, the neighbors formed a bucket brigade and then commenced digging among the ruins for the bodies. At nine o'clock they found bones in the southeast corner, directly below Dand's bedroom.

The deceased were well known in Collingwood and vicinity, having lived here for over twenty years. Dand is an expert gardener. In the spring he decided to take up farming, and purchased the house and lands, and made his home there. About six weeks ago, Dand's large barn, filled with his harvest, was burned to the ground, no insurance being carried. His health had been failing and just lately he sold the place to Geo. Weir, a neighbor, and had his furniture, etc., prepared to remove to town.

OFFERED BRIBE; GOES TO JAIL

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 19.—Geo. H. Warren of Malden was sentenced to serve three months in the house of correction and pay a fine of $5, after pleading guilty to a charge of bribery, involving weights and measures of Malden, $5 to refrain from prosecuting a coal company, in which Warren was interested, and which was charged with giving short weights.

MAGISTRATE'S CONVICTIONS ARE QUASHED

Berlin, Ont., Nov. 19.—Convictions by Police Magistrate Weir of the landlords of the Grand Central and American Hotels, charged a second time with selling liquor after hours, were quashed by Judge Chisholm yesterday. The evidence of Provincial Inspector Ayearst's two detectives, Gordon and Green, was discredited, owing to the contradictory stories they submitted. The hotelkeepers each had been fined $100 and costs.

MILK IS SCARCE IN BRANDON, MAN.

Brandon, Nov. 19.—There is a greater scarcity of milk here than was ever felt before. Dairymen are unable to get anywhere near the supply required, and in hundreds of families, children are obliged to get along on a milkless diet. Dairymen do not look for relief, as there is a great scarcity throughout Manitoba, the dry summer and scant pasture having left the cows in a poor condition.

NITRATE STEAMER IN AN EXPLOSION

New York, Nov. 19.—Cable advices received here yesterday tell of the destruction of the Norwegian steamer Bismarck by fire, and explosion in the Harbor of Iquique, Chile. No mention of loss of life is made. The steamer is of 3,050 tons register, was built in England this year. She was loading with nitrate.

Burned by Gas Explosion.

Hagersville, Nov. 19.—Mrs. Gieves, a nurse in this village, was badly burned by an explosion of natural gas yesterday in her house. Children partly turned on the gas in the heater and when Mrs. Gieves went to light it, the explosion occurred, severely burning her face and arms.

Mrs. Stetson's Name Dropped.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 19.—The name of Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson, formerly first reader of the Christian Science Church of New York, was yesterday dropped from the rolls of the Christian Science Church by order of the board of directors, following a three days' conference with Mrs. Stetson.

THE "DUNHAM" REPORTED SAFE

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 19.—Relatives of Captain Pratt, in Walkerville, had their fears dissipated yesterday morning by the receipt of a message from Ashland, Wis., that the steamer Dunham, Pratt in command, had arrived there without the loss of a man. It had been reported that the steamer had been beached to prevent her sinking and that the crew were in danger of losing their lives. The Dunham was built in 1905, and has a length of 460 feet.

MEETING WOULD BE CONTEMPT

Port Arthur, Nov. 19.—James Conmee, M.P., called a public meeting for last evening to discuss the power issue, and invited the mayor and council to be present to speak on behalf of the Hydro-Electric Commission agreement, as opposed to his project for the Ontario and Michigan Power Co.

The mayor issued a letter declining to attend, and asking the people not to take part, as being contempt of court while the case was being under appeal.

ARCHBISHOP TO CENSOR PLAYS

Montreal, Nov. 19.—"We are going to submit all our plays to the archbishop for his approval before we put them on," was the statement made by Frank Charlebois, manager of the Academy, when asked as to how his plans for the future would be affected by reason of the archbishop's pastoral condemnation of the class of plays produced there.

LEG MANGLED AND BOY DIES

St. Thomas, Nov. 19.—Montague Shaw, a fourteen-year-old boy, died last evening in Amasa Wood Hospital, as the result of injuries received yesterday at the M.C.R. stone quarries, Hagersville. He was driving a horse, hitched to a stone dump-car. He slipped under the wheels and one leg was so crushed it had to be amputated.

THESE BOYS WERE REAL CANDY KIDS

Toronto, Nov. 19.—Four little boys were arrested last night, charged with breaking into James Brown's confectionary store at 90 West Queen street Sunday last and stealing eight boxes of chocolates. Entry was made by a side window. The boys are: William Coomb, 13 years; Tom Patton, 13 years; Charles Chilton, 10 years; and John Black, 11 years.

Huyler's candy store on Yonge street was also entered Sunday and a quantity of candy stolen.

BUILD FACTORIES IN ONTARIO

London, Nov. 19.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Geo. H. Gooderham, M.PP., has pointed out to English manufacturers, who intend exhibiting at Toronto, the necessity of their establishing factories in Ontario, as without doing so they will derive little or no benefit from the exhibition.

College Professor Suicides.

Campaign, Ill., Nov. 19.—The body of Prof. Wilfred C. Wheeler of the chemistry department at the University of Illinois, was found on the campus of the institution yesterday. A small bottle found near by indicates that he had poisoned himself.

WANTS AN EXPLANATION OF EXECUTION OF AMERICANS

Two Soldiers of Fortune, Said to be in Revolutionary Forces, Acting Against President Zelaya, are Shot and United States Demands an Explanation.

Washington, Nov. 19.—Two Americans, Leonard Grace and Leroy Cannon, captured while serving with the revolutionists' army in Nicaragua, have been sentenced to death by President Zelaya's orders, and it is declared that sentence has already been carried out. The cruiser Vicksburg has been ordered to Corinto and the gunboat Des Moines to Port Limon.

A cable from Panama says: Passengers arriving from Nicaragua report that a reign of terror exists throughout the portion of that country controlled by President Zelaya. Government troops are rounding up every person suspected of sympathy with the revolutionists, and executing them without trial. More than 500 have been summarily shot and the executions continue. Residences are ransacked by Zelaya's soldiers in search of incriminating letters and evidence, and when resistance is offered the houses are destroyed.

Announcement that the United States Government is tired of the high-handed actions of the small Central American republics, practically was contained in a despatch sent late yesterday to the Bluefields Steamship Co., which sought the protection of the State Department against the interference by the insurgents now operating against President Zelaya.

The company's regular steamer was about to sail for Bluefields, Nicaragua, with a miscellaneous cargo, including rifles and other munitions of war. The corporation was warned by agents of Nicaraguan insurgent forces that the vessel would be liable to seizure and the management asked the protection of the United States.

The State Department promptly replied. The answer was the result of a conference between the President and the Secretary of State and carried full weight. It gave the steamship company no encouragement and practically recognised the revolutionary forces operating against the Zelayan administration, a proceeding for which there is probably no parallel in the records of the United States Government.

An hour later a peremptory note, couched in diplomatic language, but none the less direct, was delivered to Senor Felipe Rodrigues, charge d'affaires of the Nicaraguan Legation, demanding a full and complete explanation of the execution of two Americans, Leonard Grace and Leroy Cannon, who were executed by order of Zelaya when the were found in the insurgent army. Pending a satisfactory explanation of the occurrence, President Taft has refused to recognise Isidore Hazera, the new Nicaraguan Minister.

Were Running Mines.

Managua, Nicaragua, Nov. 19.—Cannon and Grace were tried by a fair court-martial held under the direction of the Government. The men, it was charged, were responsible for placing dynamite mines intended to blow up Government steamers laden with troops which entered the river at Greytown. One of the mines exploded fifteen yards from the steamer Diamanto.

When Cannon and Grace were captured, they had with them dynamite machines and other accessories for blowing up vessels. The men confessed their guilt to the authorities and also in letters to their families.

Previously Cannon had taken part in a revolution against Nicaragua from Honduras, where he was imprisoned for several months.

WANT TO FIRE CORRESPONDENT

Brantford, Nov. 19.—Brantford Trades and Labor Council are asking the Department of Labor for the removal of J. C. Watt, local correspondent to The Labor Gazette, on the ground that he is out of touch with labor conditions. He has been assessment commissioner here for three years. The council passed a resolution of sympathy to the American Labor leaders in convention at Toronto under sentence.

INTERCOLONIAL EMPLOYEES ARE FIRED WHOLESALE

Ottawa, Nov. 19.—Mr. Paquette was informed by Hon. Mr. Graham, in the House yesterday, that 503 employes of the I.C.R. had been dismissed since the appointment of the new board of management.

Mr. Graham informed Mr. Jamieson that $18,118,133 had been expended to date by the N.T.R. Commission, exclusive of sums paid to contractors for construction of roadbed under contract. There were 1,434 employes of the commission, at a monthly salary of $108,133.

E. N. Lewis introduced two bills, one to provide that there be a load line on ships on the great lakes, and the other to insist upon the installation of wireless telegraphy on vessels.

GET TEN YEARS FOR STABBING

Cobalt, Nov. 19.—For an almost unprovoked assault on James Stevens, a section hand, Vicario Scalso, an Italian, was yesterday sentenced to ten years' imprisonment, the full penalty that can be imposed.

The trial yesterday revealed the fact that Stevents and another man were fighting when Scalso sprang in and struck Stevens seven or eight blows with a knife, all of which were serious, and one dangerous. He then calmly went on his way, and was arrested with the bloody knife up his sleeve.

Magistrate Atkinson said that stabbing must cease in the north country, and gave the warning that every case that came before him would be dealt with as severely as the law allows.

BRAKEMAN WAS KILLED IN WRECK

Fort William, Nov. 19.—David Vance, brakeman, was instantly killed and J. J. Sheridan, engineer, is at McKellar Hospital with a fractured skull as the result of a wreck on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway at Crest, a small village 21 miles west of Fort William. While the train was running down hill at a high rate of speed a flat car with a ditcher caboose and engine left the rails and plunged head first down the embankment.

OUR POINT OF VIEW

The Sentinel.

It is hard to explain the opposition of the French-Canadian population to a policy of giving substantial assistance to the British navy. That is to say, it is hard to explain it unless the loyalty of the French-Canadian to the Empire is brought into question. He may be loyal to Canada as a separate nation. He shows no sign of loyalty to Canada as a part of the larger British nation, or Empire, as we choose to call it.

Unfortunately, there have been many instances which go to prove that the integrity of the British Empire is not valued highly by French-Canadians. During the Boer War every defeat sustained by the British troops was made an occasion of rejoicing in the principal cities of the neighboring Province. As the Boers were the most intolerant Protestant population on the face of the earth, and Great Britain is the most tolerant, and has been most generous to the French race in Canada, it is hard to explain the peculiar attitude of the French-Canadians in that conflict.

We find the same sentiment of hostility to British arms and prestige breaking out upon every occasion that brings the Mother Country into conflict with another nation. With regard to the question which is agitating the minds of British people everywhere at present, one would suppose that subjects of the king of French origin would be wildly enthusiastic in supporting any measures suggested to strengthen the Empire against a possible attack from the Germans. There is no community of interest between the French and the Germans. Germany is an aggressive Protestant nation. Therefore, both on grounds of race and of creed—if there were no other and more vital considerations—one would expect the French in Canada to show very warm sympathy with any movement designed to protect British interests against German aggression.

It would be natural to look for an attitude of this kind even if Britain had not dealt so generously with the French in Canada. But when we review the history of this country, and count the number and consider the importance of the concessions granted by the Imperial authorities to the French race in Canada, it becomes an act of rank ingratitude for them, above all other people in the Dominion, to show a spirit of opposition or hostility to anything calculated to protect that Empire.

As one considers these things—the preference which the French in Canada showed for the Boers over the British, and for Germany rather than Britain—it is natural to search for some explanation of this peculiar and unnatural attitude. There must be reason for this evident preference of any other nation over Great Britain. It is not found in the treatment accorded to the French in Canada, either in the past or in the present. Their interests have been protected by British arms, both on land and sea. Their peculiar institutions exist under Imperial guarantees. We are forced to the conclusion therefore, that the influence which operates to develop this spirit of ingratitude and the unreasoning hostility to a nation which has been a benefactor to the race in this country is to be found in the policy of the Papacy.

It is to the interest of the papal power to destroy the British Empire. Nothing would do so much to advance the scheme of universal dominion by the Pope as the disintegration of the British Empire. As the late Cardinal Manning said, it is a bulwark against the success of the papal idea. Speaking to his subordinate clergy on one occasion he said; "We have to do with the will which reigns throughout the world as the will of old Rome reigned once. We have to bend or break that will which nations and kingdoms have found invincible and inflexible. Were heresy (Protestantism) conquered in England it would be conquered throughout the world. All its lines meet here, and, therefore, in England the Church of God must be gathered in its strength." This statement appeared in the official Roman Catholic newspaper, The Tablet, on August 6th, 1859.

The late Hugh Price Hughes has also left it on record that Cardinal Manning said on one occasion that he would deluge Europe in blood if thereby he thought he could restore the temporal power of the Pope.

Rome has not altered its policy since then, and we are disposed to attribute the ingratitude and hostility of the French in Canada to their leaders who are but carrying out the policy of the papacy, as expressed by Cardinal Manning. They are determined to bend or break the power of Britain. It matters little to Rome what agency is employed to effect its purpose. The only consideration is to bring about the destruction of that nation "where all the lines of heresy meet," as Cardinal Manning puts it. If the British Empire were dismembered, and each of the colonies stood alone, it would be comparatively easy for Rome to get control of one at a time. The strength of the colonial Empire of Britain, however, rests in the fact that the heart is in that little island where civil liberty has been established for all time, and that in the last analysis every colony may appeal for Imperial support.

If this explanation of the conduct of the French in Canada is not acceptable, we are prepared to revise our opinion as soon as evidence is adduced to show that there are other substantial grounds for the peculiar attitude adopted by the people in the neighboring Province. Until some satisfactory explanation is made, however, we must hold to the view that the mainspring of the movement is in Rome.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The English representatives must have opened their eyes when Canada demanded a separate navy.

Every woman who has a good husband and imagines that his goodness is due to her influence.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's speech on the navy is, in the last analysis, tantamount to a declaration of independence.—The Kingston Standard.

What need of consulting the British Admiralty when Canada, through Sir Wilfrid Laurier, proposes to do as she pleases.

When a woman flatters her husband and then asks him for money, he feels as if he had been taken up in a balloon for the purpose of being thrown out.

Few were prepared to believe that Sir Wilfrid Laurier would bring in a naval scheme at variance with the British Admiralty's expressed wishes. But he did it.

We congratulate Mr. G. W. Hatton, the well-known lawyer, on getting a "Highly Commended" from the inspector in the recent field-crop competition. Mr. Hatton is evidently a star performer in more than one sphere of usefulness. It is pleasant to spend one's spare time in pulling weeds.

There were some reports in the papers that the Czar would have sent a message to the Holy Father on his arrival in the north of Italy. One does not see why he should have chosen such an occasion, and in any case he has got safely back to St. Petersburg without doing anything of the kind.—The Catholic Register.

The secret of Dante's struggle through life was in the reckless sarcasm of his answer to the Prince of Verona, who asked him how he could account for the fact that, in the household of princes the court fool was in greater favor than the philosopher.

"Similarity of mind," said the fierce genius, "is, all the world over, the source of friendship."—Exchange.

Electric power in Welland is 15 per h.p. and lost of it. The town has five great railways and is becoming a great factory centre.

If we are to form an opinion from the advertising columns, the readers of the 'Sentinel' must be grievously afflicted with lame backs and weak kidneys. These maladies are generously regarded in medical circles as the direct outcome of bibulous proclivities. There are no cures, however, for lame heads and weak intellects, and these furnish the soil in which organs like the 'Sentinel' thrive and flourish.—The Catholic Register.

From Belleville, Ontario, comes another story similar in its revolting details to the now famous Robinson case. The present moral status of many rural communities here in Ontario seems to call for immediate missionary attention. It may not be out of place to call attention to the fact that these communities have had "the benefit of evangelical training" for several generations. The Ruthenians of Western Canada may have their shortcomings and their limitations, but they have not yet descended to the moral status of the family pig.—The Catholic Register.

"If we have a navy," says Sir Wilfrid Laurier, "that navy will go to no war unless the Parliament of Canada, including the hon. gentlemen, choose to send it there." So that if the Empire is in peril the Canadian navy must remain neutral until Parliament has met and has determined whether the war is in accordance with our views. If a strong party in Canada should be of the opinion that the war is not quite right, when the Empire may "go smash," so far as we are concerned. Would it not be better not to have a navy than to break from the Empire because we have one?—The Mail and Empire.

(Canadian Associated Press Despatch.)

Wellington, Nov. 17.—Replying to a question in the House of Representatives to-day in regard to a statement that tenders for the Dreadnought to be offered by the Dominion to the Imperial Government are to be submitted to the New Zealand Government, Sir Joseph Ward declared that the Admiralty would invite tenders and would advise the Dominion. Any other course would be improper, the Ministers being responsible to Parliament and the country. No tenders would be accepted until authorized by the New Zealand Parliament. The warship is to be built in England.

The Italian Parliament is to be reopened on the 24th inst., and it is still doubtful whether the legislators will begin with a furious anti-Government debate on the Convenzioni Marittime, which nearly wrecked the Giolitti Cabinet a few months ago, or whether the anti-Clericals will insist on rushing the question of anti-Clericalism. But whichever question secures priority it is quite clear that before the new Session is very old a bill against the religious orders will be proposed by some prominent Socialist, and it is also as good as certain that it will not secure a majority of the deputies. The introduction of it will be meant rather to serve as a strategic move, and to keep open the anti-Clerical agitation. The new Cabinet which will succeed that of Signor Giolitti will be expected to pay for the support of the hundred odd deputies of the anti-Clerical left by promising them some important item of anti-Clerical legislation.—Catholic Register.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Cables Unchanged—Hogs Active and Higher at Buffalo.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Liverpool and London cables for cattle are firm, at 12½c to 13½c per lb. for live cattle, dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted at 10c to 10½c per lb.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, Nov. 18.—The railways reported 177 carloads of live stock for Wednesday and Thursday at the City Market, consisting of 2185 cattle, 4481 hogs, 3624 sheep and lambs, 171 calves and 4 horses.

Exporters.

There were no export steers offered, consequently there were none sold for export.

T. Connors bought a load of export bulls, weighing from 1200 to 1600 lbs. each, at $3.25 to $4.75 per cwt.

Butchers.

George Rowntree bought 700 cattle for the Harris Abattoir. Butchers' steers and heifers, at $4.20 to $5.35; cows, $1.75 to $4.00; bulls, $2.50 to $4.75 per cwt.

Feeders and Stockers.

H. Murby reports a fairly brisk trade, with larger receipts of stockers and feeders than usual. All of good quality were bought up in good time, and even the common light stockers were disposed of more readily than usual. Mr. Murby bought 350 cattle at following quotations: Best steers, 900 to 1000 lbs., at $4 to $4.60; steers, 800 to 900 lbs. each, at $3.80 to $3.90; good stockers, 600 to 700 lbs. each, at $2.75 to $3.25; common stockers, $2 to $2.50.

Milkers and Springers.

There was a strong market for a large delivery of milkers and springers, several buyers from Montreal, Ottawa and Cookstown, as well as many dairymen and farmers in the vicinity of Toronto. The many sales reported below show that prices ranged from $35 to $75 each.

Veal Calves.

Moderate receipts of veal calves sold readily at $3 to $6.50, and a few extra quality at $7 to $7.50 per cwt. More good to choice veals would have sold.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts of sheep and lambs were large and prices firmer. Export ewes, $3.60 to $4; culls and rams, $2.50 to $3; lambs, $5.50 to $6, or an average of $5.75 per cwt.

Hogs.

Prices were unchanged for to-day, but Mr. Harris' and in fact all the dealers' prospects are for lower quotations. Selects, fed and watered, $7.65, and $8.40, f.o.b. cars.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Nov. 18.—Cattle—Receipts, steady; prime steers, $6.75 to $7.

Veals—Receipts, 75 head; active and 25c higher, $6 to $9.75.

Hogs—Receipts, 2500 head; active and 15c to 20c higher; heavy, $8.25 to $8.40; mixed, $8.25 to $8.35; yorkers, $8 to $8.35; pigs, $8 to $8; roughs, $7.25 to $7.50; dairies, $8 to $8.25.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 2800 head, active; sheep, steady; lambs, 15c higher; lambs, $5.25 to $7.50; Canada lambs, $7.25 to $7.40.

New York Live Stock.

NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Beeves—Receipts, 1227; feeling nominally steady. Dressed beef slow at 8c to 11½c for native sides; Texas beef at 6c to 8c.

Calves—Receipts, 200; feeling unchanged; dressed calves, steady; city dressed veals, 9c to 15c; country dressed, 8c to 13c; dressed grassers, 6c to 9½c.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 3968. Sheep, steady; lambs, firm; sheep, $3 to $4.25; culls, $2.50; lambs, $7 to $7.25.

Hogs—Receipts, 1545; nominally steady.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—Cattle—Receipts, 9000; market steady; steers, $5.60 to $9.50; cows, $3.50 to $5; heifers, $3 to $6; bulls, $3 to $4.75; calves, $3 to $8.50; stockers and feeders, $3.75 to $5.25.

Hogs—Receipts, 18,000, market, 10c to 15c higher; choice heavy, $8.20 to $8.25; butchers, $8.10 to $8.20; light mixed, $7.85 to $8; choice light, $8 to $8.10; packing, $8.10 to $8.20; pigs, $6 to $7.60; bulk of sales, $7.90 to $8.15.

BANCROFT'S IMPORTANT INDUSTRY

Bancroft Times.

Mr. H. C. Hoidge, president of the Hoidge Marble Manufacturing Co., Toronto, and his brother, Mr. Hoidge, have purchased Mr. A. Riddel's interest in the marble quarries south of the village, and the prospects are than an important industry will be developed here. Mr. Thos. Morrison, Mr. Riddel's partner in the quarries, retains an interest in the new company. Work will be commenced in a small way at once, and when spring opens up a big force of men will be employed. The marble will be shipped to Toronto in the meantime, but we understand it is the intention of the new company to build a big plant here, if satisfactory arrangements can be made with the village, where the product of the quarries will be cut and polished ready for the market.

The Religion of the Future

Here are some of the things which men are saying about the ethical life and its many problems.

THE RELIGION OF THE FUTURE.

"The religion of the future will approach the whole subject of evil from the side of resistance and prevention," says Dr. Charles E. Eliot, late President of Harvard. "The Breton sailor, who had had his arm poisoned by a dirty fish-hook which had entered his finger, made a votive offering at the shrine of the Virgin Mary and prayed for a cure. The workman to-day, who gets cut or bruised by a rough or dirty instrument goes to a surgeon, who applies an antiseptic dressing to the wound, and prevents the poisoning. That surgeon is one of the ministers of the new religion.

"When dwellers in a slum suffer the familiar evils caused by overcrowding, impure food, and cheerless labour, the modern true believers contend against the sources of such misery by providing public baths, playgrounds, wider and cleaner streets, better dwellings, and more effective schools—that is, they attack the sources of physical and moral evil. The new religion cannot supply the old sort of consolation; but it can diminish the need of consolation.

RELIGION AND PAIN.

"A further change in religious thinking has already occurred on the subject of human pain," adds Dr. Eliot. "Pain was generally regarded as a punishment for sin, or as a means of moral training, or as an expiation, vicarious or direct. Twentieth century religion, gradually perfected in this respect during the last half of the nineteenth century, regards human pain as an evil to be relieved and prevented by the promptest means possible, and by any sort of available means, physical, mental, or moral; and, thanks to the progress of biological and chemical science, there is comparatively little physical pain nowadays which cannot be relieved. The invention of anaesthetics has brought into contempt the expiatory or penal view of human pain in this world.

THE DEACON AND THE PREACHER

A young graduate of Andover Theological Seminary once told Dr. Eliot that when he had preached two or three times in summer in a small Congregational church on Cape Cod, one of the deacons of the church said to him at the close of the service, "What sort of sentimental mush is this that they are teaching you at Andover? You talk every Sunday about the love of God; we want to hear about his justice."

"The future religion will not undertake to describe, or even imagine, the justice of God," says Dr. Eliot. "We are to-day so profoundly dissatisfied with human justice, although it is the result of centuries of experience of social good and ill in this world, that we may well distrust human capacity to conceive of the justice of a morally perfect, infinite being. In the eyes of God human beings must all seem very young. The new religion cannot pretend to understand God's justice, inasmuch as there is no human experience of public justice fit to serve as the foundation for a true conception of God's."

THE SELF-LIMITATION OF GOD

"Every type of theism which would distinguish itself from pantheism and avoid attributing the moral evil of the human race to God must grant the self-limitation of God involved in the delegation of freedom to finite agents," says Rev. F. R. Tennant, in the Quarterly Review for October. "And, if one such concession be made in the interests of morality, it becomes less unthinkable that another may safely be conceded in the interests of human rationality.

"On the other hand, it must be frankly admitted that the view is not easy to reconcile with that side of the Christian doctrine of God which is illustrated in the saying of our Lord that not one sparrow falls to the ground without our Father. This is perhaps not an insuperable difficulty; for we can rise above anxious care as successfully, and look to our Father to enable us to do so as hopefully, if the physical ills apt to provoke that carefulness be a part of a divinely appointed system which, on the whole, ministers to our good, as we could in the case of their being specially allotted to us for our endurance."

CHANGES IN TWENTY YEARS.

The Expository Times has just entered its twenty-first year. It is edited by Rev. Dr. Hastings, of dictionary fame, and is always a most readable journal. Looking back on twenty years, the editor says that "the Bible is not the same to-day as it seemed to be twenty years ago, and the method of its interpretation is not the same. How can the difference best be expressed? By saying that twenty years ago the Bible was almost entirely interpreted from within, while now it is largely interpreted from without.

"It is not simply that in order to interpret the Bible we must now know something of the religion of the Persians and the Babylonians. It is that we must know something of the history of religion. But it does not follow that the Bible is more perplexing to us than it was to our fathers, it only follows that it is a more comprehensive book. The Bible is less the reflection of God than before. It is now the reflection of the God of the whole earth.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF EUCKEN.

"And it is not the history of religion only that the Bible now calls upon for its interpretation," adds the editor. "It is ethics, it is psychology, it is philosophy. The philosophy of the future, of the immediate future at least, is the philosophy of Eucken. And what is the philosophy of Eucken? It is a philosophy that is religious. Eucken would not be offended if you said it is a religion that is philosophical. For the line that is so often drawn between what philosophy has to do and what religious thought has to do disappears for him, because he holds that both ought to look out from the same view-point—the life of the Spirit. The last sentence is a very recent utterance also. It is taken from an article on the "Religious Philosophy of Eucken" in the Guardian for the 28th of July.

NEW TOOLS AND TRAINING.

"Now this does not mean that the task which is set the preacher of to-day—for the interpreter of the Bible is the preacher—is intolerably heavy. But it means that there must be a great change in his training and in his tools. Nor does it mean that the Bible is likely to lose its place. There has been within these twenty years great danger of the Bible losing its place. But that has been due to the persistence of many preachers in the use of an appeal to which there was no response in heart or conscience."

ON SPIRITUAL TRIUMPH.

Prof. Josiah Royce, of Harvard University, thus defines his idea of the true doctrine of the atonement;

"We, as we temporally and transiently are, are destined to win our union with the divine only through learning to triumph over our own evil, over the griefs of fortune, over the unreasonableness and the sin that now beset us. This conquest we never accomplish alone. As the mother that bore you suffered, so the world suffers for you and through and in you until you win your peace in union with the divine will. Upon such suffering you actually depend for your natural existence, for the toleration which your imperfect self constantly demands from the world, for the help that your helplessness so often needs.

"When you sorrow, then, remember that God sorrows—sorrows in you, since in all your finitude you still are part of his life; sorrows for you, since it is the intent of the divine spirit in the plan of its reasonable world that you should not remain what you now are; and sorrows, too, in waiting for your higher fulfilment, since indeed the whole universe needs your spiritual triumph for the sake of its completion."

Why Stanfield's Use Nova Scotia Wool

THE chief reason is because the Stanfields have never found any other wool that makes Underwear so peculiarly suited to Canadians.

The salty, ocean breezes and healthful climate, coupled with the rich grazing, give Nova Scotia wool a quality which is not found anywhere else.

Nova Scotia wool is perfectly blended.

It is soft and smooth, yet staunch and strong. It can be spun like silk and wears almost like steel. Garments, knitted of this fine wool, give the desired warmth and are not heavy or bulky.

It is no exaggeration to say that the Stanfields get the pick of the Nova Scotia wool. The founder of these mills did much to develop the sheep-raising industry throughout the Maritime Provinces. The farmers saved their best wool for him, and continue to send their high grade wool to the Stanfield mills.

Then, too, this wool reaches the mills in the best possible condition. There are no long railroad hauls—no lengthy journeys in the holds of tramp steamers. The wool is shipped direct to Truro as soon as sheared. Experts sort, clean and make it ready at once for its trip of transformation into Stanfield's Unshrinkable Underwear.

Stanfield's Underwear is made by the only process which takes the shrink out of the wool before the garments are knitted.

The value of this discovery—made by the founder of the Stanfield Mills—is shown by the growth of this business, which is now capitalized at $750,000.00 and employs over 300 operatives.

Stanfield's Unshrinkable Underwear is made in 3 standard weights, Light (Red Label), Medium (Blue Label) and Heavy (Black Label) and in 17 other weights and qualities to suit the requirements of every man and woman.

The best dealers everywhere handle Stanfield's Underwear. Catalogue showing styles, and samples of fabric, sent free for your address.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

Old Christiatity vs. Modern Infidelity

To the Editor of the Review;—

Sir,—I thank you for your courtesy in inserting my letter under this title, but you have cut it short too abruptly. I thought that the manuscript I presented for publication, would not have taken up more space than you could afford; however, I resume my arguments under this head, and will endeavor to make them as brief as possible. I have shown, that in religion, as in affairs of this life, you cannot have positive certainty, but must rest satisfied with probable evidence, but that if you seek for the truth in all sincerity, the full assurance of faith will be given you. Then I adduced the historical circumstances, connected with the alleged bodily resurrection and ascension of Christ, as the first probable evidence of the truth of old Christianity; now with your permission I will resume my argument.

4. The second argument I put forth in this point of view, is the wide prevalence of Christianity from the first. We have the testimony of heathen historians that large multitudes accepted the Gospel preached by the successors of the Apostles, and that without any promise or prospect of earthly wealth or prosperity, but on the contrary being in constant danger of persecution and death by torture. Then within 300 years after the ascension of Christ, the whole Roman empire became Christian under the first Christian Emperor, Constantine, and the Roman empire at that time comprehended the whole civilized world; and from that time to this, the Christian religion has been the prevailing religion of nearly every country in Europe and in Asia Minor, and so it is to the present day, including the whole continent of America, besides other parts of the world. Now this progress and prevalence of Christianity for the 2,000 years since its first promulgation does not of itself prove it to be true, but it is one of many other circumstances, that by accumulation afford the highest probable evidence, that historical Christianity has a supernatural force behind it.

5. Then as to the influence that Christianity has exercised in every country where it has prevailed; thought it has not brought about a state of perfection, it has certainly more than any other religion, promoted good government, security of life and property, and the general welfare of the community. It has been distinguished, even in what are called the dark ages, for the many institutions that under its inspiration have arisen for the poor, the sick and the suffering; and also for the encouragement of the study of the arts and sciences and philosophy, in universities and colleges and grammar schools.

6. What have the opponents of Christianity to set against all this probable evidence? Deny the supernatural element in the Christian religion, and you have to admit that a Jewish carpenter and 12 illiterate fishermen overthrew the mightiest empire the world has ever seen, in the teeth of the most terrible persecution; and now after 2,000 years have passed away, in every country of the world, Jesus is worshipped as God Incarnate and the Saviour of lost mankind, with a fidelity, love, and devotion, that has never been accorded to any other human being.

Can all this be said of any other religion or its author or anything like it?

Christ never built a house, but more splendid edifices have been built to His memory than to all other names put together in the world's history. He never wrote a line of music, but He has inspired more music than any other man. He never painted a picture, but painting was born in His birth. He wrote no great books, but He inspired the most splendid literature the world has ever seen.

Yours etc.,
E. SQWARD.

Good Glasses are worth all you pay for them.

The constant increase in eye defects is partly due to improperly fitted glasses. There is no guess work with us, we give your eyes a thorough examination, and advise glasses only when absolutely necessary.

We are not transient, but permanent residents of the city, and all our glasses are guaranteed. We do not make it a practice of remaining for a few days in a place, and then leaving for parts unknown.

We have never sought to delude the unwary by advertising cut-rates on glasses. Those who do business in this way, either deceive the public, or sooner or later come to grief themselves. Any business to be a lasting success, must be conducted at a fair rate of profit; expert service and enduring articles cannot be furnished at or below cost. MILK IS SELLING AT THREE PRICES

No "Trust" Among the Milk Dealers of Peterborough

Milk is now selling in Peterborough at three prices, five, six and seven cents per quart. Six cents is the ruling figure and very few dealers are selling as low as five cents. One section of the vendors of the lacteal fluid are pulling for seven cents for the winter months, but others refuse to raise the price, and as a result the situation is somewhat tangled. All of which is a good thing for the consumer. With this condition prevailing it is plain that there is no "trust" among the milk dealers.

Went Out to Celebrate on Fire Water and Was Arrested and Fined $22.00

Paul Acoose, the famous Indian runner, along with Billy Bonnie, another Indian, was brought here on the charge of being drunk, contrary to the Indian Act. They were fined $22 each. Immediately after the investigation two harvesters from the east were arrested on a charge of giving liquor to the Indians. They were John Smith and Thomas Cook, and were both convicted and fined $50 and costs. Paul Acoose and his noble red brother remained in town three days as guests of the corporation, and returned to their homes, sorry, but wiser Indians.—Indian Head Vidette.

WHY DID WE REFUSE?

"One thing upon which there appears to be agreement is that the Admiralty asked for or hinted at a much more generous contribution than the Canadian members of the Conference were prepared to give, and, if this policy is insisted upon, it will likely loom large in the debate. Another thing which the Opposition will vigorously question is the principle enunciated by the Premier in the House, and Hon. G. W. Ross in the Senate to the effect that the Canadian navy will participate in no naval war outside of Parliament. This is one of the most vital of the issues involved." —The News.

It has been generally understood in the past that Canada is really desirous of doing something to help Britain. When Britain's representatives outlined at the great naval conference, no doubt only with a view to pointing out what they considered as absolutely necessary, on our own part and no more, what was the result? When Britain proposed the short but effective programme that made Canada at last what she is supposed to have been long wishing to be, a unit of a united empire, what happened? Great Britain was turned down, and the whole scheme has been allowed to drift into nothingness. It was not that Sir Wilfrid objected to the expense. It was that HE OBJECTED TO THE PRINCIPLE OF THE UNITY OF EMPIRE.

The principle of "independence" has been most offensively asserted at every possible point in the Laurier Government's naval programme. The explanation is at hand, too, of the quarrels with Dundonald and Hutton. What British naval officer would care to follow in their wake?

Canada is suddenly developing her real policy of the last ten years. "This is the last shred that binds us," we are told.

Is this the policy then that we endorse? With one voice let us affirm that it is not.

If Mr. Borden has not been a match in this instance for the "subtlety" of Sir Wilfrid, what does it matter? Canada's relation to the empire does not depend upon one party or upon the leaders of one party. It depends upon the whole people—and the people of Canada, at least the ruling portion of it, is loyal to British connection.

If we cannot afford a single Dreadnought let us say so, but in any event let not the representatives of our country betray us by guiding us into the enemy's quarters, as has been done.

As an "independent" or virtually independent Canadian nation the struggle in Canada will assume a different form. The complexion of Canadian affairs will change as they, apparently, have long been preparing to change.

When Sir Wilfrid is asked to strengthen the ties that unite us to the empire he declines. What, then, can his declamations upon "British connection" have been intended to mean? They have been intended to mean just what they have at last come to mean, and that is that "British connection" is to be praised just so long as it serves a purpose, so long as it helps to hold the rest of us down, just so long as it serves as a ladder to an entirely different aspiration.

BARRIE PICTURE HOUSE BURNED

Barrie, Nov. 17.—A serious fire broke out at 10.30 to-night in a block just west of the G.T.R. station, on Dunlop street. The block contained the Crystal Theatre, the gas works office, the C.P.R. ticket office, the G. N. W. Company's office, the Gazette printing office, and Armstrong's barber shop, which were all gutted.

The Crystal Theatre was run by Mr. Guthrie, who, it will be remembered, had a suit against Mr. Edwards, proprietor of the Crystal Theatre here. Mr. Guthrie was in Peterborough when the fire occurred.

SPECIAL MEETING CALLED IN CONSERVATIVE CLUB ROOMS SATURDAY EVG. AT 8 O'CLOCK

To Condemn the Conduct of Canada's Representatives at the Naval Conference in London, in Refusing the Reasonable Request of Great Britain That Canada's Navy Should be a Unit of an Empire-fleet—Every Citizen Who Wishes to Express His Endorsation of a True Imperial Policy is Invited to Attend, Without Distinction of Party.

Mr. Charles N. Brown, president of the Conservative Club, has requested the Review to call a meeting for Saturday evening of all those who are desirous of acceding to Great Britain's request in her hour of need, viz.; that Canada should furnish a fleet unit that can be utilized as a unit of an imperial fleet and not, as has been proposed as "a separate fleet wholly controlled by Canada and not to leave Canadian waters except by the permission and command of the Canadian government," which it might take a year to obtain, in the event of war. An ineffective fighting force such as Canada's sham fleet would be will burden Canada with expense and fail to fulfil any real purpose in the protection of the empire. It is felt that just as Canadian journals are expressing their very strong opinions on the question so it is incumbent upon the Canadian people everywhere to make it known that it is not separation but unity that is their desire and immediate demand.

WOULD AFFILIATE WITH THE PETERBORO' COUNTY COUNCIL

The Lindsay Post says; "The committee of the County Council appointed Wednesday to hold a special conference with Dr. Merchant, inspector of schools, in connection with the government's policy in regard to the inspectorate of Victoria county schools, met in the afternoon and it was proposed to let West Victoria remain as it is and add Ops, making a total of 28 schools, Ops having 11. Then join the eastern part of Ops to the county of Peterborough. The new inspectorate includes Lindsay 20, Verulam 12, Emily 12, Omemee 2, Somerville 11, Bobcaygeon 2, making a total of 59 schools, along with Smith, Ennismore, Galway and Cavendish townships in Peterborough, which totals 91. This would leave 91 schools of Peterborough County under one inspector.

The negotiations re the inspectorate and the applications for inspector were referred to the members of the County Council comprising the negotiating committee."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE THE SCIENCE OF SALVATION

An Unusually Able Lecture by Prof. Hermann S. Hering, C.G.B.—An Exposition of Christian Science Given by a Studious and Deep-thinking Speaker.

"Christian Science, the Science of Salvation" formed the topic of a powerfully interesting address given by Prof. Herman S. Hering, C.G.B., at the Conservatory Music Hall last night. The lecture was a masterly exposition of the principles and workings of Christian Science and the speaker dealt with his subject from the physical and spiritual standpoint. The large audience was quite apparently deeply interested in what Prof. Hering had to say and listened with close attention to his every utterance in his remarkably fine discourse.

Mr. R. J. Todd, pastor of the local Church of Christ Scientist was in the chair and told of his own experience and conversion to the teachings of Christian Science. The reason why the lecture was being given was because something good had been found and it was the desire of all Christian Scientists to let the people know what their belief meant. Mr. Todd introduced the speaker of the evening, whose address is summarized in the following;

In addressing an intelligent audience upon the subject of "Christian Science; the Science of Salvation," it is well, first of all, to reach a mutual understanding as to the meaning of the terms. Science means exact, systematized, and demonstrable knowledge of facts, laws and causes, while according to Smith's Bible Dictionary salvation means "deliverance from temporal evils and earthly destruction," in other words deliverance from evil. Hence "The Science of Salvation" means in substance that demonstrable knowledge which affords deliverance from evil.

St. Paul admonishes us to work out our own salvation with fear and trembling. This Scriptural command means far more than the common belief that salvation is assured by simply having belief or faith in Jesus as the Son of God. Such saving faith is vitally necessary, but it is only the beginning of our salvation—its spiritual basis.

Then must follow the working out of our deliverance from evil, our separation from sin, from the bondage of this world, from limitation, failure, sickness, disease, death.

In working out our salvation we must first see that salvation or deliverance from evil is a mental process, takes place in mind; that it is a transformation through Mind and that it is both ethical and philosophical.

The Bible declares that "to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace."

Christian Science teaches that matter and material existence are phenomena of mortal mind, a concept of existence obtained through the physical senses, a misapprehension of reality held by human consciousness when uninstructed by Science, an appearance instead of an actuality. It is simply an imitation or counterfeit.

Now it is not the appearance but only the original that has power, intelligence and substance. The manifestation of growth, action or being in matter is but a material concept of spiritual facts.

When we recognize God as the only Mind, the only cause, Truth is reflected in consciousness and existence is harmonious. When we believe causation to be material or in mortal mind, we put our trust and dependance in a shadow, a false belief, and existence so-called, is discordant, liable to disease, disaster, death. In order to work out our salvation we therefore need to understand causation.

The ordinary human concept of mind is that which thinks, feels or wills, the intellect, or the activity of the brain. Christian Science reveals the fact that Mind is divine Principle, the infinite Life, Truth, Love, omnipotent, omniscient, omnipresent, the all-inclusive, eternal, unchanging, all-wise being, the only cause and creator.

Christian Science makes it clear that material existence is not the manifestation of this divine Mind, but the phenomenon of the counterfeit, called mortal mind.

It is this false concept of existence that does all the wrong thinking; that believes in sin, disease and death; that claims there is life and intelligence in matter.

The difference between the method of healing through mental suggestion, of hypnotism and that of the divine Mind, the Christ healing, must be clearly seen.

When the effort is made to heal by suggestion, the operator endeavors by means of hypnotism to make the patient believe that he is not sick. He attempts to change the belief, but the cause of disease remains and in time manifests itself in worse forms. The patient is no better off, he has not risen in the scale of being, he has no more manhood, on moral courage, and does not know any more about God and His Christ than before.

The true Christian Scientist reflects the divine Mind, stands on the basis of God, man and the universe as Spirit and spiritual, as Love and its manifestation, as Mind and its ideas—perfect and harmonious. Hence he understands the unreality of matter and evil and knows that man is not sick but that the patient is simply suffering from a false mesmeric belief. From that standpoint he proceeds to correct the errors of belief with the Truth of being and thus establishes harmony on a spiritual, scientific basis.

It is not to be wondered at, indeed it is inevitable, that Christian Scientists should love Mrs. Eddy for having brought to the world this Science of Salvation, the true knowledge of God and man, the spiritual understanding of the Holy Scriptures which enables them to know themselves and to demonstrate that "saving faith," which alone leads to heaven.

Mrs. Eddy did not simply state her discovery to the world; she first demonstrated it and then offered it as a demonstratable Science for all mankind to profit by. This Science overcomes evil, by giving a true knowledge of God and His Christ. It enables all humanity to work out their own salvation and reach that pure consciousness, which Jesus called the "kingdom of heaven."

THAT WATCH OF YOURS'

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE CHEESE FACTORIES; MR. G. H. BARR WILL SPEAK

The annual cheese factory meetings of the district commence on Monday evening next at Cavanville, when Mr. Geo. H. Barr, the assistant dairy commissioner at Ottawa, will speak. Mr. Barr will deliver an address on the care of milk. The results from airing the milk and also cooling it with out air will be two of the important points discussed by this interesting and authorative speaker. Mr. Joseph Burgess of the dairy staff at Ottawa will likely accompany the speaker and assist him at the meetings. About fifteen factories have arranged for an address from Mr. Barr through the agency of Ald. Gillespie, the director for the district.

The times for the annual meetings at which Mr. Barr will speak as arranged to date are; Cavanville, Monday evening; Trewern, Tuesday, Tuesday afternoon; Ennismore, T. A. S. Hall, Tuesday evening; East Emily, Wednesday afternoon; Lakefield, Wednesday evening.

WHAT THEY THINK OF LAURIER'S NAVAL "MOCKERY" IN THE CANADIAN WEST

Special to the Star.

Winnipeg, Nov. 18.—Quite a flutter was caused here by the publication of Admiralty recommendations re the navy. The Free Press makes no comment, but the Telegram says in part, as follows:—

"There is no visible evidence in the Canadian policy of any intention to form even the smallest nucleus of a fleet unit. Two of the cruisers are to be stationed at Esquimault. As torpedo boats cannot, unsupported, cross the ocean, the solitary contribution Canada could make to the Empire's safety is one vessel built to run away, and which one shot from a cruiser of heavier class would blow out of the water.

"What a ghastly mockery of the public feeling which stirred Canada last March. It shows how the advice of the Admiralty has in every particular been ignored, and how steps have been taken to render the Canadian navy valueless in time of peace, and absolutely useless in case of war.

"The resolution of the House of Commons has been interpreted in the narrowest possible way, and apparently with the deliberate intention of blocking the action its terms were supposed to express and foreshadow.

"It is surely time that those public men who have the honor and dignity of Canada at heart should raise a vigorous protest against the indescribable humiliation to which the country has been subjected."

BRAKEMAN KILLED IN ORILLIA WELL-KNOWN IN PETERBORO

William Perry, Was Instantly Killed by Lumber Sliding From Car Which Had Left the Track—Members of His Family Reside Here.

Orillia, Nov. 18.—William S. Perry, aged 24, unmarried, a native of Peterborough, and a Grand Trunk Railway brakeman, was killed here this morning. He was engaged in shunting work in Messrs. Eaton & Sons' lumber yard when a flat car loaded with lumber left the tracks. The sudden derailment loosened the lumber, and when Perry tried to uncouple the cars part of the load, sliding over, struck him on the head, causing instant death.

The coroner, after a rigid inquiry, deemed an inquest unnecessary.

A brother of deceased who lived at Midland, came over immediately he was advised of the accident, and he had the remains taken to Peterborough this afternoon.

The late Mr. Perry was well-known in this city, and his untimely death will be greatly regretted. His brother Harry is also a brakeman. Those left to mourn his loss are his mother, two sisters, Mrs. George Robinson and Miss Lizzie Perry, and two brothers, Harry of Midland, and Thomas, of Lakefield.

The funeral will take place from the residence of his brother-in-law, Mr. George Robinson, near the locks' bridge, to-morrow afternoon at two o'clock, to Little Lake cemetery.

WORK ON TRENT CANAL AT HASTINGS

The dredge 'Little Lake,' with tug and scows, came down from Peterborough last Wednesday and is at work below the locks, where she will operate until all the cribwork and rocks are taken out up to the present locks, which will likely take all winter. The work above the dam is done for the season, and the steam derrick has been loaded on its scow and brought below where it will likely be put at work. The bunch of soft maples which grew on the pier below the locks have all been cut down and cleared away, which changes the appearance of the pier very much.

The 'Rainbow' on Monday brought down a large crib of logs for the timber work.—Hastings Star.

The BLACK BAG

By LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

K.rswood was, then, to believe that s Hallam, having taken all that ible and having waited for the two dventurers to appear, had been con-nt with sight of them. He could rdly believe that of the woman. It sn't like her.

He started across the driveway after e fiacre, but it was lost in a tangle side streets before he could make his mind whether it was worth hile chasing or not, and, pondering e woman's singular action, he re-ced his steps to the promenade rail.
Presently he told himself he under-
ood. Dorothy was no longer of her ther's party. He had a suspicion at Mulready's attitude had made it em advisable to Calendar either to ve the girl behind in England or to gregate her from his associates in twerp. If not lodged in another arter of the city or left behind she s probably traveling on ahead to destination which he could by no ans guess. And Mrs. Hallam was king for the girl. If there were ally jewels in that gladstone bag lendar would naturally have had hesitation about intrusting them to daughter's care, and Mrs. Hallam owedly sought nothing else. How woman had found out that such s the case Kirkwood did not stop reckon unless he explained it on proposition that she was a person remarkable address. It made no atter one way or the other. He had t Mrs. Hallam, but Calendar and lready he could put his finger on.
ey had undoubtedly gone off to the ethea to confer again with Stryker hat was, unless they proposed sailon the brigantine, possibly at turn tide that night.

Panic gripped his soul and shook it,
a terrier shakes a rat, when he con-
ived this frightful proposition.

In his confusion of mind he evolved ontaneously an entirely new hypoth-s—Dorothy had already been spir-d aboard the vessel: Calendar and confederates, delaying to join her m enigmatic motives, were now oard, and presently the word would
Up anchor and away!

Were they again to elude him? Not.
swore, if he had to swim for it.
d he had no wish to swim. The thes he stood in, with what was t of his self respect, were all that could call his own on that side of North sea. Not a boatman on the heldt would so much as consider cepting three English pennies in exchange for boat hire. In brief, it began to look as if he were either to swim or to steal a boat.

Upon such slender threads of circumstance depends our boasted moral health. In one fleeting minute Kirkwood's conception of the law of mine and thine, its foundations already insidiously undermined by a series of cumulative misfortunes, toppled crashing to its fall and was not.

He was wholly unconscious of the change. Beneath him, in a space between the quays bridged by the gangway, a number of rowboats, a putative score, lay moored for the night and gently rubbing against each other with the soundless lift and fall of the river. For all that Kirkwood could determine to the contrary, the lot lay at the mercy of the public. Nowhere about was he able to discern a watchman.

Without a quiver of hesitation—moments were invaluable, if what he feared were true—he strode to the gangway, passed down and with absolute nonchalance dropped into the nearest boat, stepping from one to another until he had gained the outermost. To his joy he found a pair of oars stowed beneath the thwarts.

CHAPTER XX.

If Kirkwood had paused to moralise upon the discovery, he would have laid it all at the door of his lucky star and would have been wrong. We who have never stooped to petty larceny know that the oars had been placed there at the direction of his evil genius bent upon facilitating his descent into the avernus of crime.

Unhitching the painter, he set one oar against the gunwale of the boat and with a powerful thrust sent his own (let us so call it for convenience) stern first out upon the river, then sat him composedly down, fitted the oars to their locks and began to pull straight across stream, trusting to the current to carry him down to the Alethea. He had already marked down that vessel's riding light and that not without a glow of gratitude to see it still aloft and in proper juxtaposition to the river bank, proof that it had not moved.

He pulled a good oar, reckoned his distance prettily and, shipping the blades at just the right moment, brought the little boat in under the brigantine's counter with scarce a jar. An element of surprise he held essential to the success of his plan, whatever that might turn out to be.

Standing up, he caught the brigantine's after rail with both hands, one of which held the painter of the purloined boat, and lifted his head above the deck line. A short survey of the deserted after deck gave him further assurance. The anchor watch was not in sight. He may have been keeping well forward by Stryker's instructions, or he may have crept off for forty winks. Whatever the reason for his absence from the post of duty, Kirkwood was relieved not to have him to deal with and, drawing himself gently in over the rail, made the painter fast and stepped noiselessly over toward the lighted oblong of the companionway. A murmur of voices from below comforted him with the knowledge that he had not miscalculated this time. At last he stood within striking distance of his quarry.

The syllables of his surname ringing clearly in his ears and followed by Stryker's fleering laugh brought him to a pause. He flushed hotly in the darkness. The captain was retailing with relish some of his most successful witticisms at Kirkwood's expense.

Mulready laughed with him, if a little uncertainly. Calendar's chuckle was not audible, but he broke the pause that followed.

"I don't know," he said with doubting emphasis. "You say you landed him without a penny in his pocket? I don't call that a good plan at all. Of course he ain't a factor, but—well, it might 've been as well to give him his fare home. He might make trouble for us somehow. I don't mind telling you, cap'n, that you're an ass. Personally I'm kind of sorry for the boy. He wasn't a bad sort, as his kind runs, and he was no fool, from what little I saw of him. I wonder what he wanted."

"Possibly," Mulready chimed in suavely, "you can explain what you wanted of him in the first place. How did you come to drag him into this business?"

"Oh, that!" Calendar laughed shortly. "That was partly accident, partly inspiration. I happened to see his name on the Pless register. He'd put himself down as from Frisco. I figured it out that he would be next door to broke and getting desperate, ready to do anything to get home, and thought we might utilize him to smuggle some of the stuff into the States. Once before, if you'll remember—no, that was before we got together, Mulready—I picked up a fellow countryman on the Strand. He was down and out, jumped at the job, and we made a neat little wad on it."

"The more fool you to take outsiders into your confidence," grumbled Mulready.

"Ow!" interrogated Calendar, mimicking Stryker's accent inimitably. "Well, you've got a heap to learn about this game, Mul. About the first thing is that you must trust old man Know-it-all, which is me. I've run more diamonds into the States in one way or another in my time than you ever pinched out of the shirt front of a toff on the Empire Prom. before they made the graft too hot for you and you came to take lessons from me in the gentle art of living easy."

"Oh, cut that, cawn't you?"

"Delighted, dear boy. One of the first principles, next to profiting by the admirable example I set you, is to make the fellows in your own line trust you. Now, if this boy had taken on with me I could have got a bunch of the sparklers on my mere say-so from old Morganthau, up on Finsbury pavement. He does a steady business boodwinking the customs for the benefit of his American clients—and himself. And I'd 've made a neat little profit besides, something to fall back on if this fell through. I don't mind having two strings to my bow."

"Yes," argued Mulready, "but suppose this Kirkwood had taken on with you and then peached."

"That's another secret. You've got to know your man, be able to size him up. I called on this chap for that very purpose, but I saw at a glance he wasn't our man. He smelled a nigger in the wood pile and most politely told me to go to the devil. But if he had come in he'd have died before he squealed. I know the breed. There's honor among gentlemen that knocks the honor of thieves higher'n a kite, the old saw to the contrary—nothing doing. You understand me, I'm sure, Mulready," he concluded, with envenomed sweetness.

"I don't see yet how Kirkwood got anything to do with Dorothy."

"Miss Calendar to you, Mr. Mulready!" snapped Calendar. "There, there, now! Don't get excited. It was when the Hallam passed me word that a man from the Yard was waiting on the altar steps for me that Kirkwood came in. He was dining close by. I went over and worked on his feelings until he agreed to take Dorothy off my hands. If I had attempted to leave the place with her they'd have spotted me for sure. My compliments to you, Dick Mulready."

There came the noise of chair legs scraped harshly on the cabin deck. Apparently Mulready had leaped to his feet in a rage.

"I've told you"— he began in a voice thick with passion.

"Oh, sit down!" Calendar cut in contemptuously. "Sit down! D'you hear? That's all over and done with. We understand each other now, and you won't try any more monkey shines. It's a square deal and a square divide so far's I'm concerned. If we stick together there'll be profit enough for all concerned. Sit down, Mul, and have another slug of the captain's bum rum."

Although Mulready consented to be pacified, Kirkwood got the impression that the man was far gone in drink. A moment later he heard him growl "Chin-chin!" antiphonal to the captain's "Cheer-o!"

"Now, then," Calendar proposed, "Mr. Kirkwood aside—peace be with him—let's get down to cases."

"Wot's the row?" asked the captain.

"The row, cap'n, is the Hallam female, who has unexpectedly shown up in Antwerp, we have reason to believe, with malicious intent and a private detective to add to the gayety of nations."

"Wot's the odds? She carn't 'urt us without lyin' up trouble for 'erself."

"Mighty little consolation to us when we're working it out in jail."

"Speak for yourself," granted Mulready surlily.

"I do," returned Calendar easily. "We're both in the shadow of jail, Mul, my boy, since you choose to take the reference as personal. Sing Sing, however, yawns for me alone. It's going to keep on yawning, too, unless I miss my guess. I love my native land most to death, but"—

"Ow, blow that!" interrupted the captain irritably. "Let's 'ear about the 'Allam. Wot're you afryd of?"

"'Fraid she'll set up a yell when she finds out we're planting the loot, cap'n. She's just that vindictive. You'd think she'd be satisfied with her end of the stick, but you don't know the Hallam. That milk and water offspring of hers is the apple of her eye, and Freddie's going to collar the whole shooting match or madam will kick over the traces."

"Well?"

"Well, she's queered us here. We can't do anything if my lady is going to camp on our trail and tell everybody we're shady customers, can we? The question now before the board is, Where now—and how?"

"Amsterdam," Mulready chimed in. "I told you that in the beginning."

"But how?" argued Calendar. "The Lord knows I'm willing, but we can't go by rail, thanks to the Hallam. We've got to lose her first of all."

"But wot I'm arskin' is wot's the matter with"—

"The Alethea, cap'n? Nothing, so far as Dick and I are concerned. But my dutiful daughter is prejudiced. She's been so long without proper paternal discipline," Calendar laughed, "that she's rather high spirited. Of course I might overcome her objections, but the girl's no fool, and every ounce of pressure I bring to bear just now only helps make her more restless and suspicious."

"You leave her to me," Mulready interposed, with a brutal laugh. "I'll guarantee to get her aboard or"—

"Drop it, Dick," Calendar advised quietly, "and go a bit easy with that bottle for five minutes, can't you?"

"Well, then," Stryker resumed, apparently concurring in Calendar's attitude, "w'y don't one of you tyke the stuff, go off quiet an' dispose of it to a proper fence an' come back to divide. I don't see w'y that"—

"Naturally you wouldn't," chuckled Calendar. "Few people besides the two of us understand the depth of affection existing between Dick, here, and me. We just can't bear to get out of sight of each other. We're sure inseparable—since night before last. Odd, isn't it?"

"You drop it!" snarled Mulready in accents so ugly that the listener was startled. "Enough's enough, and"—

"There, there, Dick! All right. I'll behave," Calendar soothed him. "We'll forget and say no more about it."

"Well, see you don't."

"But 'as either of you a plan?" persisted Stryker.

"I have," replied Mulready, "and it's the simplest and best, if you could only make this long lost parent here see it."

"Wot is it?"

Mulready seemed to ignore Calendar and address himself to the captain. He articulated with some difficulty, slurring his words to the point of indistinctness at times.

"Simple enough," he propounded solemnly. "We've got the gladstone bag here. Miss Dolly's at the hotel. That's her papa's bright notion. He thinks she's to be trusted. Now, then, what's the matter with weighing anchor and slipping quietly out to sea?"

"Leavin' the dootiful darter?"

"Cert'n'y. She's only a drag anyway. Better off without her. Then we can wait our time and get highest market prices"—

"You forget, Dick," Calendar put it, "that there's a thousand in it for each of us if she's kept out of England for six weeks. A thousand's five thousand in the land I hail from. I can use five thousand in my business."

"Why can't you be content with what you've got?" demanded Mulready wrathfully.

"Because I'm a seventh son of a seventh son. I can see an inch or two beyond my nose. If Dorothy ever finds her way back to England she'll spoil one of the finest fields of legitimate graft I ever licked my lips to look at. The trouble with you, Mul, is you're too high toned. You want to play the swell mobsman from post to finish. A quick touch and a clean getaway for yours. Now, that's all right—that has its good points—but you don't want to underestimate the advantages of a good blackmailing connection. If I can keep Dorothy quiet long enough I look to the Hallam and precious Freddie to be a great comfort to me in my old age."

"Then, for heaven's sake," cried Mulready, "go to the hotel, get your brat by the scruff of her pretty neck and drag her aboard! Let's get out of this!"

"I won't," returned Calendar inflexibly.

The dispute continued, but the listener had heard enough. Stealthily he crept away to the rail, to stand grasping it and staring across the water with unseeing eyes at the gay old city twinkling back with her thousand eyes of light.

Over there, across the water, in the dingy and disreputable Hotel du Commerce, Dorothy waited in her room, doubtless the prey of unnumbered nameless terrors, while aboard the brigantine her fate was being decided by a council of three unspeakable scoundrels, one of whom, professing himself her father, openly declared his intention of using her to further his selfish and criminal ends.

His first and natural thought—to steal away to her and induce her to accompany him back to England—Kirkwood perforce discarded. He could have wept over the realization of his unqualified impotency. He had no money, not even cab fare from the hotel to the railway station. Something subtler, more crafty, had to be contrived to meet the emergency. And there was one way, one only. He could see [illegible] other. Temporarily he must make himself one of the company of her enemies, force himself upon them, ingratiate himself into their good graces, gain their confidence, then when opportunity offered betray them. And the power to make them tolerate him, if not receive him as a fellow; the knowledge of them and their plans that they had unwittingly given him, was his.

And Dorothy was waiting.

He swung round and without attempting to muffle his footfalls strode toward the companionway. He must pretend he had just come aboard.

Subconsciously he had been aware during his time of pondering that the voices in the cabin had been steadily gaining in volume, rising louder, and yet more loud, Mulready's ominous, drink blurred accents dominating the others. There was a quarrel afoot. As soon as he gave it heed Kirkwood understood that Mulready in the madness of his inflamed brain was forcing the issue, while Calendar sought vainly to calm and soothe him.

The American arrived at the head of the companionway at a critical juncture. As he moved to descend some low, cool toned retort of Calendar's seemed to enrage his confederate beyond reason. He yelped aloud with wrath, sprang to his feet, knocking over a chair, and, leaping back toward the foot of the steps, flashed an adroit hand behind him and found his revolver.

"I've stood enough from you!" he screamed, his voice oddly clear in that moment of insanity. "You've played with me as long as you will, you hulking American hog! And now I'm going to show"—

As he held his fire to permit his denunciation to bite home Kirkwood, appalled to find himself standing on the threshold of a tragedy, gathered himself together and launched through the air, straight for the madman's shoulders.

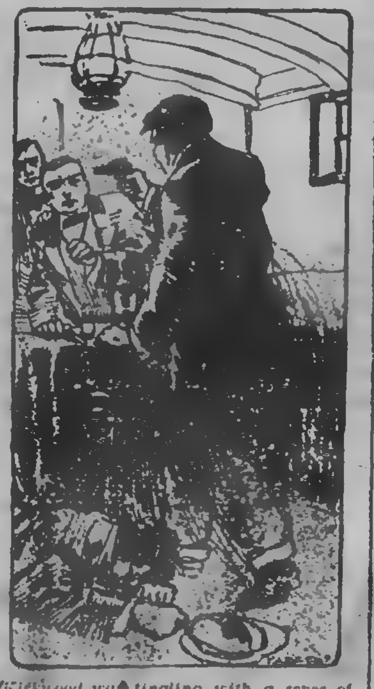
As they went down together sprawling Mulready's head struck against a transom, and the revolver fell from his limp fingers.

CHAPTER XXI.

Prepared as he had been for the shock, Kirkwood was able to pick himself up quickly, uninjured, Mulready's revolver in his grasp.

On his feet, straddling Mulready's insentient body, he confronted Calendar and Stryker. The face of the latter was a sickly green, the gift of his fright. The former seemed coldly composed, already recovering from his surprise and bringing his wits to bear upon the new factor which had been so unceremoniously injected into the situation.

He was leaning heavily upon a hand that rested flat on the table. In his hand he held a revolver, which he had apparently drawn in self defense at the crisis of Mulready's frenzy. Its muzzle was deflected. He looked Kirkwood over with a cool gray eye, the color gradually returning to his fat, clean shaven cheeks, replacing the pardonable pallor which had momentarily rested thereon.



Kirkwood was tingling with a sense of mastery.

DOURO RATEPAYERS TALKING ELECTION

Douro ratepayers are commencing to talk municipal politics. The memory of last year's lively contest for the reeveship between Mr. Frank Moher and Mr. D. Moloney is still very much present and there is much speculation as to what is going to happen this year. It will be remembered that Mr. Moher was elected after a sharp fight and that Mr. Moloney entered a protest and carried the matter to the courts, but was not successful in his appeal. A prominent Douro ratepayer stated to the Review to-day that there would be a contest for the reeveship in Douro and that the fight would likely be a three-cornered one. It is also likely that there will be a large crop of candidates for positions around the Council Board.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE YALE-HARVARD BATTLE

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 18.—The rival football teams of Harvard and Yale rested quietly to-night miles from the scene of next Saturday's encounter with their hard training days behind them and their championship honors still to be gained.

Within the walls of the stadium are seats for 38,000 persons, many of whom are already crowding into Boston, eager for what is generally expected to be the finest exhibition of modern football ever played on an American gridiron.

Harvard journeyed down to the Norfolk Hunt Club at Medford, while Yale came up from New Haven today, sojourning at the Woodland Park Hotel at Auburndale.

Both teams will keep their muscles limbered by running through formations to-morrow, and the Yale men probably will visit the stadium to become acquainted with the lights and shades.

The Harvard team was given an enthusiastic send-off. There were few limpers in the crowd, and Captain Fish skipped about in a style which belied the rumors that he would not be in the line-up on Saturday. Nevertheless, it was admitted that Fish's injury had not responded to treatment so readily as could be wished, and the chances were about even that he would see Saturday's game from the side lines.

Neither is Yale free from an injured list, and the right-end position was said to-night to be still in doubt, although it was thought that Savage would start in that place if Vaughan did not recover from the injury received in the Princeton game.

Yale still held the favorite position in the betting to-day, although the odds which earlier in the month, stood at 5 to 3, have been scaled to 5 to 4.

FRITZ MOHL OF "SWITZERLAND" TO WRESTLE IN NEW YORK

Special to the Review.

New York, Nov. 18.—The meeting on the mat next Monday night at Grand Central Palace of the two claimants for the Irish championship, Con O'Kelly and Pat Connelly, in a finish wrestling contest, is to be preceded by several red hot bouts which will bring together representatives of half a dozen different countries.

Three of the best include contests between Neil Olsen, "The Great Dane" vs. George Schnable, "The Bavarian Bull," Fritz Mohl of Switzerland vs. Carl Hibbs, "The Saxon Giant," and Eberhardt Halm of Germany vs. the well-known "Young Atlas."

ARE PLAYING AT HAVELOCK TO-DAY

Havelock and Brussels Will Again Endeavor to Decide Championship

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Nov. 18.—Havelock have already won the intermediate football championship of Ontario twice this year, but it seems to be up to them to do the trick for the third time, if that is possible, to-morrow, when they meet Brussels at the Havelock Park.

Brussels played here three weeks ago, when Havelock evened up the score with them, but the westerners refused to play it out.

A meeting of the Ontario Football Executive was held at the Walker House, Toronto, on Saturday, when Havelock's claim to the championship was dealt with, Messrs. V. McKay and T. P. Lancaster representing the Havelock club.

In the matter of the last game the Executive claimed that the referee made a mistake in not making the teams play the tie off, and Havelock was given the option of playing off at home, paying all expenses, or at Toronto on Saturday, each team to pay their own expenses and take chances on receipts.

The Havelock team decided to play the game here, so the grand battle will begin to-morrow at 2.30 p.m.

Six workmen were killed in a cave in at Winston-Salem, N.C.

INTERMEDIATE FOR BELLEVILLE

Hockey Club Re-Organized—Will Have Good Team

Belleville, Nov. 18.—On Tuesday evening a meeting was held, at Hotel Quinte, of those interested in hockey. The meeting was well attended and the prospects are that we will have here, during the coming season, a good intermediate team. Already some good players have been secured. The officers elected were as follows—

Hon. President—H. Corby.
Hon. Vice-President—Sir Mackenzie Bowell.
President—E. Gus Porter, M.P.
Vice-President—Mayor Marsh.
1st Vice-Pres.—J. V. Jenkins.
2nd Vice-Pres.—B. H. Matcham.

SPORTING TALK

Belleville will have an intermediate hockey team this winter and will likely be grouped with Peterborough. This is good news to the Peterborough teams and fans. That was a pleasant jaunt to the Quinte City last winter.

A special train carrying the Ottawa rugby team and about two hundred supporters will leave Ottawa to-night at ten o'clock and will pass through Peterborough early to-morrow morning. The team from the Capital, while hopeful of victory, are demanding odds in the betting.

Christy Mathewson, of the New York Giants, and Rube Waddell, of the St. Louis team, are picking much easy money in Texas by pitching against each other on independent teams. The other day Mathewson, twirling for El Paso, defeated Socorro, with Waddell in the box, by a score of 2 to 1.

The Winnipeg promoters are willing to pay $1,000 in advance to Longboat in order to induce him to race Shrubb Saturday night, but the Indian will have to go the fifteen miles in 1.26. That is a stiff proposition when it is considered that Tommy hasn't had a race for months.

Simpson ought to win the 12-mile race at Toronto to-night, but that doesn't mean that he will.

The bowling contest at the Y. M. C. A. is proving to be very interesting and a good showing is being made by the different teams.

The rooters of the Hamilton and Ottawa teams have composed a number number of paradoies and it is noticeable that both have neglected to prepare anything in the way of a funeral march.

Wigle and Smith will not play with Hamilton Tigers on Saturday in the game against Ottawa.

Fully 1500 fans will accompany the Tigers to Toronto.

The rooters club from Ottawa will have a band with them.

Bruce Stuart has finally signed with the Ottawa seven.

The Brussels football team passed through on the C.P.R. last night en route for Havelock, where the Ontario intermediate championship will be decided.

The eyes of the football world will to-morrow be turned to Toronto, where Ottawa and Hamilton will meet at the Rosedale grounds to settle the championship of the Interprovincial Rugby Union. On the showing made by the teams during the season the Tigers are called to carry home the laurels and are favorites in the betting. Ottawa can be depended upon, however, to put up a hard fight, and may surprise the knowing ones by downing the jungle kings. And what a lamentation there would be at Hamilton if such a thing should happen. The mountainside would be washed with the tears of the sorrowing ones. That Ottawa hardly expects to win is evidenced by the fact that they ared emanding odds in the betting. It is pretty nearly safe to wager that the Tigers' majority of points will be under ten.

When the Rough Riders and Tigers line up at Toronto to-morrow, Ben Simpson will be the cynosure of all eyes. The former Peterborough man is the most outstanding figure in the Canadian Rugby world.

Dr. A. W. MacPherson will represent the Peterborough Hockey Club at the annual meeting of the Ontario Hockey Association in Toronto tomorrow night.

Fritz Mohl, when he wrestled here last winter, claimed to be a German. he wrestled in Belleville, Trenton or some place in that vicinity as Carl Eckleberg, the Swede. He is now going to appear in New York as Fritz Mohl the Swede. The genial Buffalonian is capable of playing more parts than a character man in a repertoire show.

BASEBALL

Chicago, Nov. 18.—Desiring to improve the game of baseball, President Murphy, of the Chicago National League Club, yesterday invited correspondence with enthusiasts who see some phase in the sport that can undergo betterment.

According to President Murphy, there may be a number of departments wherein improvements can be accomplished, and he is eager to give the folks not officially identified with rule making opportunities to remodel regulations that now may appear outgrown.

"That is the reason I am going to advocate a school in correspondence for the uplift of baseball," said Mr. Murphy. "There are scores of angles that might stand overhauling; I am heartily in favor of a longer season for the National League owners. Instead of assembling at New York next month for a three days' meeting why not extend the session giving six or seven days to the consideration of all these appeals from the enthusiasts? Requests containing real merit will be taken to the league meeting. Now, its up to the people to send on their correspondence."

A SUCCESSFUL BIRTHDAY SOCIAL

Given at Residence of Mrs. B. Shortly Yesterday Afternoon.

The birthday social, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the George street Methodist church, held yesterday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. B. J. Shortly, was a most successful function in every respect. Eight ladies of the society, whose birthdays are in the month of October, November and December, were responsible for the social, arranged the programme in connection with it and provided refreshments, which were served in Mrs. Shortly's bright and cheery dining-room. Over one hundred ladies attended the social.

Miss Grace Gumpricht and Miss Winnie Dobbin gave the instrumental numbers and Miss Edna Pringle, Mrs. D. Bruce Hughes, and Miss Carrie Reeser gave vocal solos.

A substantial sum was realized for the funds of the society.

Uxbridge Man Was Taken Into Custody on Charge of Poisoning His Wife.

Uxbridge, Nov. 19.—Detective Greer of the Provincial Police arrived here this morning and arrested Archie McLaughlin, who is suspected of poisoning his wife. McLaughlin's house was burned at midnight, Oct. 29, and his wife and two little boys perished from what was supposed to be suffocation. The public were not satisfied and an inquest was opened and the stomach of Mrs. McLaughlin sent to Toronto for analysis. This resulted in discoveries which caused the Attorney-General's Department to order McLaughlin's arrest. McLaughlin was hurriedly arraigned before W. Hamilton, J. P., and then sent to Whitby jail.

Distinction of Mark Waugh Who Has Left Norwood for China—Has Made Money

Norwood, Nov. 19.—Mark Waugh, Norwood's silver haired celestial, popularly known as "Charlie" last week disposed of his laundry business here to Mark Hain, of Toronto, and left by the afternoon express on Sunday for China, where he expects to spend his declining years with his family in ease and luxury, having by his frugal habits, acquired what the Chinaman considers a competence sufficient to enable him to do so. His successor, Mr. Hain, is a much younger man, but has been in Canada long enough to copy many of the Canadian styles and customs. His predecessor, Mark Waugh, had lived in many American and Canadian cities and was probably the oldest Chinaman in Canada. He came to Norwood about five years ago.

With their full complement of twenty-four deer a party of twelve hunters, several of whom were Peterborough men, arrived home from Green Island last night. Green Island is situated in Lake Memesagamasing, about forty mile seast of Powassan, and the deer were as numerous as the letters in the name of the lake. The party consisted of Rev. W. G. Henderson and Messrs. Robt. Neill, J. D. Collins and F. Brownscombe, of Peterborough; Rev. A. M. Irwin, of Newcastle; Rev. S. J. Shorey, of Cobourg; Messrs. E. Gregory, of Lindsay; James N. Shannon, of Toronto; W. Beeman, of Newcastle, and E. McCallum, of Cobourg. The above, with the cook and guide, made a party of twelve, and permitted twenty-four deer being taken.

LINDSAY FIRM TO PURCHASE POULTRY IN THIS DISTRICT

The Review was informed to-day that turkeys are not very plentiful in the country around Peterborough and that prices will be high again this fall. It is learned that Dundas and Flavelle, of Lindsay, are making arrangements to buy turkeys and other fowl in this district and will soon have their buyers at work. This firm bought poultry extensively around Peterborough last fall.

Club—Licenses

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Kindly answer the following: A bets B that if local option carries in Peterborough there is nothing in the Act to stop the Peterborough Club having a license.

INQUIRER.

Peterborough, Nov. 19, 1909.

Answer.—The Department of the Provincial Secretary at Toronto has ruled that under local option the license commissioners of any municipality shall continue to hold jurisdiction and exercise discretion as before. The Act of which "Inquirer speaks does not especially mention "club licenses." The Peterborough License Commissioners, it is authoritatively understood, have stated, however, that they will not make of any club a technical or other exception, and as a consequence the Peterborough Club will not have its license renewed in the event of local option. It is quite manifest that such an inequality before the law, as "Inquirer" suggests, could not long exist, if ever contemplated. Since, therefore, the spirit of the Act is as A has betted and the letter of it is as B has betted, our decision would be that the bet is "off." Local option, as we understand it, forbids the sale of liquor by "retail," but not by "wholesale," hence it does not interfere with home-consumption, which is left to individual discretion. It is considered, we understand, that the Act is really intended to "abolish the bar" and everything of a bar character. This would prevent the continuance of a club bar, but would not prevent the keeping of liquor by members for private use in their lockers.—Ed.

INDUCTED AS RECTOR AT LAKEFIELD

Rev. F. J. Sawers M. A. Formally Placed in Charge—Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, Rural Dean, Officiated

Special to the Review.

Lakefield, Nov. 18.—St. John's church was crowded to the doors last evening on the occasion of the induction of the Rev. Frederick John Sawers, M. A., to the rectory of the parish. Rev. Dr. Langfeldt, M.A., Rural Dean of Peterborough and Northumberland, was commissioned by His Lordship the Bishop of Toronto to induct the new rector. Rev. Canon Davidson, M.A., Rev H. R. Trumpour, M.A., B.D., of Peterborough; Rev. C. R. Spencer, M. A., of Young's Point, were also present and took part in the ceremony and service. The Lakefield Grove School, of which Rev. A. W. MacKenzie is headmaster, turned out in full force and occupied the front pews.

After the singing of the first hymn Rev Dr. Langfeldt stepped to the chancel steps, announcing the object of the service. The rector-elect then read the declaration of assent to the articles and Liturgy of the Church of England in this province. Rev. H. R. Trumpour then read the mandate from the Lord Bishop authorizing Dr Langfeldt to instal the new rector into the rights, privileges and appurtenances of the parish.

The keys to the church was presented to the new rector, also a prayer book and the Bible in the accustomed form, and Rev. Mr. Sawers was declared the legally appointed rector of St. John's.

The form of Evening Service was proceeded with, with special Psalms, lessons and prayers. Rev. Canon Davidson was the special preacher, and delivered a most practical and helpful sermon from II. Corinthians, IV., 5: "For we preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord, and ourselves your servants for Jesus sake."

The service being ended, the congregation gave a reception to Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Sawers in the school house at which a large number were present. Mr. Hilliard acted as chairman. Speeches were made by Revs. Dr. Langfeldt, A. W. MacKenzie, C. R. Spencer and H. R. Trumpour, all being expressive of good wishes for the new rector and his wife, and testifying to the great esteem in which Mr. Sawers is held. A large number of Peterborough friends attended the induction, among them Mrs. Sawers, the mother of the rector.

THEATRICAL

"The Wolf"

The largest house of the season saw the best offering of the year at the Grand when the Shubert production of "The Wolf" with a cast of superior ability held the rapt attention of the audience in Eugene Walters' melodramatic masterpiece of French Canadian life and environment, "The Wolf." The play as is attested by its magnificent success since its first presentation is one of the greatest gifts to the American stage in years, from the pen of an American author. Intensely dramatic and with a story of gripping power it takes hold of an audience and sways it with its emotions to the concluding line.

"The Wolf" was here last season, and the story of the play has been given wide publicity in magazines and the daily press, so it is not necessary to outline its strong and original plot. The Shuberts, as is the case in all their productions, have given the piece the proper setting and atmosphere and the scenery in the first and last acts might well have been photographic reproductions of lower Canadian woodland scenes subtly and naturally retouched by a master painter. The interior of McTavish's cabin in the second act was a well conceived, thoroughly accurate picture.

The presenting company was one of unusual ability. Carl Anthony as Jules Beaubien, gave a drawing of the part realistic and life-like enough to please any "habitant" connoisseur and was a striking figure in the play. As William McDonald, the "wolf," William Norton acted with an almost uncanny realism and it is difficult to conceive of more finished and convincing portrayal of the unscrupulous, unchivalrous, yet withal determined and courageous engineer. Marion Johnson Pollock as Hilda, Joseph Greene as Andrew McTavish, Jos. Chaillie as Batiste, Jack Devereaux as Geo. Huntley, played their parts in a manner that won them the enthusiastic approbation of the audience which manifested its high appreciation of the play by insistent and well deserved curtain calls.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING IS THE BEST

In an address upon "Effective Advertising," delivered before the Pennsylvania Retail Hardware Association, in convention in Philadelphia, the other day, R. B. Baldwin, of Fitchburg, Mass., after classifying his publicity scheme under four different heads, newspaper, window, circular, and special sales, said, in part;

"Advertise in the newspapers first, last and all the time. This is the most effective of advertising you retail men can adopt. The most effective method of newspaper advertising is the concentration of the 'ad.' upon some one article to be sold next day. The local newspapers, extending their influence throughout the entire intelligent community, should be used extensively."

PROF. HERING GETS MESSAGE CONFIRMING DISMISSAL OF MRS. AUGUSTUA E. STETSON

Last night Prof. Herman A. Hering, C. G. B., who lectured at the Conservatory Hall, received a telegram confirming the report that Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson had been dismissed from the First Church of Christ Scientist. Mrs. Stetson was formerly first reader at New York and second in importance in the cult to Mrs. Mary Eddy. Her name has been stricken from the rolls of the church and she has been formally excommunicated.

The evidence in support of the charges against Mrs. Stetson consisted of the affidavits of 27 persons, five letters written by Mrs. Stetson to her students, and a composite letter written by some of her students and approved by her.

The evidence in defence of the complaint consisted of one affidavit, two letters, and Mrs. Stetson's personal testimony and statements.

A MODERN DRY GOODS HOUSE

Knickerbocker Company Will Be Open to Public To-Morrow Morning.

Owing to the increasingly large number of customers, Zacks Bros., who have hitherto been in business privately have found it necessary to open an extensive place of business in the city. They have secured the premises at 420 George street, formerly occupied by Westcott, the shoe merchant, and commencing to-morrow (Saturday) morning will open business there as the Knickerbocker Co., with a complete and up-to-date line of dry goods, ladies' and gentlemen's clothing and house furnishings. All the stock will be new and of the highest quality embracing the best offerings of the domestic and foreign wholesale houses. Special attention is called to an extra fine line of imported goods in ladies' coats and furs.

The Zacks Bros. have had a wide experience and are well and very favorably known in the city. They should be favored with a large share of the public patronage.

WEDDING BELLS

HALIBURTON--McNEELY

On Monday afternoon, at the home of the bride's parents, 470 Woodville avenue, Miss Lillian, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. McNeely, was married to Mr. Charles Haliburton, a popular C.P.R brakeman of West Toronto.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. J. H. Brown, of Annette Baptist Church, under an arch of foliage and pink roses. The wedding march was played by Miss Edith Loundes, as the bride entered the room, assisted by her father. She was attired in a beautiful gown of cream liberty satin trimmed with real lace and also carried a shower bouquet of cream roses and lillies of the valley.

The bridesmaids were Miss Ruby McNeely, sister of the bride, and Miss E. Riley. Miss McNeely wore a very pretty gown of pink silk chiffon voile and carried a shower bouquet of pink roses. Little Audrey Foster made a charming little flower girl. The groom was assisted by Mr. J. Walker and Mr. F. McConkey.

After the ceremony a sumptuous wedding repast was served to about fifty guests.

The bride's travelling dress was of grey ladies' cloth with hat to match. On their return from their honeymoon trip Mr. and Mrs. Haliburton will reside at 103 Fairview avenue, ward seven.—Toronto Star.

McCREA—BELL

The Toronto News says:—A marriage was celebrated at West Presbyterian church yesterday afternoon between Miss Margaret Bell and Mr. T. Arthur McCrea, son of Mr. and Mrs. John McCrea, of Omemee. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Turnbull, and Mr. McNally played the wedding music. The church was lavishly decorated, tall standards tied with white chrysanthemums at the top lining the aisle and leading up to white gates at the end. Mr. Joseph Bell gave his sister away. She looked very pretty in her wedding gown of white satin charmeuse with Brussels lace, and tulle veil arranged with a Juliet cap of pearls, orange blossoms and white heather, her bouquet being an Empire shower of lily-of-the-valley. The bridegroom's gift to her, a ring of emeralds and diamonds was also worn. The maid of honor, Miss Jessie Johnston, wore a frock of yellow ninon de soie, with bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums, and the bridegroom's present, a necklace of amethysts and pearls. Mr. John Lindsay, the best man, received a diamond stick pin, and silver card cases were presented by the bridegroom to the ushers—Mr. J. J. Norris, Dr. W. E. Lundy, Dr. G. W. Ross and Dr. E. Hodgson. Mrs. John C. Eaton, sister of the bridegroom, held a reception afterwards in honor of the event at her residence, 121 Walmer road. The rooms were beautifully decorated with Killarney roses, palms and ferns, the bride's table being done with lily-of-the-valley and mauve orchids. An orchestra was in attendance. Miss Bell was wearing a black silk gown with lace trimming and jet ornaments, and received with Mr. and Mrs. Eaton, the latter looking very handsome in silver grey moire, and hat of silver tissue with ostrich plumes to match. Mr. and Mrs. McCrea left by the 5.20 train for Atlantic City, and on their return will reside at 24 Nanton avenue. The bride's travelling gown was of violet broadcloth with coat and hat and feathers to match, with which she wore an ermine stole and muff, one of her wedding presents.

WEDDED AND AWAY

Unusual Ending of a County Police Court Case This Afternoon.

Alfred Simpson, who was brought to this city yesterday by High County Constable Cochrane, to stand his trial for an offence committed last March, was given an opportunity to make amends to the complainant, who is a young Indian girl residing in Hiawatha, when the case was called at the County Police Court this afternoon.

On both parties consenting to a wedding, the charge was dropped, and the young man and his bride-to-be left the court, and accompanied by Mr. Cochrane, went to a clergyman's residence in Ashburnham and there the marriage took place.

MURDER OF WIFE IS THE CHARGE AGAINST McLAUGHLIN

Man Whose House Was Burned Down and Wife and Two Boys Killed, is Charged With Having Murdered Them and Saved Favorite Daughter.

Whitby, Nov. 20.—Another chapter was added to the McLaughlin case at Uxbridge yesterday morning, when Archie McLaughlin was arrested by Provincial Detective Greer of Toronto, under instruction from the Attorney-General's Department. The prisoner took matters quite coolly, and after appearing before Magistrate Hamilton, was driven to Whitby and placed behind the bars.

His arrest was the result of Prof. Ellis' examination of Mrs. McLaughlin's stomach, in which was found a large quantity of strychnine.

The final session of the inquest will be held Monday night at Uxbridge behind closed doors, when the medical evidence will be given. Among the witnesses to be examined are Prof. Ellis, Dr. W. C. Shier, Dr. J. A. McClintock, and Miss Dennis, sister of Mrs. McLaughlin. McLaughlin has engaged T. C. Robinette, K.C., as his counsel, and Mr. Phelan, of that firm arrived here to-day. It is understood that, after the inquest, the defence will consent to prisoner appearing before a magistrate at once, for committal for trial, which may not take place until the spring Assizes.

An information had been sworn out by the chief of police of Whitby, and a warrant issued by Crown Attorney Farewell, but before notice of this procedure reached Uxbridge, McLaughlin had been taken in charge. The news soon spread through the town, and considerable excitement marked the arrest. Mr. Cook, McLaughlan's lawyer, rushed into the hotel when the handcuffs were being adjusted and excitedly warned McLaughlin not to talk to the police. "I'm not telling them anything," the prisoner assured him.

It is understood that McLaughlin has been under surveillance since the last sitting of the coroner's jury on the 4th inst. For several days he has been particularly morose, and has spent most of his time with his six-year-old daughter Monta, whom he carried out of the burning house on the night of the tragedy.

In all probability the bodies of the little boys will be exhumed and examined for traces of poison.

Monta, the little girl with whom he spent most of his time, has always been his favorite child. She was put in the stand at the last hearing of the inquest, but became frightened, and started to cry, and it was not thought wise to continue the examination. In a statement made to Crown Attorney Farewell, she told in a very clear manner a story that they failed to shake even by cross-examination of a severe nature. In the regular session of the inquest, however, she would say nothing. While she was in the witness box, her father, leaned forward in his chair, and a strained expression came over his face, which did not leave it until she had been taken out of the court-room. Since that time she has been constantly with him.

McLaughlan ate a hearty meal at the jail, soon after his arrest. The food was ordered by him from the hotel. He begged to be given an exclusive apartment, and broke down and wept when put in the ward with other prisoners.

Detective Greer will return to Uxbridge to-day to begin investigations His sole duty yesterday was in making sure of getting McLaughlin.

CANADIAN PULPWOOD AND TARIFF

Ottawa, Nov. 20.—The question of the desirability of imposing an export duty upon pulp and pulpwood will be brought before Parliament this session by a resoution given notice of by E. N. Lewis, M.P., of West Huron. Last year he moved for the imposition of an export duty; this year he adds a very important offer to the United States that if it will admit Canadian made paper free of duty, then it shall be exempt from the export tax.

AMBROSE LEPINE HAS PASSED AWAY

Winnipeg, Nov. 20.—There died yesterday at St. Vital, Man., Ambrose Lepine, lieutenant of Lousi Riel in the rebellion of 1869-70, aged 75.

As adjutant-general he presided at the court-martial which condemned Thomas Scott to death. At the request of Mgr. Tache, Lepine consented in 1872 to leave for the United States.

In company with Riel he left by night in a closed carriage, protected by a couple of policemen, and was conducted across the frontier, going to St. Paul, where he stopped for a year. On his return to Manitoba on Sept. 27, 1873, he was arrested on a charge of participating in the murder of Scott.

After a long trial, in which he was defended by Messrs. Dubuc, Girard and Royal, as well as by Sir J. A. Chapleau, he was condemned to death, but recommended to the mercy of the court.

On the request of Mgr. Tache, the sentence was commuted to two years' imprisonment, with perpetual deprivation of his civil rights.

PITIFUL PLIGHT OF A WOMAN

Brantford, Nov. 20.—In the Police Court yesterday, Mrs. Kate McCarthy was fined $50 and costs or 30 days in jail for supplying liquor to an Indian woman. The defendant has several small children and is in precarious health.

The magistrate regretted that he could not fine the husband, as he believed he was to blame. The woman was carried from the court, time being refused for the payment. She was never in court before. The Indian woman was liberated after telling where she secured the liquor. She boarded with the McCarthy's.

A request of McCarthy to be allowed to serve his wife's sentence was refused.

HALF MILLION! TO THE GOOD

Toronto, Nov. 20.—Net earnings to the amount of $550,000 for the fiscal year of ten months ended Oct. 31, is the record of the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway for 1909. Compared with the twelve months of 1908, this amount is about $200,000 in excess of the returns for that year.

For September the gross earnings were $151,777, and the expenditure $90,151, giving a net revenue of $61,626. The total on royalties for the month were about $10,000.

Distributing the September earnings, the freight receipts were $98,000, an excess over the same month last year of $45,000, and the passenger receipt $53,452, or $35,923 over last year.

"Interest and sinking fund charges on the capital expenditure amount to $50,000 per month," said the Provincial Treasurer, yesterday, "and the excess revenue over the amount is devoted to improvement and betterment."

FIRE CHIEF ADVOCATES PURCHASE OF CHEMICAL ENGINE

One Would Have Been Useful at Recent Fire in City Buildings—Firemen Will Celebrate Christmas at Fire Hall—Other Business at Meeting of Fire, Water and Light Committee.

At last night's meeting of the Fire Water and Light Committee, the secretary read a letter from Fire Chief Heward, advocating the purchase of a chemical engine for the city. It was pointed out in the letter that, on the occasion of the fire in the municipal buildings, last Saturday evening, it was impossible to fight the fire with a chemical extinguisher and this necessitated a line of hose being used, with the result that considerable damage by water resulted. This would not not have been the case had there been a chemical engine to make use of. No action was taken by the committee.

An account of $4, for four extra men on the night of the fire at Mason's store was ordered to be paid.

A petition for lights on Lansdowne street was received.

An account of Dr. Greer for professional services to Deputy Chief Grange at the time of Mason's fire and also when he was injured at the fire hall last spring was read. The amount is $11, and on motion of Ald. Hicks the matter was left over for the full committee to deal with.

A light will be placed at the west end of the Smith street bridge and several others on Simcoe street between Reid and Rubidge streets, if there is sufficient money in the appropriation.

About those other lights, put in Ald. Morgan.

Oh, yes. I got mine fixed all right, said the chairman.

The new uniforms for the firemen will be ready next Saturday and now some new caps are wanted. They cost $2.10 each. The chairman will deal with the matter.

The Fire Chief asked the committee when they were going to take the notion and buy some furniture for the use of the firemen. A clock for the dormitory was also badly needed.

The chairman will have a look at the finances of the committee and if they are in good shape, the furniture will be forthcoming.

The firemen, with their wives and children, will celebrate Christmas in the dormitory of the fire hall this year Chief Heward asked on behalf of the men that they be granted the use of the dormitory some time during the Christmas week and the request was granted.

CONSERVATIVE MEMBER DIES SUDDENLY AT THE CAPITAL

Dr. John Barr, Member for Dnfferin, Was Well on Thursday, is Found Dead in Bed Presumably From Heart Disease—Take Body Home.

Ottawa, Nov. 20.—Dr. John Barr of Shelburne, M.P. for Dufferin (Conservative), was found dead in bed at the Cecil Hotel yesterday afternoon.

He was in his usual health Thursday, and attended the sitting of the Commons. In the Parliamentary lobbies he had a chat with Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and all through the day seemed to be in excellent spirits.

He did not come down to breakfast yesterday morning, but his non-appearance occasioned no alarm. However, when he did not appear for dinner, Dr. Roche, M.P. (Marquette); J. E. Armstrong, M.P. (Lambton), and and Mr. Marshall, M.P. (Elgin), went up to his room and found him dead in bed. He had apparently died in the early hours of the morning, supposedly of heart disease. The coroner stated that no inquest would be held.

The late Dr. Barr enjoyed a wide popularity in the House, and yesterday afternoon Sir Wilfrid Laurier paid a tribute to his memory. He said Dr. Barr was very much respected by the members on the Government side of the House, and he desired to convey a sincere expression of condolence to the members of his family.

R. L. Borden described him as conscientious, earnest and indefatigable in the public interest, and was sure that every member would join in an expression of sympathy with the family in their bereavement.

The remains were sent to Shelburne last night in a special car provided by the Government, and escorted by Dr. Sproule, Dr. Chisholm, Dr. Shaffner, T. R. Tabor, J. E. Armstrong and E. N. Lewis.

It is pointed out as a strange coincidence that Dr. Fred Lewis of Orangeville, who, in 1905, succeeded Dr. Barr in the Ontario Legislature, was found dead in his room in the Queen's Hotel, Toronto. That was on May 25, 1907.

Dr. Barr was born in Elizabethtown, Leeds County, in 1843, and educated at London Grammar School and Victoria University. He represented Dufferin in the Ontario Legislature from 1875 to 1879, and also from 1890 to 1894, and from 1898 to 1904, when after the federal gerrymander creating Dufferin as a new constituency, he resigned to accept nomination for the Commons. In religion he was a Methodist.

FREE SPEECH IS WANTED

Labor Leaders Declare It Is the Heritage of Democracy—Resolution is Passed.

Toronto, Nov. 20.—"That the freedom of speech, which we have exercised without judicial restraint based on super-constitutional and self-arrogated authority, has been more in conformity with the fundamental principles of a free and self-governing country than is possible in the United States of America."

This resolution was adopted by the American Federation of Labor yesterday afternoon, along with the whole reports of the resolution committee. It was the final slap of the delegates at the decision of the courts that President Gompers, Vice-President Mitchell and Secretary Morrison must surrender themselves to the authorities of the District of Columbia next week to begin their sentences in jail for contempt of court. Coupled with this parting shot, the federation also expressed thanks for the entertainment and hospitality extended by the press and the people of Toronto during the two weeks of the convention.

At 10 o'clock this morning the officers were elected and by noon the great gathering of the representatives of the toiling masses will be a thing of history.

"Injunction in labor disputes are innovations in our modern jurisprudence," was the first comment of the report, which suggested that the executive committee take the necessary steps to have an appeal against the sentences of Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison carried to the Supreme Court.

"Injunctions are intended to protect property rights only as shown by the fact that the courts invariably insist upon a bond being furnished by the interested parties to indemnify the parties enjoined from any loss that might accrue."

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

William Morgan (colored) who claimed to be 102 years old, died in St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, last night.

Toronto capitalists have bought the site and present building of the Woodward department stores in Vancouver, for $275,000, for a theatre.

A hurricane struck Lisbon yesterday afternoon, causing considerable damage. No casualties are reported, though it is rumored that a fishing vessel was swamped off shore.

Two large piano firms of Montreal—the C. W. Lindsay Co., Lt., and Ormes & Sons—have been consolidated into a million dollar corporation, to be known as Lindsay, Limited. C. W. Lindsay will be president of the company.

The political crisis has drawn out from Mr. Balfour, the leader of the Opposition in the House of Commons, the written admission on the contemplated taxing of raw cotton that "such a tax would violate the fundamental principles of fiscal reform."

WHIRLED IN SHAFTING AND WAS KILLED

Paris, Ont., Nov. 20.—A fatal accident occurred yesterday in Penmans, Limited.

Edward Crump, was assisting in raising some pipes when his clothing became caught in a shafting. He was thrown around several times, and fell fifteen feet. His clothing was completely torn from him, and his head was badly hurt. He died an hour afterwards.

Crump was a middle-aged man and leaves a wife and seven children.

MRS. PANKHURST IS IN TORONTO

Leader of Suffragettes Greeted by Canadian Suffrage Association.

Toronto, Nov. 20.—When the Grand Trunk express from Buffalo drew into the Union Station last night, a winsome, wistful woman quietly stepped from a rear coach, was greeted by the president of the Canadian Suffrage Association and quietly passed out through the bustling crowd. There was no ostentation, no noise of shouting, no waving of the battle-ensign, "Votes for Women," just a dignified movement towards a conveyance.

So Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, leader of the militant suffrage movement in England, and the inspiration of all who are seeking universal suffrage, arrived in Toronto.

Mrs. Pankhurst in appearance is a pleasing contrast to the impression conveyed by the accounts given of her speeches and her published portraits. In physique she is not large, but of medium build. He voice is restrained, penetrating and musical. Approaching her, one looks for an aggressive, virile woman, but meets a quiet lady-like person with an anxious gaze and an appealing expression. Mrs. Pankhurst is a volcano of nervous energy. In manner she is tense, dramatic and fervent; she speaks without artifice; her words are sincere and frank, and she draws her listeners to her by an air of courtesy and grace.

To-night Mrs. Pankhurst will tell Toronto, and so Canada, the truth about the fight in England. "I do not think the suffragettes in America and in Canada know much about what we are doing in England. That is just why I am here," she said. "I do not think they are in a proper position to make up their minds about the movement in England. We are satisfied we are doing the right thing under the circumstances."

"Will you advise the women of Canada and the United States?" she was asked.

"No I have not sufficient knowledge of the conditions on this side of the water to give such advice. The women of Canada and the United States must choose their own methods."

CHINESE ARE IMPROVING NAVY

London, Nov. 20.—The Chinese naval commission headed by Prince Tsaichun, brother of the regent, arrived in England, yesterday, to study the question of naval construction with a view of modernizing the navy of China.

Great importance is attached to the visit and the progressive movement which it foreshadows and full naval and military honors were accorded the commission upon their landing at Dover, where they were met by representatives of the Foreign Office and the Admiralty.

The party will be received by King Edward at Windsor to-day.

Mr. Cochrane at Woodstock.

Woodstock, Ont., Nov. 20.—Hon. Frank E. Cochrane, Minister of Mines, addressed a large audience in the public library building here last night under the auspices of the Canadian Club. He was the guest of Dr. Andrew MacKay, M.P.P., while in the city.

Both Legs Crushed.

Cobalt, Nov. 20.—John Rourke, an employe of the northern customs concentrators, while working under a freight car yesterday afternoon, had both legs badly crushed by the unexpected shunting of an engine on the siding.

MR. FOSTER CRITICIZES ESTIMATE OF EXPENSES

Minister of Finance, However, Excuses Extravagance as an Indication of National Prosperity—Mr. Foster Also Inquires About Defence Intentions.

Ottawa, Nov. 20.—The Commons had a business-like session yesterday and got through a considerable portion of the civil service estimates. The sitting was comparatively quiet, the only feature being a discussion over the appearance of the union label on The Labor Gazette, although this publication is printed at the Government's printing bureau, an open shop.

Hon. Mr. Foster and Mr. Fielding expressed diverse views as to the tremendous growth of the public expenditure.

E. N. Lewis, West Huron, introduced a bill respecting injuries to persons due to motor vehicles, which he said was necessary, as highway assaults by vehicles, not known at the time the criminal code was drawn up, were far too common and required special legislation.

Mr. Sinclair of Guysboro introduced a bill to amend the Canada Shipping Act so that ships purchased abroad and inspected should be liable to inspection again in Canada.

A new bill by Hon. Mr. Fisher seeks to include alfalfa in the Seed Grain Control Act.

Hon. Mr. Graham explained that by the terms of his bill to authorise the Government to lease lines of railway connecting the Government railways, no lease would become operative until ratified by act of Parliament.

Major Sharp's bill to amend the Bank Act provides that all stocks on which no dividends have been claimed for upwards of six years shall be transferred to the Government, as trustees.

Before the orders of the day were called Hon. George E. Foster asked some questions regarding the Imperial Defence Conference report. He desired to know the attitude of New Zealand and Australia. The other day the Prime Minister had spoken of what these countries were going to do, and Mr. Foster supposed that their proposals would appear in the report. Another point was that there was an allusion in that report to an effort by the Admiralty to meet the wishes of Canada, but he could not find out what the wishes of Canada were.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier replied that the printed report contained all the papers with the exception of the oral deliberations of the conference. He had no objection to giving the information desired if the Imperial authorities gave permission. Mr. Brodeur pointed out that they had not received permission to bring down the papers relative to Australia and New Zealand. No memoranda had been prepared by the Canadian representatives.

At four o'clock, Hon. W. S. Fielding, for the first time this session moved the House into supply, but Mr. Foster said he had a few remarks to make about the expenditure on civil Government before the motion passed.

Whereas the expenditure on the civil Government list in 1888 was $1,048,417. It had in 1896, when the Conservatives went out of power, increased to only $1,396,628. On the other hand, there was, between 1896 and 1908, a jump up to $2,088,416, or over 60 per cent., and for the fiscal year closing on March 31, 1911, the House will be asked to provide $4,703,407. These figures were absolutely startling.

Referring to the increase in the general estimates from forty-one million dollars in 1896 to $127,000,000 for the coming years, the figures were enough to set the people thinking.

Hon. W. S. Fielding said that the expenditure of the country should be measured by the growth of its business and revenue. When Mr. Foster was giving his figures, he should not have omitted to say that during the 1888-1895 period stagnation prevailed. The revenue of the country in 1889 was over thirty-five millions, while in 1895 it was less than thirty-four millions. The record revenue during that time was some thirty-eight millions. Mr. Foster should also have informed the House that in 1906 the revenue had grown to be over ninety-six millions. It had fallen away a bit since, but was rapidly coming back to the 1907 level. There had been an increase in the expenditure, but the Conservatives had increased it by over thirty per cent, when no headway had been made by the country.

FIREMEN STRUCK AT CHERRY MINES

Remains Brought to Surface in Terrible State of Decomposition—Oxygen Required to Continue the Work Many Bodics Recovered.

Special to the Review.

Cherry, Ills., Nov. 20.—The firemen and miners employed in the work of bringing bodies from the mine struck at dawn to-day, after announcing it was impossible to continue work now without oxygen. The bodies now being brought to the surface are in a terrible state of decomposition, and the odors in the mine passage are almost beyond human endurance. Volunteers were immediately called and a score of male relatives of miners entombed in the mine rallied to the support of the Chicago fire company, under Capt. Kenny, of Engine Company No. 40, who stuck to it with his men.

The charred and blackened body of thirty men were recovered by rescue parties at an early hour to-day. Thirty six bodies were found by the fire fighters, piled high at the end of a blind gallery of the western gallery in the second vein.

THEY MARRY TO HIDE DISGRACE

Windsor, Nov. 20.—Detroit papers are stirring up an agitation to have the marriages of Michigan couples in Windsor recorded in Detroit, to stop the increasing number of weddings here.

Only recently a Detroit girl, said to be only fourteen years of age, obtained a license and was married by an Anglican clergyman here. Steps were taken to have the marriage annulled across the river.

In defence of his marrying record, Rev. D. H. Hind of Sandwich states that ninety per cent. of the women who come to him to be married do so to hide disgrace, and want their certificates dated back. He and other ministers, as well as the license issuers, resent the imputations of the alien press.

CHILD TIED TO DOOR BURNS

Indian Harbor, Ind., Nov. 20.—Neighbors who broke into a burning house yesterday found a baby girl in her crib, dead of suffocation by smoke, and her three years old brother unconscious, tied to a doorknob with a rope.

The children's mother, Mrs. John Koran, had gone shopping. To prevent the boy playing with matches she tied him to the door. Fire broke out from a stove.

A Suffragette Burlesque.

London, Nov. 20.—The Evening News says it learns from a reliable source that the suffragettes who were sent to jail in Bristol for breaches of the peace during the recent visit of Winston Churchill have refused to don prison clothes and insist in remaining in puris naturalibus.

Not In It.

New York, Nov. 20.—President Clarence Mackay of the Mackay Co., in an official statement, denies any connection whatever with the American T. & T. Co.

PROBABILITIES.

Fair and mild, light showers, chiefly during the night or on Sunday.

FISHERIES PROTECTION IS SETTLED

New York, Nov. 20.—According to announcement made in New York, last night, the agreement between Canada and the United States for the protection of the waters lying between the two countries from conditions endangering the fisheries has been signed and probably will become operative within a fortnight.

The announcement was made by Dr. David Starr Jordan, the American member of the International fisheries commission, which has been engaged for more than a year in drawing up the statutes.

WIDOW PRESENT AT THE HANGING

Perry, Okla, Nov. 20.—"Now I can return home satisfied, since the murderer of my husband is hanged."

Thus spoke Mrs. Isaac Fell of Caldwell, Kas., yesterday after witnessing the execution of Henry Armstrong, who killed Fell in Perry several months ago.

Mrs. Fell would not leave even after the drop had been sprung, but insisted on waiting till the physician in attendance had pronounced the murderer dead.

Senators Should Work Fridays.

Ottawa, Nov. 20.—The Senate yesterday adjourned until Tuesday, when the insurance bill will come up for a second reading.

Senator Lougheed objected to the business being postponed to suit the Senators who wanted to go to Montreal, and thought more work should be done on Friday.

Two Bad Fires.

Cornwall, Nov. 20.—Eugene Joubert's store at Williamstown was totally destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon, along with contents.

Wm. Tait's flour and feed store at Monkland Station was burned Thursday night. Loss about $4,500, with $1,500 insurance.

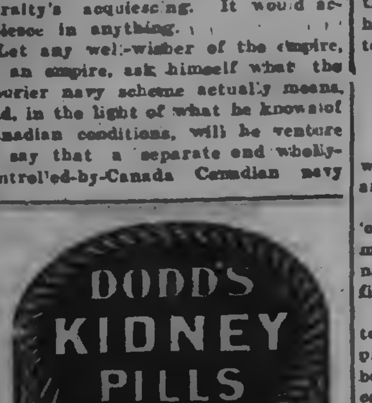
DRIFTING AWAY

There can be no question that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is outwitting English-speaking Liberals in proposing to build a Canadian navy, and to keep it wholly under Canadian control. The Toronto Star skilfully insinuates that to tax Canada for her share of an imperial navy without giving her a voice, would be intolerable. Well! Was any proposition made at the secret Naval Conference in London last summer for a fleet of empire and a council of empire, with Canada having a voice in it, such as the Star refers to? We will venture to assert that no such proposition was considered by our Canadian representatives for a moment, for the simple reason that French Canada is bitterly opposed to the very idea of a united empire and what French Canada says goes with Sir Wilfrid. But we all know, whether some of us will acknowledge it or not, that Great Britain would have welcomed a Dreadnought or two or a cruiser, for that matter. NOT THAT SHE NEEDS IT, but as a guarantee of good faith—of our good faith in a united empire. This plan would have satisfied the Imperialists all over the empire, and would have been within our own means, and it would have been a policy that led somewhere. It would have led to a united empire. But, no. The scheme of a separate Canadian navy wholly controlled by Canada was evolved as a substitute. It will not altogether please French Canada, because of the waste involved, but it will satisfy French Canada. It will prevent a slump, and in comparison with the hated imperial policy, will be adopted without delay. SO MUCH FOR THE JUGGLING that has brought Canada to that point where, instead of verging towards the solidarity of empire we are on the very threshold of virtual and actual independence. It is nonsense to talk of the British Admiralty's acquiescing. It would acquiesce in anything.

Let any well-wisher of the empire, as an empire, ask himself what the Laurier navy scheme actually means, and, in the light of what he knows of Canadian conditions, will he venture to say that a separate and wholly-controlled-by-Canada Canadian navy does not pave the way, inevitably, for independence, and the subsequent dominance in Canada of those very people who are seeking to bring it about, both French and English.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's political life hangs by this thread, and he knows it. With that show of sincerity adopted by the skilful and, perhaps, honest lawyer, when he states his case in court, Sir Wilfrid has woven a garment of subtleties that protects, even if it does not wholly conceal and deceive.

Canadians were "fooled' by him before. It is hardly likely that it will occur again. The enormous waste involved in his policy is a matter of alarm to so many of the true interests of this tax-burdened country that that policy can scarcely "pull through." The whole scheme is sinister, extravagant and absurd. When Hon. G. P. Graham, in addressing the Insurance Society at the Windsor Hotel, Montreal, said that we could get along in Canada without a governor, and were capable of managing our own affairs, he spoke as the true spirit of this new policy. La Patrie reported his remarks with undisguised delight. And when these "independence" men have succeeded in producing such a Canada, what will they have? We wish them joy of it. It is not necessary to slang us as jingoes or what not. We stand for a "united empire," a name that Sir Wilfrid Laurier dare not even pronounce, lest he lose the support that has made him what he is.



WHY LAURIER "BACKED UP".

THE DANGER

"It is fully realized that in the hour of danger the ties of kinship and affection which bind the self-governing Dominions to the Empire will prompt them to rally with enthusiasm to its aid. There seems, however, some reason to fear that an idea prevails that this help may be organized at leisure after hostilities have broken out."—General Nicholson, chief of general staff to the Imperial Defence Conference.

THE REMEDY

"The result is a plan for so organizing the forces of the Crown wherever they are that, while preserving the complete automony of each Dominion, should the Dominions desire to assist in the defence of the Empire in a real emergency, their forces could be rapidly combined into one homogeneous Imperial Army."—Premier Asquith on the result of the conference. —The Toronto Star.

Who will deny that it was the word "empire" that queered the whole statement of the imperial plan in Sir Wilfrid Laurier's eyes? Where has he ever spoken a word for a British Empire? The half-formed, undeveloped, irresponsible condition of weakness which goes under the name of "British Connection" suits him and those who send him to Ottawa, but a plan for the solidarity of the "EMPIRE" is at once declined even if that declining should draw the amazed attention of the whole world. It is the great sacrifice and he has made it. Henceforward he will be regarded not only as the god of the Gaul but the necessary buffer between Canada and the union of the British empire. He has played his part and played it only too well.

LAURIER'S POLICY

(The Kingston Standard.)

"Three cheers for the flag" — but we will have control of our navy and don't you forget it.

"The land of the free and the home of the brave"—but don't make any mistake about it, we will send our navy only when and where we see fit.

"It is a proud thing for any man to realize that he is a son of the Empire"—but that navy of ours will be under our own control and Britain can lump it or leave it just as she chooses.

"We have the rights and the glorious privileges of British subjects" —but we will go to no war unless Parliament so declares it.

"The British flag is our talisman" —but if the Britishers think we're going to use our navy for them they have another thing coming to them.

"To-day every Canadian is proud to be a British citizen and proud to accept the responsibilities entailed"—but so far as Canada is concerned we won't accept those responsibilities.

"Under British freedom the daughter States should so develop their resources that at the hour of her need they would be at the full zenith of their energies and powers"—but at the hour of need we won't use those powers unless we want to, and we probably won't want to.

"God Save the King"—but Heaven help the Empire.—Kingston Standard.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Toronto Star is rather weak in its discussion of great Canadian questions. It is evidently afraid of "risking its reputation."

Hon. G. P. Graham is reported in the Montreal Star as having said that Canada ought to have her own navy, &c., as the time will come before long when BRITAIN WILL NO LONGER CONSIDER IT NECESSARY TO SEND A REPRESENTATIVE TO CANADA!

It is very strange that the Montreal Herald (Liberal) "misrepresented" Hon. G. P. Graham in the same way as the Ottawa Citizen, the Montreal Gazette, La Patrie (Liberal), &c. Who made the mistake? We fancy the Hon. George must have, for the moment fancied he was in a flotilla and spoke in unison with his leader's "independence" policy.

The establishment of a Canadian navy is worse than an absurdity. It means that we must go on building, repairing and maintaining an alleged navy, that to be effective must be increased to the extent of wasting our resources and in inviting conflict.

The Insurance Institute denies that Hon. G. P. Graham spoke contemptuously of our connection with Great Britain.

La Patrie (Liberal) will now have to back up its editorial jubilation on the same or "quit."

The Laurier Government is about due to take a rest.

La Patrie notes with continued apparent approval that Mr. Brodeur and Sir Frederick Borden declined to go the length of the suggestions made by the British Government in naval affairs.

The Laurier Government navy "programme" is a conspiracy against the solidarity of the British Empire. A Canadian navy would be an intolerable burden to the taxpayer in time of peace and utterly useless in time of war.

It is a modest beginning, but no doubt it will satisfy those who demand an "autonomous" naval programme for Canada. That the little navy would be of much practical use to the Empire in a war with a first class naval power is very doubtful, even if the imperial admiralty were able to count upon its aid in a sudden emergency. —Hamilton Herald.

The "Admiralty Memorandum," drawn up by the Right Honorable R. K. McKenna, M.P., the First Lord of the Admiralty, was one of the most important papers brought before the conference.

"If the problem of Imperial naval defence," it says, "were considered merely as a problem of naval strategy it would be found that the greatest output of strength for a given expenditure is obtained by the maintenance of a single navy with the concomitant unity of training and unity of command. In furtherance, then, of the simple strategical ideal the maximum of power would be gained if all parts of the Empire contributed, according to their needs and resources, to the maintenance of the British navy."

"The naval documents just submitted to Parliament throw new light upon the question of Imperial defence. In the first place they make clear the position of the Imperial Government and of the experts on that subject, for they reveal what the Admiralty suggested. "If the problem of Imperial naval defence were considered as a problem of naval strategy it would be found that the greatest output of strength for a given expenditure is obtained by the maintenance of a single navy with the concomitant unit of training and of command. "The maximum of power would be gained if all parts of the Empire contributed, according to their needs and resources, to the maintenance of the British navy.' In these words the Admiralty hints at united action and a single navy for Imperial purposes." —The Mail and Empire.

SOAP

How Common Soaps Ruin Clothes

Ordinary yellow soaps eat the texture of dainty lingerie and household linen. You must rub harder to get out the dirt—and that, too, wears out the clothes. So even if these poor soaps cost less, they would be more expensive to use.

Taylor's Borax Soap is made of cocoanut oil and borax, but the price is the same as for soap made of cheap, harmful materials. One cake goes as far as any two ordinary soaps.

TUB TALK

To wash fine lace curtains, first brush out as much dust as possible with a soft whisk broom. Then baste each curtain carefully upon an old piece of muslin a little larger in size than the curtains, tacking each scallop firmly in place. Make a strong suds with Taylor's Borax Soap and warm water, and let the curtain soak in this for about half an hour. Then squeeze gently with the hand until clean; (do not rub) rinse, starch and spread perfectly straight on the floor or other smooth surface, fastening the muslin down firmly with small brads. When perfectly dry carefully remove the basting threads and the curtains will appear like new.

THE LOCAL OPTION MOVEMENT IN THE CITY

The Matter Appearing In This Department Is Furnished by the Peterboroug Temperance and Moral Reform League Which Has Arranged for its Publication.

CAN LOCAL OPTION BE ENFORCED IN PETERBORO'?

Every now and then we hear people who admit that local option is a success in the country districts, express doubt as to whether or not it can be successfully enforced in a city the size of Peterborough. The fact that over 40,000,000 people in America live in local option districts, including the residents of over 50 cities in the United States, each larger than Peterborough, is the best answer to this question. So successful has been the enforcement of prohibition in large cities in the United States, that now the city of Chicago, with its 7,136 saloons, is planning to grapple with the question. The daily press of Chicago have shown remarkable fairness and liberality toward the developments in temperance and prohibition reform in that city, and are giving space almost without limit to the discussion of this question.

The Chicago Inter-Ocean has prepared a summary of the effects of prohibition in other districts, and has this to say about it:

How Prohibition Would Benefit Industrial Labor and Merchants

Prohibition, while not, of course, completely abolishing the liquor traffic in Chicago, would undoubtedly save to the people from fifty to seventy-five per cent. of the city's present liquor bill.

The seven thousand saloons of Chicago must take in an average of $10,000 each per year to pay expenses and even moderate profit. Including the large sale of bottled liquors and mail and express shipments from outside, the liquor bill of the city must total not less than $80,000,000 per year. By closing the saloons the people will be saved from forty to fifty million dollars for legitimate purposes. Not less than one hundred thousand families will be materially benefitted. This forty million dollars once spent for drink would probably find channels for distribution in some such ways as the following:

For better and more comfortable clothing, boots and shoes, hats and caps, $5,000,000.

For food and grocery necessities, of which so many thousands are now deprived through the drink slavery of the heads of families, not less than $5,000,000.

For better home and furnishings, not less than $10,000,000.

For increased deposits in savings banks, education, amusements, and miscellaneous, $30,000,000.

This increased demand for legitimate merchandise, homes and recreation, would prove a tremendous boom to local retail and wholesale trade.

THE BEST YET

Norwood Register

At the regular meeting of the Quarterly Board of the Methodist church, Norwood, on Nov. 2nd, 1908, the following resolution was passed unanimously:—

"This Quarterly Board desire to express their satisfaction at the improved condition of things in general since the advent of Local Option.

"This town, under the license system, had been paying a heavy toll in human life both from among its minors and its men. Not only has no life been sacrificed through drink since Local Option, but habitual drunkards have become sober citizens; and previous heavy drinkers take home to their families in necessities and comforts the worth of that which once went over the bar.

"Notwithstanding some known infractions of the law, NOT A SINGLE COMPLAINT HAS BEEN HEARD FROM OUR BUSINESS MEN concerning the effects of Local Option, but, on the contrary, many of them spontaneously express their great pleasure and satisfaction at the improvement in their business during the past six months.

"Our Agricultural Fair, which, it was prophesied, would be ruined by Local Option, was a triumphant success; and the absence from our streets of drunkenness, rowdyism and profanity on the day with which from time immemorial they had been notoriously connected, compelled even the opponents of the Local Option measure to confess that it was, after all, the best thing that had yet come to Norwood."

Prohibition a Financial Boon to Large Cities

The record of prohibition in fifty large industrial centres shows that the locations vacated by saloons have in almost all instances been quickly filled with legitimate business, restaurants, and amusement halls.

The liquor claim that prohibition would close up the hotels of the city is disproved by the results in every city where prohibition has gone into effect. Our records do not show a single instance where the hotel facilities have not been as large and as high a grade following the enactment of prohibition.

Since the inauguration of prohibition in the great industrial city of Birmingham, Alabama, at least one new million dollar hotel has been financed, three new banks opened for business, and the figures for bank clearings and building operations have increased remarkably. Not only that, but the increase in the investment of foreign capital has been marked. Building operations in Atlanta, Georgia, Birmingham, Alabama, and Kansas City, Kansas, three of the largest prohibition cities, have broken all previous records in the past few years.

Public Finances Will Not Suffer Under Prohibition

As regards the condition of public finances, with a clean political administration, $2,000,000 could be saved to Chicago annually by a fifty per cent. reduction in crime. Another million by the reduction of present exorbitant salaries of city officials, and more than two million secured from personal property assessments, which have this year been shown to be notoriously small, and no retail business has dodged its reasonable personal property taxes so astonishingly as the saloon business. Instead of paying on an average assessed valuation of $2,000 each for saloon fixtures and stock, the liquor men, according to the official report of the State Board of Equalization, are assessed on an average valuation of less than $3.00 per saloon. This is a graft which would not stand the first ray of light under a prohibition administration.

Crime Drops One Half Under Prohibition

The decrease in the cost of crime is based upon figures available to all. Worcester, Massachusetts, reports total arrests 52 per cent. greater under license than under prohibition; arrests for drunkenness 113 per cent. greater under license; arrests of "first offenders" 129 per cent. greater under license.

In Birmingham, Alabama, arrests dropped in one year from 11,812 under license to 6,820 under prohibition, and others in proportion. Throughout the State of Alabama the decrease in arrests for crimes averages 75 per cent.

In Memphis, Tennessee, the decrease in arrests for crime averages 75 per month under prohibition is from 164 under license to 61 under the new law.

These are but a few of the benefits which prohibition will bring to the city of Chicago (or Peterborough). The increased demand in all the legitimate lines will mean increased demand for labor. The sober and efficient men "thrown out of work" will quickly fit it to the new conditions, while the sots and criminal classes will drift to safer and more congenial fields for vice and debauchery.

DOES PROHIBITION PROHIBIT?

During the past week a letter that appeared in the Peterborough papers from a party who is opposed to local option claimed that as long as liquor is manufactured it will be sold, and that therefore, there is no use attempting to enforce local option until the manufacture of liquor is prohibited. It would be difficult for this party or anyone else to prove this statement. The facts are the other way.

Prohibition does prohibit. Possibly not completely but to a very large extent. As a result of the fact that over half of the population of the United States is now living in prohibition districts, the United States government is looking about for some source of revenue to replace the decreasing tax on liquors. From June, 1907, to June, 1908, internal revenue collections fell off about $18,000,000. This meant that liquor to the value of many times that sum was no longer being manufactured. Why? Because there was no market for it. Had it been manufactured it could have been sold.

Since June, 1908, the decrease mentioned has doubled. It was expected that the deficit in the internal revenue receipts to June, 1909, would be $30,000,000. It is believed that this decrease in revenue is counterbalanced by the lessened cost of punishing criminals.

We are sometimes told that more liquor is sold in local option districts than before local option was introduced. If that is the case why are the big brewers and distillers spending large sums of money to prevent the spread of the local option movement? When we invite them to assist us extend local option, and thus help to increase their business, they decline their assistance and continue working against what is said to be in their best interests.

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH AND THE SALOON

The prohibition area in the United States, and in many portions of Canada, has been extended widely largely as a result of the splendid campaign against the liquor traffic that has been conducted by the Catholic Church. The strong stand that is taken by prominent Catholics on this questioned has already been mentioned in these columns. The following is a brief extract from a splendid address delivered at the Chicago Catholic Total Abstinence Convention by Rev. Jas. M. Reardon, of St. Paul, Minn. Limited space prevents its publication in full:

"The great obstacle which bars the way to individual reformation is the ever-present saloon. Its door stands invitingly open to entice the unwary; its siren voice never ceases to allure its victims from the path of rectitude; its very presence is a silent, but almost irresistible call to indulge in strong drink. The saloon is the plague-spot of our national life; and hence it is that the Catholic Church is arrayed against it as an institution from which, as from a Pandora's box, spreads all the evils of the liquor traffic. The Catholic Church is the avowed and uncompromising enemy of the American saloon; and it desires most ardently that this "pestilential evil" be wiped out entirely that it may no longer curse the race."

The Church and the Saloon at War

"Against this formidable foe the Catholic Church raises her voice in vigorous denunciation. The saloon would contend with the church for supremacy on American soil; it would if it could, destroy her power and glory in its emancipation from the restraint which religion imposes. Therefore, between the church and the saloon there can be no truce, no compromise. Light and darkness cannot coexist side by side. If the nation chooses the darkness rather than the light the virtue and permanence of the republic will be jeopardized. Surely the descendants of the men who fought and bled at Valley Forge in freedom's holy cause will not stoop to bind the shackles of intolerable serfdom on the limbs of those whose title to the fullest measure of personal liberty and happiness is guaranteed alike by the constitution of the republic and the teaching of the Catholic Church.

Its Natural Results

"Are not the 'disorderly and disreputable practices' which characterize the saloon traffic the natural result of the system itself? The saloon is conducted solely for the money that is in the business. The more drink sold, the greater the profit. Hence the saloon fosters intemperance. "The American saloon," says Archbishop Ireland, "is responsible for the awful intemperance which desolates the land, and which is the physical and moral plague of our time. In the saloon is dealt out the drink which intoxicates, and there temptations to use are deliberately planned and multiplied." The saloon panders to and thrives upon the abnormal appetites of its patrons. It lures them to the drink habit by various devices and especially by encouraging the abominable custom of treating. To such proportions has this practice attained that it is safe to say that "the greater part of excessive drinking is not caused by an uncontrollable appetite for liquor, but because of the custom of treating which has taken so strong a hold upon us."

Atrocious and Degrading

"There is no more degrading and no more atrocious insult to civilized life than the American saloon. It has poisoned the social atmosphere for the masses; in it the workingman squanders his earnings, and the man devastates his energies and becomes a wreck. A thousand ways lead from the saloon to the penitentiary. It is a blessed movement which now turns with overwhelming energy against the horror of this evil, and unites the clean minds of the whole nation in an untiring fight against this sort of infection. THERE IS NO DISAGREEMENT AS TO THE FACT THAT THE SALOON HAS TO BE WIPED OUT."

The Church Must Fight it

"Against this monster evil—the American saloon system—"what can the Catholic Church do, if she is loyal to her professed principles, but raise her hand in opposition, and put herself on record as its unswerving antagonist". She has always regarded intemperance as so serious a sin that it excludes from heaven those guilty of it. Hence, she looks upon the saloon—the fostering parent of drunkenness, the nursery of intemperance—as one of her greatest foes, a barrier to the operation of divine grace in human souls, an arch-enemy with whom there can be no semblance of a compromise."

PETERBORO'S CHILDREN AND THE SALOON

Every drunkard and every criminal was once a child. No one can tell how many of the children of to-day will be sucked in by the open bar and ruined unless we drive the saloon out of our midst. Believing that this fact should be emphasized, the temperance workers in Peterborough have arranged for a procession of children on the afternoon of Sunday, Nov. 28th, which is to be observed as the World's Temperance Sunday. The children will be led by the Salvation Army band, and the procession will be followed by an address in the Opera House by Mr. E. A. Bengough, of Toronto, who will give a chalk talk to the children.

The Salvation Army Band will leave their barracks on Simcoe street at 2.30 in the afternoon and will take the Salvation Army Sunday school children to Charlotte St. Church, where they will be joined by the children of St. James' Methodist, Park St. Baptist, Knox Presbyterian and Charlotte St. churches. The procession will proceed from Charlotte St. church along Rubidge street and will be joined at Brock street by the children of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church. It will then march down Brock street to Aylmer and along Aylmer to Murray, where the children from the Murray St. Baptist church will fall into line. Continuing, the children will march along Murray street to Water street, where they will be joined by St. Paul's Presbyterian Sunday school. Continuing along Water to McDonel and George, the George St. Methodist and Mark St. Methodist Sunday schools will become a part of the procession. The whole procession will then march in full strength down George street to the Opera House to hear the address already mentioned. The procession will not be confined only to children but hundreds of young ladies and young men will take part in it.

PUBLIC MEN VS. LIQUOR TRAFFIC

Do you know of any prominent public man who is willing to stand up and support the liquor traffic? If you do, please give us his name. There are thousands who are opposed to it. Here is what some of them say:

The Drink

The devil in solution—Sir Wilfred Lawson.

That beverage, the mother of sins.—Southey.

The evil is in the drink.—David Lewis, J.P.

Liquid fire and distilled damnation.—Robert Hall.

I consider all spirits bad spirits.—Sir Astley Cooper.

The dynamite of modern civilization.—Hon. John D. Long.

While you have the drink you will have the drunkard.—George W. Bain.

It is a drink, a drunk and a drunkard; an appetite, a taste, a delirium.—Rev. W. S. Pratt.

I oppose drink because it opposes me. The work I try to do, it undoes.—Bishop C. D. Foss.

Strong drink is not only the devil's way into a man, but man's way to the devil.—Adam Clark, D.D.

Drink baffles us, confounds us, shames us at every point; the public-house holds its triumphant course.—London Times.

CAMPAIGN NOTES

Do you not feel it in the air that local option is going to carry at the polls next January? That it is going to carry is borne out by the returns being received by the temperance workers. One working man stated recently that in the machine shop where he works, out of 20 voters he did not know of one man who was going to vote against local option. A canvass which has been completed of one poll has brought out the result that 200 out of 250 ratepayers have announced their intention to vote for local option. Reports from some other polls show that three-quarters of the ratepayers who have been canvassed so far have signified their intention of voting against the open bar in Peterborough. Is it any wonder that the temperance workers in Peterborough are enthusiastic?

The pastor of a church in the country near Peterborough, where the farmers are enjoying local option, sent word to the temperance workers in Peterborough this week that the farmers of his congregation are willing to furnish rigs on election day next January to get the temperance voters out to the polls. This offers a suggestion for other rural congregations. It is voluntary work of this nature that is helping to drive the open saloon out of the country.

Do not miss the meeting in the Grand Opera House to-morrow afternoon. The speakers are men of experience who will show how local option has succeeded in other districts and who will answer the arguments of the liquor interests. They are John A. Paterson, Esq., K.C., of Toronto, and Rev. T. Beverly Smith, Church of England clergyman at West Toronto.

Do you suppose that if prohibition was proving a failure in the cities of the United States and in the local option districts in Ontario that the liquor interests would not be bringing in speakers from all these centres to prove how foolish we would be to try local option in Peterborough. They cannot get such speakers, and that is why we do not hear anything from them.

"Last year saw 26 saloons a day closed by the operation of temperance laws in the United States. Twenty-six times 365 equals —?"

Will Speak at Park St. Church

Mr. John A. Paterson, K.C., of Toronto, will give an address on local option at the Park St. Baptist church on Sunday night.

Rev. Dr. Mallen, of Caledonia, has accepted a call to Drummond Hill Presbyterian Church.

THE NAVY QUESTION

The Montreal Star.

We have passed beautifully worded resolutions affirming our loyalty to the Mother Country; we have arranged to make a start on some kind of a little navy of our own by spending $2,000,000 next year for preliminaries—the new Dreadnoughts cost $8,000,000 apiece and Great Britain feels she needs them without preliminaries. Our navy, we are gravely told, will "round out Canada's autonomy," but of what use will a well-rounded Canadian autonomy be to Great Britain, or to Canada, for that matter, if the day dawns when one extra Dreadnought in her fleet might decide the issue of German or British supremacy or, as may be, prevent the question ever coming to the arbitrament of battle!! Can any reasoning being suppose that Canada's autonomical naval padding of "three third-class cruisers and four torpedo-boat destroyers" would be a factor, moral or otherwise, in such a conflict!

• • • •

We notice a tendency on the part of some Conservatives to make capital by denouncing the Canadian House of Commons' resolutions of last March. This is not only foolishness, but absolute unfairness. Those resolutions were no more the resolutions of the Liberal party than of the Conservative party. In fact most people feel the greater blame rests with the opposition in agreeing to support the resolutions.

Every reader of the Star should read the report brought down yesterday by Mr. Brodeur. At that conference Sir Frederick Borden and Mr. Brodeur could not be expected to contribute anything of any value. We have yet to hear that these gentlemen pretend to be naval experts. But there was submitted expert opinion, the best in the world, by the men at the head of the greatest navy in the world, and that opinion was straightforward and emphatic, that if the colonies wished to contribute to the strength of the Empire the right way was to strengthen the Imperial Navy. Any man of ordinary intelligence can see that the Admiralty experts talked sense.

When Sir Frederick Borden and Mr. Brodeur put their foot down upon the idea of strengthening the Imperial Navy and talked for a Canadian toy navy, that was politics, pure and simple. And so the British statesmen with that graciousness which characterizes them, refrained from remonstrating, all the while laughing in their sleeves at the absurdity. The way to strengthen the Imperial Navy is to strengthen it. Either we want to do so or we do not. Which is it! The Conservatives cannot hide behind Sir Wilfrid in this matter.

The Star's attitude has been consistent from the first. Whatever we are going to spend, let us do it to some purpose. Our contribution to the Imperial Navy should carry with it the right to say, "This is primarily not to relieve the British taxpayer; it is to give us a voice in the naval policy of the Empire and our voice goes clear for a navy that can hold the Empire together, come what may."

The alternative means independence, annexation or domination by the first power that breaks Great Britain's strength.

RECEPTION AT NORMAL SCHOOL

Pleasant Evening Spent by Teachers and Students---Good Programme

The reception tendered the Normal students last night by the staff of the institution was a brilliant affair.

The entire building was illuminated and the evening costumes of the staff and students gave brightness to the unique event.

The platform of the Assembly Hall was decorated with palms and here the first part of the evening's entertainment was held. Principal Walker was chairman and the following choice programme was rendered and enjoyed by all who attended;

Piano solo—Miss Kingsley.
Vocal solo—Miss Scott.
Recitation—Miss Frost.
Vocal solo—Miss M. McCaw.
Piano duett — Misses Davies and McCaw.
Vocal solo—Mr. K. Shook.
Violin solo—Dr. Parks.

The Halpany orchestra discoursed appropriate music throughout the evening.

From 10 to 11 p.m. was occupied in supper provided in the gymnasium, while a large number enjoyed a treat in the Reflectroscope pictures shown by Mr. G. A. Cornish,

OYSTER SUPPER AT PARK ST.

Successful Function Under Auspices of Ladies' Aid Society—Many in Attendance.

The church parlors of the Park st. Baptist church were overcrowded last night at the oyster supper given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of the church.

The crowd was handled without any confusion whatever owing to the fine arrangements.

Something over $75 was realized and everybody went away satisfied with the supper and also the excellent programme provided; which was rendered in a manner that reflected great credit on all the performers.

The pastor, Rev. W. O. Riddiford, occupied the chair, and in a brief and happy speech replete with humor, welcomed the people.

The following programme was then rendered;

Doxology.
Prayer.
Chairman's address.
Instrumental, Mr. Harold Foster.
Mandolin selection.
Solo, Mr. F. Pratt
Recitation, Mr. Johns.
Instrumental, Miss Rena Johnston.
Solo, Mr. J. Miller.
Recitation, Miss Ethel Miller.
Violin solo, Miss Hope Miller.
Instrumental, Miss Hazel Gillespie.
Solo, Mr. F. Pratt.
Recitation, Miss Ethel Hill.
Duet, Miss Hill and Mr. Miller.
National anthem.

OBITUARY

ZIMRI BLODGETT.

Zimri Blodgett, a well known resident of the city, passed away yesterday afternoon at his home, 213 Antrim street. His death was unexpected as he had been able to attend to his duties until a short time before he passed away. Anaemia was the cause of death. The late Mr. Blodgett was sixty-three years of age and had been a resident of Peterborough for many years. He held one of the watering contracts from the city this year. He is survived by his wife and seven of a family, five sons and two daughters. The daughters are Mrs. Arthur Pinch of Toronto, and Miss Jessie Blodgett of Peterborough. The sons are Arthur of North Monaghan, and Tom, Andrew, John and George of Peterborough. George resides at home.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at three o'clock from 213 Antrim street to St. Peter's Cathedral and thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery.

Remember the Illustrated Ar Lecture by Fraulein Antoine Stolls, Collegiate Institute Hall, Friday evening, Novemt ber 26th. Tickets 35c, students 25c. For sale McDermid and Jury's and all bookstores.

TWO SPEAKERS FOR TO-MORROW

Meeting at the Grand Opera House Will Commence at 3.30 Instead of at Four

The meeting in the Grand Opera House to-morrow afternoon will commence at 3.30, instead of four o'clock, as has been in the case in the past. The speakers will be Mr. John A. Patterson, K.C., of Toronto, and T. Beverley Smith, an English Church minister, of West Toronto. Both gentlemen will have something interesting to say about local option, and no doubt there will be a big audience present.

TRIPPED AND FRACTURED RIB

Mr. Edward Vinette, who resides at 155 River road, Auburn, met with an unfortunate accident Thursday morning as he was leaving his home to go to work. Tripping over some wire netting in the yard, he fell heavily to the ground, fracturing one of his left ribs and as a result of the mishap will be compelled to rest for some time from his work in the blacksmith shop of the Canadian General Electric Company.

SYSTEM OF REPORTING "LIGHTS OUT" UNSATISFACTORY

To Peterborough Light and Power Company—Matter Discussed at Meeting of Fire, Water and Light Committee.

Mr. Larmonth, of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, discussed with the members of the Fire, Water and Light Committee present at the meeting last night, the system of reporting on "lights out" as prevailed at the present time. After the question had been discussed for some time, with little progress being made, the matter was left to stand, and will be dealt with by a full committee at some future date.

Those present last night were Ald. Buller, chairman; Alderman Morgan, and Hicks, Fire Chief Howard and Mr. Larmonth.

MR. LARMONTH.

"My object of meeting the members of this committee here to-night," said Mr. Larmonth, "is to discuss the present system of reporting lights out. From our point of view, the system is unsatisfactory, for in some cases the firemen had reported cases of lights being out when they were not. This was causing hard feeling between the employees of the company, and the firemen as the former were being charged up with for every lamp reported out and a fine imposed on the company. The proposition that would suit him was that the company be notified every morning, as to the number of lights out, the time, and the name of the person reporting. He would also consent to have a man in the office all night and when a report was sent in he would go to the place of the trouble and have the defect remedied.

FIRE CHIEF HOWARD.

Chief Howard stated that he had instructed his men to pay attention to the lights and report them when out. He did not think that he had been severe on the company, in giving in his report the number of lamps out. Thursday there had been eleven out and an inspection showed that in nearly all cases the carbons were burned out.

Some carbons are softer than others and burn out more quickly and especially so on a windy night, explained Mr. Larmonth, but we are satisfied to pay in all cases of this kind. What is objected to is the irregularities, and to get over this I think the names of those who report should be given to us. Every report should be proved and that is only fair to us.

The committee was not in favor at first of supplying the names of the informers, but after considerable discussion it was decided that the names of the firemen and policemen should be given the company.

CONSERVATORY CONCERT A PRONOUNCED SUCCESS

Miss Jessie Alexander the Favorite Reader Was Repeatedly Encored—The Playing of the Orchestra a Revelation—A Delightful Entertainment.

Although the many patrons of the concert at the Conservatory Music Hall last night had undoubtedly looked forward to a very pleasant evening, it can probably be said without exaggeration that the programme provided them came in the nature of a delightful surprise. The entertainment was one of most pleasing quality, and won the very cordial appreciation of a highly satisfied audience.

Miss Jessie Alexander, the brilliant and versatile elocutionist, of Toronto, and the Conservatory orchestra were responsible for the programme. Miss Alexander captivated her hearers in her various numbers, and the orchestra under Mr. Gliddon's direction, played in a manner that was a revelation to the majority of its hearers and showed excellent instrumentation, and as the occasion demanded equally fine pianissimo effect or tonal force. Both Miss Alexander and the members of the orchestra were called upon for encores in an insistent manner. Miss Alexander received a recall for every number, and a double one on one occasion, and with the exception of the opening march, the orchestra had to answer the persistent demands for repeated selections.

The concert opened with the "Abschied Der Gladitoren" (Farewell of the Gladiators), and this served to show the ability of the musicians in a pretentious and exacting selection. In "Scenes from Romeo and Juliet" Miss Alexander had an excellent opportunity to display her large range of dramatic equipment, and for an encore gave almost in the same breath it might be said, a widely contrasting number, and the lightest of her repertoire of the evening, "The Charge of the Mad Brigade." This was a humorous parody on the celebrated Balaclava poem, with women bargain counter stormers supplanting the original "six hundred." This was followed by "Bonnie Scotland," an attractive medley of the heatherland, played by the orchestra. It was appreciatively encored. In "The Suffrage Question" and "A Pot of Tea" the gifted reader showed her aptitude for character elocution. The orchestra's most favorably received popular number was probably Paul Lincke's whimsical intermezzo, "The Glow Worm." Its repetition also received considerable applause. "Ma Little Dominique" was rendered by Miss Alexander with a true habitant accent and expression, and by way of pleasing variety she told, as an encore a story—"for the children"—of a newsboy's humorous interpretation, in her own original way—of a night school lesson. For this she was also recalled and gave the pathetic and touching poem of a crippled child's philosophy, "Ceptin' Me," written by Peterborough's former talented poetess, the late Alma Frances McCollum.

After twice playing the "American Patrol," which was given with a splendid conception of its possibilities as a descriptive arrangement, the stirring march, "The White Squadron," and "God Save the King" concluded a splendidly played and well selected programme. "The Higher Culture," and "The Kindergarten Tot," the latter one of the happiest of Miss Alexander's numbers, were her concluding selections.

Mr. Gliddon is to be commended for providing such a thoroughly enjoyable evening, and must feel gratified by the encouraging support given by the audience, which almost taxed the seating capacity of the hall.

The concert was the first of a series that will be given by the Conservatory orchestra with some capable outside artist also on the programme. The pupils of the Conservatory will be admitted gratis to these concerts on account of the benefit they will derive along musical and artistic lines.

WHO WILL BE NEW INSPECTOR IF THE TWO COUNTIES ARE UNITED?

Lindsay, Nov. 19.—Providing that the new Public School inspectorate is formed from the two old inspectorates of a portion of Peterborough and Victoria county, who will be the new inspector?

This question is a very important one to Lindsay, because the town school will be under this newly-appointed inspector. The decision will be arrived at when a deputation from this county meet the Peterborough County Council. The Victoria County deputation does not anticipate any trouble, and is confident that the matter will be amicably settled. The matter aroused some comment to-day in the council meeting.

Dr. Gould—"I should not think the deputation should have any trouble. The best man should be elected, indifferent to the county in which he resides."

The appointment will be ratified at the January session of the County Council.

Mr. Boate, of Emily, who favored the conjunction with Peterborough, was satisfied that it would be a satisfactory one. He said the districts on the border between the two counties were located in such a way as to fit well into one inspectorate.

After twice playing the "American Patrol," which was given with a splendid conception of its possibilities as a descriptive arrangement, the stirring march, "The White Squadron," and "God Save the King" concluded a splendidly played and well selected programme, "The Higher Culture," and "The Kindergarten Tot," the latter one of the happiest of Miss Alexander's numbers, were her concluding selections.

Mr. Gliddon is to be commended for providing such a thoroughly enjoyable evening, and must feel gratified by the encouraging support given by the audience, which almost taxed the seating capacity of the hall.

The concert was the first of a series that will be given by the Conservatory orchestra with some capable outside artist also on the programme. The pupils of the Conservatory will be admitted gratis to these concerts on account of the benefit they will derive along musical and artistic lines.

WHO WILL BE NEW INSPECTOR IF THE TWO COUNTIES ARE UNITED?

Lindsay, Nov. 19.—Providing that the new Public School inspectorate is formed from the two old inspectorates of a portion of Peterborough and Victoria county, who will be the new inspector?

This question is a very important one to Lindsay, because the town school will be under this newly-appointed inspector. The decision will be arrived at when a deputation from this county meet the Peterborough County Council. The Victoria County deputation does not anticipate any trouble, and is confident that the matter will be amicably settled. The matter aroused some comment to-day in the council meeting.

Dr. Gould—"I should not think the deputation should have any trouble. The best man should be elected, indifferent to the county in which he resides."

The appointment will be ratified at the January session of the County Council.

Mr. Boate, of Emily, who favored the conjunction with Peterborough, was satisfied that it would be a satisfactory one. He said the districts on the border between the two counties were located in such a way as to fit well into one inspectorate.

SPORTING NEWS

ONCE MORE BRUSSELS DID NOT SHOW UP AT HAVELOCK

And There Was no Football Match at Havelock — Not Likely That Westerners Will Get Another Chance.

Special to Review.

Havelock, Nov. 19.—It seems as if Brussels would rather play the bluff game than the football game. They have been trying to win the Ontario football championship by bluff rather than by playing the game and it is about time that the Ontario Football executive should take a hand in the matter and declare Havelock the champions.

As usual, they did not make their appearance for the game ordered by the executive to be played here today. More than that, they claim the championship on the grounds that Havelock did not send a guarantee for expenses in time for them to come. The Havelock team are about sick of such bosh as has been going on for the past two months in the attempt to settle the championship. They have by rights won the championship twice before this third back out on the part of the Brussels team ought to settle the matter.

The Havelock Club have lived up to all conditions. If they wished to play the game in Havelock to-day, they were to pay all Brussels expenses in connection with the game and to notify the chairman of the match committee and the Brussels Club by wire not later than Tuesday, Nov. 16th. These wer ethe only conditions that they were to live up to, according to instructions sent them by J. A. W. instructions sent them by J. A. Woodward, secretary of the leeague. On Tuesday they notified Secretary Woodward that they woul dplay the game here and wired Brussels that they would pay all expenses. More than that, they sent a written guarantee on Tuesday night.

Therefore, Brussels' claim that they did not receive the written guarantee in time is of no use as it was not at all necessary to send any guarantee other than that by wire.

Therefore, the Havelock team have a just claim to the championship and it is up to the executive to declare them such at once.

ROUGH RIDERS AND TIGERS ARE BATTLING TO-DAY

HALF TIME, TIGERS 5, OTTAWA 10

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Rosedale Grounds, Nov. 20.—Long before one o'clock the crowd started towards Rosedale for the big game and they were still coming when the ball was kicked off. Six thousand people saw the game, but there was noise enough for double that number. The rank and file of the rival camps were on deck early and half an hour before the game started the fun was in progress. Tiger rooters with their big yellow chrysanthemums, occupied a huge block in the centre of the stand. They were there and yelling lustily when the Ottawa band arrived. Then fun started in real earnest, cheer and counter cheer rent the air. The arrival of the Tiger team at two o'clock was the signal for mighty cheering that had hardly subsided when the Ottawa club reached the club house, led by the band. The Tiger mascot carried a big image of billiken bedecked in the Tiger, yellow and black, for good luck, which the superstitious ones of the team embraced before they marched upon the field. Tigers took the field for practice first and Davey Tope was given a mighty ovation. The Ottawas did not really cut loose till one of their bands paraded across the field. A minute after the rival band from Hamilton struck up in the midst of an Ottawa overture and pandemonium reigned.

The weather was fine, the sun coming out, ground dry and still wind blowing from the west.

The line [illegible]

THE TEAMS

TIGERS		OTTAWAS
Tope	full	Johnstone
Moore	halves	McCann
Simpson	"	Williams
Burton	"	Gerard
Awrey	quarter	Kilt
Craig	scrim	Kennedy
Pfeiffer	"	Ferguson
Bethune	"	Sheriff
Gray	wings	Church
Bramer	"	Phillips
Isbester	"	McGee
Barren	"	Vaughan
Lyon	"	Christie
Marriott	"	Stronach

Referee Molson blew his whistle at 2.15 sharp and Ottawa, who won the toss elected to kick with the gale behind them. Tigers kicked off, but Ottawa pushed it back and had Tigers on the defensive. Tope fumbled pass, but recovered. Simpson kicked to Gerard, who returned with short kick to Braemer, who run it back to centre. Williams kicked to deadline for one point. Ottawa 1, Tigers 0.

Tigers settled down for hard game, Moore and Isbester bucked but Moore fumbled punt from Gerard and Williams again boofed to deadline. Ottawa 3, Tigers 0.

Hamilton loose ball on interference. Hamilton recover. Hamilton start run but lose on bad pass. Williams missed drop kick, but moment later kicked over dead line for another point. Ottawa 4, Hamilton 0.

Simpson kicked to Williams who returned to Tope who was downed by Stronach for a rouge. Ottawa 5, Hamilton 0. Ottawa line is making big gains on bucks while Tigers are not making any impression in that respect.

Simpson's kick went across field and McCann carried the ball over line for a try which was not converted. Ottawa 10, Hamilton 0. End of first quarter.

Hamilton has wind in second quarter and Simpson is kicking strong. Simpson drops goal from 35 yard line. Ottawa 10, Tigers 3.

Ferguson goes off for fighting, followed by Kilt. Burton almost got over for a touch. Church is hurt and Hickey replaces him. Ottawa held Tigers on downs. Christie is knocked out. Ottawa 10, Tigers 4.

Johnstone kicks to own dead line to prevent touch. Ottawa 10, Tigers 4.

Simpson kicked from centre field to dead line. Ottawa 10, Hamilton 5.

HALF TIME

MEETING OF THE O. H. A EXECUTIVE

Some Applications Refused—Dr. MacPherson Represented Peterborough.

Toronto, Nov. 20.—The Ontario Hockey Association Executive met last night in the Telegram building to close up the year's business and complete the preparations for the annual convention to-day. President Dwight J. Turner was in the chair, and the other members were:—Louis Blake Duff, Welland; H. E. Wettlaufer, Berlin; Dr. A. W. MacPherson, Peterborough; Chas. Farquharson, Stratford; John Dyment, Barrie, John Ross Robertson, Francis Nelson and Secretary W. A. Hewitt, Toronto.

The application for membership from the Tilsonburg, Drumbo, Bain, of Woodstock, Estonias, Argonauts and and St. Helen's, of Toronto, clubs were accepted. In reply to enquiries from Cleveland, Ohio, and New Liskeard, it was decided that the Association was not yet prepared to enter either of these fields.

Rival applications for the Whitby franchise, supported by Rev. A. F. Barr and F. N. Burns, were heard, and it was awarded to the Whitby Amateur Athletic Association, represented by Rev. Mr. Barr, which held it last season. The conflicting interests there will no doubt come to some satisfactory local arrangement.

Several applications for reinstatement were received, but the Executive has no power to deal with this matter.

Very satisfactory reports were presented and passed for presentation at to-day's meeting, which convenes in the Temple Building, at nine o'clock sharp.

HOCKEY

A meeting of the Chieftain Hockey Club is called for at Dr. Wightman's office on Wednesday evening at eight o'clock. All players and others interested in this club are urgently requested to be present as important business will be discussed.

WRESTLING

America is filling up with grapplers. The names of the grapsome artists recently landed look like a directory on a spree. There are a lot of unpronounceable Italians, unspellable Poles, and unmentionable Turks. There are also a few Irish. One of the Poles is Zbysco. This latter is a man with arms as thick as an ordinary man's. He looks like a bear and he's matched with Gotch to wrestle in Buffalo. Under the heading "Zbysco Proves to be an Awful Polish Lemon" a Chicago paper describes a bout between Zbysco and Charlie Cutler in that fair city. Cutler is a fair second-rate heavyweight. He had the best of the awful Pole for thirty-four minutes, after which the man with the soda biscuit name pushed him out of the ring, fell on him on the front row of chairs and jabbed at Cutler's eyes with his thumb until the police pulled him away. The match was called a draw.

BOWLING AT Y. M. C. A.

Team No. 7 defaulted to team No. 10 last night in the Y.M.C.A. bowling contest and No. 10 gets the credit for three games. In the game between Nos. 6 and 11, Capt. Perry lost the second game, which was his first loss this season. The scores were;—

No. 6—

MISSION BAND HELD CONCERT

Young People of Mark St. Church Made Neat Sum

The Mission Band of Mark Street Methodist church held a very successful concert and fancy goods sale in the basement of the church last evening, and as a result realized the handsome sum of $45. Rev. C. H. Coon acted as chairman, and the splendid programme of musical numbers and recitations was enjoyed by the large number who attended. Much credit is due Mr. A. J. Throop, the superintendent of the Mission Band, for the success which marked the concert.

BOWLING ALLEYS AT ARMOURIES

Finishing Touches Was Made this Afternoon May be Open Next Week

The work in connection with the installing of the bowling alleys at the Armouries will be completed to-day and the alleys will likely be opened for use the early part of next week. The greater number of the new lockers being installed in each company's rooms have been placed in position and are about ready for use. All the outside work on the south side of the building has been finished, and the appearance is greatly improved.

THE NON-JURY SITTINGS OF HIGH COURT

The non-jury sittings of the High Court will be held at the court house on Monday, commencing at one o'clock. Mr. Justice Britton will preside. There are three cases to be heard by His Lordship, namely, Rose vs. Dunlop; Bennett vs. the Havelock Electric Light and power Company, and the Corporation of Lakefield vs. Brown.

In the case of Bennett vs. the Havelock Electric Company. Thos. Bennett, on behalf of himself and a number of othe rshareholders, is suing the Company for $5,000, claiming the said company fraudulently took stock for that amount and after building a power house, which only cost $300, divided the balance among the directors. O'Connell & Gordon for the plaintiffs, and Hall, Medd & Davidson for the defendants.

SPORTING TALK

As high as $60 is being paid for admission tickets for the Yale-Harvard game to-day.

Fred Meadows defeated Percy Sellen in a 15-mile race at Guelph last night.

Both Hamilton and Ottawa will have a band on hand at the struggle this afternoon.

Toronto will have no professional hockey team this season. There are too many amateur sevens to go against.

SPECIAL SERMONS AT ST. LUKE'S CHURCH

A series of special sermons on Christianity in relation to modern thought, dealing particularly with the Labor and Capital problem, will be begun to-morrow evening at St. Luke's church, the sermons to be preached by Rev. Dr. Langfeldt. The subject for to-morrow night will be Christianity and Modern Thought. All interested in the application of Christianity to modern conditions and wishing to know more of the great problem of Capital and Labor ought to attend.

CLUB ROOMS FOR HAVELOCK YOUNG MEN

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Nov. 19.—Havelock young men have decided that they are going to have club rooms, whereby they may have some recreation. This time the young men have taken it in their own hands and it is a sure thing now. Through the energetic efforts of Mr. Jos Hoffman, fifty-six young men will be the charter members of a club in the building formerly used as a Baptist church on Union street, which they have leased. The building is exactly suited for the purpose, and is at present being renovated and electric lights installed. A good gymnasium will form the chief feature of the club; a piano will be put in, periodicals, magazines and papers subscribed for, a bath installed and the building fitted up in every way to make it suit the purpose. The club will also organize hockey, football teams, etc., to help along with amusement.

The club expects to open up about December 1st, when a meeting will be held, at which a suitable name and club colors will be selected.

The young men are financing the scheme themselves, and the officers elected are;—

Secretary—H. A. Roche

Treasurer—W. J. McBurney.

Executive Committee—The officers and Messrs. W. Hitchins and H. Toman.

ANNIVERSARY AT SPRINGVILLE

Special Services With Rev. H. G Livingstone the Preacher—Sacred Concert Monday

At the anniversary services of the Springville Presbyterian church tomorrow Rev. H. G. Livingstone, pastor of the Barton St. Methodist church, will preach at both services. Mr. Livingstone, who is a vocalist of ability, will also be heard in vocal solos.

On Monday evening a sacred concert in connection with the anniversary will be given, and those contributing to the programme will be Rev. Mr. Livingstone. Rev. J. G. Potter and Miss Thorndyke, vocalist, and Miss Storey, elocutionist, both of Toronto.

The past year has been a prosperous one for the Springville church, and the pastor has been most encouragingly supported by the congregation. A feature of the work for worthy causes has been the generous contribution to the missionary endeavors.

The special evangelistic services just closed aroused a deep interest, and were effectively conducted by Rev. Mr. Craig.

BIG INCREASE IN GERMAN NAVAL ESTIMATES

The German naval estimates are out and include no less a sum than $111,000,000.00 for new vessels. Europe is astounded as the direct bid Germany is making for naval supremacy.

CURTAIN POLES WINDOW SHADES

THE LIFT LOCK AND LOCKS BETWEEN CITY AND LAKEFIELD WILL BE ILLUMINATED

The Review understands that provision has been made in the estimates before the present session of parliament at Ottawa for the lighting of the Peterborough lift lock and all the locks on the Trent canal between this city and Lakefield. Of course the lift lock will be more brightly illuminated than the other locks but it is the intention of the deepartment to have the canal well lighted all the way to Lakefield. A substantial sum has been placed in the estimates for this work. Supt. McClellan has been agitating for the lighting of the locks for some time and the member for West Peterborough, Mr. Stratton, M. P., has been notified that the required sum has been put in the estimates.

"WIND AND WEATHER" WILL BE ADDRESS OF GENERAL INTEREST

The meeting of the Royal Astronomical Society, which was postponed on account of the citizens' and Board of Trade meeting, will be held at the Collegiate Institute on Tuesday, the 30th inst., when R. S. Stupart, director of the Meteorological Observatory, Toronto, will give an address on "Wind and Weather."

From the Observatory at Toronto all signals for the Atlantic coast, the direction of the wind and everything else concerning the probabilities are announced.

Everybody displays a deep interest in the "probs" and weather indications and Mr. Stupart's address will be of especial interest to both the expert student of astronomy and the layman. He is said to be a very interesting and authoritative speaker.

BIG BOOM EXPECTED IN COCHRANE IN THE SPRING

Mr. O. W. Porter, proprietor of Hotel Cochrane, Cochrane, New Ontario, is in the city on business. Mr. Porter informed the Review this morning that a big boom was expected in this northern town in the spring on account of the Porcupine Lake mines having opened about 22 miles from the town.

Cochrane now has a population of 2,000 and is growing rapidly. Business organization is also being effected rapidly and everything points to increasing prosperity. A fine new union station has been built by the Transcontinental line and the town is reached by this road and the T. N. and O.

Two banks, the Bank of Ottawa and the Bank of Montreal, have fine offices in Cochrane.

Successful "Block" Party

The block party was a great success at Brock Street Roller Rink last night. The winners were Miss R. Logan and Mr. J. O'Brien.

OPENING OF THE CHURCH OF THE SACRED HEART

Will Take Place To-Morrow — Clerical Dignitaries Here For Occasion—Description of the Church.

His Grace Archbishop McEvay, of Toronto; His Grace Archbishop Gauthier, of Kingston, and His Lordship Bishop Scollard, of North Bay, will be the three visiting dignitaries of the Roman Catholic church who will be here for the opening of the Church of the Sacred Heart to-morrow. The mass at the new church will be held at 10.30, and the masses at St. Peter's will be celebrated at 8, 9 and 10 o'clock, instead of the usual hour.

There will be pontifical vespers at the Church of the Sacred Heart at 7 o'clock, and also at the Cathedral. Archbishop Gauthier will sing the mass at the new church and Archbishop McEvay will preach the sermon in the morning. In the evening the sermon will be given by Bishop Scollard.

The church is built of Stoney Lake granite finely block faced, and brought up in regular courses. All the arches and the openings of doors and windows are relieved by dressings of limestone, as also are the cornices of the eaves and tower. The style is in Romanesque, purely treated.

The entrance doors have richly molded cut stone dressings, the windows being filled in with handsome subject painted glass. The floor of the church is divided into nave and side aisles by handsomely fluted and enriched Ionic columns, with entablatures. The ceilings are arched and divided into panels by rich molded ribs. The chancel is semi-circular in plan with in like manner enriched ceilings having handsome foliated boss, from which the sanctuary lamp will be suspended. At the south end is a large gallery with two entrances thereto and organ loft and choir, capable of seating some two hundred and fifty persons. The sacristy which is entered from the nave, is also built of stone and is most conveniently situate for its purposes.

The entire length of the edifice is 150 feet, having a width of 60 feet, nave being 101 feet x 31, 6, the side aisles each 100 feet x 12 feet, the chancel semicircular having a radius of 30 feet. The tower is 20 feet square, and the sacristy is 24 x 20.

The following are the heights;—The basement, 11 feet; nave, 40 feet; side aisles each 30 feet, the walls from foundation to eaves 30 feet, the apex of roof from basement floor 70 feet, the tower from foundations 88 feet and the spire 165 feet from same point.

For the city the boundary of the parish begins at the Otonabee river, follows the C.P.R. to Townsend street and west on Townsend street to the C.G.E. works. The former members of the Cathedral congregation residing south of this line will constitute the congregation of the new church. The boundary for people living in the country begins at the locks bridge and follows the road through Downer's Corners, running due east to the eastern boundary of the parish. Roman Catholics residing south of this line will also be members of the church of the Sacred Heart.

TWO MONTHS IN COBALT FIGHTING TYPHOID EPIDEMIC

Miss Annie Patterson, trained nurse, has returned to the city after having spent the last two months in Cobalt, where she was engaged along with many others in fighting the typhoid epidemic, which broke out in that place several months ago owing to the unsanitary conditions existing in the town. Miss Patterson was identified with the hospital for miners, a great many of whom were stricken with the disease. A peculiar fact about the fever was that it either started with a sore throat or one developed with the attack. There were over three hundred cases at one time, but the death rate was not large, although on one occasion, seven funerals were held in one day. There is danger of diphtheria breaking out at the present time, but every endeavor is being made to check it, before it becomes serious and one thing the health authorities fear is that when the citizens, of whom a great many have been living out in tents begin to take up house again more sickness will break out.

Miss Patterson enjoyed her visit to the silver country very much and in speaking of the attitude of the miners towards the nurses and those in charge stated that they all appreciated the efforts put forth on their behalf and made as little trouble as possible during their stay in the hospital.

MISSIONARY ADDRESS GIVEN

At the Meeting of St. Luke's A. Y. P. A.

The regular meeting of the A. Y. P.A. of St. Luke's church was held last night with a large attendance. The rector, Dr. Langfeldt, occupied the chair at the request of the president, Miss Ethel Packenham. The principal feature of the evening was a missionary address by Rev. W. J. Keith, of Knox church. Previous to the address, Miss Ethel Walton gave an instrumental solo and Mr. Kenneth Shook a vocal solo.

In introducing Mr. Keith Dr. Langfeldt spoke of the friendship existing between them, and expressed his great pleasure at having Mr. Keith present. The address dealt with the position of women in the heathen world as compared with what Christianity has done for them in bringing them to the proper place, which woman, as the equal of man, should hold. After the lecture Miss Alice Neil gave an instrumental solo, followed by a few words from the rector, thanking Mr. Keith for the able and instructive address which he had given.

Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

The next meeting will be held on Friday, December 3rd.

HAVE DECIDED TO GO TO GUELPH

George Thomas and Harry Hamilton to Open Restaurant There

Messrs. George Thomas and Harry Hamilton leave for Guelph next week, where they will open a restaurant. During the past few days they have visited London, Hamilton, Guelph, Toronto, Cobalt, North Bay and several other places, and decided that the best opening was in Guelph. There is no Chinese restaurant there at the present time.

Altough Messrs. Thomas and Hamilton are leaving Peterborough, the Dominion Cafe will still be conducted here.

MASONIC

Dr. S. P. Ford, of Norwood, the D.D.G.M. of Otonabee district, No. 20, paid his official visit to Corinthian Lodge No. 101, A.F.A.M., last evening. There were a number of visiting brethren present. The D.D.G.M. complimented the W.M. and officers of the lodge in the work exemplified by them and the condition of Masonry here. At the conclusion of the communication the distinguished visitor and visiting brethren were entertained in the dining hall, where a pleasant hour was spent.

THE DAILY REVIEW

PETERBOROUGH, ONT., CANADA, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1909

Answer This Question

When thousands of women say that they have been cured of their ailments by a certain remedy, does this not prove the merit of that remedy?

Thousands of women have written the story of their suffering, and have told how they were freed from it by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—for thirty years these reports have been published all over America.

Without great merit this medicine could never have gained the largest sale of any remedy for woman's ills—never could have become known and prized in nearly every country in the world.

Can any woman let prejudice stand between her and that which will restore her health? If you believe those who have tried it you know this medicine does cure.

Read this letter from a grateful woman, then make up your mind to give Mrs. Pinkham's medicine a chance to cure you.

Caniftons, Ont.—"I had been a great sufferer for five years. One doctor told me it was ulcers of the uterus, and another told me it was a fibroid tumor. No one knows what I suffered. I would always be worse at certain periods, and never was regular, and the bearing-down pains were terrible. I was very ill in bed, and the doctor told me I would have to have an operation, and that I might die during the operation. I wrote to my sister about it and she advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Through personal experience I have found it the best medicine in the world for female troubles, for it has cured me, and I did not have to have the operation after all. The Compound also helped me while passing through Change of Life."—Mrs. Letitia Blair, Canifton, Ontario.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

CONGRESSMAN LONGWORTH HAS DENIED THE STORY

Says His Wife Never Rode Garbed in Scarlet Smoking a Cigar—Did Not Pose for Picture on Stone Elephant.

Cincinnati, Nov. 18.—Congressman Nicholas Longworth to-day denounced as an absolute lie the assertions made by Emma Kroebel, a German woman, who was chief mistress of ceremonies at the Corean Court, in 1906, that his wife, then Alice Roosevelt, rode to the tomb of the Corean Kings attired in a scarlet riding habit, smoking a cigar, and had her picture taken on a stone elephant which graced the chief tomb.

"The whole story is so palpably false that it is not worth even contempt."

According to the Kroebel story, which is part of a book of reminiscences just issued in Germany, the episode occurred while Miss Roosevelt was abroad with the Taft party prior to her marriage. One entire chapter is devoted to the alleged visit of the daughter of the then President Roosevelt to the Corean Court, and she is declared to have appeared at the function garbed in a scarlet habit with tight-fitting trousers that showed beneath her coat.

EGGS ARE GOING TO BE DEAR

This is going to be a good and bad winter as far as eggs are concerned—good from the standpoint of those farmers and others who keep laying hens; bad from the standpoint of the customer. Already this year before most of the hens have quit their summer laying, egg prices are equal to what they were in January last, the very worst month in the year for egg production. It is beginning to look as if the price of eggs had gone up never to come down again, like a good many other necessities these days, and it would seem that a farmer who can get 40 cents a dozen this early in the year with prospects of 50 to 60 a little later on, when the real cold weather comes, would be wise exceedingly to drop something else and go in extensively for poultry raising, having regard to the breeding of hens notable for their egg output.

The cause of the big jumps in egg prices is simply that people are eating more eggs these days than they used to do, and it is a hard matter to keep up with the demand. Ten years ago, or less, the high summer price for eggs was around 15 cents a dozen. When the price went up to 16 cents people concluded that it was time to give up the eating of hen fruit as a regular diet. In those days during the winter time, eggs never got above 25 cents a dozen, and that was considered a prohibitive price. An authority, discussing the matter, put the blame for the present day high price of eggs to the difference the farmer whose hen produced the eggs gets the price the consumer has to pay. He thinks that a remedy might be brought about to some extent by the farmers dealing straight with the customer, or at any rate, with the retail stores instead of through the commission men, who, as in the case of fruit, eat up the profit for merely allowing it to pass through their hands. Of course, he said, the constantly growing demand consequently upon the increasing population in the cities and towns has a tendency to keep the prices firm, but the main trouble is because of the eggs passing through so many hands before they get to the breakfast table.

It is estimated through the Government returns that there are at present on Ontario farms about 12,000,000 head of poultry of all kinds, the majority of which are naturally hens.

Sign of the Money Lenders.

The three golden balls were used as a commercial sign by early Italian merchants who lived in the days when the powerful Medici family held sway in Florence. The three golden balls were a part of the crest of arms of the Medici family. There were some representatives of this family among the merchants. These used the sign above the doors of their shops, and it became a well known emblem in the neighborhood of the city. Finally some of the Italian merchants found their way to England and there opened the first money lending establishments under the sign of the three balls. Later the use of the emblem became common to all money lenders.

CAUSE AND CURE OF NEURALGIA

Modern Methods Dispose of the Cause Instead of Treating the Symptoms

Neuralgia means simply "nerve pain," so there may be a great variation in the character and intensity of the pain and any nerve in the body may be affected. There are a number of causes of neuralgia, but the most common is a general run-down condition of the system. The discovery of this fact from reliable statistics led to the new treatment for neuralgia which consists in building up the general health by the tonic treatment and so disposing of the cause of the trouble.

Persons reduced by acute sickness, or by severe mental or physical strain, or by loss of sleep are frequently victims of neuralgia, and it is common in the case of those suffering from anaemia or bloodlessness. This brings us to the actual cause of neuralgia, which is nerve starvation. The blood, which in normal health carries to the nerves all of their nourishment, is unable to perform their duty satisfactorily when it is weak or impure. Build up the blood and the neuralgia pain will disappear as the nerves become better nourished. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a blood-making tonic, and for this reason cure even the most obstinate cases of neuralgia. Every dose of this medicine makes new, rich blood, which feeds the starved veins and drives out the sharp, darting, stabbing pains of neuralgia. Mrs. John Tibert, Little River, N.Y., says: "A few years ago I was a great sufferer from neuralgia in my head and face. At times the attacks were simply excruciating, and I would be forced to remain in bed. I tried doctors' medicines, but did not receive any benefit until I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I am happy to say that the benefit I received from these was wonderful. I may also add that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured my daughter of anaemia and indigestion, at a time when we began to despair of her getting better. I can highly recommend these Pills to anyone suffering from these troubles."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pills from any dealer in medicines or they will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

ABOUT THE BANK CLERK

Should a bank clerk marry? The question is answered by another Canadian bank in raising the "marriage limit" for its clerks. Hereafter they may not marry on less than twelve hundred dollars a year.

The generally accepted reason of banks for forbidding marriage among its officers unless they are in receipt of a certain salary, is the fear that they might be tempted to help out their housekeeping expenses by using the funds of the bank. It would be far more sensible to make a minimum salary to apply to poker playing, or frequenting livery stables or belonging to expensive clubs. We believe that an investigation of the case of bankers who have been translated from behind the wickets to behind the bars will show the greater of unmarried than married. The temptation to squander money on chocolates must be quite as great as to buy stew beef to excess. We should think that marriage would be about the best corrective to extravagance and possible defalcation the banks could devise.

The new rule is hardly one that would be laid down by men like Lord Strathcona, who have made their way up from the bottom, and who married on salaries much smaller than than stipulated by the bank. There are dozens of good men in Regina today whose embarking on the sometimes doubtful sea of matrimony was made when twelve hundred dollar salary seemed as far away as the pyramids of Egypt.

However, the law is laid and the throwing of an obstruction like this at the course of true love is hardly what would have been expected from a Canadian bank.

It has long been recognized as part of the bank's mission to increase the interest and quicken the pulse beat of female society in the semi-rural districts by reason of the number of eligible young men it puts in circulation; but it is sheer cruelty to dangle these prizes before the eyes of impulsive young girls, if they are hopelessly beyond their reach. There should be some way in which the eligible glance,—say a stripe for every hundred above six, with those who have attained marrying salary marked with a star. The girls could thus tell in a moment whether a man were a mere Middy and not worth wasting time over, or were either in the eligible class or within reasonable distance thereof.

And the only redeeming feature to the whole thing is that hereafter match-making mothers will take less chance of settling a beautiful daughter on a bank clerk with millionaire tastes, or a ten dollar a week salary.—Regina Standard.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING IS THE BEST

In an address upon "Effective Advertising," delivered before the Pennsylvania Retail Hardware Association, in convention in Philadelphia, the other day, R. D. Baldwin, of Fitchburg, Mass., after classifying his publicity scheme under four different heads, newspaper, window, circular, and special sales, said, in part:

"Advertise in the newspapers first, last and all the time. This is the most effective of advertising you retail men can adopt. The most effective method of newspaper advertising is the concentration of the 'ad.' upon some one article to be sold next day. The local newspapers, extending their influence throughout the entire intelligent community, should be used extensively."

TAKES BRIDE TO LABRADOR

When the average young woman of culture and refinement gets married it is usually with the prospect of a happy home in congenial surroundings—a comfortable flat in the city, or a handsome house in the suburbs. There are few brides-to-be anywhere with an immediate future like that of Miss Anna MacClanahan of Chicago, who next week becomes the wife of Dr. Wilfrid T. Grenfell, renowned British physician and missionary recently knighted by King Edward. Shortly after the nuptial ceremony Sir Wilfrid and Lady Grenfell will depart for the distant wilds of frigid Labrador, there to devote their lives to the care of hard-working fishermen and their families who are the sole inhabitants of that desolate country. This courageous lady has considered all the consequences of the step she is about to take. She has told the newspaper interviewers that she is eager to be "keeping house" in her new abode in the far north. Since her girlhood she has been ambitious to live a life of service, and she deems herself extremely lucky to be wooed and won by a man whose career has been filled with heroism and self-sacrifice.

As an explorer Dr. Grenfell is unique. Other adventurous men have penetrated the higher latitudes with brilliant discoveries and subsequent fame and fortune in view. He went thither to discover ways and means of doing good; of giving the best of his skill and scientific learning to the healing of the sick bodies and benighted souls. He experienced countless hardships and dangers in his search for opportunities to be useful to his fellows. According to his own statement, after years of toil, he can find contentment nowhere else than among the poor fisherfolk of Labrador. His present trip back to civilization was for the purpose of getting the one thing he needed to be perfectly happy—a wife. Commercial, money-making Chicago surely never was the scene of a love-match and mating more ideal and inspiring.—Western British American.

A FAT WOMAN HATES SOCIETY

Fat people have to get into clothes that are designed for people of normal physique. The men wear dress suits and look like comic pictures; The women wear low necked dresses to their evident humiliation. This is why it is often said that a fat woman hates society. Fat is as much the mistake of poor health as anything else. The things that make fat should be making good blood, bone and nerves. The secret is that the digestive machinery is out of gear. The juices make fat in the large quantities. That fat impedes circulation, cramps the heart, suppresses the liver or prevents the lungs and interferes with the stomach. Marmola Tablets are harmless. They are taken after each meal. They help digest that meal as nature intended it should be digested. They remove the fat already made at the rate of from 12 to 15 ounces a day and they leave no flabby skin or wrinkles. They are sold wherever drugs are sold, or the same category with harmful patent fat reducers. The contain Marmola, Cascara Aromatic and Peppermint Water. If you do not care to call upon your druggist, send 75 cents to The Marmola Company, Dept. 1193, Detroit, Mich., and they will send you a large, full size case by return mail in plain package, postage paid.

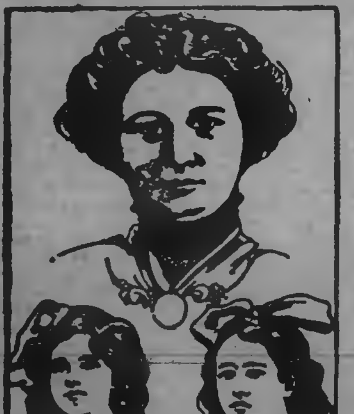
MRS. FREDERICK A. COOK.

Her Reluctance to Talk of Husband's Discovery Explained.

To transpose the poet, "wives of great men" all—most all—remind us that they have helped to make possible in one direction or another the achievements of their husbands. Mrs. Cook, the modest and very retiring wife of one of the discoverers of the north pole, is no exception to this rule. A friend of the Cook family, speaking of the reluctance of the explorer's wife to discuss her husband's exploits, says: "I think that Mrs. Cook is merely overcome by the magnitude of the news that came as unexpectedly to her as to the rest of the world. There is no reason why she should be unwilling to discuss her husband and his achievements, and she is well qualified to do so.

"Mrs. Cook was of great assistance to her husband in his work. She helped him in his literary labors, and I have seen her surrounded with books of reference, doing much of the laborious research necessary for articles such as her husband has written. Although Dr. Cook's absence and the depletion of the family finances resulting from his expedition have been hard for Mrs. Cook and her daughters, I have never heard her complain. She has always been confident of her husband's success and ready to make sacrifices to help him.



MRS. COOK AND HER DAUGHTERS.

"At present I believe that she wants time to adjust herself to new conditions and fully realize the significance of her position before she talks for publication."

On the other hand, Mrs. Peary, wife of the rival finder of the pole, has played too prominent a part in the career of her husband, with which the world is familiar, to need mention at this day. Mrs. Peary has gone into the frozen regions with the arctic expeditions conducted by her husband as far as it was safe for a woman to live. And her daughter, now a girl of sixteen, was born in the arctic country and is called, much to her present disgust, "the snow baby."

Mrs. Peary met her husband at North Sydney, where she had secured rooms at the hotel with a view of the bay, so she could see the Roosevelt, Commander Peary's ship, when it first put in an appearance.

Mrs. Cook's comment was brief and singularly like the expression of Mrs. Peary on the news of Dr. Cook's achievement. She said:

"If Commander Peary has discovered the pole, as I am sure my husband has, I heartily congratulate him."

Women.

The whisper of a beautiful woman can be heard farther than the loudest call of duty.

It is woman's way. They always love color better than form, rhetoric better than logic, priestcraft better than philosophy and flourishes better than figures.

Nature makes fools; women make coxcombs.

Women are apt to see chiefly the defects of a man of talent and the merits of a fool.

Woman is more constant in hatred than in love.

Woman is an idol that man worships before he throws it down.

A beautiful woman is the paradise of the eyes, the hell of the soul and the purgatory of the purse.

The highest mark of esteem a woman can give a man is to ask his friendship, and the most signal proof of her indifference is to offer him hers.

A woman is seldom tenderer to a man than immediately after she has deceived him.

Friendships of women are the cushions wherein they stick their pins.—"Woman and the Wits."

Russia Now Has Woman Lawyer.

Dr. Katharina Fleischer has just been admitted to the bar in Russia and will practice her profession in St. Petersburg. She is the first woman lawyer in the czar's dominions, and she passed the final examinations with high honors. She met with much opposition when she first announced her intention of studying law. Prejudice was strong even from influential members of her sex. She persisted in her ambition against all obstacles, however, and came out triumphant. It is her hope to fight the legal battles of women, and she seeks them especially as clients. Dr. Fleischer is an ardent suffragette and predicts she will live to see women sitting in the douma.

Cures For Insomnia.

Sufferers from insomnia, says one who has had some experience with this trouble, should avoid sweet desserts at night as well as tea, coffee and greasy foods. Whether it is better to retire with an empty or partly full stomach can be determined only by experiment in each individual case. One of the best ways, says the same authority, to draw the blood from the brain before retiring is to take a moderately swift walk, and if there is still difficulty in getting to sleep a tepid bath and a gentle rub will bring the blood from the brain to the surface of the body. If the cause of sleeplessness is susceptibility to sound, stuffing ears with medicated cotton will be useful.

A Japanese Beauty.

The most beautiful woman in Japan is Princess Nashimoto, whose husband is first cousin to the mikado. She is twenty-seven years old, petite, fascinating and has all the vivacity of a well bred Frenchwoman. She attracted admiration in Paris when she and her husband recently visited the capital.

PETS OF GREAT LADIES.

Some Curious Affectations of London's Social Favorites.

Some pretty rough things have been said about the affectations of English aristocracy from time to time, but the recent accounts of their household pets are about as incomprehensible as any of their other foibles. The greyhound and the long, silky eared spaniel are things of the past. The Duchess of Marlborough is said to have a special fondness for serpents. She spends days also in the park at Blenheim with the gazelles, which in her society seem to forget their traditional shyness. Her other pets are grotesque looking pelicans, which may be seen about the shores of the ponds. Lady Warwick, the titled Socialist leader, especially loves white animals, and in her grounds at Warwick are white peacocks, all kinds of white birds, even a white elephant. Her special treasure is a white parrot which is said to be more than a century old.

Lady Cadogan has a famous collection of snakes. She is able to drape some of them about her in such a way that they serve as jewelry. Among her pets are two trained lizards. Lady Cottenham nurses with great care her dormice, and Lady Churchill is said to be happiest when her crocodile is near her. Lady Hope's pet is an ape from Senegal, while Mrs. Rose Hubbard one of the most popular of the women in Mrs. Keppel's set, raises geese. Miss Rose Boughton, one of the most liked of the unmarried girls in London society, insists upon taking to all the houses that will allow her a hyena that she brought from Constantinople and has tamed.

A NEW MATTRESS.

Foreign Affair That May Be Worthy of a Trial.

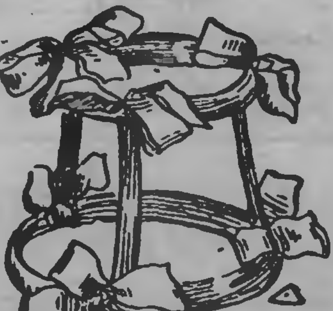
It has often been said that thousands of people live and die without ever having known the luxury of sleeping upon a really comfortable bed, for, strange as it may seem, the proper care of beds and bedding is one of the pet economies of the English housewife, writes a London correspondent. Her French sisters set her a better example, for at this time of the year every good housewife in France is employed in the overlooking and the thorough cleansing and remaking of her household mattresses, which, according to the latest hygienic theories, are veritable traps for collecting dust and dirt.

An improvement upon this state of affairs has lately been introduced in the form of a new sanitary mattress that does away with the need of this yearly overhauling. Its inventor has hit upon the plan of arranging some thousand coppered steel springs incased in ingenious woven calico pockets that are kept in place by rigid fastenings, so that each works independently without coming in contact with the other, the whole being incased in horsehair.

These new sanitary mattresses not only insure perfect rest, but they absolutely prevent the entry of dust or other objectionable matter. At the same time the new mattress is perfectly ventilated, so that it is always kept pure and fresh, and it should be a boon to hundreds of housewives.

Hat Supporter.

The illustration shows a hat supporter. You may wonder what this curious edifice is intended for, but when you are let into the secret you will at once realize its worth. It is used in a hatbox to hold up the present style of enormous chapeau, with its profuse underbrim trimming and the long, drooping ostrich plumes. Thus it prevents these costly trimmings from being crushed when not in use. The hat rest is made out of two embroidery hoops, one a half inch smaller than the other. These are connected by three standards, made of cardboard, corset steels, whalebone or thin strips of wood. Standards and rings are closely bound with ribbon, and the joints, where the hoops are sewed to the standards, are hidden beneath smart little bows of the ribbon. The "rest" is now a thing of beauty and is ready to be a joy, if not forever at least for as long as the present fashion in hats lingers.



HAT SUPPORTER.

The Professional Woman.

Mrs. Lydia Kingsmill said at the recent quinquennial congress of the International Council of Women: "The professional woman—there are 800,000 of her in the United States. Of all self supporting women she is the ablest and most successful. She has declined to be a hewer of wood and a drawer of water and has dared to earn her living by her brain. The professional woman has been making experiments that will eventually be of great value to all women. She has been a sort of occupation explorer, finding out what lines of thought and work are most suitable and congenial. Her motto has been, 'When in doubt try it,' and even her failures have thus been educational."

War Against Church.

HERE'S A MESSAGE TO ALL WOMEN

Madame Letourneau Tells Them to Use Dodd's Kidney Pills

Read Why She Gave This Advice and How She Was Relieved of Her Sufferings

St. Paul du Buton, Montmagny Co., Que., Nov. 19.—(Special).—It is a message of hope that Madame F. X. Letourneau, of this place, sends to the suffering women of Canada.

"After my last child was born," she states, "I suffered with Kidney Disease which developed into Rheumatism, Sciatica and Backache. I was fearfully nervous. My limbs were heavy and I had a dragging sensation across the loins and pains in the back of my head and through the eyes. I was a perfect wreck.

"Chancing to read that my symptoms were those of Kidney Disease I began using Dodd's Kidney Pills and began to improve at once. Six boxes worked a complete cure."

Diseased Kidneys are the cause of nine-tenths of the ills that make life a burden to so many women in Canada. Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure diseased Kidneys.

OBSTINATE FRECKLES.

Apply These Lotions and "the Beauty Spots" Will Disappear.

Take some English mustard with enough lemon juice to form a paste as for a poultice. Apply this to the face four nights in succession. Wash off in the morning. The freckles will generally disappear and likewise the redness.

Another remedy is to take rainwater and add as much pulverized alum as the water will dissolve. Dab this on the freckles several times a day.

Still another method is to use half a teacupful of rainwater and two teaspoonfuls of powdered borax. Allow the borax to dissolve and with this wash the effected parts twice a day. This is never failing remedy for removing freckles for people possessing certain textures of skin.

With others the following remedy is effective: Two teaspoonfuls of lemon juice, one of powdered borax and one of sugar. Mix and allow to stand a day or two. Then apply two or three times a day.

The following remedy is vouched for by medical authority and is very simple: Break the stem of a dandelion. The juice which exudes should be wiped over the face twice daily, morning and evening preferably. Of course the larger the stem the more juice can be extracted, which, by the way, should be milky in color.

As most of the remedies for the cure of freckles contain astringent properties, which are more or less drying to the skin, it will need to be protected from becoming too harsh and dry while using the remedies. A good cold cream of equal parts of rosewater and glycerin with a few drops of carbolic acid may be applied between the application for freckles. Should the skin be naturally moist or oily none of the above remedies if used judiciously will be found too drying. A soothing cream to use for this purpose is made of one ounce of benzoinated oxide of zinc ointment and two drams of spirits of camphor.

Where the treatment for obstinate freckles has been tried there is nothing more soothing than the cream which is skimmed from milk. This is a natural substitute for a cold cream and is very cooling.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

The girl who perspires will find that she will aid matters immensely if she will carry a tiny vial of rosewater and alcohol.

Cold water dashed on the face and chest in the morning gives the same tonic effect of a cold plunge in the morning without the shock.

A simple remedy for burns is made by adding to a cupful of olive oil a teaspoonful of carbolic acid. Apply bandage soaked in the mixture.

Relaxation is the secret of taking the mental, moral and physical kinks out of one's system in the warm weather. It will take all the unsightly lines from your face and prevent new ones from forming.

All too frequently is a bottle of poison mistaken for something not deadly. One way to help avoid this danger is to put a brass headed tack in the cork of every bottle containing poison. Impress this fact on the family. One can know immediately whether the bottle holds poison simply by the sense of touch. This knowledge is especially valuable when you are looking for a bottle at night.

If any one of the family is so unfortunate as to sprain his or her ankle this summer you will find that you can make the doctor's part easier by soaking the afflicted member at once in hot water. This relieves the congestion, and by the time the doctor arrives with the bandages the sprain will be ready for treatment. It is better not to wait a moment to find out how serious the injury is, for hot water can do no harm, and the patient's suffering will be greatly lessened by prompt action.

For any inflammation of the eye which comes on suddenly cold water soothes the pain. After persistent trouble very hot water will relieve the pain and reduce the swelling. The eye cup is the most convenient way of bathing the eye, for the eyeball is washed directly. The mouth of the eye cup is oval, which fits around the eye at the margin of the orbit. The eye may be opened into the lotion. A weak solution of boracic acid, 3 per cent, may be safely used. The acid must be fresh and clear, however. Tears are the natural method of cleansing this organ.

The BLACK BAG

By Louis Joseph Vance

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

As for Kirkwood, he had covered the fat adventurer before he knew it. Stryker, who had been standing immediately in the rear of Calendar, immediately cowered and cringed to find himself in the line of fire.

Of the three conscious men in the brigantine's cabin Calendar was probably the least confused or excited. Stryker was palpably unmanned. Kirkwood was tingling with a sense of mastery, but collected and rapidly revolving the combinations for the reversed conditions which had been brought about by Mulready's drunken folly. His elation was apparent in his shining boyish eyes as well as in the bright color that glowed in his cheeks. When he decided to speak, it was with rapid enunciation, but clearly and concisely.

"Calendar," he began, "if a single shot is fired about this vessel the river police will be buzzing round your ears in a brace of shakes."

The fat adventurer nodded assent, his eyes contracting.

"Very well," continued Kirkwood brusquely. "You must know that I have personally nothing to fear from the police. If arrested I wouldn't be detained a day. On the other hand, you— Hand me that pistol, Calendar, butt first, please. Look sharp, my man! If you don't"—

He left the ellipsis to be filled in by the corpulent blackguard's intelligence. The latter, gray eyes still intent on the younger man's face, wavered, plainly impressed, but still wondering.

"Quick! I'm not patient tonight."

No longer was Calendar of two minds. In the face of Kirkwood's attitude there was but one course to be followed—that of obedience. Calendar surrendered an untenable position as gracefully as could be wished.

"I guess you know what you mean by this," he said, tendering the weapon as per instructions. "I'm doggoned if I do. You'll allow a certain latitude in consideration of my relief. I can't say we were anticipating this—ah—heaven sent visitation."

Accepting the revolver with his left hand and settling his fore finger on the trigger, Kirkwood beamed with pure enjoyment. He found the deference of the older man, tempered though it was by his indomitable swagger, refreshing in the extreme.

"A little appreciation isn't exactly out of place, come to think of it," he commented, adding, with an eye for the captain, "Stryker, you bold, bad butterfly, have you got a gun concealed about your unclean person?"

The captain shook visibly with contrition. "No, Mr. Kirkwood," he managed to reply in a voice singularly lacking in his wonted bluster.

"Say 'sir!'" suggested Kirkwood.

"No, Mr. Kirkwood, sir," amended Stryker eagerly.

"Now, come round here and let's have a look at you. Please stay where you are, Calendar. Why, captain, you are shivering from head to foot! Not ill are you, you wag? Step over to the table there, Stryker, and turn out your pockets; turn 'em inside out and let's see what you carry in the way of offensive artillery. And, Stryker, don't be rash; don't do anything you'd be sorry for afterward."

"No fear of that," mumbled the captain, meekly shambling toward the table and, in his anxiety to give no cause for unpleasantness, beginning to empty his pockets on the way.

"Don't forget the 'sir,' Stryker. And, Stryker, if you happen to think of anything in the line of one of your merry quips or jests, don't strain yourself holding in. Get it right off your chest and you'll feel better."

Kirkwood chuckled, in high conceit with himself, watching Calendar out of the corner of his eye, but with his attention centered on the infinitely diverting spectacle afforded by Stryker, whose predaceous hands were trembling violently as one by one they brought to light the articles of which he had despoiled his erstwhile victim.

"Come, come, Stryker! Surely you can think of something witty. Surely you haven't exhausted the possibilities of that almanac joke! Couldn't you ring another variation on the lunatic wheeze? Don't hesitate out of consideration for me, captain. I'm joke proof. Perhaps you've noticed."

Stryker turned upon him an expression at once ludicrous, piteous and hateful. "That's all, sir," he snarled, displaying his empty palms in token of his absolute tractability.

"Good enough. Now right about face—quick! Your back's prettier than your face, and, besides, I want to know whether your hip pockets are empty. I've heard it's the habit of you gentry to pack guns in your clothes. None? That's all right, then. Now roost on the transom over there in the corner, Stryker, and don't move. Don't let me hear a word from you. Understand?"

Submissively the captain retired to the indicated spot. Kirkwood turned to Calendar, of whose attitude, however, he had not been for an instant unmindful.

"Won't you sit down, Mr. Calendar?" he suggested pleasantly. "Forgive me for keeping you waiting."

For his own part, as the adventurer dropped passively into his chair Kirkwood stepped over Mulready and advanced to the middle of the cabin, at the same time thrusting Calendar's revolver into his own coat pocket. The other, Mulready's, he nursed significantly with both hands, while he stood temporarily quiet, surveying the fleshy face of the prime factor in the intrigue.

A quaint, grim smile played about the American's lips, a smile a little contemptuous, more than a little inscrutable. In its light Calendar grew restive and lost something of his assurance. His feet shifted uneasily beneath the table, and his dark eyes wavered, evading Kirkwood's. At length he seemed to find the suspense unendurable.

"Well," he demanded testily, "what d'you want of me?"

"I was just wondering at you, Calendar. In the last few days you've given me enough cause to wonder, as you'll admit."

The adventurer plucked up spirit, deluded by Kirkwood's pacific tone. "I wonder at you, Mr. Kirkwood," he retorted. "It was good of you to save my life, and"—

"I'm not so sure of that! Perhaps it had been more humane"—

Calendar owned the touch with a wry grimace. "But I'm hanged if I understand this high handed attitude of yours!" he concluded heatedly.

"Don't you?" Kirkwood's humor became less apparent, the smile sobering. "You will," he told the man, adding abruptly, "Calendar, where's your daughter?"

The restless eyes sought the companionway.

"Dorothy," the man lied spontaneously, without a tremor, "is with friends in England. Why? Did you want to see her?"

"I rather expected to."

"Well, I thought it best to leave her home, after all."

"I'm glad to hear she's in safe hands," commented Kirkwood.

The adventurer's glance analysed his face. "Ah," he said slowly, "I see. You followed me on Dorothy's account, Mr. Kirkwood?"

"Partly—partly on my own. Let me put it to you fairly. When you forced yourself upon me, back there in London, you offered me some sort of employment. When I rejected it you used me to your advantage for the furtherance of your purposes, which I confess I don't understand, and made me miss my steamer. Naturally when I found myself penniless and friendless in a strange country I thought again of your offer and tried to find you to accept it."

"Despite the fact that you're an honest man, Kirkwood?" The fat lips twitched with premature enjoyment.

"I'm a desperate man tonight, whatever I may have been yesterday." The young man's tone was both earnest and convincing. "I think I've shown that by my pertinacity in hunting you down."

"Well—yes." Calendar's thick fingers caressed his lips, trying to hide the dawning smile.

"Is that offer still open?"

His nonchalance completely restored by the frankness of the proposition, Calendar laughed openly and with a trace of irony. The episode seemed to be turning out better than he had anticipated. Gently his mottled fat fingers played about his mouth and chins as he looked Kirkwood up and down.

"I'm sorry," he replied, "that it isn't—now. You're too late, Kirkwood. I've made other arrangements."

"Too bad." Kirkwood's eyes narrowed. "You force me to harsher measures, Calendar."

Genuinely diverted, the adventurer laughed a second time, tipping back in his chair, his huge frame shaking with ponderous enjoyment. "Don't do anything you'd be sorry for," he parroted, sarcastical, the young man's recent admonition to the captain.

"No fear, Calendar. I'm just going to use my advantage, which you wouldn't dispute"—the pistol described an eloquent circle, gleaming in the lamplight—"to levy on you a little legitimate blackmail. Don't be alarmed. I shan't hit you any harder than I have to."

"What?" stammered Calendar, astonished. "What are you driving at?"

"Recompense for my time and trouble. You've cost me a pretty penny, first and last, with your nasty little conspiracy. Whatever it's all about. Now, needing the money, I purpose getting some of it back. I shan't precisely rob you, but this is a holdup, all right. Stryker," reproachfully, "I don't see my pearl pin."

"I got it 'ere,' responded the sailor hastily, fumbling with his tie.

"Give it me, then." Kirkwood held out his hand and received the trinket. Then, moving over to the table, the young man, while abating nothing of his watchfulness, sorted out his belongings from the mass of odds and ends Stryker had disgorged. The tale of them was complete. The captain had obeyed him faithfully. Kirkwood looked up, pleased.

"Now, see here, Calendar, this collection of truck that I was robbed of by this resurrected Joe Miller here cost me upward of $150. I'm going to sell it to you at a bargain—say $50, 250 francs."

"The deuce you are!" Calendar's eyes opened wide, partly in admiration. "D'you realise that this is next door to highway robbery, my young friend?"

"High seas piracy, if you prefer," assented Kirkwood with entire equanimity. "I'm going to have the money, and you're going to give it up. The transaction by any name would smell no sweeter, Calendar. Come—fork over!"

"And if I refuse?"

"I wouldn't refuse if I were you."

"Why not?"

"The consequences would be too painful."

"You mean you'd puncture me with that gun?"

"Not unless you attack or attempt to follow me. I mean to say that the Belgian police are notoriously a most efficient body and that I'll make it my duty and pleasure to introduce 'em to you if you refuse. But you won't." Kirkwood added soothingly, "will you, Calendar?"

"No." The adventurer had become suddenly thoughtful. "No, I won't. Glad to oblige you."

He tilted his chair still farther back, straightening out his elephantine legs, inserted one fat hand into his trousers pocket and with some difficulty extracted a combined bill fold and coin purse, at once heavy with gold and bulky with notes. Moistening thumb and forefinger, "How'll you have it?" he inquired, with a lift of his cunning eyes, and, when Kirkwood had advised him, slowly counted out four fifty-franc notes, placed them near the edge of the table and weighted them with five ten-franc pieces. And "That all?" he asked, replacing the pocketbook.

"That will be about all. I leave you presently to your unholy devices, you and that gay dog over there." The captain squirmed, reddening. "Just by way of precaution, however, I'll ask you to wait in here till I'm off." Kirkwood stepped backward to the door of the captain's room, opened it and removed the key from the inside. "Please take Mulready in with you," he continued. "By the time you get out I'll be clear of Antwerp. Please don't think of refusing me. I really mean it."

The latter clause came sharply as Calendar seemed to hesitate, his weary, wary eyes glimmering with doubt. Kirkwood, watching him as a cat her prey, intercepted a lightning swift sidelong glance that shifted from his face to the port lockers, forward. But the fat adventurer was evidently to a considerable degree deluded by the very childlike simplicity of Kirkwood's attitude. If the possibility that his altercation with Mulready had been overheard crossed his mind, Calendar had little choice other than to accept the chance. Either way he moved the risk was great. If he refused to be locked in the captain's room, there was the danger of the police, to which Kirkwood had convincingly drawn attention. If he accepted the temporary imprisonment, he took a risk with the gladstone bag. On the other hand, he had estimated Kirkwood's honesty as thoroughgoing from their first interview. He had appraised him as a gentleman and a man of honor. And he did not believe the young man knew, after all. Perplexed, at length he chose the smoother way and, with an indulgent lifting of eyebrows and fat shoulders, rose and waddled over to Mulready.

"Oh, all right," he conceded, with deep toleration in his tone for the idiosyncrasies of youth; "it's all the same to me, beau." He laughed a nervous laugh. "Come along and lend us a hand, Stryker."

The latter glanced timidly at Kirkwood, his eyes pleading for leave to move, which Kirkwood accorded with an imperative nod and a fine flourish of the revolver. Promptly the captain sprang to Calendar's assistance, and, between the two of them, the one taking Mulready's head, the other his feet, they lugged him quickly into the stuffy little stateroom. Kirkwood, watching and following to the threshold, inserted the key.

"One word more," he counseled, a hand on the knob. "Don't forget I've warned you what'll happen if you try to break even with me."

"Never fear, little one!" Calendar's laugh was nervously cheerful. "The Lord knows you're welcome."

"Thank you most to death," responded Kirkwood politely. "Goodby and goodby to you, Stryker. Glad to have humored your desire to meet me soon again."

CHAPTER XXII.

KIRKWOOD, turning the key in the lock, withdrew it and dropped it on the cabin table. At the same time he swept into his pocket the money he had extorted of Calendar. Then he paused an instant, listening. From the captain's room came a sound of murmurs and scuffling. He crossed to the port locker forward.

He had its lid up in a twinkling and in another had lifted out the well remembered black gladstone bag.

This seems to have been his first compound larceny.

As if stimulated by some such reflection, he sprang for the companionway, dropping the lid of the locker with a bang which must have been excruciatingly edifying to the men in the captain's room. Whatever their emotions, the bang was mocked by a mighty kick, shaking the door, which, Kirkwood reflected, opened outward, was held only by the frailest kind of a lock and would not hold long.

Spurred onward by a storm of curses, Stryker's voice chanting infuriated cacophony with Calendar's, Kirkwood leaped up the companionway even as the second tremendous kick threatened to shatter the panels. Heart in mouth, a chill shiver of guilt running up and down his spine, he gained the deck, cast loose the painter, drew in his rowboat and dropped over the side, then, the gladstone bag nestling between his feet, sat down and bent to the oars.

And doubts assailed him, pressing close upon the ebb of his excitement—doubts and fears innumerable.

There was no longer a distinction to be drawn between himself and Calendar; no more could he esteem himself a better and more honest man than that accomplished swindler. He was not advised as to the Belgian code, but English law, he understood, made no allowance for the good intent of those caught in possession of stolen property. Though he was acting with the most honorable motives in the world, the law, if he came within its cognizance, would undoubtedly place him on Calendar's plane and judge him by the same standard. To all intents and purposes he was a thief, and thief he would remain until the gladstone bag with its contents should be restored to its rightful owner.

Voluntarily, then, he had stepped from the ranks of the hunters to those of the hunted. He now feared police interference as abjectly as did Calendar and his set of rogues, and Kirkwood felt wholly warranted in assuming that the adventurer, with his keen intelligence, would not handicap himself by ignoring this point. Indeed, if he were to be judged by what Kirkwood had inferred of his character, Calendar would let nothing whatever hinder him, neither fear of bodily hurt nor danger of apprehension at the hands of the police, from making a determined and savage play to regain possession of his booty.

Well! (Kirkwood set his mouth savagely.) Calendar should have a run for his money!

Fifteen Years of Agony

"Fruit-a-tives" Promptly Cured Him After Doctors Had Failed To Give Relief.

CHARLES BARRETT, Esq.

Harbor au Bouche,
Antigonish Co., N.S., March 24, 1909.

"I wish to express my sincere appreciation of the great benefit I received from taking "Fruit-a-tives." I suffered from Biliousness and Dyspepsia for fifteen years and I consulted physicians and took many kinds of ordinary medicine, but got no relief. I was in miserable health all the time and nothing did me any good. I read the testimonial of Archibald McKechnie, of Ottawa, and I decided to try "Fruit-a-tives." I have taken a number of boxes of "Fruit-a-tives," but before I had taken one box I felt better and now am entirely well.

"I am thankful to be well after fifteen years suffering, and I am willing to have this statement published for the sake of other sufferers, and to them I strongly recommend "Fruit-a-tives."

Young Folks

A GRATEFUL GOOSE.

An Intelligent Bird Which Remembered a Dog's Kindness.

A goose once became strongly attached to a house dog; but, good friends as they were, the bird never went into the dog's kennel except in rainy weather. Whenever the dog barked the goose would cackle, and if it thought the dog was annoyed at any person it would try to bite him. This bird would not go to roost at night with the other birds unless driven by main force, and when in the morning they were turned into the fields it would sit at the yard gate in sight of its friend. When the dog ran into the village the goose ran alongside, keeping up with him by the assistance of its wings.

There was a reason for the love of the goose for the dog. About two years before the dog had saved the bird from death by a fox, and, goose as the goose was, it was wise enough to appreciate such a service. Once when the dog was ill the goose never quitted him night or day, not even to feed, and would have starved to death had not a pan of corn been set before it. After this friendship continued about two years the dog died, and a new dog, looking much the same, was put into the kennel. The goose was unhappily deceived, and, going too near the kennel, was seized by the new owner and choked to death.—Philadelphia Ledger.

An Old Name.

"Why do you call your donkey Fihad?" asked Uncle Jake when he first heard the name.

"Why," cried Nelson in wonder, "didn't you ever hear of the song called 'Fihad a donkey that wouldn't go?' And my donkey won't go."

WHEN WOMEN VOTE.

Not a Self Respecting Man Will Stay Away From Polls.

I have a letter from a man, says Dorothy Dix, who is really intelligent enough to know better, who says:

"If women had votes there is not a self respecting man who would go to the polls. He will let the country go to perdition in the hands of that abnormal and unnatural creature, the masculine woman, and things will the sooner right themselves by a political, social and economic cataclysm that will drive the brazen females back to their proper places—the kitchen and the nursery."

Let us hasten to assure this modern Jeremiah that his gloomy prophecies are without foundation. The time will come when women will vote, and yet not a self respecting man will stay away from the polls because he is liable to meet there his mother, his sisters, his female cousins and his aunts.

"The proof of the pudding is in the eating," says the old adage, and we base our belief on this happy outcome of woman's suffrage on the fact that in the countries where women do vote they have not kept a single man, self respecting or otherwise, from exercising his privilege as a free man to express his opinion by means of a ballot. In the four western states where women vote and where men are quick on the trigger it certainly wouldn't be safe to tell any gentleman that he was a poor, emasculated squaw man because he went to the polls at which women also voted. In New Zealand, Australia, the Isle of Man, Finland and Norway women have full suffrage, and if the self respecting men of these countries are conspicuous by reason of their absence from the polls no rumor of it has reached the outer world.

Indeed, the best argument that can be advanced for giving women the right to vote is that wherever female suffrage has been tried it has worked out successfully, and there has never been a suggestion of depriving women of their rights and going back to the old order of a male oligarchy.

TELEPHONE DON'TS.

Temper Justice With Mercy In Your Treatment of Operators.

Do not allow yourself to get into the habit of long conversations over the telephone. People who do this lose all perception of the times when they may be annoying or disturbing others.

Particularly in the case of party wires is there call for consideration. Some one else may urgently desire to use this same telephone over which you are gossiping.

Do not use the telephone of the woman upon whom you are calling unless it is absolutely necessary. Thoughtless women often make a convenience of their friends in this respect. Your hostess may not wish to take you into the part of the house in which the telephone is situated, or when frequently done it may prove a considerable expense to her.

Do not call up men in business hours if you can possibly help it.

If it is necessary to do so, be as brief as possible.

Do not tell things which you do not wish known over the telephone. Conversations are often audible to all of the persons in the room with the person to whom you are talking.

If it is a business conversation it is well to think what you are going to say beforehand. Orders or requests are frequently misunderstood through the hesitation and changeableness of the person giving them.

Finally, temper justice with mercy in your treatment of the young woman operators who answer your calls. Their business is a tedious and wearing one, and it is almost impossible to be always eagerly attentive.

Rare Paintings on Stable Wall.

Emy Eichhorn, grandniece of Jean Louis Agassiz, famous American naturalist, has discovered paintings of high artistic merit on the walls of a stable in the village of Merna, in the Tyrol. Miss Eichhorn lives with her mother, who is a writer. The stable was once used as a chapel, but that fact was forgotten, and the paintings were covered with the dust and dirt of decades. Miss Eichhorn had the walls cleaned, and the pictures stood out clearly. They are in panels, and experts from Berlin are to examine them. An old villager remembered having seen the pictures when he was a boy, but he said "nobody thought they had any value." This attitude parallels that of country folk in the north of Ireland who whitewashed out of existence one of the most interesting relics of Dean Swift. He scribbled stray thoughts on the walls of a substantially built shanty of a single room. The place was preserved many years until a farmer went in one day with his bucket of whitewash and obliterated every word written by the cynical Swift. Miss Eichhorn is more fortunate in her pictures having escaped a coat of whitewash.

Wastebasket For the Kitchen.

One often reads in the woman's column, which is bristling with advice, that there should be a wastebasket in every room in the house, and if the tractable housekeeper does as she is bid it is probable that she puts one in every room in the house, with the exception of the room that needs one the most, the kitchen. Perhaps it never occurred to you to have one in the kitchen. In the days of the coal range it wasn't really needed there, but with a gas or gasoline stove it is a great help in keeping the kitchen in order. Try one under the kitchen table and see how many pieces of wrapping paper and string it will catch in the course of the day.

At Towser's Point

When Jessie Lost Her Voice and Suddenly Recovered It

By DONALD ALLEN

Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

Towser's Point was owned by Farmer Towser, and Farmer Towser and his good wife were uncle and aunt to Miss Jessie Curnot, whose father was a lawyer in the city and who had come to the point to spend the summer and be coddled up like a child of ten.

"My stars, but how handsome she is!" exclaimed Aunt Rebecca.

"She's certainly as chipper as the chipperest, and if there were forty fellers around here they'd all be after her," added Uncle Joe.

Opposite Towser's Point were Bayside and Penny Cove and Lobster Beach. At all these resorts there were numerous camping parties. Uncle Joe had a skiff, and Miss Jessie took to boating and fishing at once. She had not been out more than three times when she came home one day and said:

"Auntv, something's got to be done."

"Well, tell Uncle Joe, and he'll sure do it."

"But I don't want a new fish line or anything of that kind. There's a camp of men across the bay, and this morning two of them came out in a boat and fished right where I was fishing. I heard them talking about me to themselves, but I never looked up. I just know they will make some excuse to speak to me."

"Men are dreadful creatures—all but Uncle Joe!" sighed Aunt Rebecca.

"But what shall I do? I want to row and fish."

"If it was me, I'd keep my eyes on my fish line and my mouth shut. That'll discourage them. If it don't I'll have Uncle Joe row out there and tell them that speaking to a good looking girl unless she wants to be spoken to is the same as assault and battery."

"Oh, aunt, but you've given me an idea—such an idea! Why, it will be the funniest thing in the world! It will be such a joke on them. You and Uncle Joe must help me."

"We certainly will, child."

"Then I'm going to play deaf and dumb. If they speak to me I'll make motions that I can't talk. Some of them may come over here for vegetables some day, and you mustn't let on. Say, it will be immense! I'll be deaf and dumb this very afternoon!"

"Well, it won't do no great harm," was Uncle Joe's reply when he came in to dinner. "Lot's of women ought to be more deaf and dumb than they are. Too much hearing, too much talking!"

"And lots of men folks ought to be made to sew on their own patches and do their own darning," was the retort of the wife, and then the subject was closed.

That afternoon as Miss Jessie rowed out to the oyster beds and dropped her line a boat with a single occupant came stealing across the bay. He was a young man, and he seemed to find it hard work to locate himself to woo the fish. He threw out his line here and there, but soon sought another place and at length brought up just where he had been aiming for all the time, within thirty feet of the girl's skiff. She raised her eyes to him, and he pleasantly inquired:

"Having any luck here, may I ask?"

With her free hand she made motions to signify that she could neither hear nor speak and turned away. She heard him utter a low whistle of surprise and then mutter to himself:

"Hanged if that isn't a pity in the case of such a good looking girl! I want to talk with her now worse than ever."

Both parties caught a few fish and now and then glanced toward each other, but after a time the young man found it stupid work and lifted his anchor. Miss Jessie looked up at the splash of his oars, and he lifted his cap. She went home and gleefully related her experience.

"I guess you've scared them off for good, but I've knowed men to fall in love with deaf, dumb and blind girls. It's just as they take a notion," said Aunt Rebecca.

Soon after 8 o'clock next morning and while Miss Jessie was out feeding the calf there was a caller at the house. It was the young man of the boat, and he wanted vegetables. He also wanted to know in a confidential way if the poor girl was born thus. His questions were partly answered and partly evaded, and he went away saying that he might return the next morning, as he was very fond of cucumbers and tomatoes.

"What does he look like when you are close to him?" queried the girl of her aunt.

"He's a good looking fellow, and he talks as good language as I do. Jessie, I'm afraid you've got into a scrape."

"Why, how?"

"He's coming tomorrow morning, and he's just going to keep a-coming. I could see it in his eyes. How are you going to get over being deaf and dumb?"

"I won't get over it. If he comes I won't be around. I won't go out in the boat today, and that'll discourage him."

But the girl was mistaken. The unknown not only returned in the morning, but while Aunt Rebecca was pulling the tomatoes and picking the cucumbers he walked straight up to the "unfortunate" and wrote on a pad he had brought for the purpose:

"Fishing was good yesterday. I hoped you would be out."

"I don't care so much about fishing," she wrote.

"Wouldn't you like a sail on the bay?"

She shook her head.

"I see no hammock here. I have a spare one and will be glad to put it up for you."

Another shake, but she signed her thanks at the same time.

"I said he'd come, and he did come," observed Aunt Rebecca after the young man had departed. "Here's the card he left. He lives in town and paints pictures. What's the name—Clarence Denton?"

"Oh, he won't come again! I'm going fishing today, and if I see him coming I'll row away. Perhaps I shall give him a snub."

The snub was administered two hours later. Miss Jessie had reached her fishing ground when the artist was sighted bearing down upon her. She lifted her anchor and rowed straight away, and the distance was too far for him to see the smile on her face or for her to see the look of chagrin on his.

As the day turned out to be warm there was no boating in the afternoon, and neither did Mr. Denton show up for more vegetables in the morning. Miss Jessie pretended to be well pleased, but down in her heart she was piqued.

As a matter of fact, the girl had become indignant by the time she had taken up the oars, and the feeling was added to after she had fished for an hour without a bite or a sight of the other boat. Then came an interruption. She hooked what she believed was a whale, and in her excitement she rose up and tumbled into the water with a great splash. The boat did not go over, and she soon had her hands on it. But to draw herself up was another matter. She could not do it. She could only hang on and think of sharks.

She had been clinging for half an hour when a boat suddenly appeared in sight, and at the top of her voice she called out to be saved. She called once, twice, thrice, and then the boat was beside her, and Mr. Clarence Denton was lifting her in by the shoulders. He said no word until she was in and then asked:

"Does it always have this effect on deaf and dumb people?"

"I can't say as to others, but I have surely found my voice," was the saucy reply.

"Well, that's worth the wetting. I saw you when you went over, but was waiting for you to call. As you may lose your voice again if not taken care of, I will accompany you home."

After Mr. Denton had been an almost daily caller at Towser's for three weeks and a pretty constant guest at the dinner table Aunt Rebecca beckoned Miss Jessie out behind the currant bushes one evening and said:

"If you haven't lost your voice again you'd better tell him that I'm willing. Uncle Joe's willing and that your father is one of the willingest men in the world. Then you'd better be willing, too, for it's high time a big girl like you was stepping off."

The King's Premature Death.

The leading tragedian of a small company playing in an unimportant English village felt himself hard up one evening for a man to walk on in the first act of a historical bloodcurdler and say to him, "My lord, the king is ill," and to appear in the last act with the information, "My lord, the king is dead." So the leading tragedian took an active and fairly passable stage hand on one side and, engaging him for an extra shilling or two, instructed him carefully upon the artistic responsibilities of his new duties. "Now, mind you," he said, "the first time you come on you say, 'My lord, the king is ill,' and the second time you come on you say, 'My lord, the king is dead.'" "That's all right, guv'nor!" exclaimed the unshaven recruit, growing visibly larger in the chest with the magnitude of his promotion. And then "the night" came, and in the first act on swaggered the dusty debutant, with the dread line, uttered hurriedly, but in a prodigious voice, "My lord, the king is dead!" "Oh, is he?" snarled the leading tragedian, turning upon the much befeathered messenger a look of eternal hatred. "Then he has spoiled the whole of my blooming part!"

People We Often Meet.

"I hate the person who sends me important information on a postcard," remarked a woman at dinner the other evening. "In fact, I think postcards in general an abominable institution."

"A still more reprehensible habit," put in a second speaker, "is that of the man or woman who dictates letters of a private nature to a secretary."

All of us then enumerated our pet aversions. One of them was the individual who is always in a hurry, who while one talks to him seems on the tiptoe of flight and who never decides to do anything without consulting an engagement book.

Cousins to this one are the people who when they pay a call rush away after a fixed time, no matter how interesting the conversation, and never remain quite to the end of an entertainment. Yet they are usually people of leisure, hurrying from habit and not because they have anything in particular to do.

All these folk in some way sin against good manners and hurt the amour propre of their friends, being without the blessed gift of tact which crowns its happy owner with social popularity.—London Black and White.

Close to the Burning Crater.

The Cameron Mountain, following an earthquake in West Africa, was in eruption. I managed to get within 200 yards of the big crater, the diameter of the top of which I should put at 60 yards. I got so close that ashes fell on my clothes, and several stones came perilously near me. The detonations were terrific, like the roar of many cannons; great volumes of smoke, blue and black as ink, towered into the sky, and were lit up by lurid flame; while enormous stones and fragments were hurled into the air until they became mere specks in the sky. The small crater, not more than 30 yards to the east of the big one, was only just in the process of formation. It was by far the most terrible, for there was no smoke—nothing but sheets of flame. Showers of stones, all red with heat, were thrown out rapidly, to be followed by appalling roars.

I managed to creep round to the northeastern end of the big crater, when I saw the stream of lava which had made its way down a wide valley, running in a northeasterly by north direction. The depth of the lava-bed I should put at three feet four inches, and the width at 70 yards. The lava was still smoking. It must have started on the night of the 28th of April last year, when the whole of the sky to the northeast was lit up, and this went on for the next two nights. — Lieut. THE HURDY GURDY MAN.

An Enjoyable Game With Which to Entertain Young Folks.

As a fun producer the game of the hurdy gurdy man ranks high and is always a great success at afternoon parties. To play it, seat the players in a circle and let one of them be chosen as hurdy gurdy man. Then ask each of the others what musical instrument he will be, and after they have chosen the hurdy gurdy man begins to sing:

I'm a hurdy gurdy man.
I'm a hurdy gurdy man.
We must do the best we can
To please the hurdy gurdy man.

As he sings he accompanies himself on an imaginary piano, and the others sing with him and accompany themselves on the instruments they have chosen. For instance, the boy who has chosen to be the drum makes the motions of drumming, and the boy who has chosen to be a hand organ grinds an imaginary hand organ, and so on.

After a few moments the hurdy gurdy man stops playing the piano and begins playing some other instrument. If he plays the drum the drummer must instantly leave off playing the drum and begin playing the piano, the instrument the hurdy gurdy man has just stopped playing. In a moment the hurdy gurdy man changes to the fife and the fife player immediately takes up the drum, and so it goes on, the hurdy gurdy man changing ever faster and faster, till finally he takes up the piano again, whereupon all the players go back to their original instruments and the game begins all over again.

How to Roast a Small Pig.

Lay a nicely-dressed pig in a tub of cold water all night. In the morning change the water and let it remain until it is time to roast it. Then wipe it dry, rub the inside well with sage, cayenne and salt mixed and stuff it with a dressing made of breadcrumbs, salt pork chopped fine, pepper, salt, sweet marjoram and an egg. It should be roasted on a spit before the fire; but, lacking conveniences for this mode, the pig must be placed (the feet turned under) on a rack in the dripping pan with some water in which are some sprigs of sage and marjoram tied in muslin. Keep it well floured until half done; then take it out, wipe off the flour, return it to the oven and baste well with butter, repeating this several times until the pig is roasted. Serve on a large platter with a potato or small ear of unhusked green corn in its mouth. The herbs may be taken from the dripping pan, the gravy thickened with flour and seasoned to taste with pepper and salt. Then serve in a boat. Allow three hours for roasting.

TWENTY MINERS ARE SAVED WERE ENTOMBED A WEEK

Belief of One of the Rescued Men That a Hundred and Fifty Are Still Alive Is Not Borne Out by Exploring Parties and No More Men are Found.

Cherry, Ill., Nov. 22.—Hope aroused Saturday by the rescue alive of twenty entombed men from the St. Paul mine, just one week after the starting of the fatal fire, was crushed yesterday, or at least deferred in fulfillment, for not one more of the 310 men caught by the fire was found alive yesterday.

The day was spent in removing bodies from the mine and in burying the corpses heretofore recovered. Last night the records showed that of the 310 men left in the mine Saturday night 198 were still missing, while 92 bodies have been found and twenty men rescued alive.

Fire that broke out afresh Saturday night was smothered yesterday to such an extent that explorers were able to work in the mine, but black damp in one of the galleries defied the men, as did cave-ins and other debris.

It was not even discovered whether there are more men alive in the mine galleries, although the explorers, urged by the extreme condition in which the twenty men saved on Saturday were found, work with almost superhuman strength and rapidity.

The finding of 37 bodies and their removal were the only visible results of yesterday's endeavors.

All day long the tolling of church bells resounded in Cherry and Spring Valley. Eighteen bodies were buried in a field south of Cherry.

Services for the dead were held outside the churches, into which Coroner Malm deemed it inadvisable that the bodies be taken.

Among those who still hope for the rescue of living miners is Richard Newsam, president of the Illinois board of mine inspectors.

"Scotchmen are the most resourceful miners in the world. I can see no reason why others should not have found some refuge just as did those who were found alive yesterday," he said.

Dawn broke Saturday with the bearers of stretchers moving from the pit mouth to the tent which served as a morgue with bodies swollen and scorched almost beyond human semblance. Forty of them had been brought up and most of them identified when the marvelous report shot through the prostrate community: "They've found them alive—they've found them alive."

In a moment the crowd, fairly insane with great hope rushed to the pit.

It took six hours to bring the survivors to the surface.

It was discovered that the men after eating up all the food in their dinner pails had subsisted mostly on bark torn off pine posts used to support the mine walls.

"Some of the men can hardly gasp," said Inspector Crawford, of the state board of health. "They are unable to take any solid food and such artificial stimulants are being administered as our small force permits."

William Cleland, one of the survivors, after drinking a bowl of soup appeared none the worse for his experience.

"We made the most of our situation," he said, sitting in the car, and surrounded by nurses. "How the time went we don't know. We must have been unconscious part of the time.

"I remember soon after we were shut in, drinking great quantities of scopage from the gutter. After that some of us pulled off the bark and chewed it.

"We did not realize how serious was our position. After the scopage had run dry, we began pounding the wall to cause more to drop down. Soon after we heard voices and the digging on the other side. Most of us thought we had been in mine only about 24 hours."

Of the 21 men found in the south galllery, twelve were too weak to brave sudden exposure to the air. Food was taken down to them.

William Cleland's wife and baby brought to him at the car were greeted with a grin expressive of gratitude. He was calm and his first request was to a fireman for a cigarette.

"Never mind the eats, but slip me the makings, kid," said Cleland.

LORDS ARE PREPARED TO ARGUE THE BUDGET QUESTION

London, Nov. 22.—The United Kingdom is more absorbed in politics now than for many years, and the coming week will see the culmination of the fierce warfare which has been carried on over the budget.

The House of Lords is expected to vote on Lord Lansdowne's resolution, calling for the rejection of the budget, on Thursday. Before then most of the big guns in the Upper House will speak on the question. Lord Rosebery's effort for the Conservatives, and that of the Earl of Halsbury for the Liberals, are awaited with the most interest.

Probably the largest number of Lords will be mustered for the vote since the rejection of home rule. About 450, many of whom practically are strangers to Parliament, are likely to be assembled, and not more than one-quarter of these will support the budget. Most of the politicians predict that when the question goes before the people at the general elections in January, it will be impossible to wipe out the great Liberal majority, and that the Liberal Government will be returned, but with comparatively small majority. The betting at Lloyds is 3 to 1 in favor of the Liberals.

The Liberal leaders declare that the issue is whether the hereditary chamber shall rule the country.

The Conservatives argue that the House of Commons has no mandate from the people to introduce new forms of taxation, and that the House of Lords is fulfilling its function as a balance on the Commons by forcing resort to a referendum. Conservative gains will be acclaimed as victories for protection.

The uncertainty of the country's financial policy is paralyzing the stock exchange, and the possibility that the Government will have to raise a large loan to meet current expenses makes the money market too uncertain for extensive private enterprises.

Alarm In France.

Paris, Nov. 22.—The gravity of the political situation in England is fully appreciated in France. The trend of feeling here is distinctly gloomy. Official circles express regret to see Great Britain entering on an international crisis when the situation abroad demands all her attention. The advanced Republican organ, Le Journal, declares that if the Liberals win in the struggle England will enter on an era of upheavals that will not stop at the frontier, but will upset the present balance of power in Europe.

Aristide Briand, the Premier, refrains from expressing any opinion on the domestic crisis in England, but states that all European statesmen are awaiting the struggle with great anxiety, for it will be one of the most tragic in history, and its consequences will be momentous for France and for Europe.

BAD FIRE AT SOURIS, P.E.I.

Charlottetown, P.E.I., Nov. 22.—The people of Souris feared on Saturday morning that the whole town, with a population of 2,000, would be wiped out by fire, but they escaped with the loss of three or four large business places. The fine residence of Dr. McLean, and the Methodist Church, with a total loss of about $50,000. The fire broke out at 8 a.m. in the warehouse of J. J. Hughes & Co., the largest building in the town, in which they conducted a general store. The blaze made rapid headway and spread to the establishments of Paquet Brothers, grocers, and M. Callagran, tailor, and A. A. Acorn. The fire department is composed of volunteers and a call for help was telephoned to Charlottetown, about 50 miles distant, and without delay a special train was rushed off with an engine and company of firemen.

Editor Will Go to Jail.

Fredericton, N.B., Nov. 22.—The Supreme Court of New Brunswick has confirmed the conviction of Bruce McDougall, the editor of Free Speech, a weekly that used to be published at Moncton and was prohibited by the mails and later seized by the police as immoral reading matter when offered for sale in cities and towns. McDougall was charged with criminal libel on several counts, and will be sentenced this week at St. John.

PROUDEST WORK OF REPUBLIC

Paris, Nov. 22.—Premier Briand, in the Chamber of Deputies Saturday, indirectly replied to the address of the Pope, made on Thursday last before a body of French pilgrims, in which the Pope declared that France was making war against the church with the aim of undermining the basis of Christianity.

The Premier warned the Republicans not to be alarmed by the disorder the church was attempting to stir up in the face of the coming elections.

"The country," said M. Briand, "will never permit the destruction of the public school system, which is the proudest work of the republic."

The Premier characterized the Catholic appeals as "violent, passionate and unjust," intimating that the Government possessed documents, and could, if it so desired, make embarrassing revelations regarding conditions in the confessional schools.

Turning to the Catholics, he declared that the persecution of which they complained was purely imaginary.

Derailment at Galt.

Galt, Nov. 22.—The C.P.R. auxiliary outfit from West Toronto in charge of Supt. Edwin Walden arrived here at 3.30 p.m. yesterday in response to a call to clear wreckage, due to a run-off on the switch at the stone road crossing. Two cars of a construction train had been derailed and upset owing to the break of a coupling pin. In less than an hour things were set to rights.

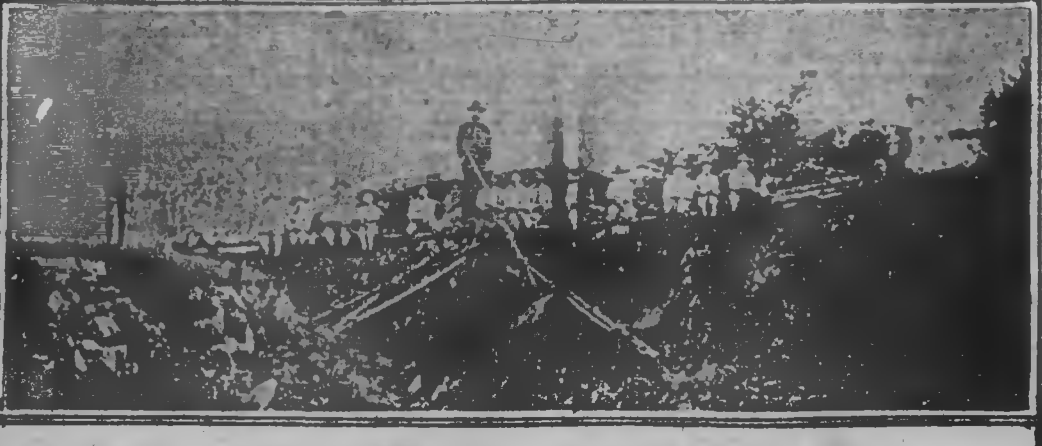
BOY SCOUT CARRYING BAGGAGE



BOY SCOUT MOVEMENT IN CHINA

The boy scout movement is making rapid progress in Canada. Corps have been organized in many cities and the boys have shown much enthusiasm in the work. In reference to the system a writer in a recent number of "Canadian Field" says:—

It seems clear that in the Boy Scout Movement we have a unique factor in the education and instruction of the young. It is advisedly said that it deals with both education and instruction, the former in that through the disciplinary training it provides what is so often affirmed as the advantage of our Public School system, a training in self-restraint, self-sacrifice, the formation of character, and what Charles Kingsley called the making of "strong Englishmen"; and for the latter, as will be shown later, by a judicious development of the scheme as laid down in General Baden-Powell's work, Scouting for Boys, it provides the essentials of a complete system of secondary Education.

But it is important to dwell, in the first instance, on the uniqueness, the exceptional character of this system. The first and obvious thing to strike us is its enormous popularity among the youth, not only of this country, but even abroad. The children flock into the ranks of the Boy Scouts in their tens of thousands, and at the present time it is believed that there are no less than 250,000 of the men enrolled; and it is not too much to say that with careful organization and management it will be possible to include in this young army, or brotherhood, practically the whole youth of the country. It is, in fact, a school, and probably the only school into which boys and even girls enter voluntarily and with enthusiasm.

The secret, no doubt, of this popularity lies in the fact that it is founded on the natural instincts of youth. Philosophers have told us that a human being, in his course through life, passes through every phase in the development of the human race, and it is certain that the boy (and if I be not unchivalrous in saying so sometimes in the girl also), between the ages of 10 and 16, is in the hunting and sometimes the predatory condition of our earlier ancestors. His tastes are those of the chase and the trek, and no doubt this accounts for the fact that boyish literature, to be read by youth, must deal largely with tales of adventure and of exploits in field and flood. At any rate it is certain that the adventurous energy is strongly developed at this age.

Now this secret has been raised by the creator of this system, and while the human boy is incited and encouraged to follow trails, to hunt, and to pursue, he is directed in the course of the training not towards destroying life, but preserving it, to scout and to hunt, to find adventures in which he can be of service to his kind and even to the lower animals. It is only necessary to glance at the Scouts' Oath and Scout Law to see how this humane hunting is interwoven with the whole system, for in the oaths taken by every Boy Scout the second is, "I will do my best to help others whatever it costs me"; and in the Law, which every boy must know, occur these phrases:—"A Scout is a friend to all and a brother to every other Scout, no matter to what class he belongs," and again, "A Scout is courteous." And, above all, it must be remembered that it is a fundamental principle that a Scout is forbidden to take any reward for the service he renders to others, because he cannot accept payment for carrying out an obvious duty.

So far then, as to the teaching of humane principles which underlies the whole system.

Now, as to public duty, to God, to Country, and to King. The first oath which the tenderfoot takes on enrolment is that "he will do his duty to God, to King and to Country." Then the first law, which after all is a necessity in all great brotherhoods if they are to have an elevating influence and to remain co-hesive, is that "a Scout's honour is to be trusted." He is not to be called upon to make oath and swear (swear not at all is a divine command), but if he breaks his word he ceases to be of the brotherhood. It is chivalry again; a knight's honor is as good as another man's oath."

Then the necessary discipline of civil life is secured by the law which compels a Scout "to obey the orders of his parents, of his patrol leader or scoutmaster, intelligently and without question," cheerfully and without hesitation.

Up till now I have only referred to some of the primary lessons and laws of the Scout Brotherhood as they refer to instruction in ethics and religion properly so-called.

But this brotherhood, the knighthood of the young, does not stop at this. I have said it is a system of popular secondary and technical education, and if developed, assuredly it is so.

In its instruction the youth is first encouraging to observe and to deduce. Observation and deduction belong to the province of logic. How much the training in observation and deduction is needed any who have taken part in wars will realise.

We have also to observe and deduce in civil life, and as the Boy Scout training is pre-eminently a civil training, not a military one, we want that kind of observation and deduction every day for other and better purposes than those of fighting; to save life rather than to destroy it, to detect crime and to prevent it, to weigh evidence in jury cases, and the hundred and one instances which occur in the ordinary gear of a man's life.

But the training does not end with the encouragement which it gives the boys to observe and to deduce from observations made, and the moral lesson in discipline and fellowship which have been mentioned above; it is wider still than these. In the course of the training in the book, under the name of "Scouting," and suggested by it, you will find that the boys' minds are directed to all the handicrafts, the arts and the sciences.

In the suggestions as to the Courts of Honour you will find you have before you a skeleton—always a skeleton, because the book never presumes to be more than a skeleton—of how important legal questions of honour may be treated among boys by their Scoutmasters. You will find, if you study it, how the boys are interested in and instructed in such practical handicrafts as carpentry, cooking, house and house and bridge building. From these are developed an interest in cognate sciences such as geometry and arithmetic. By the obvious value of a knowledge of the directing stars for Scouting purposes, you have a suggestion how this knowledge may lead to an interest in astronomy. Through the interest incited in woodcraft by the necessity which the Scout must have of a knowledge of trees, the scheme gradually leads the boys to study natural history, whether animal or vegetable. And always and at all times the Scouts are led to love animals by studying their ways.

Then as to history, the most important of the sciences. How are the boys led to this? Very clearly, and from several directions. They are directed to learn and understand the history and traditions of the Empire, by understanding the symbols of it which they bear—such as flags and other things. They are interested, moreover, in history especially by the fact that the whole brotherhood, the whole knighthood of Boy Scouts, is founded on a chivalric basis; the principles are those of the knights expanded to a wider field, and knight errantry is the basis of the whole conception. And believe me, this conception of it appeals to the boy as none other does, for if if the boy is not a knight errant, he will be a Red Indian or a highwayman—and you can easily make him a knight.

NAPLES FIREMEN IN A MUTINY

Naples, Italy, Nov. 22.—The fireman of Naples mutinied Saturday night. They barricaded their barracks, expelled their officers and hissed the mayor, who attempted to quell the trouble.

The agitation was provoked by discontent. The barracks were surrounded by troops and the firemen were disarmed and arrested.

Meanwhile the corporation has requested the navy to provide a contingent of firemen.

PEOPLE ON PACIFIC COAST STEAMER HAVE A MIRACULOUS ESCAPE

One Hundred and Five Passengers and Seventy-Eight Members of the Crew of St. Croix Escape to Shore When Vessel Bursts Into Flames.

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 22.—Famished, nearly exhausted and clad in borrowed clothing, 105 men, women and children, passengers on the steamer St. Croix, burned and sunk Saturday night off Point Duma, arrived yesterday. With them came 78 members of the crew.

All were brought from Santa Monica by trolley car after the police department and residents of that city had furnished food and broke a fast that for some had stretched through 36 hours. The survivors had walked, ridden and made their way to Santa Monica as best they could from their isolated landing place.

That there was not loss of life was due to the heroic action of officers and the crew, and the fact that the sea was calm at the time of the disaster.

All on board escaped in life boats and rafts, and were landed at Point Duma on the beach. They camped Saturday night in the Zuni Canyon back of the point.

The fire started in the second cabin while dinner was being served and made rapid headway. A panic among the passengers was averted by the prompt action of officers and crew, who gave passengers no chance to save their personal belongings.

First Officer N. F. Ellis immediately after landing of the passengers at Point Duma, made his way overland to Malibu ranch and there secured an automobile and come to Santa Monica, arriving at 11 o'clock last night, bringing the first authoritative information of the landing.

At 6 o'clock, while the hull of the St. Croix was burning fiercely, the steamer City of Topeka passed within a short distance of her, but being unable to discover any signs of life aboard, proceeded on her course to Redondo, and gave out the first report of the disaster.

The St. Croix left San Pedro at 10 o'clock yesterday morning bound for San Francisco direct.

Ten days ago an explosion took place in the boiler-room of the St. Croix and Chief Engineer Day was scalded to death. The belief is that an explosion in the boiler-room below the second cabin caused the fire Saturday.

BROTHER OF MRS. M'LAUGHLIN DENIES THE SUICIDE THEORY

Mr. Dennis of Wyoming, Brother-in-law of Prisoner, Arrives at Uxbridge For Last Session of Inquest —Sister of Dead Woman Has Had No Letters Since August.

Uxbridge, Nov. 22.—Although not summoned to appear at the session of the McLaughlin inquest to-night, Mr. Dennis of Wyoming, brother of the late Mrs. McLaughlin, arrived in town Saturday evening, with the hope of being permitted to hear the remaining witnesses to be examined. These will be Prof. Ellis, Dr. J. A. McClintock, Dr. W. C. Shier, Mrs. T. G. Gold, a neighbor; Miss Dennis, and a Mr. Creighton of Hamilton, a commercial traveler, to whom McLaughlin, after telling him that he had been given notice to leave, owing to certain rumors that were going around town, had made the remark "that he would give them something to talk about before the week was out." This conversation took place the Tuesday before the fire.

Mr. Dennis is staying at the Bascom House. When asked if his deceased sister or any other member of the family had ever suffered from mental trouble or melancholia, he simply hooted the idea.

He had never heard of his sister ever talking about taking her own life, and considered the story a myth; she would be the last person to do such a thing.

When Miss Dennis was visiting her sister here in August, Mrs. McLaughlin told her that if it had not been for the children, she would have left her husband then, as they were not getting on very well together. According to the brother's statement, this state of affairs had existed during the last four years.

Since returning home after her short visit here, Miss Dennis never received a letter from her sister nor as far as can be ascertained, did Mrs. Laughlin get any from her, although several had been sent. Becoming a little uneasy because no word had been received from her sister, Miss Dennis had decided to wait until Monday, when if she got no word she would telephone, but the fire took place early Saturday morning.

Miss Dennis will be at the inquest to-night to tell her story.

Mr. Dennis inspected the ruined home and said he thought the fire had started under the stairs, and possibly in the bedroom next to the one where Mrs. McLaughlin and the two sons slept.

Little Monta, McLaughlin's daughter, was pleased to see her uncle and showed no signs of crying and worrying for her father, as has been reported. She believes he is gone away for a few days, when he will return to her. She plays with children every day and seems to be quite contented.

She was up to the burned house Saturday and picked up her mother's Bible and a few playthings. Feeling a little sad and lonesome, she remarked that "she wished she was with mother and Harold and Gordon." The citizens generally have much sympathy for the little tot.

The final session of the inquest should prove very interesting, and the citizens are very much excited over it.

MRS. PANKHURST ADDRESSES LARGE CROWDS IN TORONTO

Toronto, Nov. 22.—"Every one of these women has in her heart the fixed determination that if the sacrifice of her life is demanded she is quite willing to make it. We know that this last weapon we have used, the hunger strike, is a terrible thing for us, but it is equally terrible for the Government. If one of these women slips through their fingers, and goes out into the great beyond, the slow-going British voter will wake up and make it very uncomfortable for the Government." This was a comment made by Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the leader of the British militant suffragettes, in one of her addresses on Saturday on the latest phase of the fight for the enfranchisement of women in the old land. A slight, intellectual-looking woman, of splendid voice, and possessing remarkable power as a speaker, she made her audiences understand how far her followers were prepared to go in the belief that by refusing to take food when imprisoned, they were assisting to make their cause a political issue. Mrs. Pankhurst defended the tactics of the militant suffragettes on the ground that constitutional methods had either failed or been denied them.

Repeatedly she pointed out that man had only obtained the extension of the franchise after the commission of acts of violence, and even the taking of life. "We women do not want to take life," she said, and quietly added, "We know the cost of it, but we know that men cannot bear ridicule, and if by making them ridiculous we can force this question to the forefront of practical politics we don't mind being laughed at."

Mrs. Pankhurst's two audiences were widely dissimilar in character. At noon she addressed the members of the Canadian Club, while in the evening Massey Hall was crowded by an audience practically of women.

TWO ARE KILLED BY DYNAMITE

Victoria Harbor, Ont., Nov. 22.—A double fatality occurred near here yesterday, when Phil Drolet was blown to pieces by dynamite, and Fred Doe was drowned.

The two men belonged to this place, and were in a rowboat some miles up the bay, at McRae's Lake.

Drolet had a quantity of dynamite in the boat, presumably for fishing purposes, and while he was leaning over the box containing the dynamite, an explosion occurred and he was blown to pieces. Doe was thrown into the water, and, unable to swim, was drowned.

Both men were married and leave wives and large families.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

HEAVY SENTENCE FOR ABDUCTION

Belleville, Nov. 22.—Jefferson Davis, an unmarried man, of this city, was charged with abducting a girl under 14. He took the child and kept her in his room, away from her mother, for two days.

Magistrate Masson on Saturday found the charge of abduction proven, and sentenced Davis to two and a half years in the penitentiary.

Want Belcourt to Run.

Ottawa, Nov. 22.—An effort is being made to induce Senator N. A. Belcourt, former Speaker of the Commons, to run in the Liberal interests at the bye-election in Ottawa.

Some difficulty is being experienced by the Liberals in finding a good candidate. Meanwhile Sir Wilfrid Laurier hasn't resigned the seat.

COAL RESULTS

We sell the very best quality of hard coal, as good as we know how to buy.

¶ Are you getting results from the coal you are now using? Are you sure is good? Are you burning it the right way?

¶ There is a deal of difference in how you handle the range or furnace. Our long experience tells us that fact and we are ready to advise any in doubt as to the best way to make use of coal as fuel.

LOCAL OPTION

Licenses to clubs have suddenly come into prominence in the local option campaign. The report is being circulated that local "clubs" will get licenses as usual, even if local option carries. This is a mistake. The retail sale of liquor will be put out of business as contemplated by that Act, no matter where it is in vogue. The injustice of discrimination is too absurd to refer to. As for ourselves, we would vote against all the Conservative Governments that ever existed if they ever dreamed of such a monstrous maladministration of law, as to give well-to-do clubs the privilege of doing what the less-favoured were cut off from doing.

The statement referred to is no doubt being used to throw discredit upon the administration of the License Department. But there need be no fear.

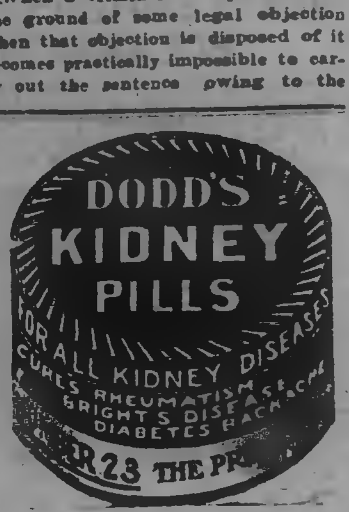
THE SYSTEM OF "REPRIEVE"

The Minister of Justice is doing incalculable damage to the order and well-being of Canada by his reprieve system. Crime is rife in Canada and before long, rather than submit to the buncombe of continual respite, appeal, etc., the people will take the law into their own hands as in U. S. Mr. Aylesworth will find that he has "missed the helm but gashed the thigh" when he wakes up some day to the fact that he has been the father of lynching in Canada. It will be no great honor to have instituted a long series of outbreaks against the law's delay which will extend into other fields than that of crime. It would be bad enough if the bona fides of the department of justice were not likely to be ever called in question but it has been called in question and its acts have given rise to a degree of suspicion that whether well-founded or not, it is a thousand times worse than the obstacles to reform the system of respite has been instituted to remove. It is becoming more and more necessary to take notice of the fact that people with violent or criminal inclination give way to those inclinations accordingly as they fear punishment or not, hence Mr. Aylesworth's policy as in the Dillon case involves the sacrifice of many a really valuable and unoffending life. It is therefore unquestionably wrong and that it strikes the public sense as such is only too apparent.

When a criminal is reprieved on the ground of some legal objection when that objection is disposed of it becomes practically impossible to carry out the sentence owing to the shock of the long-drawn out torture.

The idea that it is better that 20 guilty men should escape than that one innocent man should be hanged is not involved since, so long as the crime is denied it is possible of disproof and therefore no accused man should hang. But this maxim like most maxims, covers up an untruth. The 20 escaped criminals may be trusted to commit 20 more murders and thus the escape of one innocent man has involved the death of 20. In counting up the probabilities and general results as we do nowadays for the "general benefit of the people" these considerations should be taken into account. It must not be supposed, of course, that the innocent man is proven so beforehand but sometimes it happens that the wrong man has been hanged as discovered afterwards and what we say is that it is better that he should have been hanged than that our weak and vacillating system should allow of the violent deaths of 20 other innocent men. It is as 20 to 1. No system of law or "justice" is perfect but they are made for us because it is the "best we can do" and it is upon that basis that we contend for a more sane observance of the laws passed by the people and often "held up" by their representatives.

It is a very strange thing that important medical evidence is being so constantly held over till after the trial. It is beginning to look as if this holding-over was another lawyer's trick. Medical evidence is frequently of little weight till after a trial when it assumes a weight and prominence that it does not have prior to the verdict. This may be the reason. At any rate it is quite apparent that all evidence that should have been "put in" before sentence should be put in as in this case. "New evidence" is of course another matter. The Blythe case still haunts the public mind as a gross miscarriage of justice. Either do away with our present system altogether or carry it out. But let it not become a matter of general comment that a man with money enough or friends enough behind him to keep up the agitation can if they keep it up long enough finally get him off.



EDITORIAL NOTES

It is beginning to dawn upon our people that we have some very vain and callow youths amongst our university students.

American saffron journals are now giving picture-photographs of gaily-dressed ladies entering and departing from church.

"According to the estimates, the expenses of the government are $127,000,000 for next year, or sixteen millions more than last. This is the galop of finance with the accompaniment by Mr. Fielding on the fiddle and Mr. Brodeur on the trombone."—La Patrie (Liberal.)

Odd how these free-traders go back on themselves! Now all the ships of the new "independent" navy must be built in Canada. Why not where they can be got the cheapest? But then, it is true, there is nothing "cheap" about this new navy.

English Liberal newspapers characterize as an act of war Lord Lansdowne's motion that the budget proposals should be submitted to the people. This attitude raises a curious question: Who thinks most of the people, the Radical, who shouts that he speaks for them, or the Tory who invited them to speak for themselves?—Exchange.

Might we ask, with all humility, how the far-famed "individual interests," which complain so bitterly of "public ownership," excuse the all-embracing mergering tendencies of the said "individualistic" interests? Between man and man which, now, is the real hold-up, state-control of telegraphs or a trust comprising all telegraphic companies with a capital of 1 and nine naughts!

It is customary for Liberal theorists to maintain that such a thing as the establishment of a minimum wage is not possible. It is said to be inconsistent with freedom of trade. At the same time the "fair wage" requirement has been introduced into contracts and may be required by law. But like the Protective system the "fair wage" system is still scouted by the doctrinaires, although practised.

Senator Landry, a Liberal Senator, was invited to 'Spencewood,' the residence of the Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, to dine. He demanded to know what degree of precedence he should be accorded as Senator, and whether he should have to sit below Mr. So-and-so and not above him, as was his right. The governor's reply did not suit him, and he refused to dine, although he had gone to the house. Such is the up-to-the-hilt democracy of which so much is said and so little really believed in and practised.

"I am not the less proud now of being an American. I want to see that word, American stand for all the sentiment that symbolized in the flag of my country. I want real liberty. I do not want the liberty that gives us the right to do what we don't want to do. I want the liberty to live out our own lives and to be helpful to one another. I do not want the liberty enunciated by some of our courts, that men and women should have the liberty to work themselves to death. I want the spirit of liberty that gives even the most humble person the opportunity to grow and develop the best that is in him. May we not hope that our laws shall be so drafted that no man may rightly feel that he has not been given a square deal? I am anxious that every institution connected with the Government shall be so conducted that no man may feel that he has been denied equal opportunities and equal rights with every other citizen."—John Mitchell, before American Federation of Labor.

INTERPRETER IS ACCUSED

Hamilton, Nov. 20.—A summons has been issued against Budimir Protich, a court interpreter, on the charge of conspiring with Frank Bluestein to have Samuel Strasburg convicted of the charge of extortion, knowing that Strasburg was innocent. The story is that Bluestein and Strasburg, who worked together in Dundas, had a quarrel, and Bluestein consulted Protich to see if a charge could not be laid against Strasburg for teasing him. Protich is alleged to have informed him that no charge of that kind could be laid, but that the two concocted a scheme whereby Protich, for a consideration of $9, was to lay a charge of extortion against Strasburg.

MAKES HAIR GROW

Wm. Madill Has an Invigorator That Makes Hair Grow in Abundance or Money Back

If your hair is thinning out gradually it won't be long before the bald spot appears.

The time to take care of the hair is when you have hair to take care of.

For thin falling hair the best remedy known to mankind is Parisian Sage. It is compounded on scientific principles and furnishes to the hair root a nourishment that acts quickly and promptly and causes the hair to grow.

But remember this; It kills the dandruff germ, the pest that appropriates all the natural nourishment that should go to the hair root.

Parisian Sage is sold by Wm. Madill, druggist, of Peterborough, under a positive guarantee to banish dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

It gives to women's hair a lustre and radiance that is most fascinating and causes it to grow abundantly.

Parisian Sage is now sold in every first-class town in Canada. A large generous bottle costs 50 cents, and the girl with Auburn hair is on every bottle.

GLADSTONE FOR AFRICA

London, Nov. 20.—The Standard yesterday stated that the report that Herbert Gladstone will be appointed Governor-General for South Africa, is confirmed by the announcement that the Liberal executive committee of Gladstone's constituency has requested T. E. Harvey to become the Liberal candidate for West Leeds in the approaching election.

HAVELOCK HAPPENINGS

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Nov. 19.—The School Board held their regular November meeting on Tuesday evening, when all the members were present.

Mr. Baker, principal of the Continuation School, placed his resignation before the board, and on motion of Messrs Barlow and Taylor, it was accepted. The secretary was instructed to advertise for a new principal. Several accounts were also passed.

Mr. E. W. Holdsworth, pastor of St. John's church, attended the thirteenth annual conference of the Archdeaconry of Peterborough at Port Hope this week.

Mr. John Weir, of Norwood, was in town on Friday.

Mrs R. S. Anderson and daughter, Cybele, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lafoe, left on Monday for Cobalt to reside.

Miss Lynch left on Friday last for Toronto, where she has secured an excellent office position.

Mr. John A. Sexsmith, M.P., is home for the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs James Harrison visited Norwood friends on Sunday last.

Mr. Ross McPherson, of the Bank of Toronto staff, Barrie, was in town on Friday.

Miss Lottie Chiles, of Peterborough, was in town on Thursday.

Mr. Wm. Cole will move his family to Toronto next week, where they will reside in the future.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Burnet have returned from a trip to Kingston and Montreal.

Mr. and Mrs. Holdsworth have returned from a trip to Port Hope.

Mr. M. Richardson, of Parry Sound, was the guest of Mrs. George Palmateer during the week.

All the deer hunters have returned from the northern wilds. The Johnson-Philips-Armstrong party at Jack's Lake had bad luck, only securing one small doe. Messrs. A. Wilde and Art Mathison got two fine deer at Monmouth. Mr. Wm. Cole was one of a party of ten at Shawanaga, north of Parry Sound. The party secured 14 in all. Messrs. W. T. Curtis, S. Woodbeck, Ed. Anderson and A. Woodbeck were a party of nine which secured nine deer, north of Apsley.

One of the local hotelkeepers has purchased a pool table, and is having it installed in one of his sample rooms.

ALLEGED SMUGGLING OF VALUABLE LACE

Large Quantity of the Irish Article Said to Have Reached Pincher Creek Duty Free.

Lethbridge, Alta., Nov. 18.—A considerable number of the inhabitants of Pincher Creek are much wrought up over an alleged smuggling case, in connection with which there are some interesting and rather unusual features. Recently customs officers seized a number of pieces of rare Irish lace, valued at something like $800, which it is alleged had been smuggled into the country and which had found a way into the hands of a number of prominent ladies of the town. According to rumors here a young woman brought the lace with her when she came into the country. It is alleged that the lace was securely pinned to the wedding gown, and the fact that it did not belong there escaped the detection of the customs officials of Ottawa. Other lots, it is said, were wrapped in worn garments and came in other ways and escaped discovery by the customs inspectors. The laces were sold about town to ladies of the wealthier class.

The business was apparently proving both successful and profitable, with apparently slight danger of detection until securing immunity prompted too much boldness. The principal decided to employ an agent in the sale and placed a quantity of lace in the hands of another woman to dispose of. She failed to account for something over $100 worth of the goods and the principal sued. This brought a climax. The agent wrote the customs department and inspector John Kenny, of Calgary, was ordered to Pincher Creek to investigate. The result was the seizure of all the lace. What action the department will take is not known as yet. In the meanwhile the ladies who purchased the lace are it is said preparing to take steps to recover the amounts they paid for the lace and which has been lost through confiscation.

The BLACK BAG

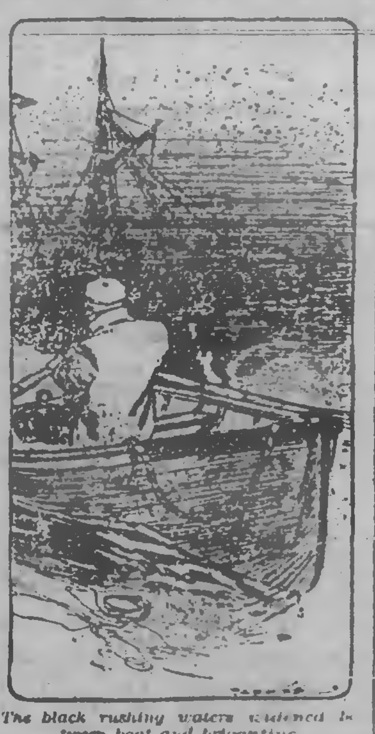
By LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

For the present he could compliment himself with the knowledge that he had outwitted the rogues, had lifted the jewels and probably two-thirds of their armament. He had also the start, the knowledge of their criminal guilt and intent and his own plans to comfort him. As for the latter, he did not believe that Calendar would immediately fathom them, so he took heart of grace and tugged at the oars with a will, pulling directly for the city and permitting the current to drift him downstream at its pleasure. There could be no more inexcusable folly than to return to the Quay Steen landing and possibly the arms of the despoiled boat owner.

At first he could bear crash after splintering crash sounding dully muffled from the cabin of the Alethea, a veritable devil's tattoo beaten out by the feet of the prisoners. Evidently the fastening was serving him better than he had dared hope. But as the black rushing waters widened between boat and brigantine the clamor aboard the latter subsided, indicating that Calendar and Stryker had broken out or been released by the crew. In ignorance as to whether he were seen or being pursued, Kirkwood pulled on, winning in under the shadow of the quays and permitting the boat to drift down to a lonely landing on the edge of the dockyard quarter of Antwerp.

Here alighting, he made the boat fast and, soothing his conscience with a surmise that its owner would find it there in the morning, strode swiftly over to the tram line that runs along the embankment, swung aboard an adventitious car and broke his first ten franc piece in order to pay his fare.



The black rushing waters widened between boat and brigantine.

The car made a leisurely progress up past the old Steen castle and the quay landing, Kirkwood sitting quietly, the gladstone bag under his hand, a searching gaze sweeping the water side. No sign of the adventurers rewarded him, but it was now all chance, all hazard. He had no more heart for confidence.

They passed the Hotel du Commerce. Kirkwood stared up at its windows, wondering.

A little farther on a disengaged fiacre, its driver alert for possible fares, turned a corner into the esplanade. At sight of it Kirkwood, inspired, hopped nimbly off the tram car and signaled the cabby. The latter pulled up, and Kirkwood started to charge him with instructions, something which he did haltingly, hampered by a slight haziness of purpose. While thus engaged and at rest in the stark glare of the street lamps, with no chance of concealing himself, he was aware of a rising tumult in the direction of the landing and, glancing round, discovered a number of people running toward him. With no time to wonder whether or no he was really the object of the hue and cry, he tossed the driver three silver francs.

"Gare Centrale," he cried, "and drive like the devil!"

Diving into the fiacre, he shut the door and stuck his head out of the window, taking observations. A ragged fringe of silly rabble was bearing down upon them, with one or two gendarmes in the forefront and a giant, who might or might not be Stryker, a close second. Furthermore, another cab seemed to have been requisitioned for the chase. His heart misgave him momentarily, but his driver had taken him at his word and generosity, and in a breath the fiacre had turned the corner on two wheels, and the glittering reaches of the embankment, drive and promenade were blotted out, as if smudged with lampblack, by the obscurity of a narrow and tortuous side street.

He drew in his head the better to preserve his brains against further emergencies.

After a block or two Kirkwood picked up the gladstone bag, gently opened the door and put a foot on the step, pausing to look back. The other cab was pelting after him with all the enthusiasm of a hound on a fresh trail. He reflected that this mad progress through the thoroughfares of a civilized city would not long endure without police intervention. So he waited watching his opportunity. The fiacre hurtled onward, the driver leaning forward from his box to urge the horse with lash of whip and tongue, entirely unconscious of his fare's intentions.

Between two streets the mouth of a narrow and darksome byway flashed into view. Kirkwood threw wide the door and leaped, trusting to the night to hide his stratagem, to luck to save his limbs. Neither failed him. In a twinkling he was on all fours in the mouth of the alley, and as he picked himself up the second fiacre passed, Calendar himself poking a round bald poll out of the window to incite his driver's cupidity with promises of redoubled fare.

Kirkwood mopped his dripping forehead and whistled low with dismay. It seemed that from that instant on it was to be a vendetta with a vengeance. Calendar, as he had foreseen, was stopping at nothing.

At a dogtrot he sped down the alley to the next street, on which he turned back—more sedately—toward the river, debouching on the esplanade just one block from the Hotel du Commerce. As he swung past the serried tables of a cafe whatever fears he had harbored were banished by the discovery that the excitement occasioned by the chase had already subsided. Beneath the garish awnings the crowd was laughing and chattering, eating and sipping its beer with complete unconcern, heedless altogether of the haggard and shabby young man carrying a black hand bag. Without attracting any attention whatever, indeed, he mingled with the strolling crowds, making his way toward the Hotel du Commerce. Yet he was not at all at ease. His uneasy conscience invested the gladstone bag with a magnetic attraction for the public eye. To carry it unconcealed in his hand furnished him with a sensation as disturbing as though its worn black sides had been stenciled "Stolen!" in letters of flame. He felt it rendered him a cynosure of public interest, an object of suspicion to the wide, cold world; that the gaze which lit upon the bag traveled to his face only to espy thereon the brand of guilt.

For ease of mind presently he turned into a convenient shop and spent ten invaluable francs for a hand satchel big enough to hold the gladstone bag.

With more courage, now that he had the hateful thing under cover, he found and entered the Hotel du Commerce.

In the little closet which served for an office, over a desk visibly groaning with the weight of an enormous and grimy registry book, a sleepy, fat, bland and good natured woman presided, a benign and drowsy divinity of even tempered courtesy. To his misleading inquiry for M. Calendar she returned a cheerful permission to seek that gentleman for himself.

"Three flights, m'sieu', in the front. Suit 17 it is. M'sieu' does not mind walking up?" she inquired.

M'sieu' did not in the least, though by no strain of the imagination could it be truthfully said that he walked up those steep and redolent stairways of the Hotel du Commerce d'Anvers. More literally, he flew with winged feet, spurning each third padded step with a force that raised a tiny cloud of fine white dust from the carpeting.

The Templars' Meeting

The R. T. of Temperance will meet to-morrow evening in the hall, George street. It is the regular monthly meeting and a good attendance is looked for.

A POSITIVE CURE FOR INDIGESTION

If you have indigestion, your food ferments in the stomach and bowels. It does more; it decays, and the nutritious matter which should go to make new blood decays with it, and this leads to an impoverished condition of the blood, to nervousness, biliousness, constipation, sick headache, bad breath which disgusts your friends, and other disagreeable and unpleasant conditions.

And all this trouble is caused by the food that doesn't digest, but ferments, and oftimes rots in the stomach.

And fermentation is caused by the stomach not being strong enough and energetic enough to thoroughly mix the food with the digestive juices.

MI-O-NA is responsible for tens of thousands of cures. In fact, it is such a positive cure for indigestion and all stomach troubles that it is guaranteed by Wm. Madill to cure or money back. The price of a large box of Mi-o-na Tablets is 50 cents, and they are sure to promptly relieve the worst case of indigestion or gastritis. Try them.

"Your Sight is Priceless"

Good Glasses are worth all you pay for them.

The constant increase in eye defects is partly due to improperly fitted glasses. There is no guess work with us, we give your eyes a thorough examination, and advise glasses only when absolutely necessary.

We are not transient, but permanent residents of the city, and all our glasses are guaranteed. We do not make it a practice of remaining for a few days in a place, and then leaving for parts unknown

We have never sought to delude the unwary by advertising cut-rates on glasses. Those who do business in this way, either deceive the public, or sooner or later come to grief themselves. Any business to be a lasting success, must be conducted at a fair rate of profit; expert service and enduring articles cannot be furnished at or below cost. FELL OFF REAR OF ENGINE

Lindsay Fireman met With Mishap in Local Grand Trunk Yard

Charles Dennis, a fireman on the Grand Trunk Railway, whose home is in Lindsay, met with a mishap at the local yards on Friday evening, and as a result was considerably bruised about the body. He had just arrived on a double-header from Belleville and a sudden jolt caused him to lose his hold to his position on the rear of the second engine and he fell heavily to the hard ground.

While the injuries received were not serious, a rest for a short time will be necessary.

W. M. Manchester, C.N.R. operator at Rainy River, was sentenced to two years for manipulating tickets.

PROMINENT RAILWAY MAN AT LINDSAY ON BUSINESS BUT IS MUM ABOUT IT

Mr. Hugh D. Lumsden, formerly chief engineer with the Grand Trunk Pacific, the National Transcontinental line, but who placed his resignation in the hands of the Government, was in town to-day.

When a Warder representative met Mr. Lumsden at the Benson House the latter was a veritable sphynx as far as giving out information goes.

"It's my own business why I am in Lindsay and nobody else's," he declared.

It's well known that Mr. Lumsden resigned from the G.T.P. Board of Engineers, because the contractors desired to class clay and shale as rock in excavating, and he would not agree to the same price being paid for the excavation of the day.

"I gave the Government my reasons for resigning and that is enough." Mr. Lumsden said when asked about this matter.

It was rumored strongly in town that Mr. Lumsden is connected with the Canadian Pacific Railway and holds a prominent position with that company, and that, in fact, he came to Lindsay on the business of the new grain route the C. P. R. Company is building through here from Midland to their main line.

But Mr. Lumsden would not substantiate this rumor, neither could he correct it. He is here on business but what business it was he would keep to himself. Oh, yes, he had heard that the C.P.R. were intending to build a grain route through here.

Anyway, Mr. Lumsden will be in town for a few days.—Lindsay Warder.

PRAISE FOR THE LOCAL SALVATION ARMY BAND

Made Splendid Impression on Recent Visit to Toronto—How the Band Started and Its Rapid Growth.

Under the heading, 'Two Great Bands,' this week's 'War Cry' has an interesting 'write-up' of the Peterborough and London S.A. bands, both of which took part in the Congress held at Toronto recently. Cuts of the bands are also reproduced. The introduction of the article and that part of it referring to the Peterborough band follow;—

At the great Brass Band Festival conducted in the Massey Hall, on Congress Sunday, two greatly appreciated items were the selections rendered by the Peterborough and London bands.

The excellency of their playing, and their smart appearance, created a most favorable impression. The Toronto Bands were most enthusiastic in their appreciation of the visiting bands.

The following facts concerning these bands, which have been supplied will, no doubt, be read with great interest by bandsmen and others all over the territory.

THE PETERBOROUGH BAND.

The Peterborough band started in a small way, about eighteen years ago. A great many changes have taken place during that time, and only a few of the members to-day were in the band when it was at first organized. About a year after its organization the "Musical Greene Family" arrived in Peterborough, from Stirling. As all of them, including the mother and sister, were good players on brass instruments, they made a valuable addition to the band. That same year Mendell Greene, the eldest boy, was appointed bandmaster, and he has held that position ever since, excepting about two and a half years which he spent in the field as an officer.

At one time the band had the distinction of having seven bandswomen as members, and not until about two years ago, did they resign, to take up other duties.

Peterborough also has the distinction of being the first Canadian band to purchase and import "Our Own Make" band instruments, and also the first band to interest and bring over bandsmen from across the seas. At one time, it is known that the officers of this band were corresponding with between seventy and eighty bandsmen in the British Isles, relative to emigrating to Canada. Hence the reason that Peterborough is so widely known.

This band has received into its ranks bandsmen from Reading, South Shields, Marleybone, Tunbridge Wells, Glasgow, Liverpool and Leeds. To-day a band number thirty-six is the result. With but few exceptions the individual members have spent their entire lives in the Army, being first attracted and captured when children, passed through our Sunday schools and eventually becoming senior bandsmen.

Two of its members, Bandmaster Greene, and J. & M. Braund had the honour of being members of the Canadian Staff Band, which represented the Canadian bands at the great Congress held in London, in 1904.

This band has won the respect of the entire district. The City Council makes a yearly grant of $50.00, which is much appreciated, while last year the Christmas serenading amounted to $200.00, and an excellent sum was realized through church services. The bandsmen are enthusiastic over the alterations to their hall, for in this they are having a band room that will equal if not surpass any band room in the Dominion, it will have a separate entrance, thus the bandsmen can come from their room to the platform, direct. It is a fine arrangement.

Through the entire band fitted up with new silver-plated instruments, the old instruments have been fully prepared, with the intention of forming a J.S. band. It is the intention to take up this work at once, as there are many boys just waiting for the opportunity, principally children of bandsmen.

The band was more than delighted with their trip to Toronto for the Congress gatherings. They had worked hard in preparation work, and expected to be severely criticized—of course friendly—as it had been years since they visited the Queen City before.

The reception that was accorded them from the Commissioner down and the way that their comfort and happiness was looked after, the excellent addresses that were given, and the prominent place allotted to the band, with the crowded house at Riverdale for their final musical festival, will long linger in their memories. We are confident there shall be no difficulty in getting the Peterborough band to attend another of these gatherings.

The band also appreciates very much the kindness of the Commissioner and Chief Secretary re the arrangement of the band photo, and were delighted when they heard that Col. Mitchell would also be in the group. They will ever cherish memories of the Congress.

OBITUARY

J. KERR.

The death, which occurred on Saturday Nov. 20th, removed one of the oldest residents of South Monaghan, Mr. J. Kerr, at the age of 83 years. The deceased was a native of South Monaghan and had resided in the township during all his life. He married Miss Mary Graham, a native of Ireland. His wife survives him, and four sons and four daughters, Mr. George Kerr, of Vancouver; Mr. John Kerr, of Souris, Manitoba; Mr. Robert Kerr, of Alberta, and Mr. James Kerr, Belmont, Manitoba; Mrs. Wm. Armour, Vernon, B.C.; Mrs. John English, Chilliwac, B.C., and Miss Annie Kerr, at home. The funeral took place from the family residence, to the Methodist cemetery, South Monaghan. The pall-bearers were Messrs. John Buchanan, George Wood, James Dawson, W. Finley and Robert Fisher.

The late Mr Kerr was a Conservative in politics. He was reeve of the township for many years, and took a sincere interest in its affairs. He was an attendant of the local Methodist church, and was highly respected for his well-known integrity and friendliness.

SLEET STORM CAUSES INCONVENIENCE IN CITY

Street Cars Unable to Run Owing to Ice Coating on Trolley Wires—Wires Fall and Limbs are Broken Off Trees.

"Ain't it awful!" said the prim young thing as she made her way down to work this morning with an umbrella in one hand and a death-grip on her skirt with the other. The street was slippery and slushy, a mixture of sleet and rain was falling in a style not particularly gentle, and the wind flirted with her skirt in the most provoking manner. "Awful," was the proper word to describe it. The new Canadian navy would have made a hit if it could have been in commission on the streets for the street cars were out of business for a good part of the day. The sleet encased the trolley wires and shut off the power to run the cars. On Park street at noon a short circuit was formed and a sizzling wire came in contact with the limb of a tree and burned it out. A number of wires fell in the city during the day and the power and lighting companies were put to some inconvenience. No accidents are reported as a result of wires falling. A number of telephones were also put out of commission owing to trouble to the wires.

The sleet formed so thickly on the trees that the limbs bent down as if extending a welcome to the earth. Some broke off and fell to the ground.

The power companies anticipate serious results if the sleet keeps on falling much longer.

BOWLING ALLEYS ARE COMPLETED

Two Excellent Ones at Armouries—Game Will Be Popular.

The bowling alleys at the Armouries have been completed and were in use for the first time on Saturday night. There are two alleys, of regulation length and finished in the most up-to-date manner. They are equipped with small and large balls and small and large pins. The small balls and pins are used for playing "duck-pins." Bowling is sure to become very popular among the military men and it is likely that a league will be formed in the near future.

Cuts Did Not Arrive.

A cut of the new church of the Sacred Heart and one of his Lordship Bishop O'Connor, which were to have been used in connection with the "write-up" of the opening of the new edifice, did not arrive from Toronto in time for to-day's issue. They will be published to-morrow.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

NOT A DOLLAR

Not a dollar is mentioned in the Parliamentary estimates just brought down, for the city of Peterborough. Not a dollar has been set aside for wharves, etc., at the foot of Wolfe st., where the crowding of boats is both a disgrace and a danger. Perhaps this is the punishment that is being meted out to the city for not having given a majority in favor of the Government at the last election. Well! The supplementary estimates are yet to come down and the City Council, Board of Trade, etc., will no doubt see to it that the Government is duly impressed with the necessity of action. Agitation will do a good deal and now is the time for it. The wharves required have for so long been a necessity that it is little less than astounding that no appropriation was made for them.

WHITHER ARE WE DRIFTING?

(The Montreal Gazette.)

The Montreal Herald follows the Ottawa Free Press in holding that Sir Wilfrid Laurier was right when he laid it down that in the event of Great Britain being engaged in a European war it would be for Canada to say whether it would share in the conflict or remain neutral. This is in keeping with the readiness of the Government to take over the military stations at Esquimalt and Halifax, and with the getting rid of the requirement that the commander of the Canadian militia must be an officer who had attained a stated rank in the British army. But, to what do those who favour it think it is leading?

We should not be surprised if the Liberals win in B. C., or rather the Opposition, which many Conservatives have joined. Mr. McBride appears to have done "some things."

THE LIGHTING OF THE CANAL

To Mr. J. Harris McClellan, Superintendent of the Trent Valley Canal, is due the credit of having the canal from Peterborough to Lakefield lighted by electricity. It was found some years ago that the operation of the Lift Lock was impossible at night without light, and Mr. McClellan at the time, when a slight accident in the working of the lock attracted public attention, told the Review that he had been urging the department at Ottawa to put something in "the estimates" for that purpose. The Department has done so. The Review backed the Superintendent up in this request at the time, since it was manifestly necessary if the lock was to be worked at night time that it should not run the risk of further accident.

MEETING AT CONSERVATIVE CLUB ROOMS PROTESTS AGAINST LAURIER'S POLICY OF SEPARATION

Irritation Expressed That the British Admiralty's Request for a Naval Unit Had Been Turned Down by Canada—Demand Made That the Request of Great Britain be Complied With, as Making for Unity of Empire—Loud Cheersand Standing Vote.

The proceedings at the Conservative Club rooms on Saturday night, left no doubt in the minds of those present that the Laurier naval policy, aiming as it does, at complete Canadian independence, will never be carried into effect by the consent of the people who stand for unity of empire.

Mr. W. E. Murphy, vice-president, was in the chair and called upon Mr. J. H. Burnham to state the object of the meeting.

Mr. Burnham stated that the official records just come to hand showed how utterly Canada's representatives had misrepresented British Canadian sentiment at the recent conference convened by Great Britain in London, for the inauguration of a system of imperial defence. Nothing was lacking to make this conference authoritative and representative of Great Britain and the empire. The premier of Great Britain was the head of the movement, and delegates were present from every colony. The result was a matured plan for the empire's defence and a loyal contribution of a fleet-unit to the one proposed great imperial fleet by every member of the Empire, EXCEPT CANADA, who, in spite of Great Britain's urgent request, and of the very patent necessity of the case turned down, through her representatives, Great Britain's proposal. Sir Wilfrid's alternative policy is the absurd travesty of a "home-fleet that is not meant to leave Canadian waters and could not leave them if it wanted to. The expenditure proposed, it must be remembered, is much greater for the "independent" navy than for the "naval unit." In view of all these things he would like, to ask one question: "Why was it that Sir Wilfrid Laurier declined to endorse the principle of imperial unity, at the same time proposing a separate and independent Canadian Navy that is not to act in concert with the other fleet, as a matter of course, but only when the "Parliament of Canada may see fit to allow it to do so!" He contended that the whole conduct of Canada's representatives showed what, at last, we are being brought to. It was high time to show Great Britain that we Canadians were one with the empire, and not "separate and independent," and, therefore, he begged leave to move, seconded by Mr. D. N. Marshall, that: "Whereas the British Admiralty representing the British nation, did recommend at the great naval and military defence conference, called by it, to meet in London in July last, that Canada provide as her contribution to the defence of the Empire a "naval unit" of the one united imperial fleet rather than an independent fleet acting independently of the central authority; and whereas, the policy now before the Canadian Parliament for consideration is in direct defiance of that request and provides for a separate Canadian navy, not at all times ready to join in defence of the Empire, but only when Parliament may see fit; and whereas the time has come for Canada to make good its professions of loyalty in the manner requested by the Admiralty and as Australia, New Zealand, etc., have done; THEREFORE, be it resolved that Canada's contribution be a "Naval Unit," as requested by Great Britain, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Borden."

The resolution was carried amid loud cheering, by a standing vote.

Mr. J. H. Gardiner and others expressed their fear that those at the helm in Canada were fast steering her to separation. It is plain, it was said, that the present state of British connection is considered good enough, only because it is nothing at all. When it was to be put into practical shape it is seen what has happened. What is Canada's future to be!

It was hoped that the Conservative party would see that the Laurier scheme did not carry.

NEW ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH DEDICATED AUSPICIOUS OPENING OF THE PARISH

Church of the Sacred Heart a Speaking Monument to the Magnificent Growth of Roman Catholicism in Peterboro'—Dignitaries of the Church Preached the Sermons at the Dedication and at Pontifical Vespers—Rev. Dr. O'Brien Chosen by His Lordship Bishop O'Connor as Parish Priest.

Sunday, November 21st is a day long to be remembered in the annals of the Roman Catholic Church in the diocese and city of Peterborough, for it marked the establishment in the southern part of the city of a new centre of ecclesiastical energy and influence.

The Church of the Sacred Heart which was yesterday dedicated to the holy offices of religion is at once a stately monument to the faithfulness of the chief shepherd of the diocese as well as to the zeal and devotion on behalf of the church shown by the clergy under his immediate authority. St. Peter's cathedral the pristine seat of the Catholic religion in Peterborough, ample as it was regarded a few years ago for the accommodation of the worshippers has become inadequate to serve its overflowing congregation. The growth of the city in the south portion and its increase in Catholic population marked it a suitable place for a new church and the handsome edifice that stands at the corner of Aylmer and Romaine streets is a magnificent material expression of a recognized want.

The dedication of the new church was accompanied by a circumstance which augurs the greatest success of its missions and is at the same time a tribute to the learning piety and zeal of a son of the new parish born within its bounds—Rev. Dr. O'Brien, who has been chosen by His Lordship, Bishop O'Connor, as the first priest of the parish. His Lordship's high compliment to the worth and qualities of Dr. O'Brien, was given with a full knowledge of the work of the clergyman chosen, not only in the especial duties to which he was consecrated but in effectively promoting as well the sobriety and moral advancement of the members of the parish of Peterborough.

The significance of the occasion was further emphasized by the presence of high dignitaries of the church—His Grace Archbishop Gauthier of Kingston, His Grace Archbishop McEvay of Toronto, who was for years associated with the diocese and parish of Peterborough, and of His Lordship Bishop Scollard of the diocese of Sault Ste. Marie, a former member of St. Peter's clerical staff, and a native of the township of Ennismore.

The new church, the seating of which is placed at one thousand, contained probably a couple of hundred more than that number at both the dedication ceremony and vespers. On both occasions extra seating capacity had to be provided and even then many were forced to stand.

THE DEDICATION

At 10.30 in the morning the church was solemnly blessed by His Lordship Bishop O'Connor, after which Pontifical High Mass was sung by His Grace Archbishop Gauthier, assisted by Rev. Dr. Burke of Toronto as deacon and Rev. Father McColl, rector of St. Peter's cathedral, as sub-deacon. Venerable Archdeacon Casey of Lindsay was the assistant priest and Rev. Dr. O'Brien master of ceremonies. Within the sanctuary there were also present His Grace Archbishop McEvay, His Lordship Bishop O'Connor and Bishop Scollard of Sault Ste. Marie.

An appropriate and interesting sermon was preached by Archbishop McEvay, who took as his text; 7th chapter, 2nd book of Paralipomenon, "My eyes shall be opened and my ears attentive to the prayer of him that shall pray in this place."

MOST REVEREND F. P. McEVAY, Archbishop of Toronto.

He referred to the splendor of the ancient temple of Jerusalem and dwelt upon the care given to its building by Solomon. If, His Grace said, such piety was shown in the erection of the Jewish temples which contained only a symbol of God's presence how justifiable it was on the part of Christians to erect such a splendid structure to house the real presence of Christ in the Blessed Eucharist. He made extended reference to the uses for which churches were built and congratulated the people of the new parish on their magnificent edifice. He hoped that it would mean greater virtue and piety, and greater faith and devotion on the part of those in whose midst it had been placed.

His Lordship advised the congregation in strong terms on the great value of faith and its significance to them. We knew what to do to get eternal reward. There was surely no cause for any member of the congregation of the Church of the Sacred Heart to have any doubt or despair.

Faith teaches us that we shouldn't lose sight of what is placed before us in the gospel. When all is said and done and all is drawn down to the proper level a man only has one chance—the chance between heaven and hell. It makes no difference if he believes or doesn't believe. He may deny God and heaven and hell; but that can't make any difference. The sentence of the just shall be everlasting life and the wicked shall enter into everlasting punishment. That is the end of it all. There is no appeal from that sentence. It is the closing scene.

"Therefore, my friends, I hope and pray that you will take advantage of this magnificent church and obtain the blessings of God and everlasting life. Pay no attention to what you hear about the new religion and the new faith. What are they compared to everlasting life?"

His Grace said he knew of nothing that would bring more blessing into the community than the building of the Church of the Sacred Heart.

BISHOP'S EULOGY OF NEW PARISH PRIEST.

At the conclusion of the mass His Lordship Bishop O'Connor expressed his satisfaction on the opening of the church, and made the announcement that mass would be held in it on Sundays at 8.30 and 10.30 and through the week at 7.30. Vespers would be held on Sundays at 7 o'clock.

He had deemed it advisable to appoint a parish priest to live among the congregation of the Church of the Sacred Heart. In selecting one who, he thought, would be most deserving of the position and would be an honor to his parish he had chosen Rev. Dr. O'Brien. The bishop praised Dr. O'Brien for the great work he had done for temperance and for the spiritual welfare of those with whom he had come in contact. In fitting words in the course of his remarks His Lordship paid the highest tributes to the worth and faithfulness of the newly appointed parish priest who in a few days would be a resident among his parishioners.

The bishop thanked all those who had made donations to the church and all who had any share in the erection and completion of the beautiful building. It had been his desire to have the church one of the finest in the diocese and it was. In expressing his gratitude His Lordship was thankful not only to those of the Catholic faith who had shown their interest in the church but to thoughtful friends of other denominations as well.

In expressing his appreciation of the gifts of the donors of the altar, the statues and windows, he said he would refer to these donations later on, giving the names of the donors, and explaining the significance of the figures on the windows. He told of his delight and thanksgiving that the church had been built and dedicated to Almighty God, and thanked the dignitaries and assisting priests for the part they had taken in the ceremony.

HIS LORDSHIP BISHOP SCOLLARD

Who Preached an Eloquent Sermon at Vespers.

PONTIFICAL VESPERS.

In the evening Pontifical Vespers were sung by His Grace Archbishop Gauthier. He was assisted by Ven. Archdeacon Casey of Lindsay and Rev. Father Kelly of the cathedral staff. Rev. Dr. O'Brien was master of ceremonies. His Grace Archbishop McEvay, His Lordship Bishop Scollard and His Lordship Bishop O'Connor were also within the sanctuary.

A POWERFUL SERMON

The sermon was preached by His Lordship Bishop Scollard and was a masterpiece of eloquence and convincing logic of the holy and far-reaching work and influence of the Catholic church. The text was taken from 92 psalm, 5th verse; "Holiness becometh Thy house O Lord unto the length of days."

"During the past two years or more you have seen this edifice rise gradually from its foundations; you have seen the tradesmen and laborers at work setting stone upon stone, timber upon timber, bringing out day by day the symmetrical lines of construction and making from that chaos of material the magnificent edifice we now occupy this evening."

The Almighty had set the church apart as a house of God and a house of prayer and it would be the treasure house of divine grace and benediction. The hearers were members of the church and in their acceptance of the term—the Catholic Church. It meant for them more than the actual edifice. It meant a living society, a perfect organization endowed by the Saviour, endowed by Him with all-powerful means to stand by them and save their immortal souls. The Organizer of this perfect society said, "Upon this rock I build My church." And he designated that church as Catholic or universal. But besides the mark of catholicity by which the Kingdom of God was to be recognized throughout the ages He set other marks which would be also recognized all over the world. Among these was holiness. The Catholic church was conspicuous for its holiness.

Before the church was founded it was spoken of by the prophets. It was the masterpiece of God's master hand to continue His work for the enlightenment and sanctification of souls. In the words of the apostles "Christ loved the church and gave Himself for it that He might sanctify it. The apostles in their symbol of faith had inserted this: "I believe in the holy Catholic church."

"Here you are this evening my friends," said the preacher, "and you can go back two thousand years and say with the apostles, 'I believe in the holy Catholic church.'"

History of the past had shown us that all the nations of Europe were converted from paganism and shown the light by the Catholic church. The Catholic church stood alone as having civilized all the nations of Europe. The first of these was Rome. Over thirty who sat in the chair of Peter gave up their lives for the faith. After the Catholic church had been established in Rome it turned its attention to the conversion of the other European peoples with glorious result. The speaker told of the sending out of the different ambassadors of the church to the nations and in this they had overwhelming evidence of the power of the church for the sanctification of souls. In order that the last relics of paganism might be eradicated from the hearts of the converted, the first thing the church did was to dot the nations with universities and schools. And these were not only institutions of learning and science but of virtue and sanctity, and even in the face of this were found newspapers and reviews contending that the church was the foe of enlightenment and learning. All the martyrs of the middle ages, all the early fathers and doctors and others famous in history for their great religious sacrifice—all these belonged to the Catholic church.

His Lordship at some length called attention to the superior position the Catholic church occupied in the matter of religious orders and sisterhood, and in the great Christian work of charity. The church had done a noble work through the self-sacrifice of the followers of our Lord who had shut themselves off from the vanities of the world and consecrated their lives to Christian charity and devotion. They had obeyed the admonition of the Saviour to the rich young man: "Sell all thou hast, give it to the poor and come and follow Me."

"You my friends have the great blessing to be members of the Catholic

THIS IS WAY TO DEAL WITH THEM

When the Detroit baseball club played in Havana they were dissatisfied with the decisions of the umpire and prepared to leave the field. A colored police officer prevented the Americans from leaving the field however, and said if they didn't continue to play he would have them arrested, as the people had paid admission to see the game.

SPORTING TALK

The Lindsay rugby club is $40 to the bad.

Jim Jeffries' hand is only 9 1-2 inches round.

There will be a noise like a graveyard in Hamilton for the next few days.

This has been a bad year for the favorites—even Lindsay lost.

Longboat and Shrubb meet Tuesday night in Winnipeg for a 10 mile trot.

A meeting of the players of the Christian Hockey Club is called for to-night in Dr. Wightman's office. Important business will come up for discussion.

There is talk in Kingston of re-organizing the old Frontenac Hockey Club to take the place of the 14th Regiment Club in the senior O.H.A. series.

Battling Nelson will appear at the Star Theatre, Toronto, all next week.

TOM ECK WILL HANDLE FRED. SIMPSON AGAIN

Toronto, Nov. 19.—Tom Eck, the veteran trainer of runners, cyclists, long distance pedistrians, and other athletes, and Fred Simpson, the Objibway Thunderbolt, have not parted company.

Far from it. The big Indian leaves before Christmas for Tom Eck's camp and will campaign during the winter under Eck's direction.

Eck, in a letter to Tom Flanagan, says: "Simpson is a man I don't quite understand yet, and I am going to try him again. When he won the Brighton Beach Marathon he showed me that he had the speed and stamina for he beat a good field in good time. I didn't think he was in shape when he ran that race, and just when I thought he was best he ran poorest. I don't think the boy needs the stiff training I gave him. I'll take him easier this winter."

Simpson says he is eager to tackle the big fellows again.

"I like that 26 mile route," he says. "In fact, I don't begin to show until after 15 miles."

RUGBY

Captain Jack Williams and Stronach were the star performers for the winners.

Ben Simpson and his team mates did not play their usual effective game, but that does not let them out at all.

The championship of the 'Big Four' is settled, and the Ottawa Rough Riders have put it over the Hamilton Tigers by a 11—8 score. The unexpected happened, for it was conceded by the majority that the Mountaineers would capture the honors. Ottawa won the toss and started off kicking with the strong wind, and at the end of the first quarter the score stood 9—0 in their favor, and at half time 9—5. They outplayed their opponents throughout the contest and won on their merits.

The cup donated by Earl Grey, Governor-General of Canada, goes to the champion club of the Canadian Rugby Union, the games to be played according to Section 1 of the regulations, as adopted three years ago, as follows:—

Section 11.—The senior championship of the union shall be contested for in 11909 on the grounds of the winners of the Intercollegiate and Ontario Unions; in 1910 on the grounds of the winners of the Ontario and Interprovincial Unions; in 1911 on the grounds of the Interprovincial and Intercollegiate Unions.

Thus, next Saturday, Ottawas (Inter-provincial champions) play on Varsity grounds, which the students name Rosedale, the winners to meet Parkdale a week later on. The field of the Ontario champions, also likely Rosedale, even if there is snow on the ground. It looks hard on the Rough Riders, but its only the natural, though, for Ottawa unfortunate, course of events.

It is to be hoped that provision is also made for the next two years.

CURLING

A meeting of the members of the Peterborough Curling Club will be held in the Bank of Montreal Chambers on Thursday evening at 8o'clock for the election of skips and the transaction of other business.

SLEET STOPPED THE CITY CLOCK

The clock over the market hall stopped at twenty minutes to ten this morning and was at a standstill till the middle of the afternoon. The sleet blew in and clogged the wheels and the "works" refused to work. It was necessary for a man to climb up in the belfry and clear out the ice in order to get the clock started.

PERSONAL

Mr. J. W. Dixon left this morning for Toronto, where he has accepted a position with the Massey-Harris Co.

Mrs. Jas. Long will be at home to her friends to-morrow, Nov. 23th, and the following third and fourth Tuesdays of each month.

Mrs. Arthur Stevenson will receive on Wednesday afternoon, November 24th. Fraulein Stolle, of Boston, will receive with her.

Friday was the 38th anniversary of the arrival of the second Red River expedition at Fort Garry.

NEW CATHOLIC CHURCH DEDICATED

church. The church is empowered with authority from on High to teach the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. She stands for scientific truth, dogmatic truth and moral truth—the truth of Christ and the apostles."

For both the mass and vespers the choir of St. Peter's was present and gave the anthems, responses and solos in their usual highly acceptable and expressive manner. The music was especially appropriate for the solemnly important occasions. Miss Doherty, the capable leader of the choir, presided at the organ.

REV. M. J. O'BRIEN, D. D.

Who Will be in Charge of the New Parish.

It will be learned with great satisfaction in the city and diocese of Peterborough that the Rev. Dr. O'Brien has been appointed the first rector for the Church of the Sacred Heart, the new and second Roman Catholic church in this city. The announcement was made by his Lordship Bishop O'Connor at the morning service which marked the opening and dedication of the new church.

Rev. Dr. O'Brien will enter upon his new duties at once, and as soon as possible will take up his residence in the parish of the Church of the Sacred Heart. In the meantime his headquarters will be at St. Peter's rectory.

Rev. Dr. O'Brien was born in Peterborough in 1874, and has lived the greater part of his life in the new parish, where he is known by all and held in the highest esteem. He was educated in the Separate schools and Collegiate Institute in this city. Afterwards he graduated from St. Michael's College in Toronto, and the Grand Seminary in Montreal. He afterwards took a post graduate course of two years at Rome, and for the past ten years he has been connected with St. Peter's Cathedral, as curate.

Rev. Dr. O'Brien, rector of the parish of the Sacred Heart, is well qualified for his position. As a priest he is honored and revered; as a preacher he is earnest, eloquent and able, and as a worker he has few superiors. It is due to him that St. Peter's T.A.S. has achieved such success, and it is in connection with the work with that society that he is probably best known, and it is there where he can count on all the members as loyal friends and true followers. The whole community will join in extending to Rev. Dr. O'Brien congratulations upon his elevation in the priesthood, and all will extend to him their best wishes for the greatest success in his work.

PEOPLE WANT PICTURE AGAIN

"Briton and Boer" Will be Given To-Night at Crystal—A Five Piece Orchestra.

Owing to the popular demand, the magnificent picture, "Briton and Boer," which has provided such a realistic entertainment to the Crystal audiences, will be again given this evening. A special orchestra of five pieces including Mr. Benny Clarke, first violinist of the orchestra of the Royal Alexandra Theatre, Toronto, will provide the music.

The picture is said to be one of the most striking and interesting of the year.

Minnie M. Dead.

Mr. George Lipsett, Ashburnham, has had the misfortune to lose Minnie M., his little grey trotter. The animal developed a case of lock-jaw and died this morning.

THE SINCERE ENCOMIUMS OF THE MEMBERS

Regret Expressed at T. A. S. Meeting on Dr. O'Brien's Retirement.

A splendid meeting of the T. A. S. was held yesterday afternoon in the assembly room of St. Peter's school, when 47 new members were initiated, bringing the constantly increasing membership of the society to over nine hundred and fifty. The president, Mr. J. L. Picard, was in the chair.

Rev. Dr. O'Brien announced that owing to the new duties imposed upon him as rector of the Sacred Heart parish it was necessary for him to relinquish the office of spiritual director of the society. Rev. Father McColl, who was present, highly commended the retiring spiritual director for his unselfish and very effective work in connection with the society. He stated that he had not yet appointed Dr. O'Brien's successor for the important office.

GROWTH OF THE T. A. S.

St. Peter's T. A. S., which is recognized by all denominations of the city as a power for good, was founded ten years ago by Rev. Father O'Sullivan on January 8th, 1900. Shortly afterwards Father O'Sullivan was removed from Peterborough and Rev. Father O'Brien took up the duties of spiritual director. By his untiring and conscientious efforts of organization the society's growth has been remarkable, and it is now one of the most flourishing bodies of its kind on the continent.

REV. DR. O'BRIEN'S REMARKS.

Rev. Dr. O'Brien referred to the amiable relations existing between himself and the members, and the encouraging support they had invariably given him. He had been pleased to work among them and insisted upon the fact that the success of the society could not depend upon the work of one man alone, but needed the co-operation of everyone, and this co-operation had always been forthcoming.

In conclusion the speaker said that the T.A.S. having donated the high altar in the new church, he assured the members of a memento in his daily mass, and hoped and prayed that the society would always continue in its present flourishing state.

A GENERAL REGRET

Mr. Joseph Begley expressed the feeling of the meeting on the resignation of Rev. Dr. O'Brien, and what would be a distinct loss to St. Peter's and the T.A.S. would be a decided gain to the parish of the Sacred Heart. He referred to the great success achieved by the doctor in the interests of temperance, and hoped his successor would continue the good work.

Ald. Jos. Duffus voiced the sentiment expressed by Mr. Begley in a happily-worded speech, in which he congratulated the doctor on his earnest and successful work, and wished him further success in his new parish.

Nicaraguan Troops Deserting.

Bluefields, Nicaragua, Nov. 22. (By wireless via Colon, Nov. 21.) One hundred men of Zelaya's troops, with rifles, came into Gen. Estrada's camp at El Salto Friday night and surrendered to the leader of the revolution. They were in a starving condition and were poorly clad and without shoes. The men said that the balance of Zelaya's forces in the Rama district have little or nothing to eat and are anxious to join Gen. Estrada.

The British cruiser Scylla arrived at Greytown yesterday.

Citizenship for Jews.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 22.—During the last hours of its recent session the Diet of Finland, by a vote of 112 to 45, adopted a law of Jewish rights which confers citizenship upon Jews who are natives or have been residents of the country for ten years.

It places Jews on an equal footing with other foreigners, abolishing mediaeval restrictions which confine them to three towns within which they might reside and conduct business.

Royalists Will Join the Pope.

Paris, Nov. 22.—The royalists yesterday issued a manifesto announcing their intention to unite with the Catholics at the coming general election in opposition to those candidates who are not in sympathy with the church's attitude regarding the public school.

WANTS HER LETTER PUBLISHED

For Benefit of Women who Suffer from Female Ills

Minneapolis, Minn.—"I was a great sufferer from female troubles which caused a weakness and broken down condition of the system. I read so much of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other suffering women I felt sure it would help me, and I must say it did help me wonderfully. My pains all left me, I grew stronger, and within three months I was a perfectly well woman.

"I want this letter made public to show the benefit women may derive from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. JOHN G. MOLDAN, 2115 Second St., North, Minneapolis, Minn.

Thousands of unsolicited and genuine testimonials like the above prove the efficiency of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made exclusively from roots and herbs.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

If you want special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. She will treat your letter as strictly confidential. For 20 years she has been helping sick women in this way, free of charge. Don't hesitate — write at once.

TWO FINE ADDRESSES ON LOCAL OPTION QUESTION

Large Audience at the Sunday Afternoon Meeting in Grand Opera House—Convincing Statements Made by Two Excellent Speakers.

A large and attentive audience, and two splendid addresses marked the meeting in the interests of local option at the Grand Opera House yesterday afternoon. The points dealt upon by the speakers, Mr. John A. Paterson, K.C., and Rev. Beverley Smith, both of West Toronto, were those which are before the public eye to-day and being discussed by the advocates for the closed bar and the opposition. The calm and sincere manner in which both gentlemen delivered their remarks, must have made a deep impression on the minds of the big gathering before them.

While the offering was being taken up Mr. Bernard Laster arose from his seat on the ground floor and asked the chairman, Sheriff Hall, if he would be allowed to ask a question, but received no answer from the platform. There were cries from different parts of the house of "sit down," and this he did.

Mr. Paterson was the first called upon to speak and in his opening remarks he dwelt on the responsibility resting on each one in regard to the question of local option, which, if it comes in force in Peterborough, will not only benefit this city, but other places also; and what is done on January 3rd will be of world-wide importance. Mr. Paterson said he did not come to speak about the horrors caused by whiskey, as they could be seen everywhere. And who is to blame for it? We ourselves. The business of the hotelman is a perfectly legitimate one, but the law that makes it so, can also make it illegitimate. The people and the government of Ontario made the law, and it is now their duty to pass another to prohibit the sale of liquor over the bar. The bar is a legal thing, but to show how exceptional it is the speaker gave a number of points which differentiates the liquor business from others. One was that no liquor license can be issued to a member of a municipal council, or to his partner, wife, son or daughter. The reason for this must be, said Mr. Paterson, that the municipalities don't want officials who are mixed up with the liquor business. It can't be trusted. I want the people of this city to say that this business is no good when they go to the polls on January 3rd, and if local option comes into force it will mean a big victory, for it will be the first city in Ontario to pass the by-law, despite the statement made that it couldn't be carried in a city.

REV. MR. SMITH:

"Abolish the bar and you ruin your town,' is what some will tell you, and that means that you people can't do business until you get drunk, said Mr. Smith, in the course of his address. During the six years local option has been in force in No. seven ward of Toronto city, formerly West Toronto, the saving deposits in a savings bank have increased $100,000. With the open bar doing business there were no streets paved, and there was a cry from the opposition about the big loss from license fees which would result if local option came in force. In the six years of "no bars" the streets have been paved. In that time the population has risen from 7,000 to 12,000. To-day there are seven banks against two before local option came in force. In four years the sales of a butcher, which in the first year were $2,100, jumped to $38,000 in the face of considerable opposition. Again, there is a case of a hotelkeeper, who made $45,000 by liquor selling, investing the money in property on a business corner. The man said before local option was introduced that the town would go to blue ruin. I do not say that there is no drinking, for the old topers will get it some way or other. But it is the boys we are after, and if you take away the facilities for drinking you do away with the drink.

Mr. Smith referred to many incidents which had come under his notice, in which liquor played a prominent part with deadly effect, and his interesting address was one that would impress the most skeptical.

STICK WILL TELL IF POLE REACHED

If Shadow Does Not Vary You are There Say Geologists

London, Nov. 16.—The Royal Geographical society yesterday discussed the question of how to determine positions at the North Pole. Capt. Scott, the Antarctic explorer, said the simplest test, if the Pole were actually reached, was to fix a stick vertically and to watch its shadow all day. If it did not vary at all in length the position would be proven with absolute accuracy. He believed that the theodolite was the best instrument for taking observations. A natural horizon was hopeless, and he had no faith in artificial horizons in low altitudes.

Admiral Beaumont said the search for the North Pole might be regarded as finished. The American Geographical Society had certified that Commander Peary had been there, and it was not likely that anybody else would attempt to get there.

Another member said he hoped scientists would accept that certificate, which had been given by men competent to judge. The scientific attitude towards Dr. Cook could be described by the Scotch verdict of 'not proven.'

ANNOYS LADIES ON THE STREET

Man Smiles and Bows to Strangers in North End of City.

It is reported that a tall man, who is old enough to know better, has been annoying young ladies on George street north. He walks up and down the street at night and smiles and bows to ladies with whom he is not acquainted. Someone is likely to hit him with a brick if he persists in these actions.

WHY HERE'S OUR OLD FRIEND COGAN

A tramp slack wire walker, who says he is a Boer and a native of the Orange Free State, South Africa, entertained about one hundred persons on Court House green last night on a wire strung between two trees. The stranger, who presents a wild and wooly appearance with a luxuriant growth of whiskers, certainly delivered the goods. His performance was indeed the best of its kind ever seen in Brockville. At the close he passed the hat and gathered in a few shekels. —Brockville Times.

FINEST SHOW OF THE KIND

A Guelph Opinion of a Magnificent Show

Guelph, Nov. 20th, 1909.

Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons, Peterborough, Ont.

Gentlemen,—I believe you play "Two Women and That Man" at an early date. If so, I will say that you are getting the finest show of that kind I have ever seen. Scenery, company and show wonderful. Away ahead of "The Wolfe." The storm scene in the third act is marvelous. Don't let your public think they are getting a cheap drama. It is simply great. Any boost you can give this show the public will thank you very sincerely.

Yours truly,
JOHN C. GREEN.

AUSTRALIA'S VIEWS ON THE ALL-RED STEAMSHIP SERVICE

Hon. Mr. Thomas, Postmaster-General of the Commonwealth, Says That Government Proprietorship of Proposed Service is Only Solution.

Ottawa, Nov. 23.—"I may, however, add that the representative of Australia would be instructed to urge that the steamers to be employed in the service should be owned and controlled by the several Governments concerned. The main object of the enterprise being to knit more closely scattered portions of the Empire, we are convinced that only by Government ownership can this object be attended with that maximum advantage to our respective countries."

This important declaration upon the policy of Government ownership is contained in a letter addressed by Hon. Mr. Thomas, Postmaster-General of Australia, to Dr. R. M. Coulter, who was sent to Australia and New Zealand and Great Britain by the Canadian Government early this year, to promote negotiations regarding the all-red steamship route project.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier laid on the table of the House yesterday the report of Dr. Coulter. While New Zealand agrees to name a delegate to wait on the Imperial authorities, and urge them to take such steps as will lead to the inauguration of the proposed service, nothing of a definite nature was accomplished insofar as Australia was concerned. A promise was given by Premier Fisher's Government, which has since gone out of power, that in the event of either Great Britain or Canada calling a further conference, a delegate from Australia would be named. Australia refused, however, to commit itself to any share of the cost, on the ground that the Commonwealth could not do anything until the expiration of the limitation of its expenditure fixed by the constitution.

AUTOMOBILE FELL OFF A 40 FOOT BRIDGE

Cuthbert, Ga., Nov. 23.—Horace Sheppard, who was fatally hurt Sunday night when the automobile in which he and his bride-to-be, Miss Helen Mattox, were seeking a clergyman, fell off a 40-foot bridge upon a railroad track, died yesterday. Curtis Williams, the chauffeur, was killed. Miss Mattox and James Lumley were injured. Miss Mary Mattox, a sister of the bride-elect, escaped without injury.

All the Cuthbert ministers had refused to marry the couple on account of their youth, neither of them having passed 20. The party hastily left town. Speeding along at a rate of 30 miles an hour, and while attempting to light a cigarette, Chauffeur Williams lost control of his machine.

SAYS CANADA IS THE GAINER

Boston, Nov. 23.—W. O. Sealey M.P., of Wentworth, Ont., addressed the Boston Canadian Club last night on "International Trade and Commerce." Incidentally, he pointed out that Col. Graham, president of the club, and Dr. MacPhatler, president of the New York Canadian Club, are both natives of Wentworth.

Mr. Sealey gave a splendid description of Canada's resources and progress, and made the point that while the Payne-Aldrich tariff almost entirely prohibited the import of Canadian pulpwood, and sought to add five cents a bushel on the import duty of Canadian wheat, this had only served in the one case to advertise Canada the world over and prompted British capital to invest in two large paper mill ventures, and in the other advertised the fact that the United States regarded Canadian wheat as worth more than their own.

"So you see Canada is away ahead on both counts as a result of the effect of the Payne-Aldrich bill in this particular respect," said Mr. Sealey.

IMPORTANT CHANGE IN ASSESSMENTS

Toronto, Nov. 23.—Some important changes in the Assessment Act will be discussed by the special committee of the Ontario Legislature appointed at last session to deal with the proposed amendments to the act, which meets to-day at the Parliament buildings.

While the members elect their own chairman, it is understood that Hon. W. J. Hanna will be chosen for the office.

Of the 66 suggested amendments on the program, those which are regarded as the most contentious are the ones dealing with railway taxation, with the business assessment of retail merchants, of clubs and of express companies, and the assessment of farm lands in cities, towns and villages.

Petitions have been received from 195 municipalities asking for power to tax improvement values at a lower rate than land values. It is proposed to treat the business assessment of incomes and salaries as a tax on improvements, the difference in the rate in each case to be determined by the municipality.

GIRL DIES FROM BITE OF SNAKE

Amsterdam, Ga., Nov. 23.—Miss Belle Jones, eighteen years old, daughter of the leading merchant here, is dead as a result of being struck by a great rattler while walking in the flower gardens at her home.

The snake was coiled under a rose bush and struck Miss Jones on the leg between the ankle and the knee and clung there. The girl ran screaming to the house, dragging the snake with her. Her father snatched the snake from her leg with his hands. The snake was seven feet long. The marks of its fangs on the girl's leg were over three inches apart. She died in terrible agony five hours later.

RAGS WERE BURNING

Firemen Found Bundle That May Have Started Fire.

Barrie, Nov. 23.—The inquest into the Guthrie fires of last week resumed yesterday. While the firemen had been at the residence of S. J. Guthrie they were called to the Music Hall block, which was gutted. The Music Hall was occupied by Guthrie. Evidence given at the inquest Friday revealed that insurance had been placed on the Music Hall that same afternoon and that during the day arrangements had been made for the removal of trunks from the Guthrie residence. Mrs. Guthrie testified that these trunks were the property of a guest, a Miss Meeks, whose identity is somewhat of a mystery.

Yesterday morning Jessie Montgomery, adopted daughter of the Guthries, was closely examined as to her acquaintance with the mysterious "Miss Meeks," who Mrs. Guthrie had stated on Friday accompanied her to Allandale, when she made arrangements for the shipment of Miss Meeks' trunks to Elmvale. Miss Montgomery said she did not know her in Peterboro, and although she had slept in the same room with Clara Guthrie and Miss Meeks for one week, some three weeks ago, she knew her but slightly. After examining the trunks, which had been seized by the police, she said they might be Clara Guthrie's, but she was not sure.

Two firemen testified to finding burning rags and a strong odor of kerosene.

M. W. Swayze, a prominent farmer of Grantham Township and former reeve, aged 64, died at St. Catharines yesterday.

Rizzo, who murdered two children at Utica, N.Y., in September, was electrocuted yesterday at Auburn prison. He showed no fear.

Official reports received at the British offices throughout China show that progress is being made for the suppression of the traffic in opium in all of the eighteen provinces.

Australian merchants are anxious for a subsidised Australian-Canadian steamship line, as after January 1 the U. S. shipping ring will be in control of the present freight facilities.

The death sentence of John Dillon calls attention to previous executions in Montreal. Since 1827 there have been 38 sentences, including 12 executed for the '38 rebellion. Of the 38 only six have been commuted, the first one being in 1886. Only one woman has been executed in the past 82 years.

SLACKNESS IN MARINE DEPARTMENT CAUSED THE WRECK OF THE HESTIA

Minister of Marine Says That Weather was Too Stormy to Relight the Buoy and It Stayed Out for Ten Months.

Ottawa, Nov. 23.—The incapacity of the Marine Department was dilated upon in the Commons yesterday when the recent wreck of the steamer Hestia in the Bay of Fundy came under review. The vessel was wrecked on an old ledge where the light went out in January last and was allowed to remain out for ten months, thus rendering disaster certain. No notice was given to mariners that the light had gone out.

Hon. L. P. Brodeur said that for some months the weather was so stormy that they could not get near the buoy to relight it, and that when they found that it required repairs it took some months more to put it in order again.

Mr. Todd delivered an extraordinary callous speech, in which he sneered at the two Scottish boys whose dying cry was for their mother, and blamed the official for not relighting the buoy. He also attached much importance to the fact that the gas buoy at Proprietor Ledge was not in working order.

In reply, the Minister said it was not customary for mariners in any part of the world to rely entirely on lights, as it was impossible to keep them always in order. Official warning had been given that light gas buoys were not to be entirely depended upon. No charges against the Department had been made by the Donaldson Company or its agents in Montreal. If the vessel had followed the proper course or taken into consideration the error of compass there would have been no error and no loss of life. If, however, it was found that officers of the Department had been negligent, he would take severe action.

Mr. Crocket (York, N. B.), pointed out that no notice had been given to the British Board of Trade to say that the light was out. The Hestia was wrecked on the very ledge the buoy was to protect. The Minister's excuse that the weather was too bad for several months to allow the buoy to be repaired was a self-evident, arrant absurdity.

W. F. Todd (Charlotte, N.B.), said that most of the blame belonged to the captain of the ill-fated ship. Something was vitally wrong with the compass. Dr. Daniel, instead of exposing the fact that the light was out, should have said nothing about it in the interests of St. John.

R. L. Borden deprecated the attempt to censure the captain and crew, who were not here to defend themselves. Lives could not have been lost if the light had been in proper working order. The Minister had given as an excuse that the light could not be repaired for months, yet the Department had given an unqualified recommendation of the Willson buoy to the United States Department. If buoys were efficient and officials did their duty there could be no conditions of affairs as the Minister himself stated did exist, namely, several buoys out of place at one time and no opportunity to remedy the state of affairs.

New Bills.

Mr. Verville (Labor member for Maisonneuve), reintroduced his bill to provide an eight-hour labor day on public works. He said he would bring it to an issue this year.

A. C. Macdonnel (Toronto) introduced three bills, which were given a first reading. The first is to amend the Election Act. It seeks to do away with candidates deposits and to make Dominion election dates a public holiday.

The second is to amend the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, to make the process of calling for the appointment of a board of conciliation and investigating less cumbrous by doing away with the necessity of meetings to give authority to labor leaders.

The third bill is to amend the Railway Act to prevent discrimination by railways in regard to commutation tickets.

Hon. Mr. Brodeur's bill relating to the water carriage of goods, which was given a first reading, is to prevent shipping companies freeing themselves for liabilities for damage to goods in transit. However, to prevent loss by accidental fire, it gives shipowners the right to remove inflammable material shipped without their knowledge.

A long list of questions was on the order paper, and some interesting information was obtained.

The standard pay on the Intercolonial Railway is: Machinists, 26 cents per hour; pipe fitters, 21 cents, and boiler makers, 21 cents.

One hundred and eighty-six free mail delivery routes are in actual operations; 197 routes have asked for mail delivery; 3,328 boxes have been erected, and the totalled increase cost to the Postoffice Department is $13,370.

No report has yet been made to the difference in classification of material between the G.T.P. and the Transcontinental Railway Commissioners.

The Quebec bridge will be erected in the same place as the first one. The old north pier is to be sunk down to bed rock and the south pier is to be enlarged. The tenders being asked for are both a cantilever and a suspension bridge.

An agreement has been reached between the Government and the Quebec Bridge Co. for the amount the Government is to receive for its interest and franchise.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux is in Switzerland to attend the dedication of the memorial of the foundation of the postal union. He is also to consult with Rt. Hon. Sydney Buxton, British Postmaster-General, regarding cable rates, between Britain and Canada. None of the treaties entered into with the United States since 1880 have received the sanction of Parliament as they did not require it.

LOREBURN MAKES STATEMENT IN THE HOUSE OF LORDS

In Speech on Budget British Lord High Chancellor Says That Government Can No Longer Submit to Actions of Upper House.

London, Nov. 23.—The main interest in the historical debate yesterday in the House of Lords in the budget centered in a grave declaration of the Liberal policy which fell from Lord Loreburn, Lord High Chancellor, in the course of an eloquent peroration. Deliberately pausing and adjusting his glasses, he read slowly from a piece of paper:

"It is my opinion that it is impossible that any new Liberal Government can ever again bear the heavy burden of office unless it is secured against a repetition of treatment such as our measures have had to undergo for the last four years."

This statement had an electrical effect upon the Liberal members of the House of Commons, who surged from the public galleries into the lobbies in a state of excitement, under the conviction that they had heard the Government's last word before the general election, that Premier Asquith will make a similar declaration in the House of Commons next week, and that the long delayed campaign against the Lords has now begun in real earnest.

It was held that Lord Lereburn's statement can only mean that no Liberal leader will henceforth accept office unless he receives a pledge from the crown that sufficient peers will be appointed on the Premier's nomination to secure the House of Commons against interference by the House of Lords in financial matters.

After the Earl of Crewe, Lord Privy Seal, had formally moved the second reading of the budget bill, without comment, Lord Lansdowne, leader of the Opposition, immediately moved its rejection.

He quoted precedents to show that although the House of Lords could not amend a financial bill, it had full right to discuss it and to throw it out if it so willed.

Besides, the finance bill, he argued, had tacked on to it legislation, such as land taxation and increased license duties, which the House of Lords had already rejected, and which had been placed in the bill with a view to ousting the Lords from their legitimate opportunity of dealing with these measures. No self-respecting second chamber would tolerate such treatment.

Lord Loreburn replied, contending that there was nothing to the bill foreign to finance, with which the House of Commons had the exclusive right to deal.

"The attempt of the Lords to interfere," he declared, "was the beginning of a system which would lead to constitutional revolution. What was embodied in the bill was not new either in the United States or Germany, and had been approved not only by the present but the late House of Commons."

After the Lord High Chancellor, many peers addressed the House, but interest waned. The Duke of Norfolk, who supported Lord Lansdowne's resolution, confessed that the Lords had a serious and anxious problem to face, but that that should not daunt them in performing their duty.

Noblemen who had never attended a Parliamentary session in their lives attended, and the pomp of England's proud peerage were on parade. Gray-bearded grandfathers, so aged and feeble that they could scarcely walk, tottered to their century old places on the arms of their trusty retainers.

As aged and decrepid aristocrats rolled up to the House in carriages, in answer to the urgent call of their party, the crowd alternately jeered and cheered.

THE PRIVATIONS OF SHIPWRECKED CREW

Collingwood, Nov. 23.—Robt. Harmon, cook on the steamer Ottawa, which foundered recently on Lake Superior, tells a thrilling story of the experiences of the crew. For 12 hours the 17 of them battled until they had covered the sixty miles to Copper Harbor. One of them was without boots or stockings, and to prevent his feet from freezing kept them in water all the time. Having reached the old dock, two of them, benumbed with cold, fell through the rotten planking into 12 feet of water, and only after great difficulty were rescued.

They reached the first house about two o'clock in the morning. A man put his head out of an upstairs window. They told him they were shipwrecked and half perished. He said it did not make any difference to him, he would not allow them in. Then they traveled to the next house, where two Swedes looked after them for 36 hours.

FOUND GUILTY ON A BIGAMY CHARGE

Brantford, Nov. 23.—John Curley, a well-to-do resident of the Indian Reserve, pleaded guilty in the Police Court here yesterday of bigamy.

In view of the fact that his second wife lived with him for some time without complaining until domestic troubles arose, sentence was suspended on Curley. His wife was the complainant.

H. Lamb and F. Cunningham street railway employes, were charged here yesterday under a section of the criminal code with allowing their car to stop on the T. H. & B. Railway crossing on Market street. Both were discharged and prosecuted by the company. Sentence was suspended, but they were warned severely.

ST, CATHARINE S INDUSTRY SOLD

St. Catharines, Nov. 23.—The City Council last night completed the sale of the defunct Ross traction engine plant to the Canadian Crocker Wheeler Co., a New York electrical firm. The company pays $5,000 for the factory and surrounding property and gets a fixed assessment of $10,000 for a period of ten years, with the understanding that operations be begun at once and to be in complete operation by Dec. 31, 1910; to continue in operation for a period of ten years, to employ not less than 100 skilled workmen and to pay annually $50,000 wages.

CHICAGO VISITED BY A WILD STORM

Chicago, Nov. 23.—Rain and sleet driven by a wind which at times registered a velocity of 48 miles an hour, marked the storm which has raged all day over the region of the great lakes.

In the morning the Government life-saving crews from Evanston and Chicago answered an appeal for help from the crew of the freighter Boston, which was thrown rudderless upon a sandbar near Wilmette. Eight of the crew of 18 men elected to leave the vessel, which was fast in the sand.

BELL COMPANY MAKES OFFER TO RURAL LINE

Brockville, Nov. 23.—The Rural Telephone Federation of Leeds and Grenville has a fight on with the Bell Telephone Co. The federation is made up of the different rural lines of the counties, with a central switchboard connecting all in the village of Athens. The Plum Hollow line runs into Athens, and is a competition of the Bell there. The Bell recently discontinued connection with certain of the companies because of their affiliation with Plum Hollow. It is understood the Bell has agreed to resume connections providing the Plum Hollow Co. does not increase the number of its subscribers in Athens. This proposition will be submitted to the shareholders for ratification; also an offer from the Bell to purchase the entire service of the rural in that village.

SPANELLI MUST GO TO GALLOWS

Toronto, Nov. 23.—The Court of Appeal yesterday dismissed the motion of A. R. Hassard for an order directing the trial judge, Mr. Justice Riddell, to grant a stated case for Samuel Spanelli, under sentence to die at North Bay on Friday of this week for the murder of a Chinaman at Haileybury.

In handing down judgment, Chief Justice Moss said he could see no ground whatever for saying that there was any miscarriage at the trial, and that was all the court had to deal with.

SENT BOMB IN A LETTER

Breslau, Prussia, Nov. 23.—What appears to have been an attempt upon the life of Baron Albert Rothschild of Vienna is reported from "Schillersdorf," the Rothschild hunting seat in Upper Silesia.

A schoolmaster who was on the Schillersdorf was stopped by a man who courteously requested him to deliver a letter to the baron. The schoolmaster consented and had continued on his way, when the letter exploded, frightfully injuring the bearer.

TOLSTOI'S APPEAL FOR WORLD PEACE

Geneva, Nov. 23.—At an anti-military meeting, held at Bienne, when 100 Swiss and foreign delegates were assembled, an appeal by Count Tolstoi was read amid great enthusiasm.

Count Tolstoi appeals to the good sense of the world's peoples to refuse to serve as soldiers, either voluntarily or under pressure, even if that refusal entails punishment. Killing by soldiers, he asserts, is a criminal act.

His Welcome Home.

Galt, Nov. 23.—Harry Osgood, late of Galt, went to Cobalt a year ago and returned Saturday to find the police with a warrant from Cobalt waiting his arrival. He is charged with running a "blind pig."

Heavy rain fell down all yesterday. The whole region is flooded, and the Grand River is rising to high water mark.

To Produce Best Results
Flour Must Be Properly Aged

MILLS with insufficient storage capacity are forced to ship their flour before it is properly aged. Underaged flour requires expert handling in order to secure even fair results. In our big warehouses in six different cities we have storage capacity for 370,000 (98-pound) bags. We are thus able to store "Purity" Flour until it is properly aged.

You can never get underaged flour if you always specify "Purity."

Good results come easiest and surest with "Purity" Flour.

THE MEN'S SIDE OF IT

In these days of Billion Dollar Trusts, Copper Mergers which control the bounty of nature and the price of it, of Cement Mergers that put cement up to the two-dollar mark, where would men's wages be, but for their united struggle against the power of money? Long hours and short wages would be the portion of the men and women—and children.

While the power of the union sometimes looks like tyranny; it is not always meant for tyranny. It is meant for the ultimate good of the very men who object to it.

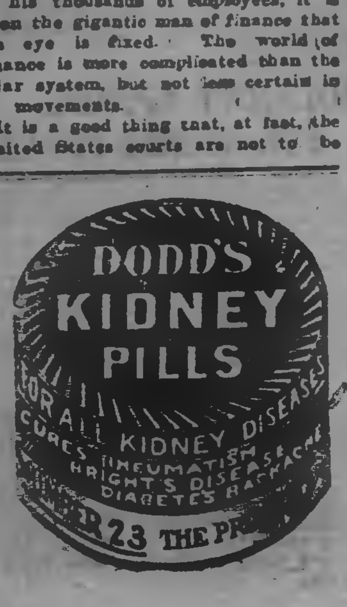
It is a fine thing to see a man of great ability, information and integrity, like Gompers or Mitchell, leading the hosts of those fighting for fair wages. They have to contend against the most elaborate of spy systems, the most ruthless tyranny and the "corruption fund" of those who know how to invest a dollar to make ten thousand.

The Standard Oil has been declared illegal by the courts. Who didn't know it was illegal and unjust long before the courts could be persuaded to see, or the "representatives of the people" in Congress!

The tyranny of the money men has made use of every expedient that greed and crookedness and hypocrisy can devise. To men like Gompers, their partial defeat is due. The day will come when Labour will rank with, not below, Capital. When it will be treated, if not as flesh and blood, at least as gold, and not as mere fuel for the factory fire, as it has been, or bones to pave the way to the success of the millionaire.

The employer of Labour has been in practically the "same box" as Labour. He has experienced the tyranny of the financier quite as much, and while he may express his daily anger at the shortcomings of one or more of his thousands of employees, it is upon the gigantic man of finance that his eye is fixed. The world of finance is more complicated than the solar system, but not less certain in its movements.

It is a good thing that, at last, the United States courts are not to be "afraid" of the octopus and that some slight measure of that "limitless injustice" in the past will be removed, for the future. The patience of "the people" is a continual wonder.



ONE CAUSE OF BRITAIN'S RESTLESSNESS

The Globe.

"According to a report issued by the British Board of Trade, over 963,000 workpeople had their rates of wages changed during 1908. Of these 119,000 received advances amounting to over £7,200 per week, and 464,000 sustained decreases amounting to £66,400 per week, whilst the remaining 380,000 workpeople had upward and downward changes which left their wages at the same level at the end as at the beginning of the year. The net result of all the changes was, therefore, a decrease of £59,200 per week. If the effect of the changes in rates of wages be calculated from the date of each change to the end of the year, the aggregate decrease in wages due to these changes is computed at £873,800, as compared with an increase of £5,821,000 in 1907 and one of £1,419,000 in 1906. As compared with the number of workpeople affected by changes in rates of wages, the number whose recognised hours of labour were changed in 1908 was small. The changes reported affected 26,541 workpeople, of whom 3,349 had their aggregate working time increased by 5,686 hours per week, and 23,192 had reductions amounting to 44,109 per week. The net effect of all the changes was thus a reduction of 38,423 hours in the weekly working time of the people affected.

"The changes in rates of wages taking effect in the first six months of 1909 showed that the downward movement in wages, which commenced early in 1908, was still maintained. In every group of trades, with the exception of clothing, printing and employees of local authorities, the changes resulted in net decreases, the net amount of valuation being £67,744 per week. The total number of workpeople affected by the changes during the six months was 1,091,586, of whom 6,439 received advances amounting to £263 per week, and 1,081,278 sustained decreases amounting to £68,007 per week, while the remaining 3,869 had upward and downward changes which left their wages at the same level as at the beginning of the year. The changes in the hours of labour taking effect in the first half of 1909 show that 16,900 workpeople have had a reduction in hours amounting in the aggregate to 46,236 hours per week, while 221 workpeople have had their aggregate working time increased by 332 hours per week.

"This is a record of depression, and will, of course, bring a demand from the believing protectionists for a transformation into prosperity by the simple device of obstructing trade. So far the British are more inclined to try the real remedy of freeing the land in preference to the visionary delusion of trade obstruction."

Surely it ought to strike even the Globe that this is an indictment of Free Trade which cannot be "got over." Of course, it was necessary to say something about this decrease in wages, hence the Globe makes the bluff of explaining it. But what an explanation!!

THE ADMIRALTY RECOMMENDATIONS

Winnipeg Free Press (Liberal.)

"The plans submitted by the Admiralty at the Imperial Defence Conference in London last summer are now before Parliament and the country. In the initial memorandum laid before the representatives of the overseas self-governing nations of the Empire by the Admiralty it was stated, by way of preliminary, that if the problem of Imperial naval defence could be considered simply and solely as a problem of naval strategy, the maximum of immediate sea power would be secured by each and every part of the Empire contributing according to its resources to the maintenance of the British navy. But at the very outset that initial memorandum set forth that the Admiralty recognised the fact that the national sentiment of the overseas Dominions and the actual circumstances of their position and development made for a policy of local naval development."

It will be found that the governing national sentiment is by no means as the Free Press suggests.

A LOT OF POOR FOOLS

The Globe is irresistibly funny on the Free Trade vs. Protection question. It is an acknowledged fact that Germany under Protection has risen to a position almost terrifying in its dominance. Yet this is the way the Globe wipes it off the map;

"Germany has a vaster naval expenditure than has been. That nation may some day throw off the burden of protection and then she will have a surprising surplus to waste on armaments."—The Globe.

And yet "shuttles," which used to come into Canada at 10 per cent. duty are now 27 1-2 per cent. without any change whatever in conditions concerning them. "Harness cord," which used to be 10 per cent. in the finished state, is now penalized by a 27 1-2 per cent. duty for being brought in and finished by our own Canadian employees. The Globe never refers to these things. It spends its time in knocking U. S., Germany and a few other "poor fools" and unimportant nations for persisting in maintaining protection.

Incidentally we might ask where Canada would be without the N. P?

THE NAVY QUESTION.

(The Toronto News.)

It is useless to talk of the Monroe Doctrine, or of dependence upon the United States for the protection of the trade routes, or the integrity of Canada in case Great Britain should be overwhelmed by a European power. If, for example, the war with Germany, which sober British statesmen greatly fear, but do not desire, should take place, and if, by mischance or misdirection, or some other untoward cause, the issue should go against Great Britain, the natural action of Germany would be to seize the British fleet, and with the British ships joined to its own war vessels, neither the United States nor any other country or combination of countries would be able to resist Germany on the seas. The certain result would be paralysis of the trade of Canada and the other British dominions, the exaction of an enormous indemnity from the Empire, and, possibly, the final separation of Canada from the British Crown.

While the above reads pretty much as if the News's endorsation of a "wholly Canadian" Navy had turned out to be in its own opinion what it really is, the endorsation of nonsense, nevertheless the sentiment here expressed shows that we ought to help to make the British Imperial Fleet what it must needs be, invincible.

Britain has colonial allies. Germany has not. At the same time those who are being drawn into the trap of a "wholly controlled Canadian navy" subterfuge ought to realize that the rest of the Empire can "get along" without an ally like Canada if the latter is determined to "stand off," as she is doing, the question of imperial defence. If the immortal and absurd Canadian Navy idea had been even cheaper than the imperial one we could find at least the phantom of an excuse for Laurier's programme, but when it is the beginning of the most expensive form of naval expenditure known, we must look for "a reason" for its adoption and of course that reason is easily found. The Laurier government would fall to-morrow if its supporters from Quebec said so and we know that they are all, Liberal and Conservative alike, the deadly enemies of imperial solidarity. The present "do nothing but leave it all to us" policy suits them best. Their attitude reminds us of the story of the Scotchman and the bear.

It will be a mighty long time before Great Britain will again ask us as she did at the conference, to "join" in imperial defence by contributing a "naval unit" instead of an independent Canadian navy to move out of Canadian waters when the members of parliament (from Quebec) said so.

From Ottawa to the Pacific and for aught we know, in the maritime provinces also, the cry is for Canada to give a "naval unit" as Britain requests.

The Mother Country, it seems, tried as hard as she could to meet "Canada's views" and when Mr. Foster asked Mr. Brodeur (one of the delegates) what those views were, the latter said that they had not been committed to writing! Another trick.

The Blue Book is out. We know all that there is to know, or at any rate all that we are to be allowed to know and it is a nice "kettle of fish."

Canada has refused Great Britain's request. She has thrown doubt upon Great Britain's good faith in the event of war. She has incurred the scorn of every other part of the empire. Even the recently conquered Transvaal has done better.

What does it all show? It shows that British Canada no longer exists except in the imagination.

WHAT VAN HORNE THINKS

Winnipeg, November 19.—"It is time for Canada to chip in and give Great Britain the money to build up her navy."

Briefly and very emphatically, Sir William Van Horne, chairman of the board of directors of the C.P.R., said this as he stepped from his car to-day:

"Let Canada give Great Britain a contribution," said Sir William. "We are not able to have a Canadian navy, yet." But that was all he would say about the navy. "I'll leave the rest of the debate to the politicians," he declared.

The interview with Sir William VanHorne part of which we quote above, extends further into a general forecast of Canada's future. Canada will soon be worth possessing. As a part of the empire she would be worth having. As an independent or practically independent nation she will also be worth having. Who is to get her?

TEMPERANCE

Sir James Whitney is being attacked by Licensed Victualler sympathisers for the recent statement of his views on temperance wherein he made it apparent that he was in favour of a sober people, and of all reasonable and proper means leading to that end. We do not see how his position can be reasonably attacked. Who wants to see a drunken people? Sir Jame's famous 3-5th clause caused much adverse comment at the time, but he stuck to it as a sea-anchor through which temperance would pull itself forward gradually and surely. Sir James knows how dreadful the hold of drink upon a man may become, but he was willing to overlook his own feelings in the matter in order that he might take a moderate and thoroughly statesmanlike course. That he will enforce any law looking to temperance may be taken for granted. His statement was just such as he might be expected to make, for he is of that strenuous sort which is afraid of nothing, and could go into retirement for his convictions without a qualm.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Tupper and McBride express poor opinions of each other and perhaps they're right.

Sir Wilfrid has signalized his birthday by standing out against unity of the British Empire.

One would think to see the Globe that there was no Canadian navy question on the tapis at all. It barely notices the affair.

Dr. Grenfell accepted a knighthood for his work in Labrador. Ecclesiastical titles seem so strange to those who remember that Jesus Christ's title was "the crucified one."

There is a dignity above titles and it would be well to remember the fact.

Mr. McBride goes to the country nominally on his railway policy, but it looks as if that policy were to be utilised to cover up a multitude of sins. It is beginning to dawn upon the people that both parties contain men who unite to work each party for their own benefit. We hope that McBride will be defeated.

SIGNALS OF DISTRESS

Peterboro People Should Know How to Read and Heed Them

Sick kidneys give many signals of distress.

The secretions are dark, contain a sediment.

Passages are frequent, scanty, painful.

Backache is constant day and night.

Headaches and dizzy spells are frequent.

The weakened kidneys need quick help.

Don't delay! Use a special kidney remedy.

Booth's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys, backache and urinary disorders.

Peterborough evidence proves this statement.

Mrs. Geo. Hawes, of 857 Water St., Peterborough, Ont., says:

"I suffered for some time with many painful and annoying symptoms of kidney trouble, and although I had tried many remedies and doctors, found little or no relief. My back was weak and a dull, bearing down pain had settled across the small of it and extended into my shoulders and around my sides. I was weak and languid, and the least exertion would tire me out. Dizzy spells were frequent and often I would awake with a severe headache. I tried Booth's Kidney Pills through an advertisement at McDermid & Jury's pharmacy and soon found them to benefit me. I continued their use, and in a comparatively short time I was as well and strong as ever, and without a symptom of the painful and longstanding disease."

THE SHORT ROUTE TO Gow Ganda

Getting into Gow Ganda this winter will be made easier, as the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway will in a few days have steel laid to Gow Ganda Jct., which is 31 miles north of Sellwood Jct., 64 miles North of Sudbury and 320 from Toronto.

The Gow Ganda Transport Company are building a good team road from Gow Ganda Jct. that will be much shorter and a great improvement over the road used last year.

Maps of the route, also freight, passenger and express tariffs are in course of preparation and an announcement will be made shortly of the service and all arrangements regarding the handling of the traffic.

THE FUTURE OF THE FRENCH-CANADIANS IS TO BE MADE SECURE BY GREAT CONGRESS

Determined to Remain French—The Preponderance of That Nationality to be Secured—A Glimpse of the Future.

The following editorial of LaPatrie will be read with interest:—

"We have already informed our readers of the great Congress of Education, which our French-Canadian compatriots of Ontario are preparing. The general committee has just published a memorial which contains a thrilling appeal to the goodwill and thrilling appeal to the good-will and patriotic sentiment of all, in order to assure the success of the enterprise. We hope that this appeal will be heard, and that the first French-Canadian Congress of Ontario may be the beginning of a new era of development and progress. The intention of the promoters is to make this congress a permanent and periodical institution, as the Acadian and Franco-American Congresses have become, which have already rendered such signal services to THE NATIONAL CAUSE. (Review's capitals). It is by union and only in that way that a minority can defend itself against the always-threatening danger of absorption, and there is nothing more legitimate. The memorial reads as follows—

"How can we bring about and secure the permanence of our language? How, as in the case of the Acadians and French-Americans, to conquer for this language a right of place upon the benches of the schools and in the programmes of examinations? Can any fail to be interested in the fact that statistics show that 200,000 French-Canadians hold a position of preponderance in fourteen counties, whilst other populations remain stationary or diminish? Can any one lose sight of the important part our nationality is destined to play, etc.? Our compatriots in Ontario understand that it is by means of education that they will reach their DESIRED END AND AIM (Review's capitals). It is the school that will serve as a base for their national future, which will furnish them with the means of striving, which will form new generations. Their attention will be, therefore, chiefly in that direction, and we do not doubt that their efforts will produce the happiest results."

The BLACK BAG

By LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

Copyright, 1908, by the Boobs-Merrill Co.

Breathless, at last he paused at the head of the third flight. His heart was hammering, his pulses drumming like wild things; there was a queer constriction in his throat, a fire of hope in his heart alternating with the ice of doubt. Suppose she were not there! What if he were mistaken? What if he had misunderstood? What if Mulready and Calendar had referred to another boarding house? He passed down the corridor to the door whose panels wore the painted legend 17 and there knocked.

Believing that he overheard from within a sudden startled exclamation, he smiled patiently, tolerant of her surprise.

Burning with impatience as with a fever, he endured a long minute's wait. Misgivings were prompting him to knock again and summon her by name when he heard footfalls on the other side of the door, followed by a click of the lock. The door was opened grudgingly a bare six inches.

Of the alarmed expression in the eyes that stared into his he took no account. His face lengthened a little as he stood there, dumb, panting, staring, and his heart sank, down, deep down into a gulf of disappointment, weighted sorely with chagrin.

Then, of the two the first to recover countenance, he doffed his cap and bowed.

"Good evening, Mrs. Hallam," he said, with a rueful smile.

CHAPTER XXIII.

NOW if Kirkwood's emotion was poignant, Mrs. Hallam's astonishment paralleled and her relief transcended it. In order to understand this it must be remembered that, while Mr. Kirkwood was aware of the lady's presence in Antwerp, on her part she had known nothing of him since he had so ungallantly fled her company in Sheerness. She seemed to anticipate that either Calendar or one of his fellows would be discovered at the door, to have surmised it without any excessive degree of pleasure.

Only briefly she hesitated, while her surprise swayed her. Then, with a hardening of the eyes and a curt little nod, "I'm sorry," she said with decision, "but I am busy and can't see you now, Mr. Kirkwood," and attempted to shut the door in his face.

Deftly Kirkwood forestalled her intention by inserting a foot between the door and the jamb. He had dared too greatly to be thus dismissed. "Pardon me," he countered, unabashed, "but I wish to speak with Miss Calendar."

"Dorothy," returned the lady with spirit, "is engaged."

"I intend," he told her quietly, "to see Miss Calendar. It's useless your trying to hinder me. We may as well understand each other, madam, and I'll tell you now that if you wish to avoid a scene"—

"Dorothy," the woman called over her shoulder, "ring for the porter."

"By all means," assented Kirkwood agreeably. "I'll send him for a gendarme."

"You insolent puppy!"

"Madam, your wit disarms me"—

"What is the matter, Mrs Hallam?" interrupted a voice from the other side of the door. "Who is it?"

"Miss Calendar!" cried Kirkwood hastily, raising his voice.

"Mr. Kirkwood!" the reply came on the instant. She knew his voice. "Please, Mrs. Hallam, I will see Mr Kirkwood."

"You have no time to waste with him, Dorothy," said the woman coldly. "I must insist"—

"But you don't seem to understand it is Mr. Kirkwood!" argued the girl as if he were ample excuse for any imprudence.

Kirkwood's scant store of patience was by this time rapidly becoming exhausted. "I should advise you not to interfere any further, Mrs. Hallam," he told her in a tone low, but charged with meaning.

How much did he know? She eyed him an instant longer in sullen suspicion, then swung open the door, yielding with what grace she could. "Won't you come in, Mr Kirkwood?" she inquired, with acidulated courtesy.

"If you press me," he returned winningly, "how can I refuse? You are too good!"

His impertinence disconcerted even himself. He wondered that she did not slap him as he passed her, entering the room, and felt that he deserved it, despite her attitude. But such thoughts could not long trouble one whose eyes were enchanted by the sight of Dorothy confronting him in the middle of the dingy room, her hands, bristling dangerously with hatpins, busy with the adjustment of a small gray toque atop the wonder that was her hair. So vivacious and charming she seemed, so spirited and bright her welcoming smile, so foreign was she altogether to the picture of her, worn and distraught, that he had mentally conjured up, that he stopped in an extreme of disconcertion and dropped the hand bag, smiling sheepishly enough under her ready laugh—mirth irresistibly incited by the plainly read play of expression on his mobile countenance.

"You must forgive the unconventionality, Mr. Kirkwood," she apologized, needlessly enough, but to cover his embarrassment. "I am on the point of going out with Mrs. Hallam, and of course you are the last person on earth I expected to meet here."

"It's good to see you, Miss Calendar," he said simply, remarking with much satisfaction that her trim walking costume bore witness to her statement that she was prepared for the street.

The girl glanced into a mirror, patted the small, bewitching hat an infinitesimal fraction of an inch to one side and turned to him again, her hands free. One of them, small, but cordial, rested in his grasp for an instant all too brief, the while he gazed earnestly into her face, noting with concern what the first glance had not shown him—the almost imperceptible shadows beneath her eyes and cheek bones, pathetic records of the hours the girl had spent since last he had seen her in company with care.

She was changed—a little, but changed. She had suffered and was suffering, and, forced by suffering, her nascent womanhood was stirring in the bud. The child that he had met in London in Antwerp he found grown to woman's stature and slowly coming to comprehension of the nature of the change in herself, the wonder of it glowing softly in her eyes.

The clear understanding of mankind that is an appanage of woman's estate was now added to the intuitions of a girl's untroubled heart. She could not be blind to the mute adoration of his gaze, nor could she resent it. Beneath it she colored and lowered her lashes.

"I was about to go out," she repeated in confusion. "I—it's pleasant to see you too."

"Thank you," he stammered ineptly. "I—I"—

"If Mr. Kirkwood will excuse us, Dorothy," Mrs. Hallam's sharp tones struck in discordantly, "we shall be glad to see him when we return to London."

"I am infinitely complimented, Mrs Hallam," Kirkwood assured her, and of the girl quickly, "You're going back home?" he asked.

She nodded, with a faint, puzzled smile that included the woman. "After a little—not immediately. Mrs Hallam is so kind"—

"Pardon me," he interrupted, "but tell me one thing, please. Have you any one in England to whom you can go without invitation and be welcomed and cared for—any friends or relations?"

"Dorothy will be with me," Mrs Hallam answered for her, with cold defiance.

Deliberately insolent, Kirkwood turned his back to the woman. "Miss Calendar, will you answer my question for yourself?" he asked the girl pointedly.

"Why, yes, several friends—none in London, but"—

HE KNOWS FROM EXPERIENCE

That Dodd's Kidney Pills Will Cure Bright's Disease

Postmaster Cote Tells How the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy Cured Him After Doctors Had Given Him Up

Le Petit Bois Franc, Temiscouata Co., Que., Nov. 22—(Special) — Mr. Charles Cote, postmaster here, is firmly convinced that Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure Bright's Disease or any other disease of the Kidneys. He knows it from his own experience. Hear what he says:

"For over four years I was troubled with Backache, Rheumatism and lack of ambition, and my urine was of a dark, unnatural color. I was attended by three doctors who did me no good. The last one told me it was only a waste of money to try anything else as I could not live more than a year at the outside.

"At the verge of death I decided to give Dodd's Kidney Pills a trial. I used eighteen boxes and to-day my Rheumatism, Backache and Headache are gone. My urine is like that of a child. I feel I owe my life to Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Postmaster Cote had all the symptoms of Bright's Disease. The doctors evidently knew he had Bright's Disease—the most deadly form of Kidney Disease. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him. They will cure any form of Kidney Disease.

Peary's book on the discovery of the North Pole will be published by the Frederick A. Stokes Company. The story, however, will first appear serially in Hampton's Magazine, which has the exclusive serial rights. The royalty to be paid by the Stokes Company on the book is the highest they have ever paid, and they are paying large advance royalties—so far the reporters have tried in vain to ascertain the figures. Of course, Hampton's Magazine made the biggest offer and thus secured the serial rights. "It is really the last of the great earth's stories," says the editor. But is it? Who knows what Sir Edward Shackleton may yet have to tell, or some future mountain climber? By the way, if Peary had been an Englishman he would have been knighted long ago. 'Faith and he has earned a knighthood over and over again.

It was the Stoke's Company that published Peary's "Northward Over the Great Ice," and the children's books written in collaboration with his wife, "The Snow Baby," "Snowland Folk," and "Children of the Arctic."

Soothes and Heals While It Cleanses

You could eat and relish every ingredient used in making Taylor's Infants' Delight. The Olive Oil is the first pressing from perfect fruit, and is far choicer than is usually served on our tables. Cocoanut oil, because of its purity and palatableness, is used for butter in warm climates. It is far too expensive to be used for this purpose away from the tropics.

Soaps made from coarse animal fats are rank poison to baby's tender skin. Much of the chafing, burning and discomfort could be avoided if more care were taken in the selection of soap for baby's bath.

Infants' Delight Soap

will be found wonderfully soothing by those whose skin is roughened, chafed or tender from any cause, and so healing in its action that after a few days' use, the skin will be white as snow and soft as velvet.

You owe it to yourself and to the comfort of your little ones to use this soap for baby's bath today.

"Your Sight is Priceless"

Good Glasses are worth all you pay for them.

The constant increase in eye defects is partly due to improperly fitted glasses. There is no guess work with us, we give your eyes a thorough examination, and advise glasses only when absolutely necessary.

We are not transient, but permanent residents of the city, and all our glasses are guaranteed. We do not make it a practice of remaining for a few days in a place, and then leaving for parts unknown.

We have never sought to delude the unwary by advertising cut-rates on glasses. Those who do business in this way, either deceive the public, or sooner or later come to grief themselves. Any business to be a lasting success, must be conducted at a fair rate of profit; expert service and enduring articles cannot be furnished at or below cost. Intelligent people appreciate these facts, and this is one of the principal reasons why we have been so successful in the Optical business.

SHAREHOLDERS BRING ACTION AGAINST THE DIRECTORS

Claim That 200 Shares of Original Stock of Havelock Electric Light and Power Company Issued to Them are Without Value—Big Array of Legal Talent in the Case.

Considerable interest, especially on the part of the residents of Havelock, is being taken in the case now being tried before Mr. Justice Britton in the non-jury sittings of the High Court.

It is an action to set aside two hundred shares of the original stock of the Havelock Electric Light and Power Company, issued to the original shareholders without value, as alleged, on the formation of the company or to compel payment of the sum of $5,000, being the amount represented by the stock in question.

The action is brought by J. W. Bennett and Richard Nolan on behalf of themselves and the other shareholders of original stock against Alex. Rose, Dr. Holdcroft, J. W. Bryans, A. Curtis and Wm. Mathieson the original directors of the Havelock Electric Light and Power Company.

Mr. D. O'Connell is appearing for the plaintiffs, Mr. G. H. Porter, K.C., of Belleville, is acting for defendants, Dr. Holdcroft and Alex. Rose, and Mr. W. H. Kerr, of Cobourg, is acting for defendants Bryans and Curtis, Mr. S. T. Medd is acting for the Havelock Electric Light and Power Co., and Mr. R. Ruddy, K.C., for defendant, William Mathieson.

UNABLE TO BRING DRIVE THROUGH

Peterboro Lumber Company Cannot Get Any Logs Past the New Waterworks Dam.

The Peterborough Lumber Co. will be unable to bring their log drive of logs through to the mills this fall. The drive has reached Nassau, but it has been found impossible to get any of the logs past the point where the new water works dam is being built. The company expected to be able to cut some of the logs this fall or at least to have them on hand to begin operations with in the spring. Instead, part of the drive will be held between the present water works dam and Nassau and the remainder above Nassau until the new dam is completed.

REAL THRILLER AT THE STAR

Toronto, Nov. 23.—The patrons of the Star Theatre were treated to a real thrill during the afternoon performance of "Wine, Woman and Song" yesterday. An accident occurred during the acrobatic performance of "The Three Stubblefields," in which Annie Stubblefield, one of the performers, was precipitated to the floor from a trapeze, falling a distance of 15 feet and sustaining severe injuries about the head, one cut alone necessitating 15 stitches.

The trouble was caused by a defective piece of leather. It was during this act, which is one of the most difficult that this troupe do, that Annie who was held by her brother George, fell. At the time she was twirling in the air and the leather parted. A scream from her sister, Ada, who was also on the stage, told the audience that this was not a part of the sketch, while the moans of the injured girl soon drew the attention of the stage hands, who carried her behind the scenes. Dr. J. M. Johnston, of Alm-street, was hurriedly called and after he had bound her head she appeared before the audience, who received her with cheers. She was, however, hurt too badly to work during the evening performance.

Philip Harding, an inmate of London Hospital for the Insane, attempted to take his life "to atone for his sins."

The Hudson Bay Co's. steamer Pelican, reached St. John's, Nfld., after a trip of 2,000 miles under jury gear.

ROYAL COIN COLLECTION.

Rome, Nov. 20.—The news that King Victor Emmanuel has sent a copy of his "Corpus minimorum Italicorum," that is a general catalogue of mediaeval and more modern Italian coins, to all the directors of numismatic collections the world over, is considered here a great event, as his Majesty has been personally working on it for twelve years, taking his private collection as a basis. His collection, which he began to put together when quite a young boy, has now reached almost 100,000 pieces, some of immense value. Up to the present he has confined himself to Italian money, of all the regions of the peninsula, but it is said he will branch out in a new direction when this is complete, especially as he has received a precious collection of French coins from the Government of the republic.

His Papal coins are most interesting and complete, beginning with those of Gregory III., in the eighth century, down to the fall of the temporal power. Among them are the "triple ducat" of Nicholas I., in the middle of the ninth century, coined for the Holy Year, under that Pope; a piece of Alexander VI., the infamous Borgia, which is unknown, and another with the Ecce homo, so rare as to be unfindable now. Of Milan there is a ten-ducats in gold, one of the only two existing, the other being kept in the Paris Library.

SPOKE ON LIFE OF A GREAT STATESMAN

Knox church Young People's Society had a "Literary Night" last evening. Rev. H. J. Keith was in the chair. After devotional exercises, Mr. R. F. McWilliams was called upon, and spoke on the life of the late Hon. W. E. Gladstone. The life of this great politician was dwelt upon in an interesting manner by the lecturer. Mr. Gladstone gave sixty years of his life to the British nation. The last century was one of great changes and many great men lived in it, forming a part of England's great history. Mr. W. E. Gladstone died in 1898 after a life of long service. He was the author of several books, and a great reader up to the time of his death.

Mr. McWilliams was thanked by Rev. H. J. Keith for the most able lecture on the life of this great man.

Next Monday being missionary evening the young people will meet in the church at 7.45 and go to the Y.W.C.A. and will hold their meeting there, the Y.W.C.A extending the invitation.

Rev. E.A. Pearson the Speaker

Rev. E. A. Pearson, of George Street church, will address the Young People's meeting at Mark Street church this evening. All young people are cordially invited.

SIR WILFRID AND BUNCOMBE

Kingston Standard.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's speech on the navy, the fore part of this week, was a masterly effort in the art of talking one way and acting another. He is a great artist when it comes to handling a delicate question. His appeal to Canadians to do their duty as British subjects was a perfervid utterance full of patriotic fire, but his own conception of that duty was pitifully narrow and humiliating.

"Hurrah for Britain!" says the gallant Liberal leader; but don't be in a hurry to help her unless it suits our convenience. Now, just what kind of imperialism is that? What is the meaning of an Empire? Is it made up of component parts that can refuse to help the central power when it is threatened with danger? That was the idea that the South had, and the result was the American Civil War. Sir Wilfrid's navy has a string to it. If it means anything it means a potent factor working towards separation from England. If Great Britain goes to war with another nation and Canada refuses to allow its navy to go to her assistance, what does that mean but rebellion and separation? Let us look this matter squarely in the face and and not go beating about the bush.

On the other hand, a contribution of a Dreadnought to the British navy involves no such dangerous complication. That Dreadnought will be for Britain's protection, no matter what war she is engaged in. That is the only subject that, as British subjects, we can take on this issue.

To follow Sir Wilfrid in his devious course means disaster, it means a house divided against itself; it means the disintegration of the British Empire. Sir Wilfrid's flamboyant talk about our duty to the British Empire in the light of what he proposes to do, is nothing but buncombe pure and simple.

POISON IN MRS. McLAUGHLIN'S STOMACH

(Review Special.)

Uxbridge, Nov. 23.—When the inquest resumed to-day Dr. Shier testified that Mrs. McLaughlin died from strychnine poisoning and not from being burned or suffocated by the fire. The two children died from similar cause, he thought. Prof. Ellis, analysis, showed one grain of strychnine in woman's stomach. Evidence also showed that McLaughlin telegraphed word of wife's death two hours before bodies were found. The dead woman's sister swore he never spoke to wife except to scold her.

WONDERFUL PLAY WITH LARGE AND BRILLIANT CAST

St. Thomas Times Grows Enthusiastic Over Magnificient Presentation of "Two Women and That Man"

Had the theatre-goers of St. Thomas realized what a wonderful production is the drama, "Two Women and That Man," presented at the Grand last night, the opera house would have been packed to the roof, regardless of disagreeable weather and counter attractions. It is unfortunate that the title of the play gives no idea of its nature or the fascinating possibilities of its subject. Had it been advertised as "The Land of the Midnight Sun," or "A Love Tale of the Arctic Circle," or something of that sort, instead of sailing under its present non-committal title, popular interest would have been more generally stimulated.

The play is the first one to give to the public vivid and interesting story of the great far North, in fact the last American frontier. Dealing with the people, the industry, the mode of living, the great resources of the country in general, together with a splendid heart story, the play immediately becomes one of unusual interest. Frederick Seaton, as "Tagish Jim," a full-blooded Chilkat Indian, speaking the language as fluently as a native, gave a magnificent interpretation of the role. Every one in the cast looked and acted their characters so naturally that one seemed to be actually in the region of 40-Mile Creek. Edwin Caldwell, as "Father Jean," was superb in his character of missionary; Louis Thiel, as "Rainbow," an old Sourdough, relieved the tense spots with bits of quaint humor; Russell Simpson, as the frontier trader, was the essence of naturalness, and Joseph Harris, as the French half-breed, was simply perfect. Henry D. Carey (the author of the story) took the leading role, while the "two women" were Lucy Milliken, a handsome young lady of great histrionic talent, and Fern Foster, as "Alaska," a daughter of the northland. The scenery was most realistic, the howling Arctic storm, the team of real live "huskies," the furclad men on snowshoes—all combined to make the action of the story most vivid. Should this company return to St. Thomas, standing room only will be at a premium at the Grand.

The company play two nights at Hamilton.—St. Thomas Times.

No Postponement

In Kingston they are debating whether Christmas should be observed on Saturday or not. Why, of course not. To postpone the date of the observance of Christmas day would be a sacrilege, pure and simple. Christmas is a holy day. To postpone it would be as justifiable as postponing Sunday. —Belleville Intelligencer.

A FEATURE OF THE SERVICES

Of the Church of the Sacred Heart Was the Splendid Singing of St. Peter's Choir

A feature of the services at the Church of the Sacred Heart on Sunday was the excellent singing of the choir of St. Peter's Cathedral, which, under the leadership of Miss Doherty, took part in both the dedication and pontifical vespers.

In the morning splendidly rendered solos were given by Misses L. Hallihan, A. Simons, N. Simons, A. Primeau and J. Delaire.

During the offertory a quartette composed of the following singers, sang most effectively: Misses L. Hallihan and J. Delaire and Messrs. E. Koen and H. Quinlan.

The music in the evening was also of a very interesting character. Excellent musical expression was displayed by the quartette consisting of Misses Hallihan and J. Delaire and Messrs. E. Koen and H. Quinlan; and solos were given in splendid voice by Messrs. F. Pope and H. Quinlan.

A duet arrangement of "O, Salutaris" was most acceptably sung by Misses A. and N. Simons. Miss L. Hallihan took the solo in "Tantum Ergo" with splendid appreciation of its spirit and in beautiful voice, the chorus being taken up by the choir.

"THE CASH GIRL" HERE SATURDAY

"The Cash Girl," conceded to be the best effort of the widely known young composer, George W. Meyer, comes to the Grand next Saturday, matinee and night. Those who anticipated the presentation of this delightful musical success when it was booked to appear here before, will be pleased to hear the announcement that its local engagement has been secured.

HAMILTON "SPEC." GIVES OTTAWA TEAM CREDIT FOR SATURDAY'S VICTORY

It was a nice surprise package that was handed to the Hamilton Rugby club and the supporters on Saturday when the Ottawa Rough Riders, the most despised of Tiger foes, walked all over the Jungle Kings and their championship aspirations, and after winning the deciding game in the Interprovincial championship race they proceeded to rub it in to the King's taste, with the result that the day was an inglorious one for Hamilton, and one that left a bitter taste. Fully 8,000 enthusiasts crowded into the Rosedale field before the big game got started, and nearly all of them anticipated a Tiger victory by a good safe margin. This was not to be, however, for Ottawa secured the toss, and playing with the strong wind, which blew from east to west all afternoon, took an early lead which proved good enough to win the game. It was a case of an uphill fight for the Tigers all afternoon, and from the start the Ottawa crowd put it over them. Ottawa won on their merits. They played good, consistent ball, while the Tigers put up their worst game of the season, and deserved to lose. It was a hard-fought game, exciting at times, and the result proved the biggest surprise that has been pulled off in years on a Canadian gridiron.

BEST TEAM WON.

Ottawa won, however, and the Tiger fans united after the game in giving them their share of the credit. But not only did they twist the Tigers tail on the field, but in the stands and bleachers the Ottawa crowd which enthused to a wonderful pitch, came down from the capital 700 strong, and, accompanied by three bands — two brass and one bugle—and a strong Rooters' club, put the 2,000 Hamilton fans and their own band out of business early and during the entire session, and locally it was a bitter one, with Ottawa on top. While the game itself was not such a wonderful exhibition of rugby as would be expected in a contest of the kind, it was at least the most exciting affair that has been played in Toronto in years. The vast crowd, composed as it was of Hamilton and Ottawa fans, who made merry all afternoon, with the Toronto crowd helping to no small extent, and the four bands maintaining a perfect din from their arrival to the time of their departure from the grounds—the ordinary mortal could not help from feeling the spirit of the day. With the great odds against them, the Tiger fans pulled hard at all stages, while Ottawa, receiving more than they ever expected, let their enthusiasm run high, and it is doubtful if a more excited crowd was ever crowded into one rugby field.—Hamilton Spectator.

RUNNING

MARSH BEAT ST. YVES.

Vancouver, Nov. 19.—John D. Marsh, of Winnipeg, the Canadian Marathon record holder, beat Henri St. Yves, the Marathon champion, in a 15 mile match race, at the Horse Show arena to-night before a big crowd. Marsh led all the way and had a lap lead in five miles, when St. Yves changed his shoes. Marsh secured a big lead on him and increased it steadily. St Yves finally quit in the tenth mile, with Marsh 10 laps in front. A doctor examined the Frenchman's legs and discovered a badly twisted tendon. On his advice St. Yves retired altogether. Marsh was in great form and ran the distance in 1.12.08 1-4. The track was undoubtedly short however, it was a 12-lap affair and it is claimed it was half a lap short.

TOUGH LUCK; FRITZ MOHL LOST AGAIN

Montreal, Nov. 22.—Eugene Tremblay, of Montreal, defeated Billy Saxon, the Welsh champion, in a hard-fought wrestling contest for the lightweight championship of the world by two straight falls at Sohmer Park last evening. There was little to choose between the two men, and it was only after 35 minutes in the first, and 41 in the second bout, that Tremblay mastered his opponent with the toe hold. In the first few minutes Saxon had it a good deal his own way, but Tremblay seemed to be able to shake off all the holds. From this on the match was pretty even, till Tremblay got his famous toe hold. In the second bout things were much the same, till the Frenchman again gained the toe hold.

A bout between Chaakin the Turk, and Frits Mohl, in which the Turk easily won, opened the proceedings.

RUNNING

Winnipeg, Nov. 22.—Tom Longboat, accompanied by Sol Mintz, arrived in the city to-day on the Toronto Express. The two were met at the station by Alfred Shrubb, the Onondaga's great rival and friend, promoters of the race, and a small circle of friends. If appearances go for anything, Longboat is in the very best of shape. His eyes sparkled and a smile of contentment was over his mouth from the very moment he landed in Winnipeg. Tom says he is fit to run the race of his life to-morrow night.

SPORTING TALK

The Longboat-Shrubb race takes place in Winnipeg to-night.

It is now stated that Jack Marks will manage the Brantford Professional hockey team this season.

Yale's share of the receipts taken at the game with Harvard last Saturday amounts to about $34,000.

A number of Peterborough people will go to Toronto on Saturday to see the Ottawa-Varsity game.

HOCKEY

The Chieftians Hockey Club held a meeting last night, but nothing definite was done, and another meeting is called for Wednesday.

The Executive of the Peterborough Hockey Club met last night and transacted several items of business. It was decided to try and secure the Brock street rink for practices on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays of each week. Mr. Harry Morgan's resignation from the office of First Vice-President was accepted and Mr. E. N. McWilliams was elected to fill the vacancy. The matter of uniforms for the players was dealt with and they will be produced at an early date.

The Collegiate Institute and Chieftains having entered a team in the Senior City Hockey League, the question now is, "which team is going to get the players. Last year the Chieftains were composed mainly of students of the P.C.I., and as this institution will be represented in the league this season it is only natural that the students would prefer to be on the team. It is to be hoped a satisfactory solution of the matter will be arrived at.

WANTS TO GO BACK TO KENT

Arthur Stanley Hit Upon a Unique Method of free Transportation

Winnipeg, Nov. 22.—Arthur Charles Stanley, alias A. C. Linton Seldon, came from Canterbury, Kent, last August, and after experiencing the vicissitudes of farm life for a couple of months, decided that he should like to go home again. It seems doubtful that his people want him to go, and he does not possess the necessary funds to take him back to the hop-fields, so he hit upon a plan. He knew a little about the deportation laws, and proceeded to use his knowledge to advantage, by first of all taking the sum of $10 from George Bishop, of Bird's Hill, and by later feigning insanity.

On Saturday last he went to the farm of Mr. Bishop, and stated that in his capacity of "B. A.," of London, he had been sent by Dr. Cox, of Portage avenue, Winnipeg, to attend to a patient by the name of Henderson who lived farther on. He wished to hire a horse at the village, and asked for, a loan of $10 to do so. This he promised to pay back next day, and this the unsuspecting Mr. Bishop agreed upon. He didn't return, however, and on information being lodged he was arrested by Provincial Detective John Parr, and brought before Magistrate McMicken yesterday. He feigned that he knew nothing, but later pleaded guilty, and was remanded, pending the notification of Bruce Walker, commissioner of immigration. Stanley stated that he would be satisfied to go home.

A Peterborough lady has a violin a hundred and forty-five years old. It is surmised that this is the second fiddle which is so often referred to.

Judging from his recent showing in a wrestling match at Montreal, when he was beaten by one of the new Turks, it is apparent that our old friend, Fritz Mohl, is going back.

ECZEMA AND PILES CURED

Magistrate and School Commissioner Healed by Zam-Buk

Zam-Buk by its healing power has earned the praise of men and women in the highest stations of life. One of the latest prominent gentlemen to speak highly in Zam-Buk's favor is Mr. C. E. Sanford, of Weston, King's Co., N. S. Mr. Sanford, is a Justice of the Peace for the county, and a member of the Board of School Commissioners. He is also deacon of the Baptist Church in Berwick. Indeed, throughout the county it would be difficult to find a man more widely known and more highly respected.

Some time back he had occasion to test Zam-Buk, and here is his opinion of this great balm. He says; "I had a patch of eczema on my ankle, which had been there for over twenty years! Sometimes also the disease would break out on my shoulders. I had taken solution of arsenic, had applied various ointments, and tried all sorts of things to obtain a cure, but in vain. Zam-Buk, unlike all else I tried, proved highly satisfactory, and cured the ailment.

"I have also used Zam-Buk for itching piles, and it has cured them completely also. I take comfort in helping my brother man, and if the publication of my experience of Zam-Buk will lead other sufferers to try it, I should be glad. For the cure of piles or skin diseases, I know of nothing to equal Zam-Buk."

Zam-Buk also cures burns, cuts, ulcers, blood poisoning, ringworm, scalp sores, chapped hands, cold sores, and all skin injuries and diseases. Rubbed well on to the chest in cases of cold it relieves the tightness and aching. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price, 3 boxes for $1.25.

WERE ON THE WRONG WIRE

Telephonic Perversity by Which the Company Were in Three Calls

(New York Sun.)

"Occasionally," said the man as he left the telephone booth red-faced and angry, "folks do things out of a perversity that cannot be explained. I just now had an experience with a woman over the telephone that would puzzle any one.

"A man I know had a telephone at his home, but none in his office. I dropped my nickel in the box, called his home number and presently a woman's voice answered with the usual 'Hello.' I asked if this were Mr. So-and-so's house and the voice came back 'You've got the wrong number.' I was about to ask what number I had when the woman rang off.

"I dropped another nickel in the slot and told Central she had given me the wrong number, and so she tried again. After some waiting the same woman got on the wire again. Again she told me I had the wrong number and at once rang off. Ten cents to the bad.

"Once more I got Central and this time I went after her strong. She said she certainly had given me the number I had asked for, and I was just as sure that she hadn't. Well, anyway, she promised to get it for me this time. Much to my surprise, when I heard a voice at the other end next time it was that of the woman I had had twice before. I began differently this time. 'Is this number so-and-so?' I asked. 'Yes,' the women replied. "Isn't that Mr. Blank's number?' I demanded. 'No, it isn't,' she came back with. 'I told you that twice before."

"I thought I detected signs that she was about to hang up again, and I got in hastily. I asked how it was that this number was in the book for the man I asked for, and I asked her whether the house number was not a certain street number in The Bronx.

"'No,' she answered, 'that isn't the street number at all. This telephone number used to belong to the man you speak of, but he has no house telephone now and we got it. We live a couple of miles from where he did.'

"Then she rang off once more. Just think of that! She made me pay fifteen cents, when she might have tld me that the first time."

Taxicab Stock

The Story of the Dollars

The ideal way of earning money is to make your dollars work for you. Make your dollar work where it will earn the most by seeking for the investment that will pay the best.

The dollar that earns but 2 or 3 per cent. is almost as bad as the idle dollar which earns nothing

We advise Taxicab Stock at $6 per share, par value $5.00, for beginning January 1910, it can pay a dividend of 10% per annum or 2½% quarterly.

The Idle Dollar

The dollar that is tied up in bad investments—

—the dollar that is invested in (conservative) low interest bearing securities, usually sold at a high premium—

—the dollar that is not invested anywhere, reposing in the old stocking under the mattress, or in the tin teapot on the pantry shelf—

—the dollar that buys the things that you would be better without—

—this is the idle dollar.

The idle dollar gives no man comfort in holding, keeping, owning or wasting.

The Busy Dollar

The dollar that is working for you all the time—

—the dollar that brings you a big percentage of returns—

—the dollar that is invested in good commercial stocks or industrial enterprises and earns away above the ordinary bank interest—

—the dollar that by quick turns and clear foresight doubles, trebles and quadruples itself—

—this is the busy dollar.

To keep your dollar busy make it work for you and earn big returns.

An investment in Taxicab Stock will prove the best known medium.

The Ideal Investment

An industry that fills a long felt want, which supplies an insistent and growing demand, which has possibilities of great future expansion, is the ideal investment.
Such a one is Toronto's system of Taxicabs, for in barely six months it has proved its big earning capacity.
What it may do in the future, with an outfit increased many times, you can only surmise.
Taxicab Stock has a great future, and the time to buy Taxicab Stock is now.
SUBSCRIPTIONS will be accepted up to 100 shares in the order received at this office.

SLEET STORM DOES EXTENSIVE DAMAGE

Bell Telephone Co. the Heaviest Sufferer—Other "Wire" Systems Affected—Trees Break Under Weight of Ice—Electric Light Circuits Out of Commission—Broken Wires Numerous —Orchards Damaged.

Nature effected a transformation scene last night, buut unfortunately the change of scenery was not brought about without much damage being done and a good deal of inconvenience caused. A person with an artistic temperament and a love for the aesthetic, might rejoice in the scenic effects this morning, but the average citizen was more in a mood for complaining about the street cars being irregular in their service, the lights being out ,the sidewalks slippery and partially blockaded, the trees broken, and other inconveniences of that kind.

The storm again pretty nearly beat out the "oldest inhabitant" who was busy this morning trying to recall a time when there had been such an abundance of sleet and so much damage done. There have been worse storms of this kind in the past, but none so severe in the last ten years. Sleet fell all yesterday afternoon and far into the night. It was still coming down at one o'clock this morning, but before daylight the atmosphere became colder and the sleet changed to snow, a thin covering of which blanketed the ground this morning.

The trees, wires, poles and other object sout of doors became encased in an icy covering and as the sleet continued the load became too great to bear in many cases. The result was that trees were broken down, branches stripped off and wires broken off. Falling limbs and trees struck the wires and the result was that many were broken. This caused numerous telephones to be put out of commission and the electric lights were out in many parts of the city. The power companies also had trouble on their hands, as a result of broken wires. The Bell Telephone Co. appears to have been the heaviest loser. Much damage was done in the parks and orchards, many trees being broken off as cleanly as one would break a stick of chalk.

The trees presented a beautiful sight this morning when the sun came out brightly and transformed the icy trimmings into glittering silver. Such a sight will not likely be seen again for a long time.

Many citizens had to dig up coal oil lamps and candles when the electric lights went out and the shops had more calls for coal-oil than they have had for several months. The lighting system in some homes resembled that in vogue in the seventies.

The telephone and power companies have a large number of men at work to-day repairing the damage that was done. No time is being lost in having the services but right again.

There was considerable danger from live wires being broken, but fortunately no one was injured.

WHERE IT STARTED.

Yesterday's storm started down New Mexico way and gradually increased in violence on its journey to the lakes. At noon the wind velocity had reached 45 miles an hour, and the crafts were few that ventured out of harborage. Rather than face the fierce gale, the Lakeside remained at Port Dalhousie. To-day the storm will be expending it energy on the Atlantic Coast, but following in its wake is another one, this time a disturbance of domestic origin, which is on its way from Alberta.

Yesterday's rainfall was exceedingly heavy, Kingston registering 1 7-10 inches Port Stanley 1 4-10 ,the Ottawa Valley 1 6-2, Montreal 1 2-10, Ottawa 1, and Toronto 1 1-2 inches. Heavy snow has accompanied the rain in the Ottawa Valley and along the St Lawrence.

COUNTRY ROADS BLOCKED.

An Otonabee resident stated to the Review to-day that in some parts of that township the roads were blocked by limbs falling across them. They were cleared early this morning ,however, and not much inconvenience was experienced.

SALOME OUTDONE.

Many citizens experienced novel sensations on their way home last night. It wasn't so bad in the early part of the night, but around eleven o'clock branches and limbs were falling all around and in some places there was a network of icicled foliage across the sidewalks so thick that to make any progress a person had to execute stunt alike the quarterback of a rugby team trying to go through the line. A member of the Review staff who went home about midnight had to do criss-cross stunts that had the Salome dance faded, and in order to avoid fallen and falling timber. The middle of the street was the safest place, but there was danger even there. Limbs six inches in diameter were broken off as neatly as if they were so many pipe stems.

DAMAGE TO ORCHARDS.

Reports from the surrounding country indicate that the storm did much damage to orchards. Apple and other fruit trees were broken down, small trees suffering most. The loss to owners of orchards will be heavy.

PARKS SUFFERED.

Central Park suffered heavily as a result of the storm. Limbs were broken off nearly every tree and a good deal of sawing and pruning will have to be done. A tree at least six inches in diameter snapped off about two feet from the ground and fell out across George street near the corner of Brock. Smaller trees also fell in other parts of the park. The park presented a beautiful sight this morning. Every twig on every tree was coated with ice, which glistened like silver in the bright sunlight.

The damage at Victoria Park was not so great as at Central Park. Although limbs were broken off no trees fell. Realizing the beauty of the scene a number of photographers were at work in the park early this morning securing pictures, the like of which they may not be able to get again for many years.

Similar conditions prevailed at Jackson Park and at Nicholls Oval and considerable damage was done.

THE HEAVIEST LOSERS.

As a result of the storm the local interests that were most seriously effected were probably those of the Bell Telephone Co. The system suffered great damage, especially in the rural districts and the trouble department this morning reported that so far as the company were concerned the storm proved the worst in years. The damage is widespread and resulted in the shutting off entirely of the long distance connections, putting out of commission in the matter of telephone connection, one hundred rural phones and from fifty to seventy-five in the city.

A number of the company's poles were broken, some in Omemee, Bridgenorth and Ennismore, one at the Locks bridge and others. The wires are down for a hundred yards at a stretch on different lines.

The first long distance connection was established this morning when the Lakefield line was gotten into working order. This was at 10 o'clock.

The repairs, as may be inferred by the damage, will be very extensive and assistance from Toronto was summoned by the local office to carry on the work. The loss will be quite a serious one and great inconvenience will be caused.

MANY WIRES DOWN.

A heavy tree that torpled earthward on the corner of Simcoe and Water streets was the cause of such a sudden darkness in a main portion of the city. The tree broke the wires of the Peterborough Light and Power Company's system at this point, and as a result cut out one of the main circuits, embracing a central portion of George street. A number of private residences in different sections of the city were suddenly cast in darkness through the falling of trees on the wires and the ice putting them out of commission.

RAILWAY TRAFFIC.

All the Grand Trunk Railway passenger trains are running on time today. Last night the Belleville train was a little behind time, owing to obstructions on the track between Birdsall's and Hastings. Only time-card trains were running last night as a result of mishaps to the lines between here and Lindsay. Eight freight cars left the track at the Cordage Works siding, but will likely be in commission again by this evening.

Up to two o'clock the early morning train from the east, on the Canadian Pacific Railway had not arrived. Poles and wires are down, and the track in places is blocked. The mail train from the west was nearly one hour late.

DAMAGE TO FIRE SYSTEM.

About $200 or $300 damage resulted to the fire alarm system. The lines were burnt off in several different places, the sleet weighing down the power wires, which burned the wires over which the alarms are transmitted. Considerable damage was done to the switch board at the fire station and some to some of the magnet coils. It is expected that repairs will be affected by this evening.

Last night Chief Howard telephoned to the big factories of the city to notify their watchmen that the alarm system was disabled, and to send in any alarms by 'phone.

MACHINE TELEPHONE TROUBLES

One of the Machine Telephone Company's leads on Rubidge street was broken and pretty badly damaged, power wires sagging down, owing to their heavy coating of ice, and burning the wires of the telephone co.'s line. Outside this and damage to a few "runoffs," the loss to the telephone company will not amount to very much. All the damage done was in the western part of the city.

THE LIVERIES.

The liverymen had a busy day and night. Calls came in incessantly from all parts of the city, and it required all the best efforts of man and beast to meet the demands and then customers were called upon to wait for a considerable time before their order could be attended to.

Several drivers report narrow escapes from live wires and falling trees or branches, but as far as can be ascertained no accidents occurred.

LIGHTS OUT EVERYWHERE

Mr. W. G. Ferguson, the managing director of the Otonabee Power Company, could not be communicated with until a late hour this afternoon. He stated the falling branches of trees and the destructive weight of ice on the wires had a demoralizing effect on the system, which was completely put out of business last night about 6.30. As a result the patrons of the company were without electric lights in their homes or places of business last night. The company expects to have everything in working order to-night.

They Keep The Brakes Set

And So Can Never Do Their Best

Many men, and more women, go through life like a train with the engine tugging, but the brakes hard on. They never get anywhere near top speed, because they are never really well.

Probably they do not own even to themselves that they are sick, but they scarcely known what it is to really "feel good". Always there is Headache, or that "dragged out feeling" which makes good work, either mental or physical, utterly impossible.

The most common trouble with all these people is that they have Constipation. Their systems are poisoned with the waste matter, which stays in the blood, instead of being promptly removed by the bowels. Harsh purgatives are worse than no treatment at all, because they weaken and irritate the bowels, instead of curing the trouble.

The natural and permanent cure for Constipation, is "Fruit-a-tives".

"Fruit-a-tives" combines the well-known laxative principles of apples, oranges, figs and prunes. So perfect is the combination, that "Fruit-a-tives" acts like the fresh fruit, by stimulating the sluggish liver to supply the proper amount of bile to move the bowels regularly.

The most stubborn cases of Constipation promptly yield to the curative and corrective effects of "Fruit-a-tives".

WHERE REAL ESTATE DON'T STAND STILL

Mr. George A. Reid called the attention of the Review to-day to an item in the Vancouver World, which shows how rapidly real estate is advancing in price in that city. A parcel of land at the corner of Robson and Hornby streets, which was purchased two years ago for $4,200, was bought a few years ago by two American investors for $85,000. The property consists of three lots and on it are located three stores and two dwellings. It is situated two blocks from the main street.

Mr. Reid states that a similar property, which was listed at $30,000, was withdrawn from the market a short time ago.

Mr. Laster's Position

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—The item in last night's Review entitled "A Call to the Platform" has come under my notice. If Mr. Laster has anything helpful to say to the citizens of Peterborough I am sure he may have an audience at any time if he will secure a platform as the advocates of local option have done. It must be remembered, however, that the public is the judge as to what is really helpful, and no one can guarantee Mr. Laster an audience.

Yours,

DOCTORS NOT CERTAIN WHAT CAUSED THE WOMAN'S DEATH

Prof. Ellis Gives It as Result of His Examination That Uxbridge Woman's Stomach Contained a Grain of Strychnine.

Uxbridge, Nov. 24.—Although the coroner's jury is still investigating the death of Mrs. McLaughlin and her two children, Archie McLaughlin, the husband and father, was arraigned before Magistrate Hamilton here yesterday afternoon for his preliminary hearing on the charge of murder. Much evidence has been taken by Coroner Dr. Bascom, and two or three more witnesses will be called to-day, after which a verdict will be rendered.

In view of the fact that the suspicion against Archie McLaughlin was sufficiently grave to cause his arrest last Friday, followed by his arraignment yesterday on a charge of murder, the verdict of the jury can hardly have any effect on subsequent proceedings.

T. F. Phelan, of the legal firm of Robinette & Phalen, who is acting for McLaughlin, registered an objection to the proceedings yesterday afternoon, holding that the prisoner was not regularly before the magistrate.

Monta McLaughlin, the seven-year-old daughter of the prisoner, has been delivered into the care of Mrs. Watson, the dead woman's sister. McLaughlin talked through the bars of the lock-up yesterday to his sister-in-law, and asked her to take care of the child. McLaughlin is manifestly laboring under great mental stress, and has aged considerably in appearance since the tragedy. In court, he sits with head bowed resting in his hands, and seldom looks up.

The medical men connected with the case have already reached a division of opinion with respect to an important point. Drs. Shier and McClintock, who made the post-mortem examination, both testified before the coroner yesterday, that in view of all the circumstances, they would not undertake to say whether the woman had died of strychnine poisoning or smoke suffocation.

"They must have been very guarded," was the comment of Prof. Ellis, who analyzed the contents of the stomach and found at least one grain of strychnine.

Prof. Ellis came out on the evening train from Toronto and when court resumed at 7 o'clock, was the first witness called. He testified that he had received the stomach in a sealed box, stamped with the name of Dr. Shier. He had found about a grain of strychnine in the stomach. He considered that a considerable amount had been absorbed into the system. From half a grain to two grains, he said, would cause death in less than two hours.

When the inquest was resumed at 9.30 yesterday morning County Crown Attorney Col. Farewell read Prof. Ellis' report, which stated that one grain of strychnine had been extracted therefrom. Following this Dr. Shier, who with Dr. McClintock, had performed the post-mortem, read the joint report. Several slight burns on the body of the woman had been inflicted, he was certain from their nature, after death. The cause of death was set down as suffocation.

At the Monday night sitting of the inquest, the evidence was largely a repetition of former testimony pertaining to Archie McLaughlin's general conduct, with the exception of the evidence of Dr. W. C. Shier, who threw some light on the condition of the three bodies when found. The mouths of all three were open and covered with froth slightly tinged with blood. Suffocation from smoke or asphyxiation from strychnine poisoning would produce that effect.

The woman's body was stiff and when he tried to rearrange her arms they drew back to the position assumed in death. Rigor mortis in the bodies of the children was also very pronounced, sufficiently so that he was able to raise each of the bodies from their place in the corner by a leg and an arm without bending them. Rigor mortis, witness said, advances rapidly following death from strychnine poisoning.

ROOSEVELT FOR GOVERNOR OF NEW YORK

New York, Nov. 24.—Timothy L. Woodruff, chairman of the Republican State Committee, speaking yesterday of a report that a movement was on foot among certain of the Republican leaders, himself included, to have ex-President Roosevelt nominated for governor of New York upon his return from South Africa, said:

"While I have no knowledge, and have not even received any intimation as to whether Theodore Roosevelt would run for governor, I will say this: If Roosevelt will consent to run, it is my opinion that he would be nominated and elected, and it would be a matter of great advantage to the Republican party in the State of New York."

BIG STEAMER IS IN DANGER

St. Joseph, Mich., Nov. 24.—The big passenger steamer Puritan, rode at anchor off New Buffalo all night, only her anchors preventing her from being dashed on the rocky shore. She had a crew of thirty and a passenger list of fifteen. She was picked up and towed to South Chicago Harbor by a tug yesterday morning.

Disabled by sixty mile gale, the Puritan summoned assistance by wireless distress signal, bringing the steamer City of Benton Harbor of the same line to her assistance.

MAN KILLED BY SHOT FROM AMBUSH

Concord, N.H., Nov. 24.—Shot from ambush by an unknown foe, C. H. Fellows, aged 50, a grocer, is dead in his home at Bow, two miles from here. Fellows was shot as he was driving to his home, and expired in his wife's arms just after his horse stopped in his own dooryard yesterday. One bullet pierced his right temple, and the other his shoulder.

IT IS NOT THE McAVITY FIRM

St. John, N.B., Nov. 24.—A member of the firm of T. McAvity & Sons says that they are not interested in any way in the proposed industry at Fort William, Ont. J. L. McAvity, who is looking over the ground at Fort William, is manager of the McLean Bolt Co., a separate concern.

Morse Can Have New Trial.

New York, Nov. 24.—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday granted the motion of Martin W. Littleton, counsel for Chas. W. Morse, to apply to the United States Circuit Court for a new trial for Mr. Morse.

Cleveland Brokers Indicted.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 24.—The county grand jury yesterday indicted five brokers, accusing each of conducting a bucket shop. Their offices recently were raided.

PATIENT IS KILLED BY THE WATER CURE

Montreal, Nov. 24.—Virginie Gobell, who treated patients by the water cure, in which they got no food but water, was found guilty of manslaughter for the death of John O'Neil. The jury were out all night and added to the verdict a recommendation of mercy. Her lawyer asked for a stay of judgment, as the judge had charged against the prisoner unduly, he claimed.

Miss Gobell has kept a sanitarium for years, and a number of patients had died. Different attempts have been made to get a conviction, but she has always won.

She was tried for practicing medicine without license, but as she prescribed no drugs she was acquitted. The manslaughter charge was then brought.

MAN AND CHILD BURNED TO DEATH

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 24.—Representative David A. De Armond, one of the oldest Democratic members of Congress, and his grandson, Waddie, aged 6, were burned to death in a fire that destroyed the De Armond home at Butler, Mo. He had been in Congress 19 years and was especially versed in legal labor subjects.

ARCHBISHOP SUES A BANK

Montreal, Nov. 24.—A suit against the Bank of Montreal for the sum of $21,852.28, was entered in the Superior Court of Saskatchewan. The action arose out of a legacy by N. Bartlette, who was domiciled in New York to the Roman Catholic episcopal corporation of Saskatchewan of all the money he had on deposit in the Bank of Montreal here.

CAN'T GARNISHEE A SOLDIER'S PAY

Kingston, Nov. 24.—Lieut.-Colonel Hemming, D.O.C., for military district No. 3, has issued a "crying down credit" regulation, advertising that "under the act a soldier cannot be placed upon stoppage of pay for a private debt, and if the inhabitants suffer soldiers to contract debts they will do so at their own risk."

Revolutionist's Brother a Prisoner.

Bluefields, Nicaragua, Nov. 24.—Aurelia Estrada, governor, and brother of Provisional President Juan De Estrada of Nicaragua, is in prison and under sentence of death.

He was captured by the Zelaya forces and the death sentence, it is said, was approved by President Zelaya himself.

Accidentally Shot Himself.

Ottawa, Nov. 24.—Charles Coursall, 11 Blackburn avenue, accidentally shot himself yesterday. He was cleaning an old revolver and apparently did not know that one of the chambers was loaded. A bullet entered his body, causing death in a few minutes

MR. LUMSDEN CHARGES OVER-CHARGING ON PART OF THE G. T. P. CONTRACTORS

Correspondence Regarding Resignation of Former Chief Engineer at Transcontinental is Laid on Table of House.

Ottawa, Nov. 24.—The events and the causes which led up to the resignation of Hugh Lumsden, chief engineer of the National Transcontinental Railway, are related in a series of papers and correspondence laid upon the table of the Commons yesterday.

Mr. Lumsden, in his letter of resignation, says he found his position untenable, because neither the general specifications nor his instructions regarding classification had been adhered to, but, on the contrary, large amounts of material had been returned as solid rock, which should only have been classified as loose rock or common excavation, and material was returned as loose rock, or could have been handled by plowing or scraping, and should have been returned as common excavation.

The district engineers and contractors on the other lands, says some correspondence, denied that Mr. Lumsdena's letters had been ignored.

Mr. Lumsden's letter of resignation to the Transcontinental Railway Commissioners under date of June 25 last was, in part, as follows

"Sir,—My recent trips over portions of districts "B" and "F" in connection with the arbitration on points in dispute regarding the classification and overbreak between the chief engineer of the Grand Trunk Railway Co. and myself (which arbitration might have been proceeded with more than eight months ago, but for delay on the part of the G.T.R.), have led me to the conclusion that neither the general specifications nor my instructions regarding classification have been adhered to, but on the contrary, large amounts of material have been returned as solid rock which should only have been classified as loose rock or common excavation, and material has been returned as loose rock which was, or could have been, handled by ploughing or scraping, and should have been returned as common excavation.

"In several instances there seems to have been no attempt by the engineers to carry out my instructions and measure rock returned, either by showing the same on cross sections or by measurements of individual pieces, but they simply appear to have guessed at the amount by taking percentages of the total cuttings. In some cases, where cross sections were prepared showing loose rock, they prove to be erroneous, resulting in a very much larger amount of solid rock being returned than actually existed.

"What is known as overbreak has also been returned in many places where it was caused by excessive use of explosives and where the material was wasted this should not have been done.

"Such being the case, I must decline to certify to any further progress estimates in districts "B" and "F" and in view of the general disregard of my instructions, and having lost confidence in the engineering staff, I have concluded to resign my position as chief engineer and have to-day written to the hon. the Minister of Railways and Canals to that effect, enclosing him a copy of letter."

When the House went into supply on the Indian vote yesterday, George Bradbury (Selkirk) brought up the question of the surrender of the lands of St. Peter's Reserve, Manitoba. He declared that 12,000 acres, nearly half the reserve, had fallen into the hands of speculators at less than $5 per acre.

Describing this land as the garden of Manitoba, he said it should have brought from $15 to $30 per acre. The conditions surrounding the transaction had frightened away ordinary purchasers.

He asked that every one of the transactions be cancelled, and asserted that because of the visit of one of the speculators to Ottawa, there was evidence of collusion between the purchaser and some officer of the Department. He produced a petition signed by 115 Indians seeking redress. They had only received sixteen acres, while the chief had received 320, and the councillors 160. Many of the Indians never saw their patents.

The charges made by Mr. Bradbury induced an onslaught by the Conservative members, several of whom asserted that the Indian Department was "woefully incapable."

Replying as to why the chief and councillors had received more than the rest, Hon. Frank Oliver, said that it was the usual practice to pay more to the heads of a band. The lands had been thoroughly advertised for sale, and sold by auction, and sold above the valuation of the Government expert.

Before there was time for a Ministerial reply as to a demand for an investigation, six o'clock was called, and Mr. Fielding moved that the committee report progress, the House rising for the day.

After a few preliminaries the Upper House yesterday resumed consideration of the insurance bill, which was passed by the House of Commons last year, but which the Senate was unable to deal with owing to the early adjournment of Parliament.

NEW CANADIAN CLUB IS FORMED AT BROCKVILLE

Brockville, Nov. 24.—Brockville has just passed through a typhoid fever epidemic, attributable, it is thought, to the source of the public water supply. Frequent tests have shown traces of polution, and an expert engineer is now making a thorough examination of existing conditions, and his report is regarded as likely to suggest a remedy. The supply is taken from the River St. Lawrence, and a recommendation bearing on the removal of the pumping station to another location may be made.

It has been definitely decided to form a Canadian Club in Brockville and a committee named at a public gathering of citizens is at work drafting a constitution to be submitted at another meeting on the 30th inst.

Smothered Under Tobacco.

Lynchburg, Va., Nov. 24.—James P. Scott, aged 35 years, and his 12-year-old son, were smothered to death near here yesterday under an upset wagonload of leaf tobacco. A few miles from town the wagon they were driving overturned.

COAL OIL PUT IN WELL NEAR STRATFORD

Strathroy, Nov. 24.—Another outrage is reported on the farm of Mrs. Cawthorp, ninth concession, Caradoc. This time a quantity of coal oil has been thrown in the well.

Within the last few weeks her barn has been burned and poison put in the well. She knows of no reason for any person's enmity.

In addition, some implements, which had been saved and which were left securely locked in Clement Fisher's barn, nearby, were stolen, the nuts and bolts of his buggy loosened so that the vehicle would collapse, and, it is suspected, a quantity of pears poisoned. It had been intended to have the latter analyzed at Toronto, but the expense ($200) was too great.

A private detective spent several days here last week, but found no clues.

PROBABILITIES.

Thursday fresh winds, partly fair, higher temperature, snow or sleet.

POWER PLANT IS FLOODED

Winnipeg Street Cars Are Out of Business for a Week—Flume Burst.

Winnipeg, Nov. 24.—Winnipeg is in darkness, and all the streets and suburban cars are sitting on tracks where the cutting off of the current found them at 4.40 yesterday afternoon.

It is quite probable that the car service will not be effective for a week. The Winnipeg Electric Street Railway's flume at Lac Du Bonnet burst yesterday, causing a flooding of the power house, and not until late yesterday evening was the water diverted.

As yet the extent of the damage is unknown, but if the generators should have been wet, it is highly probable the service will be tied up for a week.

Meantime, the street lights are out as the city, despite their suit with the company, depends on the company for street lightning. House and office buildings depending on electric light are dimly illuminated by the steam plant which is kept as a reserve. However, it was hopeless to attempt the car service with this plant, although it will probably be used to stable the cars after midnight when the call for power is at the lightest.

The disaster will be fresh evidence for the judge in whose hands the case between the city and railway company is now resting for adjudication. The company claimed the car service was operated by a steam plant, which the charter requires to be within the city limits, while the Lac du Bonnet plant served the general light and power contracts.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Fire did $100,000 damage at Canastota, N.Y., yesterday.

Windsor will vote on a proposition to go back to the ward system of electing the council.

Directors of the Kansas City Terminal Co. have accepted plans for a new union station to cost $5,700,000.

Chili has turned over $1,000,000 to The Hague arbitration court for payment of the Alsop claim, should the court so award it.

Ex-Judge Doherty and E. B. Devlin, members of Parliament, have interested themselves in the case of Dillon, the Montreal murderer, and are engaged in preparing a memorandum to the Minister of Justice asking commutation.

CLEVELAND'S SUBWAY PLAN

Cleveland, Nov. 24.—Following a conference between Mayor Tom L. Johnston and the administration councilmen, two ordinances granting a $50,000,000 subway system to the Cleveland Subway Co., were introduced in the City Council. A subway grant to the same company fell several hundreds short of a majority at a referendum election held Nov. 2, coincident with Mayor Johnson's defeat.

LIQUOR MEN COMPLAINING

Ottawa, Nov. 24.—A deputation representing wholesale liquor men waited upon Hon. Wm. Templeman yesterday and complained that they were compelled to put the word "compound" on certain liquors made in Canada, while the customs regulations did not provide for a similar label on foreign goods.

This, they said, was discriminating against the Canadian article.

DISEASED FLESH SENT TO JUDGE

Colorado Springs, Colo., Nov. 24.—Justice of the Peace A. P. Toombs Monday received two pieces of human flesh through the mails.

Accompanying them was a note explaining that they had been taken from a smallpox patient, the writer expressing the wish that the judge might catch the disease and die.

Actress Weds Indian Prince.

London, Nov. 24.—Dolly Parnell, a popular musical comedy actress, was married yesterday to Prince Naser Ali Khan, son of one of the most powerful of the native rulers of India. The prince presented his bride with jewels valued a $100,000.

CROMER'S FOLLOWERS ARE NOT LIKELY TO REJECT BUDGET

It Is Expected That Many of Them in the Upper House Will Decline to Vote With Lansdowne For Its Rejection, Despite the Fact That They Do Not Believe in It.

London, Nov. 24.—Interest in the budget debate in the House of Lords yesterday was well sustained.

Many peeresses were present. The Duke of Connaught sat beside Lord Rosebery.

The debate shows the likelihood of a number of peers following Lord Cromer, in the free trade interest, and declining to support Lord Lansdowne's motion, although opposing the budget on general lines. These peers will abstain from voting. Among them is Lord Lytton, who announced his intention of taking this course because there was no proof that the country opposed the budget.

Lord Cromer, who resumed the debate on the budget yesterday afternoon, said that he was opposed to many of the provisions of the finance measure, but was unable to support Lord Lansdowne's motion for its rejection. This declaration was received with much interest as it was thought to indicate possibly the attitude of the free trade unionists of whom Lord Cromer is one of the leaders.

The debate generally followed party lines, being reiteration of the arguments for and against the bill.

Lord Pentland, Secretary for Scotland, gave another indicataion of the Government's policy. He warned the peers that the House of Commons could not be expected to find a way out of the difficulty created by the rejection of the budget.

This statement created the greatest interest in the lobbies of the House of Commons, where it had been supposed that the Government might give way to the Lords, in the matter of adopting temporary financial measures to meet the situation arising out of the rejection of the budget bill.

Many Liberal members of Parliament had, in fact, expressed their determination to oppose any bill authorizing the continuance of present taxation until after the dissolution of Parliament.

Lord Pentland further declared that the Government had done forever with the old state of things, and that the constitution and character of the House of Lords must be modified.

He also reminded the House that a long constitutional struggle might handicap the country in case of war, and asked the Lords to consider whether the penalty might not be disproportionate to the offence.

Earl Russell predicted that the adoption of the Lansdowne resolution would start a revolution that would sooner or later bring a re-adjustment that would leave the House of Lords powerless.

Lord Avebury strongly criticized the budget. He declared that it would frighten capital out of the country, cripple enterprise and create a feeling of insecurity.

STANDARD OIL WILL APPEAL TO SUPREME COURT

New York, Nov. 24.—The Standard Oil Co. announced authoritatively yesterday that it had no intention of seeking an amendment to the Sherman anti-trust law, but will proceed with the appeal to the United States Supreme Court, which, as already announced through Mortimer F. Elliott its general solicitor, is to be taken from the decree of the U. S. Circuit Court at St. Paul. He said yesterday

"Although the decree enjoins the Standard Oil Co. from voting its shareholdings in subsidiary companies or receiving dividends from them, there is no reason why the individual holders among whom such shares would be divided under the decrees should not elect their own officers in the subsidiary companies and receive their own dividends from these companies.

"A proxy system among our 5,000 shareholders would certainly be no more unmanageable than the same system as now used by railroads and industrial companies, with say 5,000 shareholders.

"In brief, there is no cause for the market to fear a forced liquidation of the securities the Standard Oil Co. now holds."

DISAPPEARANCE IS MYSTERIOUS

Sprucedale, Ont., Nov. 24.—John Middleton, boot and shoe maker of this place, is missing. He had completed arrangements for moving with his family to Charlton on Tuesday last. His wife and six small children had gone into the country to bid the grandparents good-bye, but on their return Tuesday morning the father could not be found

THE DUNELUM BLOWN ASHORE

Port Dalhousie, Nov. 24.—The steamer Dunelum, which left here Monday night, was blown ashore just off Niagara-on-the-Lake.

The life-saving crew from Niagara made their way out to the boat bringing the mate ashore, who sent word up here for a couple of tugs to go to the disabled boat.

Owing to the heavy gale, it was not advisable to venture out. In the meantime, the steamer released herself and proceeded to Kingston.

HON. W. A. WEIR MAY BE MADE QUEBEC JUDGE

Montreal, Nov. 24.—There is a strong movement on foot here favoring the appointment of Hon. W. A. Weir, Provincial Treasurer of the province, to the vacancy on the Superior Court bench vacated by the late Justice Curran.

It will be remembered that when the Conservative administration called Solicitor-General Curran to the bench, replacing the late Chief Justice Johnson, a strong protest was entered on the ground that the appointment belonged to the English speaking Protestant minority but Sir Mackenzie Bowell, although an Orangeman, held firm. Now it is said that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is disposed to give back the appointment to a gentleman of that faith, and that Hon. Mr. Weir will be the new justice.

So far the names of J. C. Walsh, ex-M.P., and D. R. Murphy, of the legal firm of Gouin, Lemieux, Murphy and Berard, have been mentioned.

HEAVY SNOW IN THE WEST

Winnipeg, Nov. 24.—Heavy snowstorms have prevailed generally throughout the west, but traffic is still moving freely on the prairie sections. On the north shore, however, conditions are bad.

This early fall of snow is generally welcomed as good for the country and for giving employment.

Black Hand Uses Dynamite.

Danville, Ill., Nov. 24.—An explosion of dynamite in the fruit and wine house of Joseph Mascari, early yesterday damaged 25 buildings in the business district of the city. Mascari, who is an Italian, believes the Black Hand is responsible.

An Old-Time Operator.

Chicago, Nov. 24.—With a record as the oldest telegrapher in the world, in point of years in active service at the key, J. D. Vo[illegible]z, station master for the Chicago & Northwestern Railway, at South Elgin for the last twenty-five years, has retired.

His record dates back fifty-five years. Since 1854 he has never earned a dollar away from the telegraph instrument.

He served in the civil war and transmitted Sherman's war plan to Lincoln.

EUCHARISTIC CONGRESS NEXT YEAR

The organization of the Eucharistic Congress, to be held in Montreal next September, is being actively carried out, and Bishop Haylen, of Namur, general president of all such meetings, will come to Montreal next month to arrange details with Archbishop Bruchesi.

It is intended to make special arrangements with the railway companies here, so that visitors from Europe, coming by the St. Lawrence route may be furnished with excursion trains, allowing them to see in a few days Toronto, Niagara, Chicago and New York, where they could embark on their return voyage.

The officers of the Finance Committee of the congress are the Rev. Canon Martin, president; the Hon. L. J. Forget and Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, vice-presidents; the Rev. Abbe A. Sylvestre, secretary.

New police headquarters for Hamilton to cost $40,000 have been approved.

SIR WILFRID'S BIRTHDAY

The ecstatic admiration being showered upon Sir Wilfrid Laurier on the occasion of his 68th birthday reads from the way most of the eulogiums are put as if contractors were behind them. We can never quite forgive Sir Wilfrid for what looked like common duplicity in connection with Manitoba. At the time referred to Conservatives were obeying the orders of the judgment of the Privy Council of the Empire. They recognized the hopelessness of their position but loyalty to the constitution forbade it otherwise. How well we remember that our opponents appealed to us both in public and especially in private to help Sir Wilfrid who was described as a Gallican Catholic, that is a national or Canadian Catholic, not an ultramontane, to free his people from the domination of a foreign ecclesiastical power. How well we remember the famous telegram which was sent to the farther west assuring them in mysterious but definite terms just before a general election that something of a most beneficial character was to be done there too. It was all to be so sly. The necessity of discretion was supposed to prevent a frank public avowal. We know what happened. We know that Sir Wilfrid deceived the people who put him in. There was no mistake about that. They trusted him and he knew it and thanked them for it but he took a mean advantage of it. The silver-tongue is forked. And now we have it again. Sunny ways cannot hide from us the fact that we are being betrayed into a state of coldness and separation towards Great Britain. The dream of French Canada is to come true, is it? Perhaps so. But before this policy of separation is fully developed something will be doing. The debate in parliament will be a furious struggle. The crisis has at last arrived and it is time. If we can save Canada to the people who won and made it we will do well. It is a great field for the future. All realise it. The Plenary Council realized it. The builders of great public works realise it. Even the common grafters realize it. They threw up their hats for Sir Wilfrid. He is dramatic. He is picturesque. He is polite. We are moved by his play upon our feelings, i. e., some are, especially those who are making money out of it. But it is easy to let contracts for which other people pay. It is easy to allay prejudices by deception when these prejudices will burst into a devouring conflagration at a later day. It is easy to pretend. It is all pretence. He practises protection while pretending free trade. He anathematized bounties yet pays them by the million. He rejoices in surpluses that according to his preachings should go back to the pockets of the people. He is building up a new power in the west. He is pouring in foreigners hostile to Great Britain. The "American invasion" is one almost wholly of German-American Catholics. There will be another Quebec there in ten years for which Ontario continues to be sacrificed.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier has sown the seeds of future bitterness and dissension. There can be no love and harmony founded upon tricks and consequent distrust. His aim is to make this country French and Catholic and he is doing it. It is not that there is objection to the French or to the Catholic but Canada was won by the British and the Protestants and it is only fair that the latter should have some say in their dominions.

It were better that a state should be governed so as to allow individual opinions their perfect freedom for development. No state should have disabilities levelled against private opinion. But this applies to one race as to another and when we see the steady trend of recent events, events of the last 13 years, it is plain that Sir Wilfrid is not the ideal leader. That he is French is nothing to his discredit. They are a great people. They come from a great stock. But that he acts like a Frenchman is a different thing. The head of the state in Canada should be colorless in his aspirations at the very least. He is not so. He is all for the "automony" of Canada. Why? Let his policy continued for 13 years answer. We wish Sir Wilfrid well. We have no desire to see his birthdays, as a private citizen, cut short, but we have no desire to see his policy of separation succeed. It will be too late to correct it when it has matured.

THE NAVAL PROBLEM

(Brantford Courier.)

"By the correspondence in the matter it is shown that the British Admiralty with regard to Canadian naval proposals, pointed out that "the maximum of power would be gained if all parts of the Empire contributed according to their needs and resources to the maintenance of the British navy.

That is a plain enough intimation of what John Bull considered would be the better plan. However, the alternative was also mentioned of a Dominion navy, and the suggestion made in such a case that the aim should be to form "a distinct fleet unit."

* * * *

They are not to be an integral part of the British navy, and in case of war Parliament has first to meet to say whether they shall be used for Empire purposes. The entire scheme looks very much of a farce, with a lot of expense without adequate results."

It is only to be accounted for by Sir Wilfrid's hostility to a unification of the empire.

EDITORIAL NOTES

American journals are commenting on Canada's move towards independence.

John Dillon, a Montreal murderer, after having been found guilty and sentenced by a competent court, has been granted a new lease of life on the eve of the day of his execution in order that the claim of his lawyer that the prisoner is insane may be looked into. And thus does Ontario's bad precedent spread.—Hamilton Spectator.

"What is the cure for these frauds or scandals? Honest government. How is it to be secured? By the election of absolutely honest men. It is to the everlasting disgrace of the people that they will sometimes put politics above principle, and elect to office and control those who are mixed up with transactions of the most questionable character."—Kingston Whig (Liberal.)

The St. Thomas Times in discussing the Standard's recent article on the navy question entirely ignores the main point, which is that Canada needs no navy for her own protection, which is absolutely guaranteed by the Monroe Doctrine, a Doctrine that acts practically in spite of ourselves, and whether we wish it or not. It is the Empire, and not Canada, that needs warships.—Kingston Standard.

In the year 1914 a man will be found running about with a pitchfork looking for another man who had assured him in 1909 that the way to preserve British connection was to decline to connect and that the way to preserve Canada for the palefaces was to let the Oriental in for development purposes, and that the way to make Canada British to the core was to make it French to the core, &c.

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—First of all, we have to record the pleasing information that this country intends to signalize the return of prosperity by spending the trifling sum of $127,670,000. (When we have added the inevitable supplementary estimates, we shall come somewhere near the $130,000,000 mark. Or rather over $18 per head of population, or $90 to each average family. The increase over last year is $16,000,000. As the Ministers seem to expect a revenue of a a hundred millions, we must expect thirty-million-dollar increase to the budget.—Toronto News.

Mr. Graham, Minister of Railways, has stated in Parliament that the utilization of the section of the National Transcontinental Railway from Winnipeg to Superior Junction extended only to the haulage of ten cars of grain, about Nov. 6. Sir Charles Rivers Wilson does not need to say any more in defence of his claim that the road is not ready for traffic. A road that only carries ten cars of freight in a fortnight is not in business.—Montreal Gazette.

Premier Briand in the Chamber of Deputies to-day indirectly replied to the address of the Pope made on Thursday last before a body of French pilgrims, in which the Pope declared that France was making war against the Church, with the aim of undermining the basis of Christianity. The Premier warned the Republicans not to be alarmed by the disorder the Church was attempting to stir up in the face of the coming elections. "The country," said Mr. M. Briand, "will never permit the destruction of the public school system, which is the proudest work of the republic."

The Premier characterized the Catholic appeals as "violent, passionate and unjust," intimating that the Government possessed documents, and could, if it so desired, make embarrassing revelations regarding conditions in the confessional schools. Turning to the Catholics, he declared that the persecution of which they complained was purely imaginary.

The Royalists to-day issued a manifesto announcing their intention to unite with the Catholics at the coming general election in opposition to those candidates who were not in sympathy with the Church's attitude regarding the public schools.—Despatches.

Professor Dupuis, of Queen's University, has issued a paper on the naval question, in which he argues that if we establish a navy the cost will be enormous, while as a contribution to Empire defence our ships will not be very useful. He then asks, "Have we not a debt of gratitude to Great Britain for all she has done for us, and should we not do what is within our power to assist her in time of need?" To these propositions he replies in the affirmative, and adds: "But I do not see how the building of a Canadian navy is to assist Great Britain or pay our debt of gratitude. In the event of a war between Great Britain and Germany it is very doubtful if the Canadian navy could ever get to the scene of action or inflict any injury whatever upon the enemy. A much better way of furnishing assistance, if it must be done, would be to give to Great Britain, at stated intervals if necessary, sufficient money to build a modern war vessel for her own use." Certainly our Bristols would not be of much service if they were to be held in port until Parliament had met to decide whether or not the war was just before allowing them to take part.—The Mail and Empire.

Syrian Arrested for Fraud.

Fredericton, N.B., Nov. 23.—William A. Ayoup, a Syrian of Grand Falls, N.B., is under arrest, charged with having defrauded some two score firms in Canada and the United States. Ayoup and associates, it is alleged, ordered goods to the value of $25,000 on 30 days' credit. Failing to meet drafts enquiries were instituted and it was learned that goods had been shipped to various addresses.

Grain Inspection.

Ottawa, Nov. 23.—Trade and commerce reports show the inspection of 51,246,350 bushels at Winnipeg to Nov. 7, and of this 40,516,350 bushels were wheat. To the same date lake port shipments amounted to 29,506,989 bushels. This is about 15,000,000 bushels ahead of last year.

Cunningham a Dope Fiend.

Toronto, Nov. 23.—Wm. G. Cunningham was pronounced insane and a dope fiend in the Police Court yesterday, and was sent to the asylum. Posing as a doctor he had been getting morphine from a number of druggists.

Marines For Nicaragua.

Washington, Nov. 23.—Preparations are being made for 400 marines to sail from Philadelphia, either for the canal zone or for Nicaragua, next Saturday.

CATARRH MUST GO

And Hawking, Spitting Snuffels Must Go too

Hyomei (pronounced High-o-me) will give the sufferer from catarrh joyful relief in five minutes.

It is such a remarkable cure, and so positive in its action Wm. Madill goes so far as to guarantee it to cure catarrh or money back.

A complete outfit, which consists of a hard rubber pocket inhaler, a bottle of Hyomei, and a unique dropper for filling the inhaler, only costs one dollar, and if an extra bottle is afterwards needed the price is only 50 cents.

Hyomei is a healing, antiseptic balsam, taken from the mighty eucalyptus trees in the health-giving forests of Australia, where diseases of the respiratory tract are unknown.

All the sufferer has to do is to inhale the antiseptic air of Hyomei over the inflamed parts where the germs are entrenched, three or four times a day.

It cures coughs, colds, asthma, hay fever and croup without stomach dosing.

MI-O-NA Cures Dyspepsia.

Your money back if it don't. Gives immediate relief from heartburn, sour stomach, stomach distress and sick headache. 50 cents a large box at

RAILWAYS PREPARING FOR BIG HOLIDAY RUSH FROM CANADIAN WEST

Special to the Review.

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 21.— There has been no bad weather in the West yet. Light snow has fallen and the high temperature that prevailed all fall has dropped off considerably, but the weather is still of the sort that permits building and other outdoor work to go uninterruptedly. As a consequence of these favorable conditions, there is a vast deal of building going on throughout the West, and all trades and business dependent upon building operations are well and steadily employed.

This great activity in building sets as a sharp spur to the real estate movement that prevails so generally throughout the West. Not only has Winnipeg experienced great activity in city real estate and outside properties — farm lands—but the movement has spread all over the western country.

REMARKABLE SALES IN VANCOUVER.

In this line, heavy sales of land in Vancouver took place this week. Auction sales of Government land outlying Vancouver ran up to two million dollars in a two-day sale. This large sum was derived from the sale of five hundred acres of land, and it is a noteworthy fact that the same quality of land, similarly located, was sold five years ago for from $200 to $500 an acre, whereas some single acres in the most recent sale brought as high as $10,000 and the average price was $4,000. To a very great extent, these sales were made to Winnipeg buyers, who bought heavily of Vancouver real estate for investment purposes, a clear indication of the promising future of the Pacific Coast city.

MUST HAVE SQUARE DEALING.

It is an encouraging feature of the great movement in Western Canadian real estate that the reputable dealers are united in protecting investors from fraudulent enterprises. At a recent meeting of the Winnipeg Real Estate Exchange action was taken to warn purchasers of sub-division property of the dangers of being deceived by unscrupulous dealers, who attempt to put on subdivisions that are located fifteen or twenty miles from the centre of the city, advertising them to the public as close-by property. Thus far, there has been very little of this sort of deception practised in connection with the real estate activities that have been such a marked feature of Winnipeg dealings this fall, but the action taken by the Real Estate Exchange is calculated to head off any attempts of this nature that might otherwise have been made and to keep the present real estate movement untainted by doubtful enterprises.

BIG HOLIDAY TRAFFIC.

At the approach of the Christmas and New Year holidays, the railroads are preparing for a great rush of travel. The extremely prosperous season has produced so much money in the general, and for the individual, that there will be thousands who will make trips that they could not afford otherwise. This general ability to indulge in the luxury of a winter vacation will be the cause of heavy travel in both directions from Winnipeg, but chiefly eastward, of course, for the reason that the bulk of the population of the West is made up of Eastern Canadian people and Old Country folk, very many of whom will make the trip to their old homes this season for the holidays and will spread the story of the prosperity of the West far and wide.

WHEAT TO MOVE MORE FREELY.

With the arrival of the winter season wheat will undoubtedly move a little more freely. So long as the warm weather held on, the farmers were busy plowing and making ready for next season. They were in no haste to dispose of a crop that promises to sell for higher prices, and there has been more wheat held by the farmers this year than ever before in the history of the West. Fall plowing came to an end last week, and those farmers who had no other reason than work of that sort to keep them from shipping their grain will now be at liberty to draw wheat to the shipping points. The approach of winter and the close of lake navigation will add to the traffic in wheat, although the promise of higher prices still holds good, and will act as a check to shipments to some extent.

LOOKING FOR WEALTHY MEN

A Few Hints For Girls Who Contemplate Matrimony—Choose a Real Man

I wonder if my girls ever spend their times in dreams of marrying men far above them in social station. If they do, I want to tell them that those dreams are nothing but rosy clouds of imagination.

Rich, fashionable men marry in their own rank of life, dear girls, and if they come around you, trying to make love to you, take my advice and send them about their business.

A man will pay every attention to the girl who is poor and pretty and unknown, but when it comes to marriage, he chooses a wife from his own surroundings.

The best man for a working girl to marry is a working man. He is earnest, ambitious, intelligent, and he will think his wife the best woman in the world, and treat her as a wife should be treated.

If you marry a man who thinks he knows everything, and considers himself a finished product of civilisation you may have money, but you won't have much else.

Don't judge the men who are courting you by their clothes. A stylish suit and a display of jewellery may cover a pretty poor sort of man.

Choose a real man for a mate, a man who will make you love him and make you respect him.

Some of the finest, best looking men I have ever seen have worn shabby clothes, but I have thought at once "There is the sort of man who could win and hold a woman's love."

I know of one girl, of eighteen, who found a position in a large office, where many men were employed. She was very pretty and loved gaiety. Her mother was a wise and good woman, and said to her, "Now, Katie, I want you to remember one thing, and that is that men do not mean all they say. They may tell you that you are pretty, but that does not mean that they are falling in love with you, and want to marry you.

"The moment a man begins to pay you any attention, I want you to bring him to the house. I want to know the men who my girl knows, and I want them to look me straight in the eye, and let me see that they mean well by her."

Katie may have thought that unnecessary and severe, but she listened just the same, and though she has been in the office over a year, she is still steering her little barque safely through seas of compliments and meaningless attentions.

She has kept her head, and that is the most important thing any girl can do.

The prettier the head the more important that it be kept steady. Remember that, girls.

Smothers to Death.

London, Nov. 23.—George Howell, aged 26, was smothered in bed, by rolling over on his face during the night while in a convulsion. Some time ago Howell put a pin on a car track to see it run over, and while stooping to watch the result he was struck by the steps of the car. Ever since he has had convulsions.

One Killed; One Hurt.

Wilmington, Del., Nov. 23.—Andrew B. Taylor, aged 30 years, of Newcastle, Del., was killed and William M. Moore, aged 24, of Wilmington, was injured early yesterday in the wreck of Taylor's automobile. While crossing a bridge the machine swerved and dashed into a wall.

Heavy 'Quake In California.

Salinas, Cal., Nov. 23.—The heaviest earthquake recorded here since the shock of April 18, 1906, was felt in this city early yesterday. Buildings rocked and creaked for 15 seconds, and people rushed into the streets. So far as ascertained there was no damage.

Ship Aground.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 23.—The steamship F. T. Heffelinger of Duluth, down-bound with ore, ran aground Sunday night in the west channel of the St. Clair Flats Canal, and is blocking traffic in that channel today. The east channel is open.

Six Sons Pallbearers.

Pembroke, Nov. 23.—At the funeral of Oliver Lefebvre, who died at the Soo, his six sons acted as pallbearers. It was the first time they had met in twenty years. Their names are: Abel, Antoine, Oliver, Jerry, Frank and Fred.

Mad Dog Bites Prize Hog.

London, Ont., Nov. 23.—One of the most valuable prize hogs in the country, belonging to John Fridham of Fullerton Township, went mad Sunday afternoon as the result of being bitten by a mad dog.

NEWS FROM KEENE

Special to the Review.

Keene, Nov. 23.—Anniversary services were conducted in the Methodist church, Keene, Sunday, November 21st, by Rev. Mr. Pearson, Peterborough.

Mrs A. Campbell, Peterborough, visited Keene last week.

Messrs Flavells, Limited, Lindsay, who have contracted for a large number of turkeys in this vicinity, will ship from Keene station Friday, November 26th.

Mrs. Bert Green, who has been visiting her parents in Lang, left on Thursday for Swift Current, where she intends to reside in future. Mrs. Green was accompanied by her sister, Miss Margaret Weir, who will spend the winter in the west.

Evangelistic meetings commenced Sunday in Westwood Presbyterian church. They will be continued for a couple of weeks.

Mr. J. H. Gardiner, Peterborough, sold Mr. Richard Hope's farm stock and implements by auction Wednesday. Fair prices were realized.

Miss Add Hope is home for a few days' rest, having spent some weeks with her sister, Mrs. Allan Wilson, who has been very sick, but who, we are glad to report, is making progress for the better.

Monday's severe rain and hail storm did a great deal of damage to fruit trees and forests in this vicinity, breaking a great many trees. In many places the highways are impassible, owing to trees having fallen across the roads.

AN "OLD BOY" IN THE WEST

Lloydminster, Sask., Nov. 18, '09.

The Review,
Peterborough, Ont.:

Please find enclosed order for two dollars, being a subscription for Mr. W. L. Cameron, Lloydminster, and a renewal for myself.

One thing that kept me from renewing mine before was the desire to give you a description of the country along this section of the C.N.R. and the names of some of the people from the vicinity of Peterborough who have settled in this district.

Mr. Cameron, whose subscription you receive in this letter, is a member of the firm of Cameron & Cummings, general merchants; both members came from Norwood. They have a large store, and command a large percentage of the trade. Mr. Cumming has just finished the building of a beautiful residence.

Mr. R. W. Miller came here from Hastings. He is conducting a dry goods and grocery business. Mr. Miller also has a very pretty house. Mr. A. E. McLeod, gents' furnishings, and W. P. Leo, general store, as well as Mr. Mussey, C.N.R. agent, are from "down east," and so I could continue naming people from "Old Ontario." I am meeting people almost every day who come from, or have been in, Peterborough.

Lloydminster is the main settlement of the "Barr Colonists." It is the best town between Dauphin, Man., and Edmonton, Alta., on the C.N.R. The population is something over 1,200, and consists, both in town and country, pretty much in the following order of comparison: English, Scotch, Canadian, Yankee and Irish.

There are really two towns, Lloydminster, Alta., and Lloydminster, Sask. Each has its own council, school, fire-hall and Agricultural Society, but in most other things they combine. On the main street runs the 4th meridian, and on the Alberta side you may stand with one foot in the doorway and the other on the sidewalk and be half in Alberta and half in Saskatchewan.

We have two very fine bank buildings, drill hall and reading room of B Squadron, S.L.H., hospital, immigration hall and a fine electric light plant. A skating rink 60x60 is being erected and a flour mill is well under way.

Forty bushels of wheat per acre have been registered in several localities, sixty to eighty bushels of oats were quite common. I photographed a machine that was turning out 43 per acre of wheat that graded No. 1 Northern, and was speaking to a man who put through oats at the rate of 137 bushels per acre.

The country for miles in every direction is possibly some of the prettiest in the west. A large number of spring lakes and valleys afford appropriate picnic grounds and bathing resorts. My homestead just borders one of these spring lakes, which is twelve miles around and fifty feet deep, and contains some good-sized fish. It is likely we will get a few canoes, fix up the beach, erect a pavilion, etc., and add an attractive summer resort to Lloydminster's many attractions.

Yours Faithfully,
C. D. MATHIAS.

STUDY CLUB WAS FORMED

In Connection With the Y.M.C.A. —Will Meet Every Tuesday Evening

A meeting of a number of the members of the Y. M. C. A. was held last night and an organization was formed which will be known as the Hofferd Study Club. The object of the club will be to promote social intercourse and to study the Bible. The members will meet every Tuesday evening at 6.30 for tea, and afterwards a half hour will be spent in Bible study. The conditions of membership can be obtained on application to any of the officers of the club or at the general secretary's office. The officers elected last night were as follows:

President—Mr. Jas. C. Kingsborough.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. A. A. Perrin
Teacher—Mr. W. Hofferd.

OWES HER LIFE TO

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Vienna, W. Va. — "I feel that I owe the last ten years of my life to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Eleven years ago I was a walking shadow. I had been under the doctor's care but got no relief. My husband persuaded me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it worked like a charm. It relieved all my pains and misery. I advise all suffering women to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." — MRS. EMMA WHEATON, Vienna, W. Va.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases of any similar medicine in the country, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every such suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

The Roots of Altruism.

The three eternal roots of altruistic energy are these: First, the principle of justice—that there is a moral law before which all men are equal, so that I ought to help my neighbor to his rights; second, the principle of charity—that I owe infinite tenderness to any shape or kind of man, however unworthy or useless to the same; third, the principle of free will—that I can really decide to help my neighbor and am truly disgraced if I do not do so. To this may be added the idea of a definite judgment—that is, that the action will at some time terribly matter to the helper and the helped.—G.K. Chesterton.

Baffled.

Confidence man—Why, how do you do, Mr. Wilson? I met you last—

Westerner—See here, young fellow, my name ain't Wilson. My name's John Jones, alias Pete Rodney, alias Jim Hall, alias Joe Peters. So you better move on.

JOE MARTIN ON THE NAVY

By Special Cable to Montreal Star. —London, November 22. — There is amusement in Anglo-Canadian circles over an unreported incident affecting Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux and Mr. Joseph Martin, K.C., formerly of Vancouver, at last week's dinner in the Liberal Colonial Club. There was an influential gathering present, including several Members of Parliament, and some British Ministers.

Mr. Martin, being down for a speech, let out in pungent, biting sentences against the Canadian Government's naval policy. He ridiculed what he called the "tinpot navy" which could be no possible help to England in time of peril, and would only make Canada a laughing stock for the world and serve to fill the pockets of certain Canadians with ill-gotten gains at the public expense. "For eighteen years," he said, "I have been fighting graft in the Tory party in Canada. Now I must turn round on my friends and fight it in the Liberal party. Canada should make a frank and direct contribution to the Empire's Central fighting force."

Mr. Lemieux defended the Government policy on general lines.

The Times, Morning Post and Daily Chronicle, though recording the dinner and reporting the speech of Lord Lucas of the Ministry, say nothing of this incident, which created some stir.

TURKEYS HIGH IN UNITED STATES

Are Selling at 32 Cents per Pound —Canadian Birds Held at the Border

Malone, N.Y., Nov. 23.—Canada has had its Thanksgiving day, but with real turkey gobblers quoted at 32 cents for every pound in the New York market, Canada is going to make money out of Uncle Sam's day of gratitude, providing the customs officials are willing.

Southern Canada grows some fine gobblers—the big feature of America's giving thanks—and selling them at 32 cents per pound means profit. But Uncle Sam has thoughtfully "protected" the infant turkey industry of the United States with a substantial duty.

To-day several tons of as fine gobblers as ever gobbled are detained here by the customs officers because they tried to join the American Thanksgiving day without paying an entrance fee.

THEATRCAL

Two Women and That Man

The name of this play gives no true idea of it. The catchy character of the title has with many people who have not seen the play, no doubt had the effect of reducing it to the level of much of the trash that goes by the name even of melodrama. Much of the usual acting, also, could scarcely be worse. But it is not so with this marvellously vivid and correct presentation of life in Alaska, where the madness for gold and the fierce primal vices and virtues of humanity intermingle in strange variety and come into hourly and sudden conflict. A white native of Alaska, a man of fine character and somewhat easily moved affections, takes a dance-hall girl with whom he has fallen in love, to his cabin on Bear Creek. The setting is natural and good. She tires of the simple life and longs for the flash of the city. A scamp-prospector persuades her to run off with him. Henry Carey as the white native, Luck Milliken, as his wife, and Hector Dion, as the prospector, were excellent. In fact, there was nothing amateurish about the play or its presentation. Edwin Caldwell as Father Jean, was likewise what we should expect of a priest, under the circumstances, capable, kindly and firm. Joseph Harris as Francois, was the half-breed of his type to the life. Sour-dough Rawlins, and by the way, sour-dough means a man who makes cereal food from stale dough, was splendid. His sallies were excellent and not overdone. No mock-heroics or melo-dramatic gush entered into the presentation anywhere. It was free from vulgarity. It was dramatically correct from first to last.

The death-letter scene with Ole Kintuck, was a thing to be remembered, a change from gay to grave in the twinkling of an eye. "Tagish Jim," the Chilcat Indian, who spoke his native tongue, was what travellers' tales and our early fancy pictured such as he to be, picturesque, frank and fierce. Alaska, the daughter of a father, who, like the rest of the cast, fitted his part to the letter, was a gem of sweetness and purity.

The writer went a sceptic and came away convinced. A more delightfully interesting and correctly-presented piece of real life play could scarcely be imagined and whether it could or not, it is unnecessary. There was nothing lame, false, absurd or incorrect about the play or its presentation from beginning to end, except the title.

"Billy" Coming

Another Shubert production is booked for the Grand Opera House. "Billy," which is described as "a tickling, toothsome farce," will be presented on Wednesday evening, December 1st, by the original company from Daly's Theatre, New York. It is appearing at the Princess theatre, Montreal, all this week, and goes from there to Ottawa where it will hold the boards at the Russell on Monday night next. Kingston will be played on Tuesday night and Peterborough on Wednesday. "Billy" was an all-summer hit at Daly's Theatre.

SLEET STORM PLAYED HAVOC WITH WIRES AT LAKEFIELD

Telephone Poles Snapped Off Like Pipe Stems — New Pipe Organ in Lakefield Methodist Church— Cavendish Mill Closes Down.

Special to Review.

Lakefield, Nov. 23.—Mrs. Sexton and children, of Ayr, spent the week-end with her sister, Mrs. H. A. Jones.

Rev. Dr. Carman, of Toronto, occupied the pulpit of the Methodist church on Sunday last and delivered two most instructive sermons. In the morning the dedication services of the new pipe organ were celebrated and Dr. Carman was presented with the key of the new organ.

Mr. Lye, of Toronto, presided at the organ and gave a delightful voluntary at each service. Miss Ruby Jory sang a solo in the morning and Mr. Meddlar sang in the evening. Monday evening an organ recital was given by Mr. Lye, assisted by Miss Mar Wright, contralto, of Toronto, and Mr. Meddlar, baritone, of Traders Bank staff here. The large crowd that assembled received a genuine musical treat.

Miss Rose Moore, fo Peterborough, spent Sunday at her home in the village.

The deer hunters have returned without much game, nevertheless the majority are planing a campaign to capture the noble denizens of the forest next year.

Mrs. Le Fevre has returned from New York, where she spent a couple of weeks.

Mr. Harold Lawrence, who spent the summer at Frobisher, Sask., has returned home.

Dr. Carman, of Toronto, was the guest of Mrs. W. H. E. Bravender for the week-end.

The sleet storm of Monday night wrought havoc with the trees and electric wires around town. The streets on Tuesday morning presented a novel sight. Wires and branches of trees blocked the thoroughfare in many places. In some places the telephone poles were snapped off like pipe stems and a serious interruption of the service was threatened but by noon on Tuesday most of the lines were working. The Bell Telephone Co. rose to the occasion and promptly remedied the various troubles.

The Cavendish Lumber Co. closed down for the season on Saturday last after a very successful season's cutting. They are putting all their energy into the camp in the woods in order to ge tout enough logs for next season's cut.

Amateur photographers were out in force on Tuesday getting a few snap shots of the unique spectacle that nature presented that morning after the sleet storm.

Rev. S. S. Burns is in Toronto for a week or two. Rev. Mr. Baum took his pulpit in the Presbyterian church on Sunday last. Next Sunday Rev. Mr. Thompson, of Hastings, will occupy the same pulpit.

Mr. Hargey, of Omemee, has been engaged as principal of the Lakefield Public School in the place of Mr. Garvin, who has left for Penetanguishene, Ont. Miss Gregory, of Exeter, takes the position until January 1st, when Mr. Harvy's duties begin.

Mrs. J. A. Kelly, of Totonro, is visiting at the home of Mrs. Z. White.

Mr. Robt. Flynn, of Havelock, is visiting friends in Lakefield, for a few days.

Mr. William Quinn, of Peterborough, has been in town for the past week or two superintending the storing away of the Government's boats and dredges for the winter.

Rev. H. Latimer, former pastor of Wesley church, Smith, passed through Lakefield on Tuesday en route to his old charge, where he takes charge of the anniversary services.

Thursday, 25th, will be turkey day in Lakefield, or in other words, Messrs Flavelle, of Lindsay, will have their men here buying up turkeys for the English market.

Mr. Roland Johnson is in Toronto on a business trip.

Mr. A. S. Butchart was in Peterborough on Monday last on business for the Cement Co.

Chas. Gray's house on the "Kentucky" side of the river, is fast nearing completion. Some are wondering who is to occupy it. No doubt Charley could tell them.

THE ROUTE OF PROCESSION ON WORLD'S TEMPERANCE SUNDAY

A meeting of the special committee for the world's Temperance Sunday was held yesterday afternoon to make arrangements connected with the local observance of the movement here on Sunday. Special sermons in keeping with the spirit of the day will be given in the city churches.

In the afternoon a mass meeting of the children will be held in the Opera House at 3.30. Each school will join in the line of march to the Opera House. The procession will begin at Grace Church and continue to George street where the pupils from that school will proceed to St. Andrew's and thence to Charlotte street. Here the members of the procession will be joined by the quotas from the schools of the southern part of the city and the entire company will march to the Opera House where a temperance talk will be given by Mr. F. L. Bengough, the interesting rapid sketch artist of Toronto.

THE WORLD'S HARVEST

The Gazette.

The Liverpool estimate of Broomhall on the whole world's wheat crop of 1909, perhaps the most important of the annual European calculation, is at hand this week. It shows the present year to have established an absolute high record in wheat output. The 3,346,962,000 bushels named as the worlds total, compared with 3,063,280,000 in 1908, an increase of 9 1-4 per cent. Compared with the 3,226,768,000 bushels of 1906, the previous record, the increase is 3 5-8 per cent., compared with the year of scarcity, 1907, it is 15 per cent.

Two continents exceed all preceding records with their wheat production —America and Europe. America, North and South, gains 77,712,000 bushels over last year, which was the previous record. Europe's total runs 158,616,000 bushels beyond 1908, and surpasses the previous high record, that of 1906, by 21,160,000. Every important wheat-growing country in the world shows an increase over the previous year, except Austria-Hungary, Germany and Spain. Russia's harvest runs 68,000,000 bushels beyond its previous high record. Canada shows up 24,000,000 bushels above its best previous yield. The English harvest is the largest since 1899, and with that exception, the largest since 1892, though it is highly interesting to observe that its 64,000,000 bushel yield of 1909, while making these encouraging comparisons, is still less than half the 14,000,000 bushel harvest of 1855, which has never since been equalled.

Two questions arise in conection with the remarkable harvest showing —what is its bearing on the world's industrial prosperity, and what is its bearing on our own export trade in grain? It is commonly said that the world-wide industrial activity of 1906 and 1905 had its origin largely in the world's bumper wheat crops of those years, and the inference is reasonable. Yet the wheat yield does not settle everything. The world's bad wheat crop of 1889 was accompanied by an industrial "boom," and the two years of troubled markets, 1893 and 1884, broke all previous records in the harvests.

Our export trade in wheat will be influenced necessarily by the fact of bumper crops abroad. The question of storehouses depleted as a result of two short crops just before 1909, is also to be considered. The granaries of the world on November 1, held 30,000,000 bushels less of wheat than in 1906, but slightly more than in 1908 or 1907. What is more immediately interesting is that the stored up supply in Europe's hands, though still some 12,000,000 bushels below November, 1906, is ahead of all other years since 1904.

THE STORM PLAYS ITS PRANKS IN VILLAGE OF NORWOOD

Norwood, Nov. 23.—The worst rain storm in years occurred here Monday of this week. Early on Monday morning rain began to fall heavily and froze as it fell, not ceasing all day until at nihgt the trees were so heavily laden with ice that many trees and large and small branches were broken down, so that walking and driving became very dangerous. Much labor was required to-day in clearing up the fallen branches and trees. The roads, on account of the rain, have been put in a very bad state. All day Monday the C.P.R. had men out to see that any damage done by the ice collecting on the wires might be repaired with as little delay as possible.

Despite the torrents of rain that fell incessantly all day Monday and Monday night the hot chicken pie social in the Methodist church was a decided success. Upwards of four hundred people braved the storm and swelled the cash receipts to over 125. The Ladies' Aid, under whose auspices the dinner was held, are more than pleased with the outcome of their efforts. Had the weather been favorable, the receipts would have been considerably over $200.

A fifteen cent social was held on Tuesday night, which was also well patronized. After the tea meeting on Monday nihgt a splendid entertainment was held in the auditorium of the church, when some of Norwood's foremost artists contributed to the evening's entertainment.

Miss Lodemia Johnston visited her sister, Miss B. Johnston, in Peterborough, over Sunday.

Mr. C. Patterson, of Peterborough, visited at his home here on Sunday.

Miss Graham, of Havelock, was a guest of Mrs. M. R. Callandar, on Monday.

Mrs. A. J. Finlay is in Toronto visiting her sister, Mrs. T. E. Finlay, of Norwood, who is ill in the hospital. We regret to say that Mrs. Finlay is not improving very fast.

Mr. A. Scott left for Winnipeg on Friday morning last.

Grandpa Beavis and Grandpa Fife, of Hastings, visited friends in town on Tuesday.

Dr. and Mrs. Kindred, of Havelock, attended the Methodist dinner on Monday nihgt.

Miss M. Foster left last week with Mrs. T. Fraser and Miss Emmeline Fraser for Calgary, Alta.

Miss Pakenham, of Peterborough, has been visiting her brother, Mr. C. E. Pakenham, of the village, for a few days.

Mrs. T. Hamilton has returned after visiting her sister in Lakefield.

Mrs. Young visited in Peterborough last week.

Mr. H. C. Duff visited in Peterborough last week.

Mr. T. E. Finlay and son Von., are visiting in Toronto.

Mrs. (Rev.) Sanderson, lately returned from India, is visiting Mrs. B. W. Leverette here.

Mr. L. Comstock, of Westwood, visited Norwood on Sunday.

On account of the storm there has not been any mail or trains from the east to-day.

The Facts About Pe-ru-na.

Is Peruna an alcoholic beverage in disguise? Is it possible to use Peruna as a substitute for whiskey? Do people buy Peruna and use it as a toddy, or a bitters, or a bracer?

It would be the easiest thing in the world for any one to demonstrate the falsity of such statements. Let any one go to the drug store and purchase a bottle of Peruna. Let him undertake to use it as a beverage, or take this remedy in doses considerably larger than those prescribed on the bottle. Would the result be alcoholic intoxication? Nothing of the sort. Let any one try it and see.

Peruna is a medical compound quite heavily loaded with medicinal ingredients. If taken in doses larger than prescribed it would produce a positive drug effect. No one could take it as a beverage. If any one doubts these statements, try it and see. We know that Peruna cannot be used as a beverage; that it will not intoxicate; that it cannot be used as a substitute for liquors. We guarantee that PERUNA CONTAINS NO CHEAP WHISKEY—OR ANY OTHER WHISKEY, for that matter.

It contains a small per cent. of cologne spirits, absolutely essential to dissolve and hold in solution medicinal ingredients, but the drugs contained in Peruna prohibit its use as a beverage. It would be the easiest thing in the world for any one to demonstrate this if they chose to do so.

Peruna is sold everywhere. THE INGREDIENTS ARE PLAINLY PRINTED ON EACH BOTTLE. It has been said over and over again that chemists have analyzed Peruna and found it to contain only cubebs and whiskey. Now we challenge any chemist to demonstrate any such statement. Let any one who has even a smattering knowledge of chemistry purchase a bottle of Peruna and see whether or not it contains whiskey, find out for himself whether or not it is composed of cheap whiskey and cubebs. Of course, cubebs is one of the ingredients of Peruna, but there are many other ingredients. It contains hydrastis canadensis, corydalis formosa, collinsonia, and at least four other medicinal ingredients. To be sure, no chemist could so analyze Peruna as to be able to identify the various medicinal ingredients. This is beyond the ability of any chemist. But any ordinary chemist would be able to say that Peruna is heavily loaded with medicinal ingredients of some kind in addition to cubebs.

Now why are these statements repeated when their falsity could be so easily demonstrated? Simply because there is continued hostility toward Peruna on the part of the medical profession. Very likely the magazines which took up the crusade against Peruna and denounced it as a cheap beverage were misled by statements of the medical profession. Probably they were sincere in their attitude towards it. But now, after all these things have been said and refuted, it would seem to be in order for such people to use a little fairness and common sense in the matter.

Every time any one says that Peruna is nothing but cheap whiskey and cubebs he is telling a lie, an absolute falsehood. Most people intend to speak the truth. But the prevalent habit of repeating other people's statements, without investigation as to their truth, has led many well-meaning people to say these false things about Peruna.

Used according to the directions on the bottle, PERUNA IS A SAFE AND RELIABLE CATARRH REMEDY, but, like any other good medicine, if taken in excess of those doses, it will produce drug effects very unpleasant to the person who takes it.

It is therefore up to every honest person to quit making such statements concerning Peruna, or acknowledge that he is repeating slanders about which he knows nothing. One might just as well say that Castor Oil is an intoxicant; that if taken in large enough doses it will operate as a "booze." If people never tried to see, but simply repeated such statements about Castor Oil, the majority of people would come to believe them. It is no easier to demonstrate such a statement about Castor Oil than it would be about Peruna.

Any one who takes Peruna knows that such statements are false. To say that Peruna is cheap whiskey and cubebs may constitute good material for jokes on the vaudeville stage, but there is no excuse for any one who pretends to be truthful saying over again this oft-repeated falsehood.

ANOTHER BOOST IN PRICE

Another boost in the price of cement is expected. Recently, by reason of the cement merger, it was raised 15 cents per barrel and now another jump is on the cards. Mayor Oliver, of Toronto, has received a letter from the Union of the Canadian Municipalities, asking the active support of the city in fighting the proposed increase. The speech from the throne at the opening of Parliament foreshadowed the introduction of a bill to make more effective the present law against combinations which raise prices. The municipalities will welcome this bill and support it.

CALF DAMAGED FLOWER BED

Advice Instead of a Fine Handed Out in Police Court

A lady who owns a cow and a calf was called to police court this morning to explain why she allowed the cow to run at large.

She stated that her cow had only been out on one occasion and the manner in which it gained its freedom was not known to her, as it had been tied up in the stable.

There were other cows in the neighborhood similar in appearance and as a result her cow might not be guilty.

A witness who has recently planted some bulbs, was the complainant, and said that while he couldn't state positively that it was the accused's cow which had trampled on his flower bed, he was sure that the calf had.

The lady was advised to keep both the cow and the calf on her own property in the future and on her promise to do the case was dismissed.

City Clerk S. R. Armstrong presided in the absence of Magistrate Dumble.

GUTHRIE GOODS IN MISS MEEK'S TRUNK

Sensational Evidence at Inquiry Into Fire Which Destroyed Barrie Music Hall and Residence—Insurance Agent Testifies as to Placing Policies Before Fire.

Barrie, Nov. 23.—Some interesting episodes and significant evidence marked the third day of the inquest being conducted by Coroner Wells into two fires which occurred last Wednesday night. One destroyed the main portion of the Music Hall Block, in the centre of the business section, and the other badly damaged, the residence on Thompson street, a mile away, occupied by Samuel J. Guthrie, whose moving picture theatre, located upstairs in the Music Hall Block, was gutted. At previous sessions of the inquest it was shown that on the afternoon of the day of the fire, Mrs. Guthrie had gone to Allandale station, a mile from Barrie, and made arrangements for shipping two trunks, the property of a mysterious Miss Meeks, who cannot be located, and who is a very shadowy figure in the background of the present investigation. These trunks on Saturday were recovered at Elmvale, twenty miles from here, and produced in court, and proved important factors in the case. A witness, Herb McDougall, employed by Guthrie at the picture theatre, was missing when his name was called yesterday afternoon. He gave evidence on Saturday, and then created a very unfavorable impression because of his stubborn demeanor, refusing to answer many questions. An effort will be made to find him in time for the resuming of the inquest on Friday morning next.

S. J. GUTHRIE IN THE BOX

Samuel J. Guthrie, who was absent from Barrie at the time of the two fires, having started for Regina, via Winnipeg, had a trying ordeal in the box late in the afternoon. From the trunks in front of the witness box there was dragged forth a miscellaneous collection of family possessions. A child's parasol and hat, a Bible with the family record, female wearing apparel, keepsakes and bedding, were shown to him for identification. He testified in a very hesitant manner, but identified several articles as belonging to himself or his family. Mr. A. E. H. Creswicke, K.C., representing the property owners, endeavored to show that Guthrie had made no provision for a supply of picture films for the days following the fire, but Guthrie replied that the films could always be procured at a few hours' notice. Guthrie was unable to say where Miss Meeks was to be found.

INSURANCE AGENTS TESTIFY

Important evidence was given by the three insurance agents called. A touch of grim humor is found in the fact that F. T. Grafton, one of the agents through whom the insurance was placed, has his office in the burned Music Hall Block, but escaped the fire because of the stout fire wall. Mr. Grafton stated that Guthrie placed six hundred dollars insurance on the contents of his Thompson street residence on Nov. 1. Ten days later, Guthrie applied for $650 insurance on the contents of the moving picture theatre, and paid the premiums. Two days later the witness was notified that the companies would not accept the risks, and he returned Guthrie's premiums.

Cross-examined by Mr. Boys, M.A., counsel for the Guthrie family, Mr. Grafton said he had actively canvassed Guthrie for insurance, but Guthrie had not seemed inclined to take any until the present month.

Miss Barwick, agent for several companies, said that on the afternoon of the fire Mrs. Guthrie called and wished to place some insurance on the piano and other contents of the picture theatre. On learning that it would take several days to learn whether the companies would accept the risks, Mrs. Guthrie left without applying for the insurance. She apparently went directly to the office of A. W. Laidman, another agent. With him she placed $200 insurance on the piano, in the name of J. McDonald, and $225 on the picture machines and films. She stated that she had not applied for nor been refused insurance previously.

BURNING RAGS FOUND

Fireman James Shrubsole, who went through the Thompson street house after the fire was extinguished, found smouldering rags, smelling of oil, in a box upstairs. Several boxes of parlor matches were strewn around upstairs. The fire had apparently started, not upstairs, but under the cellar stairway.

Fireman Warren Johnson corroborated Fireman Shrubsole. The burning rags upstairs, he said, could not have caught fire from the blaze downstairs.

Fire Chief Smith, who is also a furniture dealer, estimated that the furniture in Guthrie's house, which had been insured for $600, was really not worth $200. He corroborated the other firemen as to the oily rags and scattered matches. To Mr. Boys the fire chief said that when he reached the Music Hall the fire downstairs was more advanced than that upstairs, but he still thought it possible that the fire downstairs started from embers dropping through the burning ceiling.

Police Constable Lambie testified that when he broke in the front door of the Gas Company office the place was full of smoke, but there was no fire there. The fire was burning briskly upstairs in the moving picture theatre.

Bruce Thompson, who discovered the fire in the Music Hall block, told of breaking in the back door of the Gas Co's office, where he found a hole burned in the ceiling from the Music Hall above.

DAUGHTER TESTIFIES.

Miss Clara Guthrie recalled, after her father left the box, swore that she had never been in Allandale since coming to Barrie, and that she was not with her mother when the latter engaged the liveryman and expressed the trunks to Allandale. She could not remember where she had gone with her mother. Miss Meeks, she said, somewhat resembled her in figure. She knew Miss Meeks, but did like her very well. Shown the postcard album found in one of the trunks she said it was hers, but did not know how it had come there.

The Allandale baggage agent and express agent had previously identified Miss Guthrie as the woman accompanying her mother and introduced as Miss Meeks, owner of the trunks.

Mrs. Guthrie, recalled as the last witness of the afternoon, proved a very spirited and at times stubborn witness, and gave her answers in marked contrast to her husband's manner. She talked back to the lawyers boldly, and her replies to questions were ready, if not always to the point.

After considerable hedging, she repeated that it was Miss Meeks, and not herself, who had expressed the trunks to Elmvale. She wouldn't help the lawyers to find Miss Meeks, she said, because there was no occasion for finding Miss Meeks. There were no goods in Miss Meeks' trunk except what were given or lent to Miss Meeks. Mrs. Guthrie could not explain how some of the goods came to be given to Miss Meeks nor would she tell where Miss Meeks was going.

SILVER MISSING.

Mrs. Guthrie, unsolicited, made the first reference heard at the inquest to a side issue of the fire, the disappearance of a quantity of valuable old silver heirlooms, the property of Mrs. Brombead Russell. These were stored in the basement of the music hall before the fire and are now not to be found, although other goods with them were very little damaged. "If you are looking for that silver," said Mrs. Guthrie, "you can turk those trunks right out for all I care." As she left the witness box Mrs. Guthrie told the constable to re-pack the trunks as he had found them.

On the inquest being adjourned until Friday morning, Mr. and Mrs. Guthrie were bound over as witnesses. It was intended to bind over the daughter, Clara, but she had left the courthouse after giving her evidence. Crown Attorney Cotter asked if any persons were under surveillance, replied that though suspicions were entertained, the Crown did not feel justified in taking a decisive step at the present juncture.

McDougall, the missing witness, came with the Guthries from Peterborough, where Guthrie was burned out last spring.

THE BODIES OF 168 MINERS ARE FOUND

In Cherry Mines at Foot of Escape Shaftmen Had Apparently Fought Hard For Freedom —A Score Still Missing.

Special to the Review.

Cherry, Ill., Nov. 24.—The bodies of 168 miners were found early to-day huddled in a tangled mass at the foot of the escape shaft of third vein of the wrecked St. Paul Mine. Black damp had caused the men's death. All means of escape had been blocked by debris falling and covering the top of the staircase. Appearances indicated the men had fought hard to push through the obstructions. Death had not come to many for hours, if not days. Two rude wooden ventilation fans were affixed to the shaft wall and stairway, which the men had turned by hand in attempts to get air. There are still a score of men missing.

WHAT'S DOING IN HOCKEY

Trenton will have two O.H.A. teams this season.

All those interested in the reorganization of the Auburn Hockey Club are asked to attend the meeting which will be held in the Y.M.C.A. on Thursday night at eight o'clock, for this purpose. It is the intention to enter a team in the Manufacturers' League this season.

The Brock street roller hockey team will journey up to Lindsay on Thursday and play the team of the roller rink of that place. That's about the closest to a game of ice hockey that Medville will see this season.

Those who will be called upon to pick the Intermediate O.H.A. team to represent this city will have a contract. There is all kinds of material to choose from, but the trouble will be to get the best players.

At the present time it looks as if there is an earnest desire on the part of all interested to do the thing right this year, and it's safe betting that if the boys receive the proper kind of support they will all put forth their best efforts to bring honors to Peterborough.

There are enough players in this burg to enter half a dozen teams in the junior series of the O.H.A., but we only want one, and a fast seven at that. No other kind will do, and it is gratifying to know that we have the goods, with which to compose one. It was quite noticeable last year that the attendance at the Junior O.H.A. games was very small, while at the City League contests it was in most cases large, and yet in years gone by the old Charlotte street rink would be packed when the juniors, who later became the intermediates, and trimmed everything in this part of the country, appeared on the ice. Why not begin again on the same basis? Get the best hockey experts in the city to lay the foundation and the younger enthusiasts will do the rest.

Just think what it would mean to be able within the next few years to go up to Brock street rink and witness a game of hockey with the home team composed of players of the same calibre as "Mag" Whitcroft, Harold Armstrong, Bill Crowley, Bill Cavanagh, Eddie Howell and others who have in the past made Peterborough famous in the hockey world.

Some will say it can't be done, but it can. There are more comers in this city than in any other place twice the size, and all that is necessary is to do a little skilful handling.

sporting notes—

For the last twelve years the losing teams in the Yale-Harvard contests have not scored a single point.

Toronto will not get Bill O'Hara from New York, as this clever outfielder goes to St. Louis for next year.

Writing from Saskatchewan, Walter Miller says the creeks and smaller rivers are frozen over in that country and there is lots of skating.

SPORTING NOTES

The Longboat-Shrubb race did not take place last night as there was no light to be obtained. It will be pulled off to-night.

Sherring and Longboat run in Chatham next Tuesday night. The distance is 10 miles.

Three bands will accompany the Ottawa rugby team to Toronto next Saturday for the game with Varsity.

At Pittsburg last night the police stopped the fight between Sam Langford, the negro middle-weight, and Mike Schreck after half a minute's fighting in the first round. Schreck was in no condition and was knocked down twice and hit at will.

More Sleet Coming?

Is the worst not yet over?

The "probs" to-day predict more sleet for to-morrow, so the outlook is none too cheerful.

JOHNSON SMILED AND SMILES STILL

"Johnson smiled."

In these two words Jack London, the famous author of "The Game," epitomised the now historic contest between Burns and Johnson. And it would seem, if all reports are true, that Johnson is still smiling, with disastrous results for those upon whom he smiles. Rugged Stanley Ketchell is the latest victim to his prowess, and apparently he made no better a showing than either Burns or Kaufmann. Johnson just played with him like a cat playing with a mouse, and then, after floundering about on the floor for a few seconds for the benefit of the picture-machine, brought about a sensational denouement, and a disastrous one also from a Ketchell point of view.

At no time in the history of pugilism have the black race dominated the world of fisticuffs to the same extent as at present, though almost since the inception of the sport negroes have figured prominently in the roped arena. No wonder Johnson smiles! We shall probably hear a little less of Lil Arthur's "yellow streak" for the future. Moral courage is a quality of a far higher order than mere physical bravery. There are many men who would go in and take a terrible pounding in the ring, who would think twice of facing with imperturbable calm the hoots and execrations of a hostile mob numbering something like 12,000. Yet Johnson, as the terrible roar of hatred sounded in his ears, just—smiled. Then he climbed into the ring, and gave the white men's favorite the beating of his life. No! this "yellow streak" talk won't do at all.—From Londing Sporting Life.

BOWLING AT Y. M. C. A.

Norman Geale, of Perry's team, set up a new record for the bowling contest of the Y.M.C.A. last night, when he rolled 206. By taking the three games from No. 5, Perry's team secured a stronger hold on the top position. No. 3 took two out of three from No. 6.

The scores were as follows:

No. 5—	1st	2nd	3rd

A CANADIAN VIEW OF AMERICAN GAME

Says it is Much Inferior to Canadian Rugby-Cheering Enthusiastic

A representative of the college paper, The Varsity, witnessed the Harvard-Cornell rugby game at Cambridge, the Saturday previous to the Yale game, and gives it as his opinion that American college football is much inferior to the Canadian game. The writer's views are thus set down:

THE FOOTBALL VERY POOR.

"From a Canadian view-point, the class of football was poor. Only in one department could the Harvard team, who completely outclassed their opponents, compare favorably with the best teams over here. This was in line-bucking, and their exhibition of this style of play was wonderful. Of course, this is where their system of off-side interference, which is not allowed in our game, comes into use.

"The way in which six or seven Harvard men, any one of whom from what the spectator could see might be carrying the ball would crash into and through the Cornell line, was the only feature of play which at all impressed the Canadians present. In these mass plays all the men on both teams get in. They have a close formation with the two half-backs and the full-backs about ten feet behind the line, and the whole eleven men will crash into their opponents' line, and then the ball is lost to sight, while twenty-two men surge around in a bunch. Then one man would break loose and run about ten yards, when he would be tackled, usually around the shoulders.

WEDGE MASS PLAYS

"It is doubtful if a Canadian team could stop these bucks, as the American players are all heavy men, and have the wedge play down to a science. In our game a buck can be stopped by getting the first man, as he must carry the ball. But on the other side any one of six or seven men may have the ball, and the only way to stop its advance is to upset the whole formation.

"But outside of mass play, there was nothing in the Harvard-Cornell game which was equal to the play of the best Canadian teams. There was very little open play, so the spectators were not given the chances to enthuse that are so numerous here. In fact, only about six times during the afternoon did the crowds rise upon the seats and yell as they continually do at our intercollegiate games. And it was not because the people did not want to enthuse, for they applauded vociferously runs of ten yards, which we would not take very seriously.

BALL KICKED FIFTEEN TIMES.

"The ball was kicked fifteen times during the game, and eight times the catch was muffed, both back divisions contributing. This certainly looked pretty poor to Canadians, but evidently the game in Toronto on the same day, Varsity v. Queen's, was little better in this respect

TACKLING POOR, TOO.

"One feature of the play at which the Canadians were surprised was the tackling. We had been led to expect flying tackles of a high order in the American game, but we were disappointed. There were no flying tackles during the afternoon, and hardly ever was a man got below the waiste. Most of the tackling was around the shoulders. For close play, where the possessor of the ball is doubtful, the Americans claim low tackling is dangerous and not so effective as getting the man high up. However true this may be, the fine tackling so noticeable in the Canadian game, was almost entirely lacking.

"So much for the game itself. But there was a feature that impressed us more than any part of the actual game. This was the Harvard singing and cheering. The Harvard yell is a great one, and when given by five thousand men, packed in one section of the stadium and under the direction of an able yell-captain, the effect was wonderful. These yell-captains certainly work as hard as any of the men playing in the game. When the men are not yelling loudly enough to suit them, they don't mind telling them so in the very plainest of language. The Harvard rooters had a small brass band which led the singing, and the effect was a treat to us who never hear anything more than a few feeble toots from a cornet, and about a hundred men, most of whom are off the key, trying to sing a song of which they only know about half the words."

BASKETBALL LEAGUE FORMED

Six Teams Have Been Entered—League at Y. M. C. A.—First Game Monday

A basketball league has been formed at the Y.M.C.A. and six teams have entered. The first game will be played next Monday night. The Collegiate Institute, Normal School, Business College, Park street, Athletic Club, George street church, and Y.M.C.A. will be represented by a team, and the prospects for a successful league appear promising. Each team will have a large field to pick from, and some fast and interesting exhibitions may be looked for.

SIX PERSONS MET DEATH

And Fourteen Injured in a Fire in New York Tenement House.

New York, Nov. 24.—Penned in by flames in the four storey tenement house at No. 1,490 Herkimer street, New York, six persons were burned to death and 14th were injured, four of whom it was thought early today would die. Fire Marshall Brophy declares the fire was of incendiary origin.

JUDGMENT RESERVED

In the Havelock Electric Light and Power Case in High Court.

The counsel in the case of the shareholders of the Havelock Electric Light and Power Company made lengthy arguments this morning and quoted numerous authorities that would appear to have a bearing on the case.

The case was in progress for over two and a half days, and a large number of witnesses were examined.

Justice Britton reserved judgment this afternoon.

ALARM BOXES ARE REPAIRED TEMPORARILY

The fire alarm boxes have all been repaired. Chief Howard announces that the repairs are only of a temporary character to tide over the system until permanent adjustments to the storm-crippled means of communication have been made. It is expected that this will be effected in a week or so.

TRACKS ARE ALL CLEAR ONCE MORE

Trains are Running Again—Damage to Telegraphic Lines is Extensive

Damage to the railways by the storm has been repaired sufficiently to permit of all trains running again. Yesterday's early morning train from the east did not arrive here until last evening, and this morning's train was also behind time. The trouble was mostly between Smith's Falls and Tweed, and it was here that the trains were blocked yesterday. It will be some time before all the wires and poles are in place again, as the damage is extensive.

Five men were sentenced at Omaha for life for train robbing.

A SIGN OF THE SUPERIOR SIGNS

Made in Turner's Sign Department is the Sign Over Warne Bros. Stores

The primary object of a sign is to attract attention, and the handsome one that is placed above Warne's jewellry and drug store certainly serves that purpose in what would seem a particularly effective, business-bringing way. The sign, which is done in gold, is a distinct tribute to the workmanship of the sign department of J. J. Turner & Sons, and to the firm's valuable idea of the required qualities of a striking and interesting sign.

TREWERN FACTORY HAD GOOD SEASON

Annual Meeting Held Tuesday—Joint Meeting in Ennismore Hall

The first of the annual meetings of the cheese factories in the district was held Tuesday afternoon at Trewern factory. There was a good turnout of the patrons and much benefit was derived from the addresses of Mr. G. H. Barr, assistant Dairy Commissioner, Ottawa, and Mr. J. Burgess, of Woodstock, who is connected with the cow testing staff of the Dairy Commissioner's department. The chair was occupied by Mr. G. W. Mann, president and salesman of the factory, and the report of the secretary, Mrs. Chittick, was as follows:—

Total amount of milk received—1,452,083 lbs.

Total amount of cheese made—131,163 lbs.

Total amount of butter fat—53,170.56 lbs.

Average price butter fat—15.51 cents.

Total value of cheese—$15,406.50

Total amount money deposited—$14,909.82.

Balance in bank—79 cents.

Interest on deposit—$14.50.

Amount paid to patrons—$13,403.58.

Value of cheese taken out—$495.17.

Amount milk to make lb. of cheese—10.81 lbs.

Average price per standard of milk—$27.70.

Average price per hundred of milk 92 cents.

Total number of cheese made—1,505

Average price per cheese—$11.50.

The president, Mr. Mann referred to the successful season that had just been closed. It had been a good year for the patrons of the factory and they were well satisfied.

Mr Barr gave an excellent address on the cooling of milk over aerating.

Mr Burgess dealt with the work of the cow testing department, showing how it was possible for a farmer to build up a heavy producing herd at small expense.

Mr. John Chittick was the maker at Trewern factory. Messrs. Barr and Burgess were accompanied by Ald. G. A. Gillespie.

AT ENNISMORE.

On Tuesday evening a joint meeting of the patrons of King Edward and Myrtle factories was held in the T. A.S. hall at Ennismore. The chair was occupied by Mr. Gillespie, and addresses were given by Messrs. Barr and Burgess, and by Rev. Father Fitzpatrick. About two hundred were in attendance and the meeting was a most successful one.

The Norwegian steamer Bismarck blew up at Iquique, Chile.

Part of a girl's body was found in an ash pile in Albany, N.Y.

The BLACK BAG

By Louis Joseph Vance

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

"Dorothy"—

"One moment, Mrs. Hallam," Kirkwood flung crisply over his shoulder. "I'm going to ask you something rather odd, Miss Calendar," he continued, seeking the girl's eyes. "I hope"—

"Dorothy, I"—

"If you please, Mrs. Hallam," suggested the girl, with just the right shade of independence, "I wish to listen to Mr. Kirkwood. He has been very kind to me and has every right." She turned to him again, leaving the woman breathless and speechless with anger.

"You told me once," Kirkwood continued quickly and, he felt, brazenly, "that you considered me kind, thoughtful and considerate. You know me no better today than you did then, but I want to beg you to trust me a little. Can you trust yourself to my protection until we reach your friends in England?"

"Why, I"— the girl faltered, taken by surprise.

"Mr. Kirkwood!" cried Mrs. Hallam angrily, finding her voice.

Kirkwood turned to meet her onslaught with a mien grave, determined, unflinching. "Please do not interfere, madam," he said quietly.

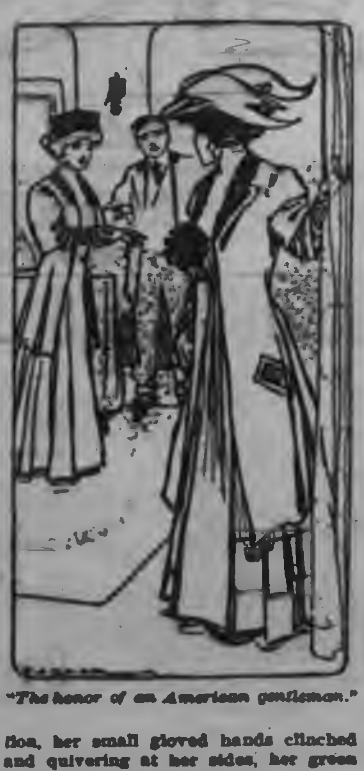
"You are impertinent, sir! Dorothy, I forbid you to listen to this person!"

The girl flushed, lifting her chin a trifle. "Forbid?" she repeated wonderingly.

Kirkwood was quick to take advantage of her resentment. "Mrs. Hallam is not fitted to advise you," he insisted, "nor can she control your actions. It must already have occurred to you that you're rather out of place in the present circumstances. The men who have brought you hither I believe you already see through to some extent. Forgive my speaking plainly. But that is why you have accepted Mrs. Hallam's offer of protection. Will you take my word for it when I tell you she has not your right interests at heart, but the reverse? I happen to know, Miss Calendar, and I"—

"How dare you, sir?"

Flaming with rage, Mrs. Hallam put herself bodily between them, confronting Kirkwood in white lipped desperation, her small gloved hands clinched and quivering at her sides, her green eyes dangerous.



"The honor of an American gentleman."

But Kirkwood could silence her, and he did. "Do you wish me to speak frankly, madam? Do you wish me to tell what I know and all I know," with rising emphasis, "of your social status and your relations with Calendar and Mulready? I promise you that if you wish it or force me to it"—

But he had need to say nothing further. The woman's eyes wavered before his, and a little sob of terror forced itself between her shut teeth. Kirkwood smiled grimly, with a face of brass, impenetrable, inflexible. And suddenly she turned from him with indifferent bravado.

"As Mr. Kirkwood says, Dorothy," she said in her high metallic voice, "I have no authority over you. But if you're silly enough to consider for a moment this fellow's insulting suggestion, if you're fool enough to go with him unchaperoned through Europe and imperil your"—

"Mrs. Hallam!" Kirkwood cut her short, with a menacing tone.

—"why, then, I wash my hands of you," concluded the woman defiantly. "Make your choice, my child," she added, with a meaning laugh, and moved away, humming a snatch from a French song, which brought the hot blood to Kirkwood's face.

But the girl did not understand, and he was glad of that. "You may judge between us," he appealed to her directly once more. "I can only offer you my word of honor as an American gentleman that you shall be landed in England safe and sound by the first available steamer."

"There's no need to say more, Mr. Kirkwood," Dorothy informed him quietly. "I have already decided. I think I begin to understand some things clearly now. If you're ready we will go."

From the window, where she stood holding the curtains back and staring out, Mrs. Hallam turned with a curling lip.

"'The honor of an American gentleman,'" she quoted, with a stinging sneer—"I'm sure I wish you comfort of it, child!"

"We must make haste, Miss Calendar," said Kirkwood, ignoring the implication. "Have you a traveling bag?"

She silently indicated a small valise, closed and strapped, on a table by the bed and immediately passed out into the hall. Kirkwood took the case containing the gladstone bag in one hand, the girl's valise in the other, and followed.

As he turned the head of the stairs he looked back. Mrs. Hallam was still at the window, her back turned. From her very passiveness he received an impression of something ominous and forbidding. If she had lost a trick or two of the game she played, she still held cards—was not at the end of her resources. She stuck in his imagination for many an hour as a force to be reckoned with.

For the present he understood that she was waiting to apprise Calendar and Mulready of their flight. With more haste, then, he followed Dorothy down the three flights, through the tiny office, where madam sat sound asleep at her overburdened desk, and out.

Opposite the door they were fortunate to find a fiacre drawn up in waiting at the curb. Kirkwood opened the door for the girl to enter.

"Gare du Sud," he directed the driver. "Drive your fastest. Double fare for quick time!"

The driver awoke with a start from profound reverie, looked Kirkwood over and bowed with gesticulative palms.

"M'sieu', I am desolated, but engaged!" he protested.

"Precisely." Kirkwood deposited the two bags on the forward seat of the conveyance and stood back to convince the man. "Precisely," said he, undismayed. "The lady who engaged you is remaining for a time. I will settle her bill."

"Very well, m'sieu'!" The driver disclaimed responsibility and accepted the favor of the gods with a speaking shrug. "M'sieu' said the Gare du Sud?"

Kirkwood jumped in and shut the door. The vehicle drew slowly away from the curb, then with gratifying speed hammered upstream on the embankment. Bending forward, elbows on knees, Kirkwood watched the sidewalks narrowly, partly to cover the girl's constraint due to Mrs. Hallam's attitude, partly on the lookout for Calendar and his confederates. In a few moments they passed a public clock.

"We've missed the Flushing boat," he announced. "I'm making a try for the Hoek van Holland line. We may possibly make it. I know that it leaves by the Sud quay, and that's all I do know," he concluded, with an apologetic laugh.

"And if we miss that?" asked the girl, breaking silence for the first time since they had left the hotel.

"We'll take the first train out of Antwerp."

"Where to?"

"Wherever the first train goes, Miss Calendar. The main point is to get away tonight. That we must do, no matter where we land or how we get there. Tomorrow we can plan with more certainty."

"Yes." Her assent was more a sigh than a word.

The cab, dashing down the Rue Leopold de Wael, swung into the Place du Sud before the station. Kirkwood, acutely watchful, suddenly thrust head and shoulders out of his window (fortunately it was the one away from the depot) and called up to the driver.

"Don't stop! Gare Centrale now—and treble fare!"

"Yes, sir! All right!"

The whip cracked, and the horse swerved sharply round the corner into the Avenue du Sud. The young man, with a hushed exclamation, turned in his seat, lifting the flap over the little peephole in the back of the carriage.

He had not been mistaken. Calendar was standing in front of the station, and it was plain to be seen from his pose that the madly careering fiacre interested him more than slightly. Irresolute, perturbed, the man took a step or two after it, changed his mind and returned to his post of observation.

Kirkwood dropped the flap and turned back to find the girl's wide eyes searching his face. He said nothing.

"What was that?" she asked after a patient moment.

"Your father, Miss Calendar," he returned uncomfortably.

There fell a short pause; then, "Why, will you tell me, is it necessary to run away from my father, Mr. Kirkwood?" she demanded, with a moving little break in her voice.

CHAPTER XXIV.

KIRKWOOD hesitated. It was unfeeling to tell her why, yet it was essential that she know, however painful the knowledge might prove to her.

And she was insistent. He might not dodge the issue. "Why?" she repeated as he paused.

"I wish you wouldn't press me for an answer just now, Miss Calendar."

"Don't you think I had better know?"

Instinctively he inclined his head in assent.

"Then why?"

Kirkwood bent forward and patted the flank of the satchel that held the gladstone bag.

"What does that mean, Mr. Kirkwood?"

"That I have the jewels," he told her tersely, looking straight ahead.

At his shoulder he heard a low gasp of amazement and incredulity commingled.

"But—how did you get them? My father deposited them in bank this morning?"

"He must have taken them out again. I got them on board the Alethea, where your father was conferring with Mulready and Captain Stryker."

"The Alethea!"

"Yes."

"You took them from those men—you! But didn't my father"—

"I had to persuade him," said Kirkwood simply.

"But there were three of them against you!"

"Mulready wasn't—ah—feeling very well, and Stryker's a coward. They gave me no trouble. I locked them in Stryker's room, lifted the bag of jewels and came away. I ought to tell you that they were discussing the advisability of sailing away without you, leaving you here, friendless and without means. That's why I considered it my duty to take a hand. I don't like to tell you this so brutally, but you ought to know."

"I understand."

But for some moments she did not speak. He avoided looking at her.

The fiacre, rolling at top speed, but smoothly, on the broad avenues that encircle the ancient city, turned into the Avenue de Keyser, bringing into sight the Gare Centrale.

"You don't—k-know"— began the girl without warning, in a voice gusty with sobs.

"Steady on!" said Kirkwood gently. "I do know, but don't let's talk about it now. We'll be at the station in a minute, and I'll get out and see what's to be done about a train if neither Mulready nor Stryker is about. You stay in the carriage. No!" He changed his mind suddenly. "I'll not risk losing you again. It's a risk we'll have to run in company."

"Please!" she agreed brokenly.

The fiacre slowed up and stopped.

"Are you all right, Miss Calendar?" Kirkwood asked.

The girl sat up, lifting her head proudly. "I am quite ready," she said, steadying her voice.

Kirkwood reconnoitered through the window while the driver was descending.

"Gare Centrale, m'sieu'," he said, opening the door.

"No one in sight," Kirkwood told the girl. "Come, please."

He got out and gave her his hand, then paid the driver, picked up the two bags and hurried with Dorothy into the station to find in waiting a string of cars into which people were moving at leisurely rate. His inquiries at the ticket window developed the fact that it was the 22:26 for Brussels, the last train leaving the Gare Centrale that night and due to start in ten minutes.

The information settled their plans for once and all. Kirkwood promptly secured through tickets, also purchasing "reserve" supplementary tickets which entitled them to the use of those modern corridor coaches which take the place of first class compartments on the Belgian state railways.

"It's a pleasure," said Kirkwood lightly as he followed the girl into one of these, "to find oneself in a common sense sort of train again. Feels like home." He put their luggage in one of the racks and sat down beside her.

The girl smiled bravely. "And after Brussels?" she inquired.

"First train for the coast," he said promptly—"Dover, Ostend, Boulogne, whichever proves handiest, no matter which, so long as it gets us on English soil without undue delay."

She said "Yes" abstractedly, resting an elbow on the window sill and her chin in her palm, to stare with serious, sweet brown eyes out into the arc smitten night that hung beneath the echoing roof.

Kirkwood fidgeted in despite of the constraint he placed himself under to be still and not disturb her needlessly. Impatience and apprehension of misfortune obsessed his mental processes in equal degree. The ten minutes seemed interminable that elapsed ere the grinding couplings advertised the imminence of their start.

The guards began to bawl, the doors to slam, belated travelers to dash madly for the coaches. The train gave a preliminary lurch ere settling down to its league long inland dash.

Kirkwood, in a fever of hope and an ague of fear, saw a man spring furiously across the platform and throw himself on the forward steps of their coach on the very instant of the start.

Presently he entered by the forward door and walked slowly through, narrowly inspecting the various passengers. As he approached the seats occupied by Kirkwood and Dorothy Calendar his eyes encountered the young man's, and he leered evilly. Kirkwood met the look with one that was like a kick, and the fellow passed with some haste into the car behind.

"Who was that?" demanded the girl without moving her head.

"How did you know?" he asked, astonished. "You didn't look"—

"I saw your knuckles whiten beneath the skin. Who was it?"

"Hobbs," he acknowledged bitterly, "the mate of the Alethea."

"I know. And you think"—

"Yes. He must have been ashore when I was on board the brigantine. He certainly wasn't in the cabin. Evidently they hunted him up or ran across him and pressed him into service. You see they're watching every outlet. But we'll win through, never fear!"

THE MONTREAL PRODUCE MERCHANT'S ASSOCIATION OPPOSE RESTRICTION

Would Not Have Canadian Insurance Companies Protected Against Foreign Companies---Peterboro Cheese Board Asked to Co-operate in the Matter---The Resolution Passed at Montreal.

A letter of considerable interest to those who carry insurance, has been received by Ald. G. A. Gillespie from the Montreal Produce Merchants" Association. It relates to the amendments to the Insurance Act now before the Senate at Ottawa and is as follows;

To the Secretary, Peterborough Cheese Board.

Dear Sir,—Probably you are aware that at the last session of Parliament, clauses were inserted in the Insurance Bill to prevent the placing of any insurance with others than companies licensed in Canada: in other words, to prevent the owner of property from seeking outside insurance, no matter how excessive the rates, or unfavorable the conditions, offered by local companies.

The bill was referred to the Banking and Commercial Committee of the House of Commons, the insurance interests were well organized and well represented; the public for the most part was unaware that any such clauses were being introduced, and for this reason there was no properly organized opposition. The result was that a compromise was arrived at, and a tax of 15 per cent. was placed on the premiums paid for all insurance placed with companies not registered in Canada. The bill did not pass the Senate, and so did not become law at last session, but it is understood that it will be reintroduced in the Senate on the re-assembling of Parliament with even more stringent conditions embodied in it.

The members of our association feel that the original object of the Government legislation was the protection of the public, and whilst they do not ask that any injustice should be done to the insurance interests, they feel very strongly that there is no justification for a restriction of the present conditions, nor the imposition of a protective insurance tax.

It is the aim of the association to reduce the cost of handling farm and dairy produce to the very lowest possible figure and so procure the greatest benefit to the farmer. Apart from the large concerns who have been compelled to seek outside insurance solely on account of the inability of the registered companies to give them a sufficient amount of insurance, others have been compelled to seek outside insurance on account of excessive rates, or the stringent conditions inserted in the policies by the local companies.

There is no question but that at the present time the majority of the insurers who effect their insurance with the registered companies, are protected against excessive rates by the certain knowledge that the owner will have recourse to outside insurance if necessity arises. Any alteration in the existing insurance law, which would restrict the obtaining of fire insurance outside of Canada, would not only immediately re-act on the dairying and farming interests by reason of the increased cost of insurance to the large produce firms who at the present time insure outside of the country, but it would also affect those houses which at present insure with registered Companies, in that it is only natural that the rates and conditions would shortly become more onerous if competition were cut off.

I enclose herewith a copy of a resolution which has been passed by this Association and forwarded to the Minister of Agriculture, and I am to suggest that you call a meeting of your Board, have the resolution approved, and forward same to the Minister of Agriculture, with as little delay as possible. I know that this is somewhat late in the season and that it may be difficult for you to get the members together, but the matter is of sufficient importance to warrant your making a special effort to get a sufficient number of members together to form a quorum to give you authority to take action.

I am, yours truly,
J. STANLEY COOK,
Secretary.

THE RESOLUTION.

Whereas certain sections of the Bill called "An Act respecting Insurance" that is to be introduced at the coming session of Parliament, will have the effect of increasing the cost of fire insurance to every user thereof;

Whereas any increase in the rates of insurance on farm and dairy produce will have an injurious effect, and therefore become burdensome to the farming and produce industries of Canada;

Whereas the general fire insurance companies located in Canada are asking for legislation which will tend to confine or give control of all fire insurances in the Dominion to their own companies to the detriment of all the insured throughout Canada;

Whereas the Fire Insurance Companies, known as the regular or Tariff Companies, have an organization known as the "Canadian Underwriters' Association," which Association fixes the rates on any or all property, the members of which Association control about 88 per cent. of the total insurance reported to the Dominion Government, and all agree to maintain uniform rates and conditions;

Whereas the original object of Government regulation was for the protection of the public and not for the benefit of the insurance companies;

Whereas it has frequently been found impossible to maintain all the insurance required from registered companies, which companies frequently limit or refuse the acceptance of risks which do not suit them;

Whereas it is not proposed to tax registered companies for re-insuring a portion of their risks with unregistered companies without having to pay a tax for so doing;

Whereas for many years past eventual recourse to Underwriters at Lloyd's, London, or other unregistered concerns has been the owners' chief safeguard against the excessive rates of a virtual combine, and the only means of placing all the insurance required;

Therefore, resolved, that this association places itself on record as strongly opposed to any alteration in the insurance laws that will in any way restrict the freedom of our members in securing insurance to the fullest extent of their requirements, or that will deprive the assured of the right of placing such insurance with strong financial companies operating outside of Canada; and

Further, resolved that a copy of this resolution be sent to the Minister of Agriculture, asking for and claiming his special interest in the Bill on behalf of the dairying and produce interests of Canada, which we realise will be so vitally, and adversely affected if the proposed legislation be enacted.

DO CHRISTMAS SHOPPING EARLY

After 26 more shopping days Peterborough will be celebrating Christmas.

That is, most of us will. But there are two classes of people this year who we are nearly sure will not have as merry a Christmas as they ought to have.

They are the Late Shopper and the People Who Wait on the Late Shopper.

Do you remember last Christmas week and how the crowds went in and out of the big stores? A cartoonist has drawn a picture and shown in his un-loving way, what he remembers of a shopping day just before Christmas. An old man, in a frayed, silk hat, doing the best he can to play Santa Claus, lug several heavy bundles, and keep an umbrella out of his eye at the same time.

If we make our gift-buying a hard task we are only going to have a sham Christmas.

You know what you usually see outside the stores on the last days before Christmas.

But do you stop to think of what goes on inside?

Tired salesgirls, with tired minds to keep urging those tired bodies on the jump. And the overworked clerks, and the horses driving the waggons that will back up to your home on Christmas eve. Do you want them to suffer? Don't you want them to have a happy Christmas, too?

Wouldn't you do your shopping earlier this year to make somebody else—perhaps some one you don't even know—happy?

Perhaps the most overworked people of all are the men who run the stores. They want you to come early. They want to please you.

Women, the shrewdest shoppers, like to look over what they buy before they buy it. Now is your chance. It is a splendid time to get Christmas presents.

You get the first pick, you get the largest stock to pick from, and when Christmas comes you can have all your presents hidden away. You will not have overworked even one salegirl, one disappointed deliveryman or one tired horse.

It is only 26 shopping days before Christmas. Lest we all forget.

Do Your Christmas Shopping Early.

EX-PREMIER SAYS HE WILL NOT REJECT THE BUDGET

Rosebery Declares in Impassioned Speech in the House of Lords That This is the Greatest Political Moment Since 1832.

London, Nov. 25.—Lord Rosebery, the former Liberal Prime Minister, yesterday raised the historical struggle between the Lords and the House to a new plane by one of the finest speeches he has ever delivered, in which he warned the Lords of the grave risks they were running, if they adopted Lord Lansdowne's resolution to reject the budget.

If possible, still greater interest was manifested in yesterday's debate. The public galleries were crowded to their utmost capacity. The Duchess of Connaught headed a long list of the foremost peeresses, many of whom were compelled to stand throughout.

It is impossible to judge the effect Lord Rosebery's warning will have on a considerable section of the Unionist peers, who have held grave doubts as to the expediency of Lord Lansdowne's course, and there is almost certain to be a large number of abstentions when the resolution comes to a vote.

It was announced last night that the House of Commons will adjourn to-day until December 1, when Mr. Asquith, the Prime Minister, will make an important statement explaining the policy of the Government in view of the rejection of the budget, which is anticipated.

Nothing has been learned as to what the Ministers decided at yesterday's council, beyond the decision to call a party meeting to outline a plan of campaign.

Lord Salisbury resumed the debate with a speech supporting Lord Lansdowne's resolution, after the Archbishop of Canterbury had said the church would stand aside from the discussion, as the discussion was one of strictly party character.

Lord Rosebery followed in a long speech, giving the Lords plain warning of the danger of the path they were treading. He said: "I am quite dissociated from any party, and speak from my sense of the awful gravity of the situation. This is the greatest political moment in the lifetime of any man born since 1832."

A winning policy would be to allow the budget to pass and give the country six months' experience of its intolerable impositions, loss of capital and employment. They would then achieve, when they next approached the polls, a victory that would surprise themselves. He looked with considerable apprehension to the result of an appeal to the country on an unreformed second chamber, mixed up with such other issues as would be raised.

Expressing regret that he could not support the resolution, Lord Rosebery resumed his seat, having spoken for 50 minutes.

His picturesque and glowing eloquence produced a tremendous effect leaving his hearers somewhat bewildered. There was an immediate exodus of peers to discuss the situation in the lobbies, and although the debate continued until midnight, the remainder of the speeches took rather the form of an anti-climax.

WINNIPEG IS CRIPPLED BY ACCIDENT TO POWER PLANT

Winnipeg, Nov. 25.—The street railway system is still tied up to-day. A despatch from Lac du Bonnett states that there is four feet of water at one end of the plant, and one and a half feet running out of the machine shop at the other end. An attempt is being made to stop up the broken flume with pilling. After that the submerged machinery will have to be dried, which will take several days.

Two of the big machines are in operation under four feet of water in the plant, and cannot be stopped.

Twenty of the most expert machinists in the C.P.R. shops have been taken out to Lac du Bonnett.

The company is supplying power from the steam plant of Assiniboine avenue, which has a capacity of 8,000 horse-power.

The city has offered to supply the company with 1,000 horse-power, and this has been accepted.

As far as can be learned, the peak load required, with everything running, is about 20,000 horse-power.

Forty cars were run until 7 o'clock last night, to take people from work to their homes. After that the number of cars was reduced and power used to give a lighting service.

Yesterday morning an unfortunate occurrence took place at the steam plant, when the switch burned out, cutting off 1,200 horse-power. On account of this it was only possible to operate 25 cars in the morning.

Industrial Winnipeg has been to a large extent paralyzed by the accident. The Northern Iron Works has 350 men off work, through lack of power, and the C.N.R. shops are practically shut, while the Ogilvie and Western Canada Flour Mills are completely tied up. Many other large concerns have part of their men off.

PORT ARTHUR WILL HAVE CHEAP GAS

Port Arthur, Nov. 25.—There is a possibility of Port Arthur and Fort William joining hands for the purpose of procuring gas for lighting and heating purposes at a low rate.

Port Arthur Council has expressed its willingness to open negotiations to that end and has appointed a representative to wait on the joint board which has been managing the street railway, and ask it to sit on behalf of the two cities.

A bylaw to authorise giving a site to the Port Arthur Steel and Wagon Works will be submitted again at the municipal elections. It was voted on last summer, but the vote, though proportionately large in favor, did not total sufficient to make the giving of the site legal.

STUDENTS VS. SUFFRAGETTES

Bristol, Eng., Nov. 25.—Since the attack ten days ago upon Winston Spencer Churchill, President of the Board of Trade, by a suffragette, armed with a whip, a strong feeling has grown up against suffragists, and an attempt by Miss Christabel Pankhurst to address a meeting at Colstonham last night was prevented by a crowd of students and others, who kept up a continuous series of yells and whistling. The disturbers threw flour balls and peas and finally tried to storm the platform. A large body of police cleared the hall after a serious conflict with the students and their supporters.

CURB POWERS OF POLITICAL POLICE

St. Petersburg, Nov. 25.—The Octoberists yesterday introduced in the Douma a bill designed to abolish the extraordinary powers now exercised by the political police in the preliminary investigations which they made in preparation for the trials of political offenders.

The new measure would make these evidence getting enquiries the duty of the regularly constituted judicial authorities.

The legislation is aimed at the practice of the gendarmerie in imprisoning political suspects sometimes as long as two years, without reporting the cases to the courts.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

KINGSTON IS WITHOUT STREET CARS

Kingston, Nov. 25.—According to notice, the Street Railway Co. ran the cars in the barns at midnight Monday night, and yesterday morning did not take them out again, because the city would not give the company the terms it wanted. The city offered to provide power at $1.20 per kilowatt hour for five years, with the privilege of terminating the contract at the end of three years. The company wanted the contract for five years with a privilege of dissolving at any time on six months' notice.

General impression seems to be that the differences could be settled in fifteen minutes if a proper spiirt was displayed. The company yesterday afternoon started to take up the rails.

Under the charter the company can suspend service for six months without putting it in peril.

PROBABILITIES.

Variable winds, partly cloudy, higher temperature.

CHAIRMEN OF THE SENATE COMMITTEES

Ottawa, Nov. 25.—The standing committees of the Senate met yesterday morning and elected chairmen as follows: Banking, Senator Gibson; railways, Senator Beique; debates, Senator Colley; divorce, Senator Kirchhoffer; civil service, Senator Power; immigration and labor, Senator Frost; agricultural and forestry, Senator Edwards; internal economy, Senator Thompson; public buildings, Senator McHugh; trade relations, Senator Ross; public health, Senator Deveber; public buildings, Senator Casgrain.

ARE ASKING FOR FREIGHT POOLS

Washington, Nov. 25.—President Taft received a delegation of coal miners and operators yesterday, headed by Representative Delzel of Pennsylvania, and President Thomas L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers of America.

They called to urge him to advocate some change in the interstate commerce law, that would allow railroads to make freight pools or agreements under Government supervision. They told the President that a great deal of the car congestion was caused by the present railroad laws.

Cherry, Ill., Nov. 25.—The accompanying pictures show scenes attending the awful mine disaster, wherein 310 miners lost their lives. An improvised morgue is shown at the top, where the bodies of the unfortunate men are received. Crying women gather around constantly waiting hopelessly the fate of their husbands. Dr. L. D. Howe, a real hero; by his brave work saved twenty-five men from death, while James Taylor, expert State mine inspector, and Henry Smith have done valiant work in leading the rescue parties.

Governor Deneen ordered two companies of State militia to Cherry, having been informed by Sheriff Skeglund and States Attorney Eckert that, in consequence of the entombing of 310 miners in the St. Paul mine, there is serious danger of rioting.

The troops ordered here are companies K. of Kewanee, and C. of Galesburg. They will arrive in the morning.

CANNOT RAISE MONEY THE REASON OF THE DELAY WITH THE WELLAND CANAL

Premier Tells Delegation That National Expenses are Too Heavy Just Now to Go on With the Work—Hon. Mr. Foster Ably Surmarizes the Defence Conference Work.

Ottawa, Nov. 25.—It is only a matter of money that prevents the deepening of the Welland Canal from 14 to 22 feet. The Premier, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in replying to the representations of a large delegation that yesterday urged the Government to undertake the work, regretted that in view of the already large expenditures that must be met, it was impossible to make provision just now for the $20,000,000 that would be required for the canal.

The Government was just as anxious as anyone to commence the work of deepening the Welland Canal, said the Premier, who heartily agreed with a suggestion made by Mr. Conlon of Thorold, that in time Canada's waterways system should be extended to the Rocky Mountains. When Canada had solved the question of bringing vessels from the great lakes to Montreal, we would be able to compete successfully with other routes.

Sir Wilfrid deprecated the idea that there was any competition between the Georgian Bay and Welland Canal systems. The future grain trade of Canada, he said, would amount not only to $250,000,000, but to a still greater amount, and by the time the St. Lawrence route is completed it will not be able to handle the trade. Then would come the Georgian Bay Canal, and when it was completed Canada would handle the trade, not only of the Canadian west, but of the American west as well.

The fact that the work would entail an expenditure of $20,000,000 did not scare him. It was the Minister of Finance who was alarmed. The Government would no doubt be criticized for bringing down estimates covering a proposed expenditure of $127,000,000. He was sorry, in view of the necessary works required, that Canada could not afford to do the work now, but the improvements would be undertaken as soon as Mr. Fielding advised that Canada could afford to spend the necessary money.

"We should see Mr. Fielding then?" queried Mr. German, M.P., who introduced the deputation.

"Perhaps," was the Premier's doubtful rejoinder.

The deputation represented the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence Improvement Association, which includes representatives of many municipalities lying between Port Arthur and the great lakes, and included Mayor Oliver of Toronto, Mayor McLaren of Hamilton, and the mayors of several other towns and cities which would be affected by the deepening of the present canal, or by the creation of a partially new route.

In the House of Commons yesterday, Hon. George E. Foster spent nearly two hours in reviewing the history of the imperial conferences since 1887. At the close, Sir Wilfrid Laurier extended his "high commendation," and added that Mr. Foster had "presented the summary in a fair and accurate manner." The member for North Toronto remarked that these conferences constituted the only Imperial Parliament that we had.

"Maybe we shall never have any other empire," said Mr. Foster, "meanwhile I am content with this, and so he looked to the imperial conferences as a medium for the expression of the best and strongest sentiments of that empire.

Mr. Foster in moving "for correspondence and papers possessed by the Government relating to the formation and work of the secretariat, decided upon by the Imperial Conference in 1907," said that he had two objects in view; one to find out what work had been done, the other to present to the House a review of what had been accomplished by the various imperial conferences. He touched particularly upon the question of naval defence.

At the conference of 1902, Lord Selborne, First Lord of the Admiralty, laid emphasis on the need of one control in the case of war or emergency. In no sense was the imperial problem one of local defence. If any colony followed "this heresy," a country which held to the doctrine of one control would be able to deal with the scattered navies singly and crush them.

For Canada, Sir Wilfrid Laurier stated that the Government was contemplating local naval corps, but was not able to make any offers of the character made by the other colonies. A Canadian memorandum promised action in the matter of a navy, but confined it to self defence.

Duncan C. Ross, recently elected for West Middlesex, was introduced to the House by the Premier and Hon. Mackenzie King.

Mr. Jamieson asked Sir Wilfrid whether he had yet elected to sit for Quebec East or Ottawa. The Premier replied that he had not.

Mr. Martin (St. Mary's, Montreal) introduced a bill to amend the railway act to compel the railways to pay their employes fortnightly, instead of monthly.

Hon. W. S. Fielding yesterday laid on the table of the House supplementary correspondence in reference to the French treaty, in relation to the question raised as to what favored nation countries would be entitled to benefit by the provisions of the treaty.

In reply to a query from the British Foreign Office, Canada cable that "any favored-nation country claiming the advantages of the convention must accept them on the same conditions as France, as regards the mode of shipment. Goods must be sent to Canada by direct ship from such countries, or from a country enjoying the preferential or intermediate tariff. Continental favored-nation countries would have to send their goods direct from their own ports, or by way of Great Britain, which enjoys the preferential tariff. Switzerland could send goods by the most convenient channel to Great Britain, and ship thence to Canada. My Ministers hold that France is not entitled to send goods through favored-nation countries."

M'LAUGHLIN CONDEMNED BY THE CORONER'S JURY

Young Woman With Whom Prisoner in Uxbridge Case is Said to Have Been Infatuated is Miss Alma Nix of Sunderland.

Uxbridge, Nov. 25.—The McLaughlin inquest was concluded yesterday afternoon, when the coroner's jury, after deliberation for 45 minutes, brought in the following verdict:

"The said Mary McLaughlin came to her death from strychnine poisoning administered by her husband, Archibald McLaughlin, and that Harold McLaughlin and Gordon McLaughlin came to their deaths either from poisoning by strychnine or the gas fumes and smoke from the fire in the residence in which they then were in the said town of Uxbridge, and we hereby charge the said Archibald McLaughlin with murdering his wife, the said Mary McLaughlin, and his sons, Harold and Gordon McLaughlin, and setting fire to said dwelling house."

When H. P. Cook told his client, who was in the cell in the same building where the inquest proceedings were being held, the verdict of the jury, he was just going to supper in company with Constable Calverly, who brought him up from Whitby Tuesday morning. The prisoner simply nodded his head, showing no sign of emotion, and passed out of the building.

The proceedings yesterday made public the name of the young woman with whom McLaughlin is said to have been infatuated. While her identity was no secret locally, by general consent her name was not mentioned in connection with the evidence, it being felt that she was an innocent victim of McLaughlin's too serious advances.

However, the young woman, Alma Nix of Sunderland, herself took the witness stand yesterday. She denied emphatically that there had been, on her part, anything more than an ordinary friendship, and gave straight denials to several stories that insinuated a closer relationship.

Miss Belle Charters of Sunderland, an intimate of Miss Nix's, gave evidence along the same line. Other witnesses examined were Thomas Palmer, Bert Lott, Rev. A. Bedford and Charles Tunstill.

The preliminary trial, in progress before Magistrate Hamilton, will possibly be completed by noon Thursday. The evidence is only a repetition of that already given.

Miss Nix was accompanied to court by her father. She is a tall, rather good-looking woman, about 22 years old. She wore a blue suit and white shirt waist and a long fawn coat. Her hat was black, and she had on a heavy blue veil.

McLaughlin sat sideways on his chair and did not once look at Miss Nix. He kept his head down. Yesterday morning he asked to see the Toronto papers, and when he glanced at the headlines he broke down and began to cry.

Miss Nix, asked by the crown attorney if she knew McLaughlin, replied "I have met him." To further queries, she said she became acquainted with him at Alexander & McPhail's store, where she acted as clerk in the dry goods department on Thursdays (market-day). McLaughlin was in another department. She was too busy in the store to talk to him; she did not talk to him outside frequently; she never went walking with him and never went driving with him in Uxbridge.

She had had it hinted to her that she was too intimate with McLaughlin, and had gone driving with him for about 15 minutes in Sunderland, "to find out about the rumors."

Miss Bernice Charters of Sunderland was the first witness called yesterday. She is a chum of Miss Nix, and was mentioned as having been at the "champagne party" in the latter's home. Miss Charters denied having ever met McLaughlin at the Nix home, and denied positively that there was champagne at the supper after the fall fair last September, when, according to the crown's information, the Misses Nix and Charters, McLaughlin and Dennis, his brother-in-law, were together, or at any other time.

She had heard McLaughlin speak of Miss Nix as "a dear girl," and had seen the latter's letter to McLaughlin, which had begun: "Why waste your time writing to me, when you know it is of no use. You must close your attentions to me, for I wouldn't for the world come between you and your wife."

Robert Charters, father of Miss Charters, said he knew that Miss Nix had been accustomed to come to his home at Sunderland, where she was teaching a vocal class, on Friday, going home to Uxbridge on Saturday. He said Miss Nix received several letters while at his place, but he did not know who they were from. He had never met McLaughlin, and never knew of his being introduced to his wife as Mr. Anderson, although he thought the man had called at his home.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Turkey in Chicago was selling yesterday at 30 cents a pound.

Commander Peary announces that he will not go on a lecture tour.

A negro was shot and burned by a posse in Alabama for assault on a white woman.

Orion Howard Cheney of New York has been appointed superintendent of New York States banks.

Benjamin S. Cable, an attorney of Chicago, will be appointed U. S. Secretary of Commerce and Labor.

Harry Douglas of Newcastle, Ont., has sold 30,000 cabbages to a Toronto firm by the ton, and will realize about $500.

Alfonso Lane, a colored boy, is dead at St. Catharines, seemingly from ptomaine poisoning, caused by eating a tainted cream puff.

A syndicate will erect a large shoe factory near Quebec, partly to be beyond the influence of the Quebec Shoeworkers' Union.

A local option petition has been presented to Kenora Town Council. The solicitor will report on the legality of the request of about 100, who desire to withdraw their signatures.

BANK EMBEZZLERS OFF TO SING SING

New York, Nov. 25.—Col. Edward E. Britton and Frederick H. Schroeder, convicted officials of the Eagle Savings & Loan Co., of Brooklyn, were taken yesterday to Sing Sing prison to begin serving their sentences. They were convicted of embezzling funds from the company.

Britton received an indeterminate sentence of from fourteen months to four years and six months, and Schroeder from twelve months to four years and six months.

CEMENT MERGER HAS A RIVAL

Montreal, Nov. 25.—H. D. Anderson, head of a twenty-five-million-dollar English concern, has arrived in Montreal and is already engaged making plans to enter the cement market.

Mr. Anderson is managing director of the English Cement Associated Works. He believes that cement can be exported from the Old Country to Canada cheaply enough to invade this field. If that cannot be done he believes he can manufacture cement by starting plants here cheaply enough to compete with the merger.

SCARBORO MAN WAS RUN OVER BY A TRAIN

Toronto, Nov. 25.—William Spurgen, who lives near Scarboro Junction, was probably fatally injured at East Toronto early this morning by being run over by a train while shunting.

His skull was fractured and his left foot was cut off. Dr. Waters attended him temporarily and he was sent to St. Michael's Hospital.

COAL TRAIN RUNS AWAY DOWN GRADE

Pottsville, Pa., Nov. 25.—A coal train got beyond control of the brakes while descending the heavy Frackville grade early yesterday, and dashed down the mountain at a speed of more than a mile a minute, with the whistle tied down to give warning along the road for five miles ahead. After running four miles the engine plunged over the embankment, followed by 28 steel cars, all loaded with coal. The engineer was killed.

YOUTH CRAZED BY DIME NOVELS

Kingston, Nov. 25.—"I had been reading so many dime novels that I did not know what I was doing," was the excuse of Hiram Smith, a 16-year-old Austrian, who pleaded guilty to playing at highwayman and robbing John Scott on the street, and Mrs. George Brown in her home at the Bath road toll gate. He was sent up for trial.

CHILDREN ARE BEING NEGLECTED

Woodstock, Nov. 25.—At the annual meeting of the Children's Aid Society last night in the Grey Memorial Hall, Dr. Gilmour, warden of the Central Prison, delivered an address on "The Value of Childhood." The filling of the prisons with criminals to-day was traceable to the fact that children had not been properly cared for and reared.

An Old-Time Campaigner.

Turner, Me., Nov. 25.—Solon Chase, a celebrated figure in the days of the greenback agitation, 30 years ago, is dead, aged 87. During the height of the greenback campaign, Chase stumped the country as far as the middle west driving a pair of steers hitched to a hayrack, from the rear end of which he delivered his speeches.

Taxicab Stock

The Story of the Dollars

The ideal way of earning money is to make your dollars work for you. Make your dollar work where it will earn the most by seeking for the investment that will pay the best.

The dollar that earns but 2 or 3 per cent. is almost as bad as the idle dollar which earns nothing

We advise Taxicab Stock at $6 per share, par value $5.00, for beginning January 1910, it can pay a dividend of 10% per annum or 2½% quarterly.

The Idle Dollar

The dollar that is tied up in bad investments—

—the dollar that is invested in (conservative) low interest bearing securities, usually sold at a high premium—

—the dollar that is not invested anywhere, reposing in the old stocking under the mattress, or in the tin teapot on the pantry shelf—

—the dollar that buys the things that you would be better without—

—this is the idle dollar.

The idle dollar gives no man comfort in holding, keeping, owning or wasting.

The Busy Dollar

The dollar that is working for you all the time—

—the dollar that brings you a big percentage of returns—

—the dollar that is invested in good commercial stocks or industrial enterprises and earns away above the ordinary bank interest—

—the dollar that by quick turns and clear foresight doubles, trebles and quadruples itself—

—this is the busy dollar.

To keep your dollar busy make it work for you and earn big returns.

An investment in Taxicab Stock will prove the best known medium.

The Ideal Investment

An industry that fills a long felt want, which supplies an insistent and growing demand, which has possibilities of great future expansion, is the ideal investment.

Such a one is Toronto's system of Taxicabs, for in barely six months it has proved its big earning capacity.

What it may do in the future, with an outfit increased many times, you can only surmise.

Taxicab Stock has a great future, and the time to buy Taxicab Stock is now.

SUBSCRIPTIONS will be accepted up to 100 shares in the order received at this office.

THE PRICE OF HONOUR

(The Montreal Star.)

The thick-and-thin supporters of the contention that planning to build a Canadian navy is an all-sufficient contribution to Great Britain in this hour of imminent peril, are persistently and skilfully working to cloud the only question at issue by confusing two utterly different matters. If, for our own purposes and to round out our own national equipment, we decide that it is desirable to appropriate certain amounts annually to build Canadian cruisers, that has no more connection with our answering aye or no to the unvoiced but none the less urgent call from Great Britain for help in a national extremity than if the money were spent on transcontinental contracts or St. Lawrence dredges. All the dust-flinging parliamentarians are capable of cannot blind a self-respecting people on this point nor all the ingenious subterfuge of the special pleader confuse what Canada is doing for herself with what Canada is morally bound to do for Great Britain. Far better a flat refusal than such evasion. In the "table of national assets" twenty years hence which a section of the press is so unctuously adding up to prove the national values of ingratitude, let us not forget, in honesty to ourselves and the Empire, to place on the contra side one other item, immaterial and inestimable though it may be,—the price of Canada's honor.

A WEAK DEFENCE

The Globe traces the history of Canadian participation in Imperial affairs and seeks to justify Sir Wilfrid's policy of wholly-Canadian control on that ground. The article is a tissue of demoralising inconsistencies. It is not necessary to say regarding it more than that Great Britain asked us to do one thing and we do another. She asked us to give her real help, and we give her what she did not ask for and does not want. As an excuse for backing out of the Empire, the Laurier policy will no doubt satisfy the selfish and the sinister, but as a proclamation of Imperial solidarity upon the only possible basis, it is a failure amounting to a denial. It reads like the "policy" of Judas Iscariot, who said one thing and did another.

We quote it in full as follows:—

CONTROLLED BY THE PEOPLE.

The Globe.

"That Canada's fleet ought to be controlled by the Canadian people is so self-evident a proposition that it may well cause surprise that anyone should entertain a contrary opinion. What risk is run by doing so? Is there a fear that the Canadian people would be slow to come to the assistance of the Mother Country? It would argue complete ignorance of Canadian history on the part of whoever harbored such a misgiving. In 1812 Canada was made the theatre of war, and yet the feeble, scattered communities which then constituted the Canadian Provinces embarked with their whole heart and soul in a struggle which had no other interest to them than that it was the Mother Country's quarrel. The Mother Country was at the time in the death grapple with Napoleon, and the Canadian people had largely to assume the defence of their own altars and fires.

"At the time of the Trent affair they were found equally ready to accept all the pains and penalties as well as the glories of their British citizenship. At a later period when the late President Cleveland's Venezuela message threatened a rupture of the peace between ourselves and our neighbors Canadians did not either dodge or scuttle. They knew again that their home fields would be the first to bear the brunt of attack, but not a man suggested in any way we should evade the responsibility attaching to our British citizenship. Not a faltering note was uttered in any quarter. The attitude of Canadians in the crisis did not escape the admiring comment of our British kinsmen. We did not hold a court to find out whether Britain was right or wrong. We only knew that she was threatened and needed help.

"When the Boer war broke out a similar attitude was revealed. A new situation developed itself. Hitherto we had been called upon to defend our own soil. Now the seat of war was 7,000 miles away. But Britain needed troops, and thousands of staunch Canadian lads were despatched from Halifax to defend British interests with their lives in South Africa.

"Who, then, is afraid to entrust the people of Canada with the control of their own fleet when it gets in being? Is it feared that it would be slow in answering the Empire's call? Canada has never been slow in the past. Why should there be any doubt as to the future? The management of our railways from London has not been a conspicuous success. There is no probability that a fleet managed from London would be any better off. Our fleet when we have one should be under the control of the Canadian people, and it will be as much a part of the British fleet as it needs to be."

EDITORIAL NOTES

What is being done to secure a government appropriation for wharves at Wolf street? We were ignored in the main estimates and our only hope is in the supplementaries.

What is Sir Wilfrid Laurier's object in declining the proposals of a sympathetic Liberal Government in Great Britain? He is an avowed opponent of imperial federation. So is French Canada. 'Nuff said.

If reports from Ottawa are correct, the Department of Militia kept something like a million dollars worth of stores in a non-fireproof building and did not have a night watchman on guard. There was a fire and $150,000 damages was done. In small things as in large, the Laurier Government is the greatest business failure Canada ever saw.—Montreal Gazette.

Sir Robert Perks, M. P., in announcing that he would not seek re-election for the Louth division of Lincolnshire, attacked the Asquith Government from the point of view of a non-conformist, said that Nonconformity had been offered by the Government an education bill it had not asked for and did not want, while the disestablishment of the Church of England, which had been promised, had not been attempted. He added that if the Liberal Government would not stand by its Nonconformist supporters it could not expect them to stand by it. He further went on to say that he did not approve of and did not vote for the Lloyd George Finance Bill, and still less did he approve of the Socialist policies advocated by Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Winston Churchill, which he was sure would prove disastrous to the trade and credit of the country and seriously affect industrial prosperity. This is a serious wound for the Government in the house of a friend. It indicates that the ministers may have mistaken the shouting of the Radicals for the strength of the Liberal party.—Montreal Gazette.

"In a recent article in The Sun it was pointed out that the Hamilton Steel and Iron Company, had, with the help of bounties received from the Dominion treasury, been able to pay some of its shareholders dividends up to something like fifty per cent. At the same time the fact was stated that the average net earnings of farmers is not over four per cent. The reply of the Hamilton Spectator to the statement as to farm earnings is that "either the farmers of Ontario are a mighty shiftless, careless lot, with no business ability at all, or else the statement appearing in The Sun is untrue."

The conclusion of the Spectator, baseless as well as discourteous, is about what might be expected from a journal supporting the policy under which profits which should go to farmers are taken to pay bonuses to bounty-fed industries such as this Hamilton concern."—The Weekly Sun.

Of all forms of Protection the least desirable is that of "bounties." In fact a bounty is not true protection at all. It is a premium upon something which the premium-payer especially wishes for himself. For example there is a bounty paid upon the dead wolf. Wolf-killing is an industry that does not pay and since it is a matter of direct concern to the people, the latter are willing to pay for it. But the payment of money to great corporations, whose members are making millions is a scandal. The Laurier Government has carried this business to excess. As the Sun contends it is much fairer to pay bounties to the farmers than to the steel manufacturer.

LONDON, Nov. 24.—Liverpool and London cables for cattle are steady, at 12c to 13½c per lb. for live cattle, dressed weight; refrigerator beef slow, at 10c to 10⅛c per lb.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Nov. 24.—(Special.)—The Canadian Pacific live stock market offerings were 1325 cattle, 800 sheep, 500 lambs, 900 hogs and 150 calves. There was very little change in the condition of the market for cattle since Monday. A firm feeling prevailed. The gathering of buyers was large, and, as the weather was favorable, the demand was good and an active trade was done. A large percentage of the cattle offered consisted of northwest ranchers, and, as they were of good quality, sales were satisfactory. Choice steers sold at 5c to 5¼c; good at 4½c to 4¾c; fair at 4c to 4¼c; medium at 3½c to 3¾c; common at 3c to 3¼c; cows at 2¾c to 3¾c; bulls at 2¾c to 3¾c, and canners at 1½c to 1¾c per lb.

The demand for sheep and lambs was active, and, as supplies were not as large as usual, the undertone to the market was very firm, but prices show no further change. Sheep brought 3¾c, and lambs 5¾c per lb. Calves were somewhat scarce, for which the demand was good at prices ranging from $3 to $10 each, as to size and quality. The trade in hogs was fairly good and sales of selected lots from west of Toronto were made at $8.50 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market the offerings of live stock consisted of 850 cattle, 850 sheep and lambs, 575 hogs and 75 calves. The trade in hogs was fair, and, as supplies were not in excess of the requirements, prices ruled steady, with sales of selected lots from west of Toronto at $8.35, and from east of Toronto at $8.25 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Nov. 24.—Cattle—Steady; prime steers, $6.65 to $7.

Veals—Receipts, 50 head; active and 50c higher, $6 to $10.25.

Hogs—Receipts, 3400 head; strong to 5c higher on heavy; slow, steady on light; heavy, $8.30 to $8.40; mixed, $8.15 to $8.25; roughs, $7.25 to $7.45; stags, $6.25 to $6.75.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 1600 head; active; wethers steady; others 25c higher; lambs, $5.25 to $7.65; yearlings, $5.50 to $6; ewes, $4.50 to $5; sheep, mixed, $2 to $5; Canada lambs, $7.25 to $7.40.

New York Live Stock.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—Beeves—Receipts, 225; firm and higher; steers, $4.90 to $8.90; oxen, $4.25; bulls, $3.50 to $4.25; cows, $2 to $4.50; dressed beef slow, but steady, for native sides, at 8c to 11½c; Texan beef, 6c to 7c. Exports, 2700 quarters of beef.

Calves—Receipts, 1738; market higher; veals, $7 to $10; few choice, $10.50; culls, $5 to $6; barnyard calves, $3.50 to $5; few selected westerns, $5.25 to $5.50; dressed calves firm; city dressed veals, 9½c to 16c; country dressed, 8c to 15½c; dressed barnyard calves, 7c to 9½c.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 10,731; sheep firm; lambs 25c higher on light supply; sheep, $3 to $4.62½; culls, $2 to $2.50; lambs, $6.50 to $7.75; culls, $5 to $6.

Hogs—Receipts, 7361; firm.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—Cattle—Receipts, 14,000; market strong to a shade higher; steers, $5.00 to $9.25; cows, $3.50 to $5; heifers, $3 to $6; bulls, $3 to $4.75; calves, $3 to $9.00; stockers and feeders, $2.75 to $5.25.

THE SHORT ROUTE TO Gow Ganda

Getting into Gow Ganda this winter will be made easier, as the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway will in a few days have steel laid to Gow Ganda Jct., which is 31 miles north of Sellwood Jct., 64 miles North of Sudbury and 320 from Toronto.

The Gow Ganda Transport Company are building a good team road from Gow Ganda Jct. that will be much shorter and a great improvement over the road used last year.

Maps of the route, also freight, passenger and express tariffs are in course of preparation and an announcement will be made shortly of the service and all arrangements regarding the handling of the traffic.

BUDGET OF INTERESTING NEWS FROM HAVELOCK

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Nov. 24.—An excellent programme was given at the concert in the opera house on Friday evening last under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of the Presbyterian church, Miss Linte, elocutionist, of Belleville, and local talent providing an excellent entertainment. Miss Linte showed exceptional merit in the selections she delivered. Other numbers on the programme were;—

Instrumental Duet—Misses F. and J. Hows.

Vocal Solo—Mrs. P. J. Wright.

Vocal Duet—Dr. and Mrs. Kindred.

Vocal Solo—Miss Bessie Rose.

Vocal Solo—Mrs. Geo. Chiles.

Vocal Duet—Miss E. McGill and Mr. R. R. Graham.

Vocal Solo—Mr. R. R. Graham.

Instrumental Duet—Misses Smith and Kitchen.

Two very catchy choruses were given by members of the church.

Mr James Thompson, M.P.P., acted as chairman.

Mr. Douglas Shields, of Toronto, spent Sunday with Trent Bridge friends.

Mr John Weir, of Norwood, was in town on Saturday.

Miss Hazel Richards, of Lettor, is the guest of Miss Bertha Bryans.

Mr. W. Bennet was in Peterborough on Monday.

Mr. John A. Sexsmith, M.P., returned to Ottawa on Monday.

Mr and Mrs. H. Bennet have taken up residence on King street, in the house adjoining that of Mr. M. Riley.

Mrs Bestow, of Bellview, is the guest of Mrs. Dan Kennedy.

Mr. R. Graham, of Peterborough, spent Sunday at his home here.

Miss Loretta Bennet spent Sunday with friends in Peterborough.

Mr. W. Corneil was in Peterborough on Monday on business.

Sunday last being the anniversary of the Havelock Methodist church, sermons were preached by Rev. Jas. McMullen, of Frankford. Special music was also rendered by the choir at both services.

No services were held in the Presbyterian church on Sunday evening on account of the illness of Rev. Mr Stirling.

Miss Lillian Webb was in Peterborough on Friday, assisting in the concert given by the Conservatory of Music.

Mr. and Mrs. Callander, of Norwood, were the guests of Dr. and Mrs. Kindred on Sunday.

Mr. James Andrews, of Norwood, was in town on Wednesday.

Dr. and Mrs. Kindred and Miss Maude Graham assisted at an Epworth League entertainment in Norwood on Monday evening.

Mr. R. R. Graham of Peterborough, was in town on Wednesday.

Messrs. James Fowler and R. Philips were in Peterborough on Tuesday.

Mr S. Fisher, of Campbellford, was in town on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Ghent are visiting in Peterborough.

Miss Cheate, of Peterborough, was in town on Tuesday.

Mrs. Wm. Cole and children left on Wednesday for West Toronto, where they will reside in the future.

The storm of Monday night played havoc with things around Havelock. The electric lights, poles and wires from Byrnt dams were torn down in many places by the heavy weight of ice and up to the present have not been totally repaired, and so the town is having the experience of being in darkness for a while. On the C.P.R line the trouble was even greater, and eastward there was no connection whatever, so that very few trains have been running. A great many trees were torn down by the weight of the ice, and much other damage done throughout the country.

A Christmas Vampire

Smart Set.

A fool there was, and he made a gift,
(Even as you or I.)
He bought it with taste and care and thrift
(For a lady his friends thought rather swift)
And when he gave it, the lady sniffed,
(Even as you or I.)

Oh, the judgment and taste and time we waste
On the gifts at Christmastide;
Which we give to the lady who isn't pleased
(And now we know she could never be pleased
And never satisfied.)

A fool there was, and he gave his cheque
(Even as you or I.)
For a necklace of pearls without a fleck,
(And it didn't the least suit the lady's neck)
And she never thanked him a single speck!
(Even as you or I.)

Oh, the chink we lose and the think we lose,
On the things we buy with pride,
To give to the lady who never is pleased.
(And now we know she can never be pleased
And never satisfied.)

The fool was fleeced to his last red cent.
(Even as you or I.)
She threw him aside when his gold was spent,
(And nobody cared where the lady went,)
And the fool gave way to loud lament,
(Even as you or I.)

And it wasn't the loss, and it wasn't the dress,
The reason that same fool cried;
It was coming to know that she never was pleased (Seeing at last she could never be pleased
And never be satisfied.)

The College Cloakroom Maid and the University Porter

By JANE OSBORN.

Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

When Thornby college opened last autumn there was a new maid in the cloakroom. Something about her dark, close fitting dress, her small, ruffled apron and her parted hair, tied with a big black bow at the back of her neck, suggested a French maid much more than a student. But the fact was that Molly Dodge really was a poor southern girl working her way through the woman's department of this big university.

During the three or four hours that Molly was not attending lectures she had to stay in the stone floored, locker lined cloakroom and be ready at any time to get students' hats and coats or put them away in their owners' lockers.

At first it had seemed not at all bad, for Molly had a soft, lovable, southern way of talking and honest brown eyes that made all the girls like her. But as the months passed they became accustomed to seeing her every day, and they passed her thoughtlessly by. It would not have been so hard if Molly had been intellectual, but she was not at all fond of books. In fact, if she had had a chance she would probably have been a little frivolous.

But there were two things that made Molly's life bearable. One was the daily visit of the university porter, and the other was the appearance now and then of new and pretty hats and wraps. Molly had a little mirror over her desk in the cloakroom, and whenever any specially charming hat appeared on the clothing counter she would wait till the girls had left the room and then with it on her own pretty head steal an admiring glance at herself over her desk.

And the porter! Well, he used to come over from the university every day with the students' mail, which it was Molly's duty to sort and distribute. Of course a woman student of Thornby college ought not to have flirted with so humble a personage as the university porter, but Molly was only half a student. The half that was cloakroom maid looked forward with impatience to the daily visitation of the porter's cheerful smile and contagious laugh.

On rainy days Molly had to handle countless damp and muddy rubbers and galoches and dripping umbrellas. That alone would have made her dislike the rain, but besides that students always wore their old hats when it rained.

She was looking out of the iron bars of her basement window at the gloomy sky one dark day in March when all at once there swept in a stately senior, a veritable billow of soft black furs. She carelessly slipped them off, smiled at Molly and hurried off to her class.

"What a dream!" thought Molly, "And on a day like this! But what does it matter when one has a carriage?"

Molly raised the soft pieces gently from the counter and started to put them in their locker. But the temptation was too great. She came back and replaced them lovingly on the counter. Then very carefully she pinned the toque over her piquant little face and glanced approvingly at her image in the mirror over her desk. If only she could see the rest, she wished. In a flash she jumped over the counter, closed the door into the hall and slipped into the luxurious coat. Then she stepped up to the students' long pier glass.

"If only it were a little longer," she thought. And then, turning around at the sound of the opening door, she faced the porter. He closed the door quickly and stood against it. Then he turned to Molly and laughed. But Molly didn't laugh back. She slipped out of the furs, sprang over the counter and, with a guilty blush, took the morning mail.

The next day when the porter came Molly was deep in a volume of Horace.

"Nice book you're reading, Molly," remarked the porter, and Molly, the student, smiled coldly without raising her eyes.

After that the porter left off the "Molly" from his morning's salutation, and Molly had no difficulty in repressing him. In fact, she was a little disappointed that he took his squelching so willingly.

About a month after the episode of the furs there was a dance in the college gymnasium, and Molly, as was her custom on such occasions, took her place as maid in the dressing room. Here she buttoned gloves and slippers and arranged ruffles and bows for her more favored colleagues till her fingers were numb. Then during the long hours of the dance she was supposed to sit and guard the wraps and lend her aid in case of a dilapidated coiffure or torn ruffle. But tonight strains of the dance music took possession of Molly's soul and started her dainty feet tapping on the stone floor. Her curiosity and her loneliness had the upper hand, and she slipped out of the dressing room, ran along the corridor and up the wide stone stairs toward the gallery overlooking the gymnasium.

As she was hurrying timidly along she had to pass one of the lecture rooms, which had been converted for the occasion into a men's checking room. Three young men were standing idly smoking. There was something about the cut of an evening coat that fascinated Molly, and she turned in the shadow to look.

Suddenly her heart stood still. It really was the porter, the tallest one, with the light hair. He was laughing now. She was just turning to run when he faced about. And just for a second his eyes met hers through the darkness of the dimly lighted corridor.

She had been discovered deserting, and by the porter! As she couldn't go back to the dressing room now without being seen openly, she fled to the gallery and slipped into a seat.

So the porter was probably a student from the university! The porter whom she had tried to repress was a friend of some girl at the dance. Her head swam with the excitement of the information.

Just then the violins struck up a dreamy waltz. She leaned forward as far as she dared to see the dancers. Oh, if only she had that blue satin gown! She seized it enviously in her imagination. And then as the dancing began her thoughts floated out on the music, and she danced with them.

Just then she heard steps behind her, and, looking back into the shadow, she saw dimly outlined the face of the porter.

"Hello, Molly," he said cheerfully.

"Sh!" She put her hand to her lips. "Some one might hear."

"Well, let's sit somewhere else. I hate to whisper."

"All right." Molly rose timidly.

They passed by a short cut out in the starlit campus.

"This is a great deal better," he said as he helped her on to a secluded ledge of the great stone building. "You looked lonely up there watching the dancers."

"I wasn't lonely. I like to see them."

"Oh, they aren't bad," he said dryly. "But when a fellow's working his way through his last year he hasn't much time to waste. I say," he said, looking at her curiously, "what were you thinking about up there?"

"Oh, I wasn't thinking at all! I was just making believe—waltzing off in that soft blue satin dress. The music gets hold of me like that and drives away the cloakroom and the wet umbrellas and rubbers and cross seniors"—

"And obtrusive college porters who catch you dressing up in other people's furs?" he laughed.

"Oh, no!" she said, without smiling. "I never can make the porter fade away with the wet umbrellas and rubbers. He seems to stay and watch me float around in other people's blue satin dresses, dancing with other people's partners. He just stays and laughs." She looked up at him. "Only there won't be any porter in the cloakroom any more. There will just be a poor student working his way through college like the cloakroom girl. I shall miss the porter, I think."

"But he couldn't stay, you know," he said. "The cloakroom girl liked him at first, and the porter used to look forward all day to seeing her the next. Then one day she remembered she was a student and he was only a porter, and after that she was cold and distant. But the porter went right on dreaming about her. And now," he said, taking Molly's tired little hand in his, "he is going to let the poor student try his luck."

And that luck was in h's favor was proved by the absence of Molly in the cloakroom when college opened in the fall.

Peter Itedieski was convicted in Port Arthur of manslaughter for killing his stepson.

Song of the Ancient Spinning Reel.

The first reel that was invented was the hand reel, the yarn being wound into skeins by turning the wheel and fastening the skeins after counting a sufficient number of strands. The flax was first woven into thread or yarn on the spinning wheel; then the bobbins full of yarn were placed on the hand reel and yarn wound off them on to the wheels into skeins. The strands were carefully counted and the lieben fastened on them to keep them together. The lieben was a thread running across the skeins to keep them in place.

A later invention was the clock reel with a face on which numbers were printed, and it had two hands like a clock. When the wheel was turned, reeling off the strands from the bobbin, the clock would tick when a certain number of strands were wound on the reel, and the housewife, instead of tediously counting the threads, as on the earlier invented reel, would fasten on the lieben.

In a quaint old ballad entitled "Mistress Polly at the Reel" occurs this refrain:

He kissed Mistress Polly as the clock reel ticked, the kissing being done at the propitious moment when Mistress Polly was busy fastening on the lieben.

A Lecturer's Amusing Experience.

I was giving a lecture with the aid of a lantern, said Mr. Harry Furniss, and I was showing some portraits of Mr. Gladstone in my entertainment, "The Humors of Parliament." I was telling my audience as I pointed to the pictures on the screen that one moment he looks like this and at another he looks like that, when there was a great burst of laughter.

I proceeded to speak about Gladstone's flashing eye and noble brow, and by the time I mentioned something about his aquiline nose my audience seemed to be in hysterics.

Thinking that by some mischance the wrong picture was being thrown on the screen, I turned round and was at first horrified to see a gigantic fly apparently walking about on the nose of the Grand Old Man.

It appeared that the fly had got into the lantern, had been caught between the lenses and was being magnified a hundredfold on to the screen.—London Tit-Bits.

BORAX
SOAP

One cake of Taylor's Borax Soap goes twice as far as any other soap. In a year's time that means several dollars' saving. But that isn't all. You save on the clothes, too. For you don't have to rub them so hard nor so long. They'll go more times to the tub. So Taylor's Borax Soap saves you money in every way. Make us prove it. Buy a cake today.

TUB TALK No. 4

Soiled ribbon, light colored silk and delicate laces may be very successfully cleaned at home with Taylor's Borax Soap. Shave up fine half a bar of Taylor's Borax Soap, add a little boiling water and let it stand until it forms a thick jelly. Wet the articles to be cleaned with lukewarm water, then spread on a flat surface and run in the soap jelly with a fine, soft old tooth brush. Go over the entire piece in this way without rubbing at all until thoroughly clean.

Rinse and spread on the top of a table, smooth out every wrinkle with the hand, and let remain until dry. A glass wash board and two or three extra small sized tubs will be found a great convenience in every laundry.

TREE FELL ON TOP OF ENGINE

Peculiar Feature of Sleet Storm Near Fenelon Falls.

Lindsay, Nov. 23.—Slippery rails near Uxbridge caused the trucks of the mail car attached to the train which leaves Lindsay for Toronto at 6.20, to leave the track and the train was delayed for some time.

The train from Toronto due here at eight o'clock on the Grand Trunk, was delayed because a passenger car went off the track at Uxbridge, the cause being the bad condition of the track because of the rain and ice storm

RAN OVER WIRES.

This morning the C.P.R. mixed coming into Lindsay ran into a bunch of fallen telephone wires at the Pottery Corners and the engine tore its way through them before the train had time to stop. The wires were but a few feet above the track.

TREE ON TRACK.

A tree fell across the engine which was pulling the pay car from Fenelon Falls last night and a branch broke through the cab window. Driver Elzer was a trifle frightened when the tree came down but no harm was done.

Dredging is now going on in the Trent canal at Hastings.

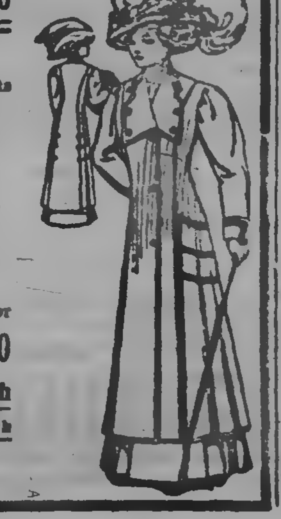
HARRY ADAMS



WOLFE STREET

The Wolfe street wharf needs a large governmental appropriation for improvements. It was a matter of surprise that not one dollar for this purpose was appropriated in the main estimates lately brought down in the House of Commons. Last summer on many occasions great inconvenience was caused at the Wolfe street wharf by the overcrowding of boats, freight and passengers. It was also a source of great danger. There will be a fatal accident or two there some of these days and the government cannot escape responsibility. If this matter is urged upon the notice of the department by the city council possibly something might be secured in the supplementary estimates. We hear there is a likelihood of the city council's taking the matter up, and for the sake of public safety and convenience it is to be hoped that the rumor is true.

DEFIES THE KING'S AUTHORITY

The Farmer's Sun:

During the debate on the address Sir Wilfrid Laurier, as reported in last week's Sun, made the explicit statement that a Canadian navy, if built, "will engage in no war save by orders of the Canadian Parliament."

It is impossible to understand how this position can be maintained. There are seemingly insuperable difficulties in the way of maintaining it, aside from the question of the ensign to be flown which has already been referred to The Act of Confederation vests the command of all the armed forces whether on land or sea, in the King of Great Britain. Every member of the Canadian militia is sworn, and every member of the sea forces to be created will be sworn to bear allegiance to his Majesty. It is practically impossible to make this command effective over Canadian land forces; aside from the fact that these forces are at present liable for home defence only there are physical obstacles, the one of transportation among the number, in the way of any attempt to order the Simcoe or Ontario county volunteer regiments for service in India, say. No such obstacle will stand in the way of making effective the King's command over ships of war, if such are built by Canada. These ships will be on the high seas and will be associated while there with British ships If war with Germany should occur, and a Canadian cruiser happened to be with British vessels in the British Channel at the time, that Canadian ship would undoubtedly at once be ordered, without waiting to so much as consult the Parliament of Canada, to act with the British craft in fighting the enemy. Failure to order such action would be tantamount to acknowledging Canadian independence; failure to comply with the order would be a declaration of Canadian independence. Precisely the same condition would exist, in the event of a British fleet being at Vancouver, with Canada's Pacific cruiser in company, if war suddenly broke out in that quarter of the world, over opium question for example.

COASTING ON THE SIDEWALK

Complaints are Already Being Made About the Young People Sleigh-riding Down the Hills

Complaints are already being made by different citizens about the manner in which the young people use the sidewalks for coasting purposes. The fall of snow and sleet the early part of the week has made the sidewalks very slippery and the opportunity for the first sleigh ride of the season has been taken advantage of by the children. In some parts of the city the hills have been made steeper by the construction of the granolithic walk and the speed which may be attained has increased accordingly. The fact of there being so many trees close to the sidewalk makes it dangerous for the children and it would appear that the enforcement of the by-law in regard to coasting on the sidewalks would be of great benefit to all concerned.

AND THE PIN CAME BACK TO ITS OWNER

Fred Essanay of Orillia Touched by One-Day Friend—Missed Diamond in the Morning—The Story of the Stolen Gem.

Fred Essanay, of Orillia, will probably be a little more cautious with his jewelery in the future. Fred, if all accounts concerning him are true, is inclined to be unduly familiar with the cheering cordial when he is in a festive mood, and yesterday when he was in one of these moods referred to, he took up with a Peterborough man who assisted him in the dissolution of his cash, of which, according to reports, he had an abundance.

Last night, the story runs, Essanay was quite overcome through his incessant indulgence and was put to bed at a local hotel, it is stated, by his chance acquaintance.

When he awoke this morning he had none too distinct a recollection of the merry maze he had gone through yesterday afternoon and last night and did not even remember the name of his chance acquaintance. The proprietor of the hotel, fortunately, remembered who it was, for Mr. Essanay had lost a diamond pin which, it is said was a $150 luxury—pawn value $13.99—and suspected his acquaintance of the night before of having appropriated the necktie light for his own selfish purposes.

The loser at last managed to locate the other fellow after a still hunt of an hour or so, and threatened to do things with him if the pin were not returned at once. The accused one spoke of his immaculate career and excellent standing in the locality, and threatened proceedings for slander and acted up to a very high pitch of temper, which would have won him at least two curatin calls in any regular play.

On the victim threatening to inform the police and starting out for the police station the villian of the two-man drama at last handed over his unlawful possession, and "he who laughs, etc.," was proved again to be a rule without exception.

The indignant Orillia man was so thoroughly enraged that he said he would still perfer a charge of theft were it not for the publicity of a police court case, and probably, it may be safely stated, because of the somewhat humiliating facts that would necessarily be disclosed concerning himself to the enjoyment of a gathering of hungry police court railbirds.

A COMPREHENSIVE ADDRESS ON MISSIONARY WORK IN CHINA

Given by Mrs. Fee at Annual Meeting of Knox Church Women's Missionary Society — The Carrying of the Gospel Message to the Unconverted Mongolians.

There was a large attendance at Knox church last evening on occasion of the Women's Missionary annual public meeting. The special feature of the service was an address by Mrs. Fee on missionary work in China. Mrs. J. McPherson, president of the Association was in the chair. There was a large number of them present. During the evening Mrs. Ego sang a solo suitable for the occasion.

Mrs Fee spoke of their work in China, where they spent 15 years in China. Most of their time was spent in the south of China. The immense river that flowed through their district is much larger than the great St. Lawrence. It took them two weeks in a houseboat to get to their destination, whereas now one goes in a day and a half by steamboat, an indication of the immense advance China has made.

The educational system has likewise improved. The Chinese are apt to learn. They are sure to come to the front as a nation, and considering their many millions that far surpass the peoples of America and Britain, and many parts of Europe, it is important that China should be guided by the right principles. They are shifting from their own religion and there is now an open door for the preaching of the Gospel. Difficulties are now removed and missionaries are sought after and respected. The address was most instructive and inspiring.

A vote of thanks was unanimously given to the speaker.

DEATH OF HERBIE O'FLYNN; PLAYED WITH LACROSSE TEAM HERE FEW YEARS AGO

The funeral took place yesterday at Madoc of Herbert J. O'Flynn, eldest son of Mr. W. H O'Flynn, of the above town, at the age of 28 years. "Herbie" was well known here, having distinguished himself on the local C.L.A. intermediate team several years ago and playing here later at the Brock st. rink for the Crescents of New York, when that club met the Peterborough seven. His death will be learned with sincere regret by his numerous Peterborough friends.

Herbie O'Flynn was a general favorite in both sporting and social circles and was a brilliant lacrosse and hockey player. His home was in Madoc and while he was a member of the local lacrosse team he was a law student at Osgoode Hall. He did not complete his course, however, but went to New York, where he accepted a position with a brokerage firm. In New York his work at cover-point with the Crescents won him the approval of the press of that city.

BLACK SUIT SALE AT LANG AND MAHER'S

The opportunity afforded the men of the city at this time just when they appreciate a black suit, comes as welcome news. Lang & Maher are now offering exceptional prices in single and double breasted styles in vicuna, clay worsted and cross breds. These are this season's make, style and workmanship the latest and best. Prices, $8.90, $10.90 and $15.90. Have a look in the window; the suits are convincing. This sale will last all next week and is now on. Any man who needs a black suit soon we would advise him to not let this special chance pass. There are many other lines in tweed that will interest those who prefer a colored suit. Now is the time.

NO INSURANCE ON VACANT HOUSES

Owners Lose Insurance Through Failure to Obtain Permits

That the owner of a house which is burned when vacant, and for which he has no vacancy permit, cannot collect the insurance on it, is a fact that local insurance agents have continually to impress upon their clients. A recent case was that of a farmer near the city whose house was a total loss to him, although he had been paying insurance premiums for years.

He had neglected to get a vacancy permit, and so could not collect. Houses in the process of construction do not need a vacancy permit, but afterwards the permit is absolutely necessary.

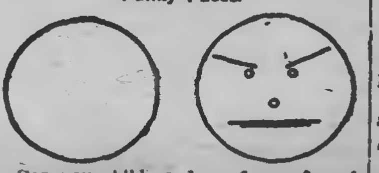
Funny Faces.



Can you children draw funny faces? If so, draw in the blank circle the funniest face you can think of, using only four straight lines and three circles, like the ones seen in the other circle.

Doubtful Compliments.

The colonel who, taking his leave at a garden party, inquires, "Have I had the pleasure of saying goodby to you, Miss Mary?" the hostess sweetly assuring a distinguished pianist who has risen abruptly from the instrument with a sarcastic protest lest he should disturb the conversation that he does not do so at all; the young man who, on being told that a possible rival had taken the lady who is speaking in to dinner the previous evening, declares that "that's all he's fit for"—these are decided instances of this class of bad compliment, while for a well meant but lukewarm one poor Newman Noggs reply to the collector's query respecting the Kenwigs' new baby, that it wasn't a very nasty one, may be cited.—London Academy.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

BOY INJURED WHEN STREET CAR AND BUGGY COLLIDE

Last night while driving along Charlotte street, near Aylmer, a horse and buggy collided with a C.G.E. car, with the result that the buggy was demolished. The horse and rig was the property of Mr. Dennis of Concession street, Ashburnham, and was driven by his two sons and a young lad named McLean. One of the Dennis boys had his collar bone broken, but the other two boys were uninjured in any way save for a few scratches they got when the buggy was smashed into firewood by the car. Dr. Frederick was called to attend to the injuries of the injured boy.

REPORT OF PETERBOROUGH LABOR CORRESPONDENT

J. A. Sharp, Peterborough correspondent of the Labor Gazette, has the following report in the November issue:—

GENERAL CONDITION OF THE LABOR MARKET.

Labor conditions generally were very favorable during October, the result being that there were very few idle men in the city or district. The demand for men in all branches was about equal to the supply. All the factories were working full time and in some they were working overtime. Building operations were fairly active, but fell off somewhat during September according to a comparison with the amounts of the building permits for that month in 1908. Last year, September saw permits issued to the total of $57,230, whereas during the past month the amount was $46,485, of which $22,000 was made up by the Knox church building. The Colonial Weaving Company has just completed a new factory and is installing about $20,000 worth of new machinery which will result in doubling the output of the plant. The Central Mill started work again this month after being shut down for the last three months; it now has a capacity of 400 barrels of flour a day and will run night and day.

The assessment returns show the population of the city to be 16,907, an increase of 416 over last year.

CONDITION OF LOCAL INDUSTRIES

Agriculture.—Farmers were busy with the marketing of produce, threshing and fall ploughing.

Lumbering.—Lumbering has been very active and the season just opening promises to be even more active, all the firms advertising for men to go to the camps.

CONDITION OF TRADES

The building trades have had a good month.

Iron moulders and core makers have had a fair month. Machinists and brass workers were very busy. Blacksmiths have also been busy. Boiler makers were not doing much.

Woodworkers and pattern makers were active. Coopers were busy.

Printers were busy, also pressmen and bookbinders.

Tailors and garment workers reported business good.

Bakers and confectioners and butchers had plenty of work.

Leather workers had steady employment.

Railway and street railway employees, steamboatmen, etc., had a busy month and teamsters and express men had an active month.

Unskilled labor was in active demand at good wages.

LADIES' AUXILIARY OF Y. M. C. A. HAS HAD ENCOURAGING YEAR

Reports of Secretary and Treasurer Presented—Election of Officers for the Ensuing Year — The Annual Meeting.

The adjourned annual meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. was held on Friday afternoon last when reports were presented and officers elected for the coming year. During the past year the society was honored with the presence of the Dominion President, Mrs. Yeigh, of Brantford, who, on Oct. 18th, gave a most comprehensive address.

At the annual meeting, Mrs. Hunter, the president, presided and opened the devotional proceedings with the usual devotional exercises.

THE SECRETARY'S REPORT.

At the meeting of the Auxiliary on October 18th, Mrs. S. Clegg, secretary, presented the following report;

In reviewing the work of the year ending Oct. 18th, Mrs. S. Clegg, secretary, presented the following report;

In reviewing the work of the year ending Oct. 18th, 1909, your secretary is pleased to report a satisfactory year's work.

During the year ten regular meetings, and four special meetings were held, with an average attendance of fifteen.

One great cause of thankfulness is that we do not have to record the loss of one member during the year, either through death or removal, while some new members have been welcomed.

A number of new furnishings in the way of curtains, pillows, towels, etc., has been purchased.

Five dollars has been sent to Mr. J. N. Farquhar, the Y.M.CA missionary, to help in his work in India.

Our most important work was the organization of a mothers' committee to act in conjunction with the secretary.

In February a meeting was held with a large number present and a committee formed, and since that time several interesting meetings have been held in which Mr. Dumble, Mrs. Kendrey, Mrs. Campbell and others have given profitable talks. It is the intention of this society to attach greater importance to the work of the committee.

During the year there were no entertainments held but several of the ladies volunteered to collect in small subscriptions, and a good sum was realized.

SUNDAY SCHOOL MEMBERS WILL FORM A MONSTER PROCESSION ON SUNDAY

It is expected that nearly 1,500 Sunday school members will take part in the procession on Sunday in connection with World's Temperance Sunday. The Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist, Bethany Tabernacle and Gospel Hall Sunday schools are taking part in the procession, which starts out in two sections, coming together at the corner of Aylmer and Charlotte streets. The Salvation Army band will lead the procession from the union of the two sections to the Grand Opera House, where the meeting will start at 3.30 o'clock. The meeting is an open one, but the Sunday school pupils will be seated first. The feature of the meeting will be a temperance chalk talk by Mr. E. L. Bengough, of Toronto.

The committee in charge met last night and made the final arrangements. Mr. R. F. Downey will be the marshall.

The procession from the north will start at the Auburn Sunday school, and will be joined at a point on George street by the contingent from Grace Sunday school. It will continue along George street to Murray, where the George St. Church, St. Paul's, Mark St. church, Bethany Tabernacle and Gospel Hall pupils will fall into line. Murray street will be traversed to Aylmer, Murray St. Baptist school joining in the meantime, and then Aylmer street will be followed to Charlotte street, St. Andrew's school coming in at Brock street, and the Salvation Army Sunday school at Simcoe street. At Charlotte street the northern and southern sections will meet and proceed to the Grand Opera House by way of Charlotte and George streets.

St. James' church will be the starting point for the contingent from the south end of the city. The St. James' quota will first be joined by the Park St. Baptist school, then by Knox church and lastly by Charlotte St. The northern division will be joined at the corner of Charlotte and Aylmer streets.

MARRIED.

MATHISON—KIDD. — In Peterborough, on Wednesday, Nov. 24th, by Rev. J. G. Brown, of St. James' church Alexander Mathison of Havelock, and Elizabeth Kidd, of Peterborough.

WEDDING BELLS

HOULIHAN—TOBIN

St. Mary's church was the scene of a very pretty matrimonial event on Tuesday morning, when Miss Mary Tobin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Tobin, St. Paul's street, was united in marriage to Mr. Dennis Houlihan, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. Houlihan, Russel street.

Venerable Archdeacon Casey celebrated the nuptial mass, which was attended by the intimate friends and relatives of the contracting parties.

The bride, who was becomingly gowned in blue with hat to match, was assisted by Miss Kate Houlihan sister of the groom, and was similarly attired. The groomsman was Mr. H. Tobin, sister of the bride.

The happy young couple left on the 7.10 G. T. R. for Peterborough, where the wedding breakfast was partaken of at the residence of the bride's brother, Mr. N. Tobin. On their return they will reside on St. Paul street.

The bride, who is well and favorably known, was the recipient of a number of beautiful presents. Their many friends will wish them many years of happy wedded life.—Lindsay Post.

TELFORD—LEAN

A wedding of considerable interest took place in Bridgenorth yesterday at noon, the contracting parties being Miss Elizabeth Bryant Lean, and Mr. John Clayton Telford, son of Mr. John Telford, of Bridgenorth. The ceremony was performed at the residence of the bride's uncle, Mr. Wm Udy, of Bridgenorth. Rev. Mr. Cruickshanks, pastor of the Bridgenorth Methodist church, was the officiating clergyman.

The bride was assisted by two bridesmaids, Miss Allie Telford, who was dressed in pale pink princess silk with applique trimming, and Miss Edna Fitzgerald, of Peterborough, who wore cream silk with cream satin and lace trimmings. Both bridesmaids carried bouquets of pink carnations. Mr. G. Walter Fitzgerald, of Peterborough, was groomsman. The bride was dressed in pale blue princess silk with lace trimmings. She wore the conventional veil and carried a bouquet of cream roses. Her travelling suit was of wisteria cloth.

Mendelssohn's wedding march was played with sympathetic expression by Miss Pauline Udy. After the ceremony about thirty guests, other than the immediate friends and relatives of the bridal pair, sat down to a sumptuous wedding dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. Telford left on the 5.30 G.T.R. train for a wedding visit to Toronto, Buffalo and other points. On their return they will take up their residence at Fairview Farm, Smith.

The thirty-first annual meeting of the Ontario Agricultural and Experimental Union will be held at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Dec. 6th, 7th and 8th.

From this vicinity the speakers will be Messrs. D. McKenzie, of Lindsay, and H. C. Duff, of Norwood. Mr. Duff's subject will be, "How I have started work in Peterborough County."

Supper will be served at the Mission Band Bazaar at George Street Church on Friday evening. Dainty fancy work and home-made candy for sale, afternoon and evening

"BILLY" PROVIDES A LAUGH FEAST

And the Celebrated Shubert Farce Only Allows Montreal Audiences Relief From Laughter Between the Acts.

"Billy" is not a funny show. Oh, no! Here's what the Montreal Star says in part about its appearance there;—

The fun started when the good ship Florida was hauled on to the stage at 8.25 p.m. "Billy" and his sister and sweetheart and all the rest of them had appeared for the half-dozenth time to respond to curtain calls and a big audience left, with all the laughter laughed out of their systems.

Comical situations follow so rapidly that the audience gets almost exhausted laughing.

Mr. Atcheson Ely and Miss Maybury starred at every point with good support from the other members of the cast. Atcheson Ely we know from his past performances here, notably in Betty and the Boys, in which he took a leading part. Miss Maybury showed herself an actress of very high ability, and her acting is helped out by a very pleasing presence.

The Montreal Gazette, Herald and Witness also refer to "Billy" as the brightest offering and most effective gloom dispeller of the season.

HEAL that OBSTINATE SORE!

CUTS and bruises are often very obstinate in refusing to heal. The edges of the wound remain inflamed and sore, and there is a daily danger of disease-germs settling on the raw flesh and giving rise to serious complications. Thus, neglect or improper treatment of an injury, be it a cut, burn, scald, or even a simple scratch, is a menace to life.

In cases where wounds refuse to heal quickly, nothing but Zam-Buk will suffice if the skin is to be made to grow naturally and perfectly once again. Zam-Buk rubbed gently over a wound has the remarkable effect, not only of rendering the wound proof against disease-germs, but of growing new skin-tissues.

Thus Zam-Buk heals wounds in a perfectly natural manner, and the possibilities of eczema and other torturing skin-diseases are entirely prevented. Possessing rare medicinal properties, Zam-Buk accomplishes what ordinary ointments and salves never can do, and its ever-ready character, constant reliability, and absolute purity, render it distinct from all other preparations. If you dress your cuts and sores with Zam-Buk you will never be troubled with "the wound that would not heal."

Of all Druggists and Stores at 50 cents a box, or three for $1.25.

FREE.

Send this coupon (with 1c. stamp to cover return postage) to the Zam-Buk Co., Colborne Street, Toronto, and a free trial box will be mailed at once.

INJURY TO QUARTER BACK'S BRAIN MAY HAVE CAUSED HIS ERRATIC PLAYING

Boston, Mass., Nov. 24.—It is said now that O'Flaherty's brain was temporarily affected by an injury in Saturday's football game, which is believed to account for his erratic playing.

He was unable to remember his signals. Time after time he gave the signals over again, repeating the play just run off, which was demoralizing to the rest of the team.

Captain Fish tried to have him leave the game. "I am all right, 'Ham,'" said O'Flaherty, and he refused to quit.

When Dr. Nicholls, the team's medical adviser, ran out on the field the first thing O'Flaherty said was, "I am all right."

The doctor questioned him. The questions were in the way of a test to see how the Harvard quarter back's mind was acting. "What day is it?" asked the doctor, and O'Flaherty could not tell him.

O'Flaherty's nose was hit hard. His jaw was ground into the dirt, and the force of the blow was so great that one of his back teeth was driven out. It affected his brain and he was in no condition to remain in the game, Harvard men say.

The most important football feature to the Harvard undergraduates now is the matter of the election of captain. There are seven candidates and Minot, the star full-back, is popular choice with the majority of the students and everybody else, as no football player at Cambridge has made a bigger bit for his work on the gridiron. Corbett, McKay, L. Withington, Leslie, Smith and Rogers are the others to be considered when the team gets together to make the choice for leader.

THE QUAKERS ORGANIZE; ELECTION OF OFFICERS

The Quaker Hockey team, champions of the Mercantile League, are in line again for the coming season and will be in a position to place a stronger seven on the ice. At a meeting held last evening in the company's office the prospects for the winter were discussed, and much enthusiasm was shown in the proceedings. The officers of the team would be glad to hear some of last year's team with a view to putting this league in better shape.

The officers elected last night are as follows:

Patron and Patroness—Mr. W. H. Denham and Mrs. Denham, Mr. T. H. G. Denne and Mrs. Denne.
President—Mr. M. J. Kirn.
Vice-President—Mr. G. P. Edwards.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. E. W. Pratt
Manager—Mr. F. J. Heaslip.

The Executive will be composed of the Sec.-Treas., the manager and a captain, who will be elected later.

GOTCH TAKES ON ZBYSCO IN BIG HANDICAP TO-NIGHT AT BUFFALO ARMOURIES

Special to the Review.

Buffalo, Nov. 24.—If Zbysco, the ponderous Polish wrestler, can successfully combat Frank Gotch tonight at the 74th Regiment Armory, for one full hour without being thrown twice—a task the world's champion has undertaken to perform against the advice of mat experts who have closely followed Zbysco's triumphant tour through the West—the foreigner will win an army of admirers throughout the country. Zbysco himself believes he can beat Gotch the necessary two falls and actually scoffs at the idea that he will go down to defeat on Thursday night. He defiantly declares that Gotch will not win one fall, which shows plainly that the Polish giant is confident of at least staving off the Humboldt gladiator.

And it will be the grapplefest sure. That Zbysco is in for a rough old tossing is a certainty. Gotch will go after the Pole hammer and tongs. Of course, under the conditions of the match, Zbysco needs but to remain an hour to win. Naturally, he may play on the defensive, while Gotch will be the aggressor. But the champion has demonstrated so many times that he can toss about the 200 odd pounds of humanity that his followers are in high glee over what is in store for Zbysco. In bouts with big men, like Apollo, 270 pounds, and Recevitch, 240 pounds, Gotch proved his ability to slam the big fellows around so roughly that they were forced to submit to a world of punishment to keep from being thrown. Gotch was never accused of handling an opponent gently, especially when he has allowed his man a handicap.

Zbysco startled Western experts by his strength. In St. Paul and Minneapolis he threw every man who faced him in jig time. In fact, the Pole performed so creditably that it was difficult to get men with reputations to meet him. Zbysco is thought by many to be the best man who has invaded these shores since Hackenschmidt, the Russian Lion, came over and lost the world's championship laurels to Gotch in their famous match in the stock-yards district of Chicago, nearly two years ago.

While Zbysco has been hard at work preparing for the Buffalo match, Gotch has not been idle. The champion, who is booked up with Jeffries in an athletic show, has been meeting all comers nightly, and is reported to be in good form. In Kansas City, where Gotch defeated Dr. Roller recently, the sporting writers unanimously declared that Gotch is in better form at the present time than he has shown since he won the title from Hackenschmidt, although the Westerner is very heavy.

The ringside on the night of the match will offer scenes a bit strange to Buffalonians. The ring will be pitched in the centre of the immense drill hall. Big electric lights will be hung directly over the mat. When the spectators have been seated and the preliminary events run off, the regular lights in the spacious building will be dimmed and the whole lighting scheme centred on the ring.

It is generally conceded that when he faces Gotch all that is good in the big foreigner will be brought to the surface very promptly, and if the good isn't there the big fellow will find himself in for an awful mauling, one in which weight and strength, unassisted by skill, will avail him little.

NEW YORK VIEW ON MATCH.

The New York Press, commenting on the match says:—The Gotch-Zbysco match should be the greatest wrestling contest that has taken place in many a year. Zbysco is declared by those who have seen him in action to be the master of Hackenschmidt, the Russian Lion, persistently refusing to meet the big Pole, and as Gotch had much trouble in subduing Hack, the champion and the Pole should make a great match.

MONTREAL ON FRIDAY.

Immediately after his match with Gotch, Zbysco will leave Buffalo for Montreal, and on Friday night will go on in a handicap match at Sohmer Park, undertaking to throw Raoul de Rouen, the big Frenchman, and Pengal, the Turk, inside of an hour. He will meet de Rouen at Greco-Roman style and Pengal at catch-as-catch-can. The Pole will be a marvel if he can accomplish what he has undertaken, especially coming right after what will be a hard bout with Gotch.

SPORTING NOTES

Paul De Rouen and Zybsco wrestle in Montreal on Friday night.

'Varsity will have it on the Rough Riders in running.

Speculators expect to sell seats from $4 to $10 each on Saturday for the Ottawa-'Varsity Rugby match.

The Auburn Hockey Club will reorganize at a meeting to be held tonight in the Y. M. C. A.

The students of the Collegiate Institute have a big proposition on their hands these days. It is proposed to enter a team in the Junior O. H. A. as well as the city league. Opinions vary on the advisability of the former and at a meeting held yesterday afternoon it was decided to let the matter rest for a while.

The latest in the hockey world is a proposition by some promoters of Toronto to have that city represented by a professional team in the E.C. H.A., the games to be played in Toronto under canvass, as no covered rink can be secured in which to play the game.

BOWLING AT Y. M. C. A.

Only two teams played off their games last night. No. 9 won two and lost one to No. 10.

TOM ALERT WON MATCHED RACE

Trenton, Nov. 24.—A matched race was held at the Driving Park, Belleville, between Tom Alert, owned by H. Cook, Trenton, and Guy, owned by G. S. Armstrong, of Frankford. The race, which was an exciting one, was won by Tom Alert in three straight heats. The track was not in very good condition, and the best time made was 2.23. The judges were George Powell, Mr. Ketcheson and James Dann, of Deseronto. Messrs. Henry Foster and James Ketcheson, of Sidney, were timekeepers. Mr. Carnew was starter.

KIDNEY TIRED OF HAVING PEOPLE CALL HIM STEW

New York, Nov. 25.—Having "spent many sleepless nights" because of the annoyance and worry caused him by friends and acquaintances, who persisted in making fun of his name, David J. Kidney, jr., got an order from Supreme Court Justice McCall permitting him to assume the name of Kinney after Dec. 31st.

Like Mr. Ulrich Egg, who some time ago, had his name changed to Eck, Kidney told Justice McCall his mind was so troubled by the criticisms and insults hurled at him that he couldn't bear up under the weight of its any longer.

In a formal petition presented to the court by his lawyers, Cohen Brothers, Kidney described his woes as follows;

"That because of your petitioner's name, he is frequently, and in fact, nearly all the time, the subject of comment and abuse, and remarks such as "kidney trouble' and 'kidney disease,' are usually made at him.

"That when any of your petitioner's co-employees desire to call him or attract his attention they not only neglect and fail to call him as they properly should, they refuse absolutely to call his proper name, but instead thereof, call him various names, such as above given."

Kidney is twenty-six years old and a member of the Fire Department attached to Engine Company No. 31, at No. 89 Lafayette street. His home is at No. 57 Dey street.

Kidney said he feared that unless his name was changed it would hinder his promotion in the Fire Department. It made him "hot under the collar" when the other firemen spoke of him as "the kidney disease," or "kidney stew," and as if that were not bad enough, such annoyances even followed him into his social life.

All of which so disgusted him with his name that whenever he went into a restaurant and saw kidney stew, kidney saute or any other kidney, he lost his appetite.

Kidney is not married. He lives with his father, who, he says, has also been subjected to much annoyance and worry because of his name.

HOW ABOUT THAT WRESTLING MATCH?

What is the reason that Gotch is taking on Zybsco at Buffalo to-night with the understanding that the Iowa champion is to throw the man with the name like a fancy cracker twice in an hour? This celebrated Polish grappler is the man whom the mighty Hackenschmidt dodged press reports have it, and when Gotch and Hack met everybody knows what a fierce bout it was.

Now, while the match to-night may be on the dead level, it looks from the outside of the circle as though it were a frame-up for Zybsco to stay with the champion for an hour—an old game, by the way—or else for someone to get one fall. In either event there would be an opening left for another match and another gate. Going by past performances in the game it looks a reasonably good bet that Gotch won't win the handicap.

SHRUBB PUT 3 LAPS ON INDIAN

And Won in Comparatively Easy Fashion in Winnipeg—Time Was Rather Poor

Winnipeg, Nov. 24. — (Special.)—Shrubb won the sixteen-mile race from Tom Longboat by all but three laps in the not very fast time of one hour, 54 minutes and 50 seconds. The race was rather like a procession. Shrubb easily established a good lead, which he gradually increased, lapping the Indian in the fourth, again in the seventh and the third time in the twelfth mile. He maintained this lead until the last mile, when the Indian spurted and gained a few rods, passing Shrubb once.

WRESTLING

New York, Nov. 22.—Con O'Kelly, of Cork, and Pat Connolly, of Galway, met in a wrestling match at the Grand Central palace to-night. It was not a wrestling match at all and after twenty-nine minutes and six seconds of just plain dyed in the wool, blown in the bottle prize fighting, Captain of Police Langtry jumped into the ring and threw the pair out simply because they were slugging, bare fisted. Both men made little attempt to "pin" each other to the mat. It was a mutual effort to send each other to the floor with a wild swing to the jaw.

Con O'Kelly, the biggest and latest importation from Ireland, was the principal offender. He was sadly winded after ten minutes of tugging and pounding. At the finish Connelly's left eye was blackened, his nose torn, while O'Kelly sported a puffed lamp and a gory face. Tom Jenkins, no parlor performer himself, weakened at the sight and walked out of the ring saying, "This isn't wrestling, this is slugging and I disqualify both men."

The managers tried to patch it up but at this point Captain Langtry hopped into the ring and the battle of the Irish giants became only suited for comic history.

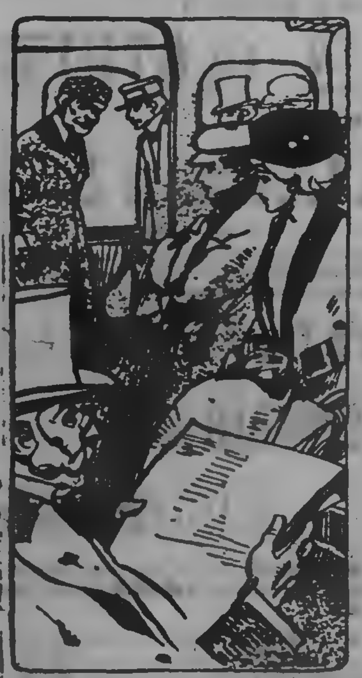
The BLACK BAG

By Louis Joseph Vance

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

The train, escaping the outskirts of the city, remarked the event with an exultant shriek, then settled down, droning steadily, to night devouring flight. In the corridor car the few passengers disposed themselves to drowse away the coming hour—the short hour's ride that, in these piping days of frantic traveling, separates Antwerp from the capital city of Belgium.

A guard, slamming gustily in through the front door, reeled unsteadily down the aisle. Kirkwood, rousing from a profound reverie, detained him with a gesture and began to interrogate him in French. When he departed presently it transpired that the girl was unacquainted with that tongue.



His eyes encountered the young man's and he leered evilly.

"I didn't understand, you know," she told him with a slow, shy smile.

"I was merely questioning him about the trains from Brussels tonight. We daren't stop, you see. We must go on—keep Hobbs on the jump and lose him, if possible. There's where our advantage lies—in having only Hobbs to deal with. He's not particularly intellectual, and we've two heads to his one besides. If we can prevent him from guessing our destination and wiring back to Antwerp, we may win away. You understand?"

"Perfectly," she said, brightening. "And what do you purpose doing now?"

"I can't tell yet. The guard's gone to get me some information about the night trains on other lines. In the meantime don't fret about Hobbs. I'll answer for Hobbs."

"I shan't be worried," she said simply, "with you here."

Whatever answer he would have made he was obliged to postpone because of the return of the guard, with a handful of time tables, and when, rewarded with a modest gratuity, the man had gone his way and Kirkwood turned again to the girl she had withdrawn her attention for the time.

Unconscious of his bold regard, she was dreaming, her thoughts at loose ends, her eyes studying the incalculable depths of blue black night that swirled and eddied beyond the window glass. The most shadowy of smiles touched her lips; the faintest shade of deepened color rested on her cheeks. She was thinking of—him? As long as he dared the young man, his heart in his own eyes, watched her greedily, taking a miser's joy of her youthful beauty, striving with all his soul to analyse the enigma of that most inscrutable smile.

It baffled him. He could not say of what she thought and told himself bitterly that it was not for him, a pauper, to presume a place in her meditations. He must not forget his circumstances nor let her tolerance render him oblivious to his place, which must be a servant's, not a lover's.

The better to convince himself of this he plunged desperately into a forlorn attempt to make head or tail of Belgian railway schedules, complicated as these of necessity are by the alteration from normal time notation to the abnormal system sanctioned by the government, and vice versa, with every train that crosses a boundary line of the state.

So preoccupied did he become in this pursuit that he was subconsciously impressed that the girl had spoken twice ere he could detach his interest from the exasperatingly inconclusive and incoherent cohorts of ranked figures.

"Can't you find out anything?" Dorothy was asking.

"Precious little," he grumbled. "I'd give my head for a Bradshaw! Only it wouldn't be a fair exchange. There seems to be an express for Bruges leaving the Gare du Nord, Brussels, at fifty-five minutes after 23 o'clock, and if I'm not mistaken that's the latest train out of Brussels and the earliest we can catch—if we can catch it. I've never been in Brussels, and heaven only knows how long it would take us to cab it from the Gare du Midi to the Nord."

In this statement, however, Mr Kirkwood was fortunately mistaken. Not only heaven, it appeared, had cognizance of the distance between the two stations. While Kirkwood was still debating the question, with pessimistic tendencies, the friendly guard had occasion to pass through the coach and, being tapped, yielded the desired information with entire tractability.

It would be a cab ride of perhaps ten minutes. Monsieur, however, would serve himself well if he offered the driver an advance tip as an incentive to speedy driving. Why? Why, because (here the guard consulted his watch, and Kirkwood very keenly regretted the loss of his own)—because this train, announced to arrive in Brussels some twenty minutes prior to the departure of that other, was already late. But, yes, a matter of some ten minutes—could that not be made up? Ah, monsieur, but who should say?

The guard departed, doubtless with private views as to the madness of all English speaking travelers.

"And there, we are!" commented Kirkwood in factitious resignation. "If we're obliged to stop overnight in Brussels our friends will be on our back before we can get out in the morning if they have to come by motor car." He reflected bitterly on the fact that with but a little more money at his disposal he, too, could hire a motor car and cry defiance to their persecutors. "However," he amended, with rising spirits, "so much the better our chance of losing Mr. Hobbs. We must be ready to drop o. the instant the train stops."

He began to unfold another time table, threatening again to lose himself completely, and was thrown into the utmost confusion by the touch of the girl's hand, in appeal placed lightly on his arm. And had she been observant she might have seen a second time his knuckles whiten beneath the skin as he asserted his self control, though this time not over his temper.

His eyes, dumbly eloquent, turned to meet hers. She was smiling.

"Please!" she iterated, with the least imperative pressure on his hand, pushing the folder aside.

"I beg pardon?' he muttered blankly.

"Is it quite necessary, now, to study those schedules? Haven't you decided to try for the Bruges express?"

"Why, yes, but"—

"Then please don't leave me to my thoughts all the time, Mr. Kirkwood." There was a tremor of laughter in her voice, but her eyes were grave and earnest. "I'm very weary of thinking round in a circle, and that," she concluded, with a nervous little laugh, "is all I've had to do for days."

"I'm afraid I'm very stupid," he humored her.

She watched him, a little piqued by his absentminded mood for a moment, then, and not without a trace of malice, "Must I tell you again what to talk about?" she asked.

"Forgive me. I was thinking about if not talking to you. I've been wondering just why it was that you left the Alethea at Queensborough to go on by steamer."

And immediately he was sorry that his tactless query had swung the conversation to bear upon her father, the thought of whom could not but prove painful to her. But it was too late to mend matters. Already her evanescent flush of amusement had given place to remembrance.

"It was on my father's account," she told him in a steady voice, but with averted eyes. "He is a very poor sailor, and the promise of a rough passage terrified him. I believe there was a difference of opinion about it, he disputing with Mr. Mulready and Captain Stryker. That was just after we had left the anchorage. They both insisted that it was safer to continue by the Alethea, but he wouldn't listen to them and in the end had his way. Captain Stryker ran the brigantine into the mouth of the Medway and put us ashore just in time to catch the steamer."

"Were you sorry for the change?"

"I?" She shuddered slightly. "Hardly! I think I hated the ship from the moment I set foot on board her. It was a dreadful place. It was all nightmarish that night, but it seemed most terrible on the Alethea with Captain Stryker and that abominable Mr. Hobbs. I think that my unhappiness had as much to do with my father's insistence on the change as anything. He was very thoughtful most of the time."

Kirkwood shut his teeth on what he knew of the blackguard.

"I don't know why," she continued, wholly without affectation, "but I was wretched from the moment you left me in the cab to wait while you went in to see Mrs. Hallam. And when we left you at Bermondsey Old Stairs, after what you had said to me, I felt—I hardly know what to say—abandoned in a way."

"But you were with your father, in his care."

"I know, but I was getting confused. Until then the excitement had kept me from thinking. But you made me think. I began to wonder, to question. But what could I do?" She signified her helplessness with a quick and dainty movement of her hands. "He is my father, and I'm not yet of age, you know."

"I thought so," he confessed, troubled. "It's very inconsiderate of you, you must admit."

"I don't understand."

"Because of the legal complication. I've no doubt your father can 'have the law on me' "—Kirkwood laughed uneasily—"for taking you from his protection."

"Protection!" she echoed warmly. "If you call it that!"

"Kidnaping," he said thoughtfully. "I presume that'd be the charge."

"Oh!" She laughed the notion to scorn. "Besides, they must catch us first, mustn't they?"

"Of course, and"—with a simulation of confidence sadly deceitful—"they shan't, Mr. Hobbs to the contrary notwithstanding."

"You make me share your confidence against my better judgment."

"I wish your better judgment would counsel you to share your confidence with me," he caught her up. "If you would only tell me what it's all about, as far as you know, I'd be better able to figure out what we ought to do."

CHAPTER XXV.

BRIEFLY the girl sat silent, staring before her with sweet, somber eyes. Then, "In the very beginning," she told him, with a conscious laugh—"this sounds story bookish, I know—in the very beginning George Burgoyne Calendar, an American, married his cousin a dozen times removed and an Englishwoman, Alice Burgoyne Hallam."

"Hallam!"

"Wait, please." She sat up, bending forward and frowning down upon her interlacing gloved fingers. She was finding it difficult to say what she must. Kirkwood, watching hungrily the fair drooping head, the flawless profile clear and radiant against the night blackened window, saw hot signals of shame burning on her cheek and throat and forehead.

"But never mind," he began awkwardly.

"No," she told him, with decision. "Please let me go on." She continued, stumbling, trusting to his sympathy to bridge the gaps in her narrative. "My father—there was trouble of some sort—at all events, he disappeared when I was a baby. My mother—died. I was reared in the home of my great-uncle, Colonel George Burgoyne of the Indian army, retired. My mother had been his favorite niece, they say. I presume that was why he cared for me. I grew up in his home in Cornwall. It was my home, just as he was my father in everything but fact.

"A year ago he died, leaving me everything—the town house in Frognall street, his estate in Cornwall. Everything was willed to me on condition that I must never live with my father nor in any way contribute to his support. If I disobeyed, the entire estate without reserve was to go to his nearest of kin. Colonel Burgoyne was unmarried and had no children."

The girl paused, lifting to Kirkwood's face her eyes, clear, fearless, truthful. "I never was given to understand that there was anybody who might have inherited other than myself," she declared.

"I see."

"Last week I received a letter, signed with my father's name, begging me to appoint an interview with him in London. I did so—guess how gladly! I was alone in the world, and he my father, whom I had never thought to see. We met at his hotel, the Plesa. He wanted me to come and live with him; said that he was growing old and lonely and needed a daughter's love and care. He told me that he had made a fortune in America and was amply able to provide for us both. As for my inheritance, he persuaded me that it was by right the property of Frederick Hallam, Mrs. Hallam's son."

"I have met the young gentleman," interpolated Kirkwood.

"His name was new to me, but my father assured me that he was the next of kin mentioned in Colonel Burgoyne's will and convinced me that I had no real right to the property. After all, he was my father. I agreed. I could not bear the thought of wronging anybody. I was to give up everything but my mother's jewels. It seems—my father said—I don't—I can't believe it now"—

She choked out a little, dry sob. It was some time before she seemed able to continue.

"I was told that my great-uncle's collection of jewels had been my mother's property. He had in life a passion for collecting jewels, and it had been his whim to carry them with him wherever he went. When he died in Frognall street they were in the safe by the head of his bed. I, in my grief, at first forgot them and then afterward carelessly put off removing them.

"To come back to my father, night before last we were to call on Mrs. Hallam. It was to be our last night in England. We were to sail for the continent on the private yacht of a friend of my father's the next morning. This is what I was told and believed, you understand.

"That night Mrs. Hallam was dining at another table at Plesa, it seems. I did not then know her. When leaving she put a note on our table by my father's elbow. I was astonished beyond words. He seemed much agitated, told me that he was called away on urgent business, a matter of life and death, and begged me to go alone to Frognall street, get the jewels and meet him at Mrs. Hallam's later. I wasn't altogether a fool, for I began dimly to suspect then that something was wrong, but I was a fool, for I consented to do as he desired. You understand—you know"

"I do, indeed," replied Kirkwood grimly. "I understand a lot of things now that I didn't five minutes ago. Please let me think."

RAILWAY TRACKS WERE STREWN WITH HUNDREDS OF TELEGRAPH POLES

Train Which Left Toronto 10 O'Clock Monday Reached Ottawa After Tuesday Midnight, Encountering Extreme Difficulties From Peterborough Eastward. Passengers Had Unique Experience. Storm Worst in Years.

Ottawa, Nov. 24.—With telegraph poles lying across the track in profusion for mile after mile, and no telegraph wires with which to acquaint the outside world of its predicament, the C.P.R. train which left Toronto Monday night at 10 o'clock and due in Ottawa at 8.25 yesterday morning, moved slowly and with mystery enshrouding its movements all day yesterday and up to a late hour last night, reaching Ottawa about midnight and bringing relief to the feelings of many who had been waiting for friends.

The run from Toronto, which under ordinary circumstances takes a little over eight hours, was accomplished in a little more than 26 hours with extreme difficulty, and an interesting tale of the trip is told by passengers on the train. Among these were the Toronto members of the deputation to see the government about the Welland canal; some lawyers from the Queen City, eager to reach Ottawa for Supreme Court business, and a number of parliamentarians and business men; but all resigned themselves to their fate when at Peterborough the first note of serious trouble was sounded.

Though in the vicinity of Toronto Monday night's storm was one of the worst of its kind ever experienced, and wires were down, it was as the train approached Peterborough that the fallen poles began to be encountered. These had to be removed from the track one by one with great labor. From Peterborough a work train was got out and all the way to Smith's Falls the train crew was busy removing obstructions from the track. Often the passengers got off and had a look around, and there were many periods at which walking would have been as rapid progress.

The train left Toronto at 10 o'clock on Monday night. It reached Havelock at about 3 o'clock in the morning, and the run between there and Central Ontario Junction, a distance of 12 miles, took five hours. At the latter place a stop of two hours was made and the prudent ones took a cross-country run of half a mile to get food at a little country store. One of the leaders of the race was Senator Cox, who was a passenger on the train, and who is said to have made a great run with younger competitors. All around the trees were bending beneath the coating of about two inches of ice, and in many cases barn roofs had caved in under the weight.

The C.P.R. made an attempt to feed the passengers at Central Ontario Junction, and at Tweed again some of the train crew bought crackers and tea and coffee for the women and children.

At Mountain Grove, a few miles west of Sharbot Lake, the morning train from Toronto to Montreal overtook the delayed train for the Capital and the diner from it was switched onto the latter. Until provisions gave out, as many of the passengers as could be accommodated were fed, but not all succeeded in getting in on the provisions. At 7.30 in the evening the train arrived at Smith's Falls, where the diner was again switched over to the Montreal train. About two hours were spent at Smith's Falls, and the difficult trip was resumed, the work train preceding the passenger and removing obstructions from its course. To illustrate some of the difficulties encountered by the company, there were 240 poles across the track between Carleton Place and Ottawa with proportionately more in other sections.

On the trip there was no formality; everybody talked to everybody else, and many fast friendships were sealed. Senators and M. P.'s had dashes to keep warm at wayside stopping places.

The C.P.R. this morning reports that trains are running more regularly, but the express from Toronto was five and a half hours late. Toronto has been regained on the railway telegraph wires, though all other C.P.R. wires west of Ottawa are still out of commission. To railways and telegraph companies Monday's storm was without doubt one of the most disastrous in history.

Several members of parliament and senators were on the belated train.

"We left Toronto at the usual hour," stated W. M. Gorman, M. P. for Welland, "and all went well till we were near Havelock. Then we stopped, and at seven in the morning were in the same place. It took all day and the most of last night to get to Ottawa. We moved foot by foot, so to speak, behind a work train engaged in clearing the track, not of snow, but of telegraph poles and wires. Between Ottawa and Havelock, I should say, there are not a dozen poles standing. At one station early yesterday morning every one made a run for a village hotel and succeeded in getting at least a cup of tea. When we reached Tweed there was a stock of sandwiches available, and another at Smith's Falls. The delay was bothersome, but the passengers made the best of it, and took it good naturedly."

HURT BY A FLYING COW

Pontiac, Mich.—Louis Barton lies in a critical condition as the result of a most unusual accident. While driving cows across the Northwestern Railroad tracks, one of the cows was struck by a train and thrown three rods. During its flight through the air, the cow struck Mr. Barton, who is now suffering from concussion of the brain.

It is the unexpected that happens. Mrs. R. C. Small of Ottawa, Ont., says: "I suffered from Rheumatism for years and did not expect to be free from pain, but I tried "Fruit-a-tives" and they cured me".

SOCIETY WOMEN'S HAIR

A Simple Treatment That Will Make it Truly Fascinating—Wm. Madill Guarantees It

Nowadays every up-to-date woman has radiant hair.

What a foolish creature a woman would be if she lost the opportunity to add to her attractions.

Yet in Canada to-day there are hundreds of thousands of women with harsh, faded, characterless hair who do not make any attempt to improve it.

In Paris most women have beautiful hair, and in Canada all women who use Parisian Sage have lustrous and luxuriant hair.

And any woman reader of the Review can have attractive and lustrous hair in a few days' time by using this great hair rejuvenator, Parisian Sage.

Wm. Madill sells a large bottle for 50 cents and he guarantees it to banish dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

Parisian Sage is an ideal hair tonic, not sticky or greasy.

GIRL BRIDE HOME AGAIN

Didn't Like Texas and Life on the Ranch-Sighed for Mama and New York

New York, Nov. 23rd.—Little Marguerite Merklen's big blue eyes danced with joy to-day at her mother's home, No. 409 East Fifty-first street, when a letter carrier brought the announcement from Westchester County that Justice Keogh had granted an annulment of her marriage to Philip A. McLaughlin, a wealthy horse breeder and ranchman of San Antonio, Tex. Miss Merklen, who refuses to be called Mrs. McLaughlin any longer, is just nineteen years old, and was only seventeen when she was married to the Texan

"I'm happy and satisfied," she said. "But I don't intend to remain single all my life. Not that I have selected a new husband, but I believe that all girls should be married when they are twenty-five."

Miss Merklen's father was one of a family of furniture manufacturers, and left his widow and five children comfortably situated when he died. Marguerite met McLaughlin through her brothers, and it was a case of love at first sight. Her mass of dark brown hair was then still in braids down her back.

TEXAS CURED HER ROMANCE.

McLaughlin was born in Scotland, and his father was a celebrated portrait painter, who received honours from British royalty. The young man settled in Texas soon after he attained his majority, and with money settled on him by his father purchased ranch lands there.

Everything he invested in seemed to turn to gold, and in a short time young McLaughlin had amassed a fortune in real estate, horses and cattle. On a visit to this city he met Marguerite Merklen, and in October, 1907, they were married at St. John's Roman Catholic Church, in East Fifty-fifth street.

McLaughlin took his bride to Texas, where she discovered that her first love affair had been a mistake. She was lonesome, too, for the high buildings and the noise of busy Manhattan. So she lost only three months in coming home to mother and New York.

On her eighteenth birthday she decided to apply for annulment of the marriage on the ground that she was married while under age. She consulted with a lawyer and a suit was instituted.

"I wanted to be called Marguerite Merklen again," said the young lady with enthusiasm. "I hold no ill-feeling toward Mr. McLaughlin, but I just didn't like our married life and I left him. There's no scandal, and every one is satisfied."

THE HOOK

A theatrical man came into the Review office to-day smoking leaves in his pipe. The poor fellow was in a pitiable condition and the staff held a consultation and decided to—ask him to get out.

If a man was half as great a discoverer as Peary or Cook he might be able to find who swiped his umbrella occasionally.

"Who will win the rugby match at Toronto on Saturday?" is the query of a reader. Might as well ask us how many feathers a hen has.

Street cars are not running in Kingston and square heel and toe walking is much in evidence there.

The latest discovery is the male hair turns grey eight years sooner than female hair. Rats!

TEACHERS SCARCE IN THE PROVINCE

The Ontario Education Department has issued a circular to public school inspectors throughout the province stating that, owing to the scarcity of properly qualified teachers in many districts, the department has decided to extend the time of teachers holding limited third-class, county-board, extended third-class and extended district certificates, which expire on December 30th, until June of next year, provided the teachers produce a certificate of recommendation from the inspector of their district.

EMPLOYEES ARRESTED

Five Michigan Central Railroad Men Charged with Long Series of Robberies.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 26.—By the arrest at Bridgeburg of Horner Woodloe, M.C.R. night yardmaster at Bridgeburg; Ernest Finlayson, R. S. Gurvine, John Kee, jr., and Chester Lawson, employes of the railway company, the authorities think they have captured a gang of car robbers who have been operating in Bridgeburg for a considerable time.

The arrested men are members of respectable families, and Lawson is the son of a prominent Government official.

For two years past, railway cars in the M.C.R. yards there have been pilfered and valuable goods have been stolen. The robberies were so frequent and extensive that the railway company sent three special detectives, Moynihan, McHugh and Heenan, to run the gang to earth. The village council were so exercised by the extent of the thefts that they twice requested the Ontario police to put a stop to the robberies, and Inspector of Police W. H. Mains, personally worked on the case.

The united efforts of the sleuths resulted in the arrest of the five employes, and it is stated the investigation will be probed deeper and further arrests made. The five men were arraigned before Magistrate Rathvon at Bridgeburg and remanded until Nov. 30, being admitted to bail of $2,000. Stolen property was found on the men arrested, and at their homes.

About three weeks ago, the general yardmaster of the company, John O'Neil, was arrested and charged with stealing and selling several cars of crushed stone from the company which he sold to Upper and Lebb, of St. Catherines, contractors on the boulevard between Niagara Falls and Fort Erie. A few days later, George Burns, section foreman, was arrested for returning a false pay roll. Both men were committed for trial at Welland.

The arrest of these two men resulted in information being given to M.C.R. Detective Moynihan, which led to the other arrests. The men are charged with stealing quantities of men's clothing, boots and shoes and haberdashery. One of the arrested men wore a pair of stolen boots when apprehended.

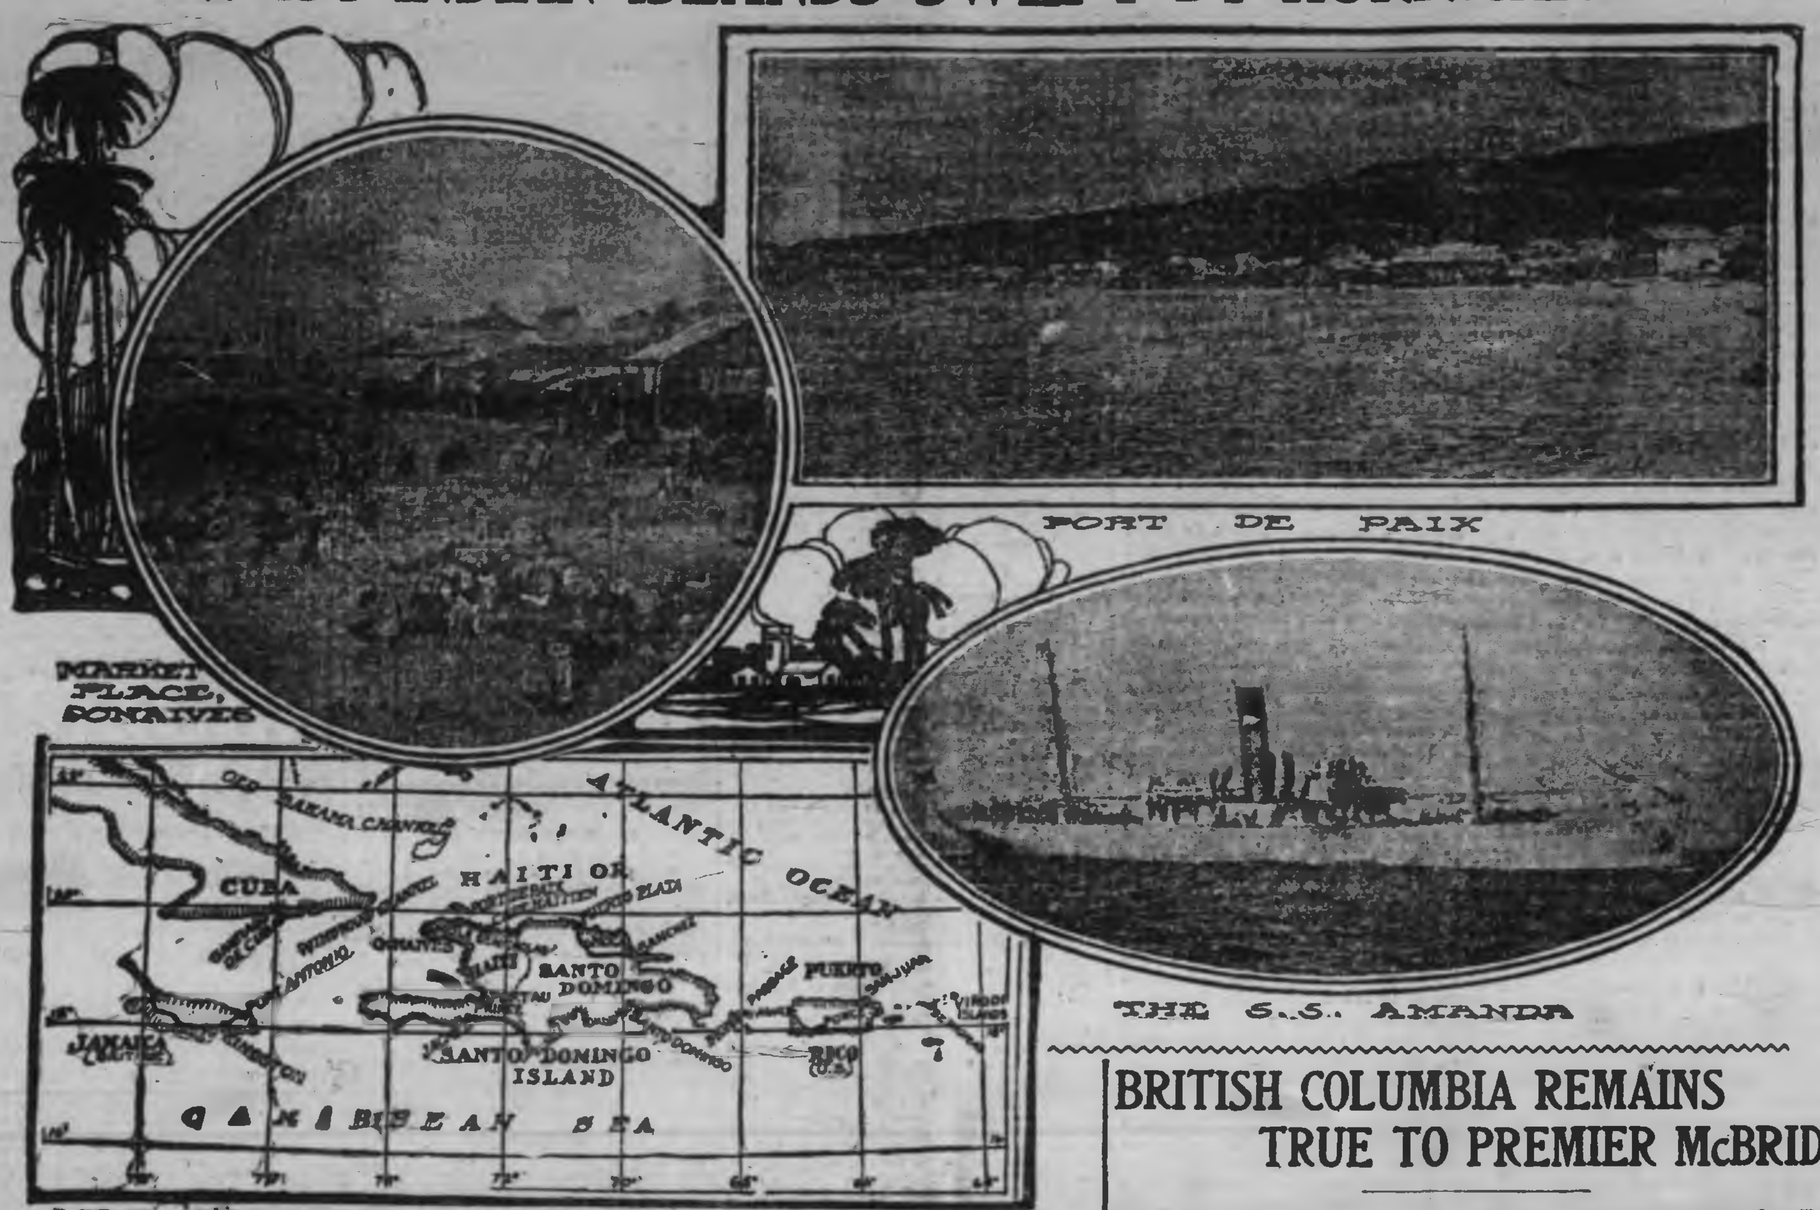
Of these six will be of the Dreadnought type.

WEST INDIAN ISLANDS SWEPT BY HURRICANE



MARKET PLACE, GONAIVES

PORT DE PAIX

THE S.S. AMANDA

MAP SHOWING EXTENT OF WEST INDIAN HURRICANE

Port Au Prince, Hayti, Nov. 25.—While this whole island has been rocking with earthquake tremors for nearly a week, it has been swept by a violent cyclone and deluged by disastrous floods.

Port de Paix is in ruins. Nineteen dead already have been found in the wreckage.

Gonaives is razed. The work of the wind and rain was completed when a great tremor upheaved the bed of the sea and sent a billow of destruction running across the land as high as a man's head.

Many lie dead in Cape Haitien, drowned by this same sea flood, which curled up the Customs House there like a leaf and left it a scattered ruin. Death, wreck and ruin are everywhere, and the loss of property is incalculable.

The sun has not been seen here in four days. Meanwhile rain has fallen steadily, accompanied by sharp flashes of lightning and heavy thunder, which made the earth quiver.

A communication with the interior of the island has been destroyed.

The few ships that have dared to reach a port tell of terrible experiences.

The Hamburg-American steamship Niederwald has put in here after shaping a course far to seaward of the five ports she was scheduled to touch along the coast. M'LAUGHLIN COMMITTED Uxbridge Man Goes to Jail at Whitby to Await the Spring Assizes.

Uxbridge, Nov. 26.—Magistrate Hamilton yesterday afternoon committed Archie McLaughlin to stand trial on the charge of having murdered his wife and two children. It is alleged that, because of his infatuation for another woman, he poisoned the three, and then set fire to his house in an endeavor to conceal the crime.

Prior to the afternoon session of the court, McLaughlin, after having seen the Toronto papers, broke down and wept bitterly. After his committal he was taken to a barber shop and shaved, before removal to Whitby Jail. It is not likely the trial will take place before the spring.

The prisoner left town last night in company with High Constable William Calverly, for Whitby, a very large crowd being at the station to see him off.

In conversation with a reporter McLaughlin said that in due time the truth would come out.

Whilst he felt his position keenly he was quite free to talk about the evidence that he had heard. He said that the elopement to California, the champagne supper, the trip to Cannington, and the kind act of carrying Miss Nix's grip to Sunderland station was all news to him. He complained of not feeling very well, his back paining him, possibly from the effect of tripping over the hose at the fire.

As to the future he did not know what was in store for him, but he said he had no fear.

Little Miss Monta left town yesterday morning in company with her uncle, F. Dennis of Wyoming, and her aunt, Mrs. Watson of Sarnia. She will live with her aunt, at the request of her father. No further attempt was made to get the child's evidence at this time, though she will likely appear at the trial in Whitby.

Quite a number of witnesses were heard yesterday. Fred McVicars, a drug clerk, swore that McLaughlin, on Sept. 10, purchased 12 morphine pills, and on Oct. 28 ten grains of strychnine, having asked for "rat poison." The morphine he had said was for his heart.

THREE ARE ASPHYXIATED AT AURORA

Aurora, Nov. 26.—A startling and gruesome discovery was made here yesterday, when the dead bodies of Mrs. John Flintoff, her granddaughter, Miss Laura Macdonald, aged about 10, and Fred Blake, a young Englishman, aged 19, were all found asphyxiated from gas in the home of Mrs. Flintoff, on Macsell avenue.

Coronto Hillary and Dr. Stevenson were hastily summoned, and after an examination decided that death must have taken place at least 24 hours before. An inquest was decided to be unnecessary, the cause of death being plainly evident.

Mrs. Flintoff was a widow, her husband having died about six years ago, and the little granddaughter had lived with her for some time.

No stir had been noticeable around the Flintoff house since Tuesday night, and Mrs. Simpson, a nearby neighbor, secured the assistance of others, and an entrance was effected through a window, when the bodies of the three victims of the deadly gas were found lying in their rooms, apparently asleep.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

At London, Elijah Lambert, aged 65, dropped dead in front of his coal stove as he was fixing the fire.

Mrs. Louis Shaver, an aged woman, was burned to death at Kemptville, her clothing igniting from a stove.

The Toronto viaduct case will be begun at the Supreme Court at Ottawa probably on Monday, and may extend over two days.

The steam barge Flint, loaded with limestone and salt, was burned off North Point, Michigan. The crew reached Alpena safely in their yawl boat.

Donald Geiselman, 17 years old, while out hunting near Orrville, Ohio, yesterday accidentally shot and killed his father, Cyrenus Geiselman, aged 50 years.

A Madrid special to The London Morning Telegram says it is reported here that Sir Maurice Debunsen, British Ambassador to Madrid, will soon replace Ambassador Bryce at Washington.

Bertha Story, 60 years old, was found strangled to death in her saloon, 433 Butternut street, Detroit, yesterday. Investigation indicates that the place had been robbed of about 80 cents.

Six persons, father, mother and four children, were killed yesterday when a car on the Los Angeles and Longbeach trolley line ran into an automobile in which Mr. Jacobs and his family were riding near Latin station.

Paris despatch states that the Campagnie Transatlantique availing itself of the new Franco-Canadian commercial treaty, will run special mail steamers to Canada, receiving a subsidy of 3,000,000 francs, paid equally by Canada and France.

CONSERVATIVE LORDS SAID TO BE TAKING SECOND THOUGHT

Bishop of Hereford Says it is the Duty of the Clerical Lords to Consider the Poor—Burleigh Warns the Peers Against Prejudicing Their Position.

London, Nov. 26.—"If you win a victory it will be only a temporary one; if you lose, you have prejudiced the position, power, prestige and usefulness of the House of Lords, which I believe every one of you honors and desires to serve as heartily as I do myself."

In this homely candid fashion, Lord Balfour of Burleigh told the members of the House of Lords last evening his opinion of the course they were pursuing with regard to the budget. His speech was the real event of yesterday's sitting of the Upper Chamber. It probably will have greater influence than that of Lord Rosebery, because Rosebery no longer holds the confidence of any party.

The Bishop of Hereford, who intervened late in the debate, said that while he respected the Archbishop of Canterbury's desire that the bishops abstain from voting on the measure, he claimed the right to the exercise of independent judgment.

If the bishops had any function to perform it was to speak for the multitudinous poor, he said, therefore he supported the budget, which was a social welfare budget, based on sound finance. He was convinced, he declared, that the country's answer to an appear to the ballot would be in such clear English that never again shall the fundamental liberties of the people be endangered by a privileged class.

Many others of the peers spoke, but all of them along ordinary party lines. The debate was adojurned until Monday, when Viscount Morley, Lord Curzon and Lord Rothschild are expected to address the House.

Rumors are current to-day that the Conservative leaders seeing the damaging effect that the speeches of Lords Cromer, Rosebery and Balfour of Burleigh is likely to have on the Conservative cause, in an election, are reconsidering their position with regard to the budget. But the best information indicates that Lord Lansdowne's resolution against the adoption of the budget will go to a division and be carried by an enormous majority.

A great pro-budget demonstration took place last night in Parliament square and that locality. Six thousand persons gathered for the demonstration and sang political songs and cheered for David Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Police to the number of 1,500 were employed in keeping order, but finally the crowd became unmanageable and they cleared the square. There were some slight scuffles and several arrests were made. The demonstration is likely to be repeated on a larger scale Monday and Tuesday.

There was little falling off in the attendance when the House of Lords met in the afternoon. The benches were again crowded with peers, members of the House of Commons were gathered about the throne and peeresses, diplomats and other distinguished persons filled the galleries.

The extension of the time for debate will give opportunity for more of the Lords to be heard and many maiden speeches will be made. Lord Revelstoke, who has been a member of the lower chamber for nineteen years, made his first speech in the House of Lords this week.

AYLESWORTH SAYS WEALTHY SHOULD HAVE ADVANTAGE

Minister of Justice Makes Extraordinary Statement of Opinion in House Regarding Appeals From Decisions of Railway Commission.

Ottawa, Nov. 26.—"Money talks, and the poor man must expect to get what's coming to him," was the doctrine preached in Canada's Parliament yesterday by the Minister of Justice. In opposing A. E. Lancaster's bill, which would go a long way towards helping the poor man by reducing the number of appeals from the decisions of the railway commission, Hon. Mr. Aylesworth said:

"In conferring upon a dissatisfied litigant, any right of appeal from this board, I fully concede an advantage given to the rich as against the poor, but that, after all, is only an advantage which in every walk of life the man of wealth has by reason of his wealth over the man who is without resource. No matter what piece of business a man might desire to enter into, if he is possessed of large means it is a great advantage to him, and I venture to question whether it would be right to take that advantage from him."

This statement, coming especially from a Minister of Justice, caused considerable adverse comment both in the House and in the lobbies.

Mr. Lancaster's annual onslaught on the railways began yesterday when his bill to amend the railway act came up for second reading. The first of these proposes to make clear that the railway commission, and it alone, shall have the right to adjudicate as to the kind of contract to be made between railways and shippers. He specified the case of a man who had shipped a consignment of horses valued at $16,000. The railway refused to accept them unless in the contract, the horses were given the value of only $1,200. The shipper had to accept this. The horses were destroyed in transit, and the shipper could only collect $1,200. He sued for the larger amount, but the Ontario Court of Appeal held that the form of the contract was sufficiently like the authorized contract to be legal.

The point involved is the practice of partial contracting out of damages in return for a lower rate. Mr. Lancaster seeks to obtain for the shipper power to choose whether he can pay the higher rate for partial liability, and he wants the railway commission to be the only court which can pass upon such matters. Hon. Mr. Graham consented to the second reading.

The second bill is intended to reduce the number of appeals from the railway commission to the Supreme Court. It would restrict the time within which appeals can be taken to one month, and also confine appeals to doubtful questions of law.

Hon. A. B. Aylesworth did not think that the judgment of lawyers would support anything approaching the abolition of the Supreme Court. He admitted that appeals gave a great advantage to the wealthy, but he was not sure that that advantage should be taken away. The bill was sent to the railway committee.

Mr. Lancaster's third bill was thrown out after a vote had been taken, the first of the session. The Government mustered 87, and the Opposition 53, giving a majority of 34. This bill sought to free municipalities from paying any of the expense of protecting railway level crossings, unless there was an agreement between the company and the corporation approved of by the railway board.

Mr. Graham's chief argument against the bill was that the present act, which was passed last year, should be given a chance to work out.

As soon as the division on Mr. Lancaster's third bill was taken, Mr. Graham moved the six months' hoist for Mr. Northrup's bill to amend the railway act providing for a reference to the railway commission of complaints as to the failure of railways to live up to contracts made with the Government.

CAN COLLECT ON INSURANCE

London, Nov. 26.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—A despatch from St. Petersburg says the supreme prize court has awarded the British-America Insurance Co. of Toronto £1,393 and the Western Assurance Co., Toronto £11,621, and the New Zealand Insurance Co., £16,696 in connection with the cargo of the Ikhona, rammed by the cruiser Terets in June, 1905.

The Ikhona, owned by the British India Steam Navigation Company, was rammed and sunk by the Russian cruiser Terets in the China Seas in June, 1905. The Canadian companies mentioned in the cable were interested in the loss on cargo by insurance placed with their London branches.

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 26.—Hon. Richard McBride's railway policy is good enough for British Columbia, and the provincial elections yesterday, on that issue, have resulted in his triumphant return by a greatly increased majority in the Legislature. Indeed, at midnight, there is no Liberal regarded as "safe."

The standing of the parties in the last House was: Conservatives 26, Liberals 13, Socialists 3.

As far as is known now, the returns show:

Conservatives	24
Liberals	0
Socialists	2

Premier McBride retains his seat in Victoria and also carries Yale, where he defeats Henderson, (Lib.), the recent member. In Victoria, the Premier had opposing him John Oliver, leader of the Opposition. Oliver is also reported defeated in Delta, by F. J. Mackenzie. His last majority was 169.

Hawthornthwaite, the Socialist leader, is also re-elected in Nanaimo.

Hon. W. J. Bowser, in Vancouver, defeats F. C. Wade, K.C., (Lib.). The complete returns in Vancouver show: Conservatives—Bowser, 5,411; McGuire, 4,776; McGowan, 4,491; Watson, 4,131; Tisdale, 4,080. Liberals—Senbier, 4,001; Wade, 3,980; McDonald, 3,941; Campbell, 3,390; Stables, 3,350.

Cranbrook: T. Cavan (Con.) leads Dr. J. H. King (Lib.) by large majority. King was the late member with a majority of 86.

Fernie: Ross (Con.) 738. Fisher (Lib.), 547. Harrington (Soc.), 477.

Grand Forks: Miller (Con.) wins. The seat was held by McInnes (Soc.), with 68 majority.

Greenwood: J. R. Jackson (Con.) elected by 57 majority over A. Macdonald. Naden (Lib.) was last member with 27 majority.

Nanaimo: J. Hawthornthwaite, (Soc.) leader, re-elected over A. F. Planta (Con.).

Nelson:—Harry Wright (Con.), 570; E. A. Crease (Lib.), 326; Mathewson, (Soc.), 139. Dr. Hall (Lib.) late member with a majority of 5.

Richmond: Hon. F. L. Carter Cotton (Con.), re-elected over J. W. Farris (Lib.).

Rossland: W. R. Braden (Con.) 328; English (Lib.) 219; Casey (Soc.) 160.

Slocan: W. Hunter (Con.), re-elected over J. S. Harris (Lib.), and W. Davidson, (Soc.).

Victoria: Four Conservatives re-elected: Hon. Richard McBride, Fred. Davey, H. F. Behasen and H. B. Thomson.

Westminster, T. Gifford (Con.) re-elected by 267 majority over J. J. Johnson (Lib.) and W. Dood (Soc.).

Yale: Hon. Richard McBride (Con.) elected, defeating S. Henderson (Lib.), the late member, who had 82 majority.

Ymir: J. H. Schofield (Con.) has large majority over A. M. Oliver (Soc.).

NO NEED OF WORRY

(Christian Guardian.)

"Sometimes it is claimed that the Church of Rome has changed its views in regard to the treatment of heretics. How much those views have changed may perhaps be gathered from a book by Father Lepicier, Professor of Sacred Theology at the Propaganda College in Rome. In that book occurs a passage which is translated as follows;—Further, it cannot be denied that the church, absolutely speaking, has the right to put heretics to death, even if they have come to repentance." To those of us who are, with true Christian charity, dubbed heretics, it must be confessed, this does not sound as though Rome had changed. We wonder what The Catholic Register thinks of this sentiment! If the church has the right to put heretics to death, then we are left alive solely because the hierarchy is merciful. We may be forgiven if the more ignorant amongst us think the lack of power has something to do with this exercise of mercy."

There will never again be any putting of heretics to death or burning of witches. The first church, Protestant or Catholic, that would try that would probably go skyward. This is the age of dynamite, and while we explosive for humane purposes, the explosive for humane prpuoses, the first man that lays a hand on a worthy and decent citizen with a view to sending him to Heaven via the compulsory route will experience, with general approval, the sudden displeasure of "the people." It is useless, therefore, for journals to dwell upon this point. It is only bringing up the memory of such fiends as Cotton Mather, who was the cause of the violent death of 300 women and the author of a book of instructions in finding witches. All that old-fashioned wild talk has gone and gone forever. People have a right to their own opinions, so far as humanity goes, and they will be protected in the exercise of that right by the community at large in the midst of which they live and move. The Guardian need not worry.

IT HAS A BAD FLAVOR

The Mail and Empire.

Some of the journalistic agencies of the Ottawa Government are justifying Sir Wilfrid Laurier's position on the subject of participation in Imperial defence by citing the attitude of Australia. That Commonwealth, we are told is not going to bind itself to employ its navy in support of the Empire. But this explanation is fallacious. Australia in her offer to contribute towards Imperial defence stated definitely that "in time of war or emergency, or upon a declaration by the Senior Naval Officer representing the British Government that a condition of emergency exists, all the vessels of the naval force of the Commonwealth shall be placed by the Common wealth Government under the orders of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty."

The process by which the transfer to the Admiralty is to be effected is stated in the Australian memorandum. Each Australian commander is to have instructions to the effect that upon the official declaration to him that a state of war or emergency exists, he shall place himself immediately under the orders of the Senior Naval Officer representing the British Government. There can be no doubt then as to the Australian position. Seeing that Great Britain is actually contributing in case towards the maintenance of the Australian unit, no one would expect that Australia would reserve to herself the right to abandon Empire defence should war be declared. Such a position on the part of the Commonwealth would be inexcusable; and certainly the Imperial authorities would not pay the subsidy were it to be insisted upon. Our position, or rather the position assumed by the Ottawa Government, has not a pleasant flavor. A VERY GOOD EXPOSITION OF IT HAS BEEN GIVEN BY THE TORONTO GLOBE, AN ORGAN WHICH SPEAKS FOR THE MINISTERS. "IT MUST NOT BE TAKEN FOR GRANTED," SAYS THAT PAPER, "THAT CANADA STANDS READY TO VOLUNTEER FOR ANY QUARREL IN WHICH BRITAIN MAY BECOME INVOLVED." Thus we are shown as prepared to stand aloof. "The sending of the South African contingents was significant of Canada's loyalty to Imperial interests, but it did not mean that any war, or even the South African war under other conditions, would command Canada's support." Our relations to the Empire are thus said to be of such a character that if the enemy were at the gate we would be free to refuse to take part in the work of driving him off. While we are alleged to be at liberty to refuse to uphold the Empire, Britain is said to be absolved of all responsibility for us. Listen to the new doctrine; "And this question as against Britain has its Canadian counter-part. It ought to be said distinctly, and with emphasis, that Britain's obligation to share in quarrels of Canada's making is also nullified by self-government and self-respect. If Canadian politicians blunder into international conflicts, if Canadian capitalists become involved in aggressive foreign graft, if Canadian militarists succeed in picking a quarrel with their neighbors, no obligation of duty or of honor will rest with the British War Office. Canada's quarrel must be just and the issues at stake must be Imperial, otherwise it is no affair of the army or navy of Britain." So that the doctrine which is at the basis of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's principle of inaction, unless the merits of the war have been pronounced upon by our Parliament, works both ways. We may sit tight while the Empire is being smashed, and Great Britain may witness our destruction by a foreign force without intervening in our behalf.

Under such a system we have an Empire without cohesion or stability. Foreign nations enter into treaties offensive understanding, although we profess loyalty to the Crown. One of the King's dominions may be at war, it may even be fighting for its life, or against the efforts of the enemy to take it from the Empire; the other dominions may at the same time be neutral or perhaps hostile. Can anything be more ridiculous than this situation? Can anything be more calculated to invite aggression, and to bring the Empire to an end? Parliament ought to see to it that this movement against unity, this step towards division and separation, is not endorsed on behalf of the Dominion.

RACE AGAINST RACE

Still the French-Canadian people, their leaders and their journals, rejoice in the coming solidarity of the French-Canadian race. They are determined to set up race against race. There is no idea of yielding to the natural and logical course of events. They are determined that Great Britain shall not have anything to say in the management of Canada, her army, her navy or her affairs not agreeable to them. They are getting their way. They deny any form of Canadian nationality but their own. They hold out to us but one form of hope of union. We must all be French and Catholic. From time to time we have published articles from French journals clearly confirming this supposition:

From LaPatrie.

"When in June last the St. John Baptiste Society, of Montreal, proposed to group in a vast federation all the French Catholic associations, we congratulated them with our whole heart upon this excellent beginning. Our chief association responded to the idea and is shining as a centre of light and action upon all parts of our race in every corner of the country. Such a movement, inspired by a truly patriotic thought, cannot fail to succeed, and we are pleased to state that it is gaining ground every day. The latest bit of good news is the adhesion of the Alliance Nationale to the Catholic Federation.

"Our French-Canadian societies have every reason to unite. Without ceasing to maintain their individuality they can enlarge their field of operations. The Catholic Federation intends to group together all the Acadian and French-Canadian societies of Canada, and the United States, in order to defend and promote a common action the religious, national, social and economic interests of OUR RACE (Review capitals) both in Canada and the United States. What an admirable instrument of force this federation will be under certain grave circumstances as have arisen and will arise again in which we will have to defend our sacred rights! Instead of scattering our efforts they will be united in one unbreakable bundle."

Nice talk, all this, in a British country! Is it not plain that a conspiracy is brewing against British government in Canada! The attempt to foist upon this country the will of the French is worthy of attention. Perhaps English-speaking Canadians, also, have some rights, and in spite of the flamboyant appeals of some of these journals, when the time comes they will be taken care of.

The Ottawa Free Press published the King's telegram to Sir Wilfrid, which looks very like as if His Majesty thought he had better assure himself of Sir Wilfrid's devotion to the Empire.

Mr. A. C. Macdonald (South Toronto) moved for leave to introduce Bill (No. 22) to amend the Dominion Elections Act. He said: The Bill is a repetition of a Bill that I introduced last session. It has two provisions. One is to dispense with the $200 deposit now necessary to be made by a candidate. The other asks that the general election day throughout Canada be made a public holiday.

Motion agreed to, and Bill read the first time.

The only place in which the old Orthodox Protestant idea of the Bible is held to-day is in the Catholic Church. We had a few rash spirits, but they awoke one morning to find themselves without the breastworks and the white-robed sentinel in Peter's watch-tower uttered a solemn warning to the effect that the Sacred Scriptures must not be tampered with. Honest Protestants who still cling to the Bible, have only one of two alternatives left. They must either come into the Catholic Church which has crushed out Modernism within their own fold, or they must remain as they are and see their sole rule of faith, the Bible, torn to pieces by those whom they look up to as guides and leaders.—Catholic Register.

STOLE FREELY IN HOTEL AT HAVELOCK

Havelock, Nov. 25.—A woman and two youngsters arrived in town one morning last week and put up at a local hotel. They left after dinner, and soon after their departure a commercial traveller came to the proprietor and reported the loss of an umbrella from his room. Another reported the loss of his nightshirt and the chambermaid the abstraction of towels and soap from the bedrooms. On examination being made, several articles of fancy work, table covers, etc., were found missing from the parlor, and it was quite evident that a thief had been busy. No trace of the woman could be found until the local express was about leaving for Tweed, when she was discovered on the train. The proprietor of the hostlery rushed on board and confronted the woman, who had the traveller's umbrella on her lap. He secured that piece of property without a word of demur, as the train pulled out. A telegram was sent to the police at Tweed to arrest her, but the conductor reported that she had gotten off at Tiffin station.

SIGNALS OF DISTRESS

Peterboro People Should Know How to Read and Heed Them

Sick kidneys give many signals of distress.

The secretions are dark, contain a sediment.

Passages are frequent, scanty, painful.

Backache is constant day and night.

Headaches and dizzy spells are frequent.

The weakened kidneys need quick help.

Don't delay! Use a special kidney remedy.

Booth's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys, backache and urinary disorders. Peterborough evidence proves this statement.

Mrs. Geo. Hawes, of 857 Water St., Peterborough, Ont., says:

"I suffered for some time with many painful and annoying symptoms of kidney trouble, and although I had tried many remedies and doctors, found little or no relief. My back was weak and a dull, bearing down pain had settled across the small of it and extended into my shoulders and around my sides. I was weak and languid, and the least exertion would tire me out. Dizzy spells were frequent and often I would awake with a severe headache. I tried Booth's Kidney Pills through an advertisement at McDermid & Jury's pharmacy and soon found them to benefit me. I continued their use, and in a comparatively short time I was as well and strong as ever, and without a symptom of the painful and longstanding disease.'

One load of choice export steers, 1400 lbs. each, was sold by Maybee & Wilson, at $6.50 per cwt., being the highest price on either market for several weeks. These cattle were brought on the market by Newton Hill of St. Mary's, Ont. T. Connor bought about a load of export bulls at $3.25 to $4.50.

Butchers.

George Rowntree bought 600 butchers' cattle for the Harris Abattoir Co. as follows: Steers and heifers, $4.10 to $5.35; cows, $1.50 to $4.40; bulls, $2.50 to $4.40 per cwt.

Stockers and Feeders.

Harry Murby reports a good trade for the good quality steers with weight, of which there was a scarcity. The light steers also sold higher; farmers and dealers having to take them when they could not get the better class of steers. Mr Murby bought 400 steers as follows: Best steers, 900 to 1000 lbs. each, $4 to $4.60; best steers, 800 to 900 lbs. each, at $3.75 to $4.15; Best stockers, 600 to 700 lbs. each, at $3.40 to $3.80 per cwt.

Milkers and Springers.

There was a strong market as has been the case for some time. Prices ranged from $35 to $65 each.

Veal Calves.

Good to choice veal calves were in demand. Prices for all classes ranged from $3 to $7 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts were large and prices steady to firm. Ewes of good quality, $3.90 to $4; culls and rams, $2.50 to $3 per cwt.; lambs, $5.50 to $6 per cwt., or an average of $5.85 per cwt.

Hogs.

Mr. Harris reports selects fed and watered, at $7.75, and $7.40 to $7.50, f.o.b., cars at country points.

British Cattle Markets.

LONDON, Nov. 25.—Liverpool and London cables for cattle are steady, at 12c to 13½c per lb. for live cattle, dressed weight, refrigerator beef slow, at 10c to 10½c per lb.

New York's Mammoth Proposal.

New York, Nov. 26.—Proposals for one of the most remarkable pieces of engineering work ever undertaken were placed before the New York board of estimates yesterday. The plans involve the expenditure of nearly $50,000,000 for the building of a great subterranean aqueduct 300 feet below the streets of the city for the purpose of distributing the water supply which in a few years will be available from the Catskill reservoir. The aqueduct, fourteen feet in diameter, for the part of its twenty-mile stretch would be bored through solid rock.

Can Control Artificial Eye.

Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 26.—The successful transplantation of fatty tissue from the abdominal wall to the eye-socket of Peter Rothgery, patient at the city hospital, was announced last night by Dr. A. E. Ibershoff. The tissue was used as the base for setting of an artificial eye, which is now susceptible to precisely the same control as to movement as the living eye.

Mrs. Robinson In Penitentiary.

Kingston, Nov. 26.—Mrs. Robinson, the farmer's wife from Warren, Ont., whose sentence of death for causing the death of three illegitimate infants, was commuted to ten years, arrived yesterday afternoon. Her husband is serving a 28 years' term.

Sent East In Irons.

Winnipeg, Nov. 26.—Max Vander Guylite, a Belgian, 41 years of age, was sent east in irons by the immigration authorities to be deported. He was deliberately caught in the business of importing girls from Europe for immoral purposes.

Treasurer Is Missing.

Montreal, Nov. 26.—E. H. Snodeker, treasurer of the Citizens' Good Government Association, of the Tuberculosis Institute, and a host of charitable organizations, is being sought by the police on the charge of embezzlement.

Bible Student's Suicide.

Chicago, Nov. 26.—Eluding his room mate and shouting a frantic "good-bye" Wm. F. McCormack, 31 years old, a student at the Moody Biblical Institute here, jumped from a third story window of the institute dormitory yesterday.

Gets His Reward.

Brantford, Nov. 26.—Albert E. Harley has been appointed collector of customs for Brantford. He is president of the Brantford Liberal Association. The salary is $1,800.

John Caldwell, of Pittsburg, treasurer of the Westinghouse Air Brake Co., is dead.

THE SHORT ROUTE TO Gow Ganda

Getting into Gow Ganda this winter will be made easier, as the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway will in a few days have steel laid to Gow Ganda Jct., which is 31 miles north of Sellwood Jct., 64 miles North of Sudbury and 320 from Toronto.

The Gow Ganda Transport Company are building a good team road from Gow Ganda Jct. that will be much shorter and a great improvement over the road used last year.

Maps of the route, also freight, passenger and express tariffs are in course of preparation and an announcement will be made shortly of the service and all arrangements regarding the handling of the traffic.

IVY CRASKE IS PREMIER DANSEUSE AT SEVENTEEN

Still Loves Dolls and Misses Her Pug Dog—"I Just Feel Happy and Forget Everything When I Dance," She Says.

New York, Nov. 26.—Ivy Craske, the youngest premiere danseuse in the world, is to appear next week at the Metropolitan Opera House. So much has been said about her wonderful fascination and grace that I could hardly believe this slender English maid, with the soft voice and shy eyes, was really the one who had captivated Europe. She was as utterly a child, with her rose leaf complexion and gold tipped curls, gathered together in the back with a wide black ribbon, as if she had just stepped out of a convent school. Her aunt, with whom she is living while over here, answered my puzzled look with a smile.

"Ivy is really only a child, though she has been on the stage for five years," she said. You see, as soon as she has finished her dancing she always has been promptly taken home. She has never been out unchaperoned."

CAN TELL FUNNY STORIES.

Like most English girls Ivy is very fond of sport. Dancing is by no means her only accomplishment. She plays the piano well and has a very sweet voice, which would quickly win her recognition if she had no other talent. She is always smiling and has the knack of telling funny stories in a droll way that convulses her listeners.

"What do you think of when you dance?" I asked.

"Why, I just hope that I'm going to please people," she answered simply. Then she answered eagerly; "But when I have started I forget everything and just feel happy, so happy, and it seems as if the music were just part of myself."

Her eyes are the bluest I have ever seen, just the tint of an April sky after a shower, and as she talked of the art she loved they deepened, until I caught my breath at the witchery and beauty that looked out of them.

Suddenly she gave a little cry of delight. She had espied some photographs of toys which I had laid on the table.

"Isn't it a love!" she exclaimed, pointing to a doll that was the proud possessor of "thirty eyes"—the latest novelty in dolldom. And it really was a love. I had felt a sneaking desire for that doll myself.

PREFERRED DOG TO DOLL.

But the next picture put dolly's nose hopelessly out of joint, for it had a woolly puppy in it that you could swear was real.

—"Then you like dolls?" I asked.

"I just love them," she answered, but I haven't any now."

"Would you rather have the doll or the dog?" I asked.

For a moment she hesitated, then said: "I'd rather have the dog. You see I have a real one at home—a pug, named Wags, and I miss him."

So the fate of the woolly puppy was sealed at once. May he prove as faithful a guardian as Wags!

As we talked, Ivy's aunt had stepped out. Now she appeared with a delightful tray of goodies and some real English tea. Served on a set of old Sevres ware—an heir loom of quaint design—this English touch, offered with real English hospitality, gave the crowning touch of the homelike atmosphere surrounding the girl.

Her sister, a girl of unusual beauty, who strongly resembles Lina Cavalieri, joined us. The aunt, who is a very young appearing woman, seemed more like another sister than an aunt. "They haven't a bit of respect for my dignity," she complained. "Really, they seem quite to forget I am their aunt." But the look of affection that accompanied her words showed how close the sympathy was between them.

"I suppose you have your hands full," I suggested, "especially where the boys are concerned?"

BOYS TALK LIKE OLD MEN.

"Oh, the boys!" She raised her hands in mock horror.

"Don't you like our American boys, then?"

"Yes, indeed, I do. They are really dears. But they act and talk like old men—even the very young ones—and they are so naughty, really sometimes I would like to smack them."

After the tea Ivy showed me her dance. You will have to see her yourself to know the utter sweetness and charm of her. The costume for her debut is Russian. It is a richly brocaded cloth of gold, studded with turquoises. As I watched I could not help wondering what the future held for her. Many a dancer with far less beauty, youth or charm has enslaved princes and rulers alike. Some have tripped their way into the proudest houses on earth.

If we could lift the veil of her future, what marvellous tale should we read? I wonder.

PAINTERS PLEASED WITH CONVENTION

Many Delegates to the Convention Here Express Thanks for the Way they Were Entertained

Ald. G. H. Duncan, secretary of the Master Painters' Association of Peterborough, has received letters from many parts of the continent from delegates who attended the Master Painters convention in Peterborough last summer. They all speak highly of the way they were entertained in Peterborough and express thanks for the kindness shown them. They were greatly pleased with the convention and hope that they will be able to visit Peterborough again in the near future. One of the letters is from Detroit and another is from Boston.

Waterloo is to have a new G.T.R. station.

MOURNING ETIQUETTE.

Correct Observances When There Is a Death In the Family.

Under no conditions should observance of etiquette be omitted at the time of a death in the family of a friend, for persons in bereavement are particularly sensitive, and a slight indication of remembrance will prevent hurt feelings.

Immediately on hearing of the death one of two things may be done. If the acquaintance is a formal one it is sufficient to leave a visiting card at the door or to mail one so that it will be received without delay. Nothing need be written, although there are persons who make a point of putting the word "Condolences" above the name. In either case the card is put into a small envelope and addressed with the name of the husband and wife in the case of the bereaved woman being married or to the woman alone should she be a spinster.

If there are more than two women in the family, as two or three sisters, the envelope should have the address of "The Misses Smith," for example. The persons are not asked for, the card literally being left.

If the acquaintance is an informal one it is customary to write a note as soon as the bereavement is known. It is intended that sympathy and remembrance shall be conveyed, and it is not necessary that the communication shall be long. Such a note might read:

> My Dear Mrs. Smith—We are distressed to hear of the sad loss you are going through, and both Mr. Brown and myself wish so much we might lighten the burden that has fallen. Our associations with your sister (or brother or mother) were so pleasant that we feel a personal grief and realize something of what you are going through.
> Believe me, with deepest sympathy,
> MARY ELLEN BROWN.

If, with the publication of the death notice, there is a request that flowers shall not be sent the wish should be scrupulously observed, no matter how strongly one is tempted to disregard it. To send flowers to the living at such a time is a charming act and shows special thought. If they may also go for the funeral they should not be sent until the day set for the funeral. Any kind is considered suitable, and a visiting card must always go with them. Nothing should be written on the card.

As it is expected that such tokens shall be acknowledged later, the services of an intimate friend may be called into use at that time. Orders should be given that all flowers brought must be taken to one person, who opens them, saving the cards. These are kept together and given over later into the hands of her who is to acknowledge their receipt. Only by adopting this method can confusion be avoided.

Within a few weeks of the funeral those in bereavement must acknowledge all cards, flowers and notes. When one can afford to have an engraved form the replies are, of course, simplified. When they cannot it is permissible to take one's visiting card and write below the name, "Sincere thanks for the sympathetic thoughts."

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

One-half cupful of black coffee containing a tablespoonful of lemon juice will often cure sick headache.

A glassful of lemonade without sugar in which one-fourth of a teaspoonful of soda is dissolved will often cure bilious headache.

Henna stain is said to be harmless. It will cause brown hair to take on slightly auburn tints. Make a strong brew of the dried leaves and apply both liquid and paste, washing the hair before the application and again afterward.

Stretching exercises of the throat and neck will reduce a double chin permanently. Hold the chin as far up as it will go and with your finger tips massage it with a downward motion. Pushing the lower jaw in and out is also good. Once or twice a week is often enough for such heroic treatment.

The girl with unequal hips, the commonest of afflictions, may cure them if the inequality be not too far advanced by a ten minute exercise daily. Bring the knee on the larger side up to the chest and lower it again, all the while standing as nearly erect as possible. Do this twenty or thirty times each day.

A physician says that he knows of many persons who have taken sea voyages and avoided the usual seasickness by eating freely of salt mackerel, dried salt fish or dried beef. One of the greatest human comforts to the voyager known as the thin blooded creature, always cold on a steamer, is to have flannel foot warmers, also a blanket kimono to put on over the night clothes at night, when cold is so noticeable. Those who are not seasick are often sick from the cold.

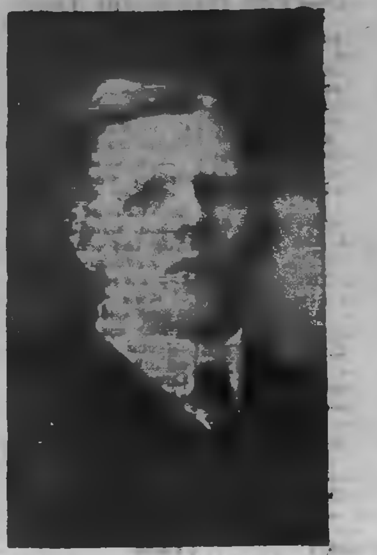
Should the eyes feel heavy they may often be freshened by bathing with weak salt water, either hot or cold. This can do no harm and by relieving strained conditions will frequently improve the luster. One woman says she has used a little orange juice in her eyes for years without injuring them. A few drops are inserted in the eye with a dropper. After the first smart the eyes are brighter and clearer. As this might be injurious to other women, though not harmful in itself, it should not be used without the advice of a physician.

Same Old Story.

In Russia they take it for granted that a woman can't keep a secret from her husband. If a woman is employed in the postal telegraph service there she is forbidden to marry outside that department, the theory being that she would tell her husband the contents of the telegrams.

In the three Nova Scotia bye-elections yesterday one Conservative was returned.

Why Stanfield's Make Underwear



Up to 20 years ago, most everyone considered that all Underwear—no matter how well cut and made—would shrink and harden.

In those days, the makers were working on the wrong idea. They were trying to find a way to finish Underwear so that it would not shrink, instead of trying to find a way to get the shrink out the wool before the yarn went to the knitting machines.

The late C. E. Stanfield—who knew wool as only a man can know it who studies it from the sheep's back to the wearer's back—gave his attention to the problem for years.

Living in Nova Scotia, he soon realized that woolen underwear, and the best of pure woolen underwear, was the only kind that would and could protect the Canadian against the rigorous Canadian Winters. He found that as underwear was then made, he could not make woolen underwear that would not shrink, mat and harden. He devoted himself to this problem and after many years of experimenting, he finally discovered a method by which he could take the shrink out of the wool before the garments were knitted.

This method, improved and perfected, has made possible the immense business of Stanfields Limited, with a larger output of their special classes of Underwear than any other factory in Canada.

The Stanfields make underwear today because Canadian people find Stanfield's Underwear the most comfortable, the most durable, and the warmest for its weight.

The Stanfields are making more underwear every year because the buying public demands more of it. Popularity is a good test of quality.

In 3 standard weights—Light (Red Label), Medium (Blue Label) and Heavy (Black Label) and 17 other weights and qualities to suit the needs and requirements of every man and woman.

The best dealers everywhere handle Stanfield's Underwear. Catalogue showing styles, and sample of fabric, sent free for your address.

WANTS SOCIETY TO MAINTAIN HER

Lady States it Will Only Require $37 per Month

Ottawa, Nov. 25.—Have plenty of nerve; it is the way to get on in the world.

This is probably what a lady who to-day wrote to John Keane, of the city charity office, thought. She wanted the officials to keep her—and sent in an itemised account intimating that it would mean the little outlay of $57 a month. The itemised bill showed such items as $9 for rent, and a sum for fuel. So far as can be learned there was no estimate for dress goods or for a Christmas turkey; but it is safe guessing that the officials—while they want to help those who are really in need—will not spend any $57 per month on the lady.

THE DEATH OF H. W. O'FLYNN

Became Ill at His Home in New York Last Summer---Passed at Madoc

Cut off by the Grim Reaper almost at the beginning of a useful and brilliant career, the death of Mr Herbert W. O'Flynn, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. O'Flynn, of this village, may be regarded as a more than usually sad event. He was suddenly stricken at his residence in New York last summer, spent some months under the best professional care in Toronto, and came to his old home in Madoc a few weeks ago, gradually sinking until death came on Monday morning last. He was 28 years of age.

Herbert, or "Hubby," as he was popularly called by his Madoc friends, was born in this village and educated in our Public and High schools until he entered Toronto University. After graduating from the university his natural talents called for a wider scope and he quickly secured a lucrative and responsible position in New York. Here he married some five years ago, and he leaves a widow and young daughter in that city.

Although small of body and frame he was a noted athlete, and one of the most skillful lacrosse and hockey players in Canada. He learned the game in Madoc, developed into the highest ranks during his university course, and it was but natural when he located in New York that he was at once taken on the famous team of the "Crescents" of that city, and was their acknowledged star player. The hard training necessary to "make good," combined with his business requirements in that bustling city, is no doubt responsible for the physical collapse that eventually caused his early death.

The parents, his sister Miss Helen and brother Mr. Norman O'Flynn, have the universal sympathy of a large circle of friends and acquaintances.—Madoc Review.

The stock on Norman Brock's farm near Strathroy will be quarantined for three months, as hydrophobia developed there.

Five persons were burned to death in a tenement fire in Brooklyn yesterday.

NO ACTION IN ACKERMAN APPLICATION

The Manufacturers Committee met last night and took up the application of B. F. Ackerman & Son for a fixed assessment. It was decided to take the matter up more fully with Mr. Ackerman before coming to any decision. It is likely that the Ackerman factory will be enlarged in the near future owing to the increase in the firm's business in the Canadian West.

Ald Gillespie was in the chair and the others present were Mayor Rush and Ald. Duffus, Morrow and Hicks.

A kilted militia corps will be formed at Queen's University.

SNOW PLOUGHING TO BE DONE CHEAPER THAN LAST SEASON

Contracts Awarded at Meeting of Board of Works—Total Cost Will be $907.00 as Compared With $913.50 for Last Year—The Successful Tenderers.

The contracts for the removal of snow from the sidewalks of the city for 09-10 were awarded at a meeting of the Board of Works last night. For this work the city is divided into seven districts and there were tenderers for every division. The snow ploughing will be done for the coming winter for $907, which is $6.50 cheaper than last year, when the tenders totalled $913.50.

The successful tenderers were as follows, the prices and the figures for last year being given;—

NO. 2 DISTRICT.
Luke Milaney	$189 00
Last year	187 00
NO. 3 DISTRICT.
Jerry Carew	$129 00
Last year	150 00
DISTRICT NO. 4.
Nelson Rusaw	$145 00
Last year	125 00
DISTRICT NO. 5.
R. Nicholls	$139 000
Last year	127 50
DISTRICT NO. 6.
M. Rishea	$110 00
Last year	110 00
NO. 7 DISTRICT.
A. O'Brien	$100 00
Last year	114 00
NO. 8 DISTRICT.
B. Revoy	$ 95 00
Last year	100 00

Two of the tenders were received a day late, but it was decided on motion of Ald Duncan and Gillespie to consider them with the others, as the two tenderers, who were late, could have no means of ascertaining the figures sent in by the other tenderers. The members of the committee present were Ald. Phelan, chairman; Aldermen Duncan, Bradburn, Gillespie and Buller. The tenderers were as follows;—

NO. 2 DISTRICT.
J. Blodgett	$190 00
E. Flaherty	197 00
Luke Milaney	189 00
NO. 3 DISTRICT.
Garnett Innis	$139 00
J. Blodgett	170 00
Nelson Rusaw	148 00
Jerry Carew	129 00
George Foley	131 00
James A. Reid	155 00
P. O'Donnell	125 00
DISTRICT NO. 4.
Nelson Rusaw	$145 00
NO. 5 DISTRICT.
R. Nicholls	$139 00
DISTRICT NO. 6.
Alfred Cummings	$130 00
M. Rishea	110 00
NO. 7 DISTRICT.
A. O'Brien	$100 00
B. Revoy	100 00
E. J. Ferguson	105 00
R. W. Mitchell	123 00
Bert Lee	123 00
NO. 8 DISTRICT.
B. Revoy	$ 95 00
P. J. Francis	92 00
E. J. Ferguson	117 00

Ald. Bradburn asked if all the tenderers were residents of the city.

Street Commissioner Evans said he thought they were.

Ald. Bradburn said that in letting the tenders the committee should be governed largely by the advice of the street commissioner. A dollar or two was nothing if the right man were secured.

The members of the committee agreed with the sentiments expressed by Ald. Bradburn and the Street Commissioner was consulted before the contract for each district was awarded. In connection with district No. 8 it was felt that Mr. Revoy should have it, although his tender was three dollars higher than that of Mr. Francis. Mr. Revoy gave satisfaction last year and was familiar with the work, and on these grounds it was decided to give him the contract.

THE DISTRICTS.

The location of the districts is as follows;—

No. 2 District—That part of city lying north of Dublin street, east of Bridgenorth road and Bethune street, south of boundary west of river.

No 3 District—That part north of Weller and Brock streets, west of Bethune street and Bridgenorth road, east of Monaghan road, south of north boundary.

No 4 District—That part north of Sherbrooke street, west of Bethune, east of Monaghan road, and south of Weller and Brock street.

No 5 District—That part lying north of Lansdowne street, west of Bethune and Park street, south of Lake street, east of Monaghan road, and south of and including both sides of Sherbrooke street.

District No. 6—That part north of Lansdowne street, east of Bethune and Park streets, south of Lake street, west of the river and south of and including both sides of Sherbrooke street.

No. 7 District—That part of the east ward south of Douro street.

No. 8 District—That part of the east ward north of and including both sides of Douro street.

The contractors are required to have the snow and slush removed from the sidewalks and footh paths before nine o'clock in the morning. In case of storm in day time the snow and slush must be removed as soon as possible.

A NEW ENCOURAGEMENT IS OFFERED BABY CHICKENS

The Peterborough Poultry Show is about as progressive as an energetic committee can make it. But it's not in the same division as Lindsay's yearly poultry exhibit and competition.

The Lindsay show, which opens on January 25th, offers prizes in several divisions for 1910 chickens. As the opening date would indicate the 1910 entries will not much more than have picked through their shells when they will have the distinction of being placed in the public gaze.

The Scugog prize list doesn't indicate whether or not this green class is a special kindergarten division or a baby show in connection with the yearly assembly of the feathered ones.

As there will be an incubator hatching at the Peterborough show which is to be held at the market hall on the 4th, 5th and 6th, the local hatch will be eligible to compete for the juvenile poultry honors.

NO SEWERS FOR THOSE OUTSIDE OF CITY LIMITS

Will the city build sewers to accommodate persons living just outside the boundary lines?

No work of this kind has been done in the past, but there was an application involving this principle before the Board of Works last night and no action was taken on it. The application was from a number of residents in the northern part of the city, one or two of whom live in Smith township. Ald. Bradburn said the matter was one for the whole Council to consider. If a sewer of this kind were built a precedent would be established and all requests of a similar nature would have to be granted. The city, Ald. Bradburn contended, was under no obligation to provide sewer accommodation for persons whose taxes went to another municipality. If they were provided with sewers they should pay to the city the difference between the taxes they paid to the township and what their taxes would be if their property was located in the city. Persons living just outside the city limits had the use of the city's walks and lights without paying anything for them.

An application for a sewer on Antrim street was left over till next spring as it would not be advisable to build the portion petitioned for.

HARVEST DINNER OF ST. LUKE'S AN ENJOYABLE AFFAIR

Most successful and enjoyable was the annual harvest dinner and entertainment of St. Luke's church held in the Foresters' Hall, Simcoe street, last night and much credit is due the Ladies' Aid Society for the able manner in which all the arrangements were carried out. Dinner was served from five to eight o'clock and the seats at the well-laden tables were all filled during this time by the large number who attended the affair. The ladies also held a sale of candies and fancy work, and the excellent programme, the numbers of which are given below, was carried out in a pleasing manner, Miss Charlotte English acted as accompanist during the evening.

MR. BROWN WILL HAVE TO REMOVE THE BOATHOUSE

In the action brought by the village of Lakefield to compel J. G. Brown, of the above place, to move his boathouse off Water street, judgment was given in the Non-Jury Sittings of the High Court before Mr. Justice Britton. Judgment was given in favor of the village, and Mr. Brown will have to remove the boathouse, which has caused all the trouble, and pay the village their costs. By the judgment the village gets all it asked, which was to have it declared that part of Water street was a public highway and under control of the village; an order compelling the defendant to remove his boathouse; an injunction restraining defendant from further obstructing and the costs of the action. A number of witnesses were heard on both sides, but the Judge, when giving judgment pointed out that the plaintiffs had clearly made a good case for the relief they sought. Mr. O. A. Langley has been solicitor for the village throughout the case, and Mr. Dumble, of Peterborough, for Mr. Brown. At the trial Mr. Kerr, of Peterborough, appeared with Mr. Langley for the plaintiffs.

COURT CASES AT LAKEFIELD

Judge Huycke Presided at Division Court Sitting.

Lakefield, Nov. 25.—Judge Huycke held a sitting of Division Court in the town hall, Thursday of last week. In several cases of garnishment judgment was given the plaintiffs, Mr. Langley appearing for plaintiffs in each case.

Pope v. Freeborn—An action brought for rent, to which the defendant pleaded that the plaintiff had agreed not to charge rent unless he repaired the premises, which defendant said he had not done. This the plaintiff denied. After a lot of witnesses had been heard the judge reduced the rent plaintiff claimed by $1.50 a month, plaintiff getting judgment for $38.00 and the costs of this and a former trial. O. A. Langley for plaintiff, G. W. Hatton for defendant.

Kelly v. Lawless.—This case was adjourned peremptorily until next court, the question of costs reserved until the case is heard. Plaintiff appeared with his witnesses and ready to go on but defendant was not there.

O. A. Langley for plaintiff, Bennet & Goodwill for defendant.

WILL PUT IT OVER THE MOON

Luna Will be Totally Eclipsed To-Night After Midnight—Interesting Sight

The moon will be totally eclipsed to-night after midnight. In a state of complete fullness she will retire from vision after midnight and for more than an hour her face will be completely hidden.

Luna's retreat will be the earth's dark shadow. Once before, this year, she sought obscurity while on duty. This was the night of June 3, when a total eclipse took place. It was unusual for her to act thus twice within so short a period.

At 2.11 o'clock Saturday morning the planet will enter the earth's shadow and be cut off, little by little, from the sun's rays. At 3.14 it will be entirely out of sight. At 4.36 it will begin to reappear, and at 5.38 will again be entirely visible.

"The eclipse will be well worth getting out of bed to look at," said an astronomical expert. "If the sky is not cloudy it should be an interesting sight, not of particular interest to science, however, for nothing new about the moon is likely to be revealed."

On December 12, when the relative positions of the earth and the moon with respect to the sun, will be reversed, there will be a partial eclipse of the sun. The moon will then go between the earth and the sun. The phenomena will not be visible in Canada, however, and only the people of New Zealand, Tasmania and other far southern lands will see it.

THE FUNNIEST FARCE YET

If You Really Want to Laugh, See "Billy" at the Grand Next Wednesday, Dec. 1st. Anglican Hymnal.

"Billy," direct from its long run at Daly's Theatre, New York, will be seen at the Grand Opera House next Wednesday, Dec. 1st, when the piece comes here under the direction of the Shuberts, with Edgar Atchison-Ely in the leading role.

In the words of the New York Sun, "Billy's Tombstones (from which "Billy" the three-act farce was taken) was such an uproariously funny sketch that many persons predicted to turn it from its original form into a three-act would ruin it. "The proof of the pudding is in the eating." If anyone can go to Daly's and see "Billy" without laughing until his sides ache—well, he ought to see a doctor.

"Billy's Tombstones," as the hero's false teeth are called in the family circle, were acquired as the result of an accident in a football game. Dreading to let the girl who he loves know that his four upper front teeth were not grown on the premises, Billy, when the fair Beatrice takes ship with her mother for Havana, also takes passage for himself and sister Alice, as an aid to help in keeping Beatrice from learning the awful truth. On the same ship, of course, is his deadly rival. Trouble begins at once. A heavily laden steward suddenly slams a door in Billy's face, whereupon his false teeth fall to the deck and are lost, consequently, as Billy cannot pronounce any word with an 's' or soft 'c' therein, and as his sweetheart's name is 'Beatrice' and her mother's 'Mrs. Sloane,' poor Billy has to sit by and see his rival gain ground. A new complication in the farce involves another set of false teeth which Billy in desperation steals from the stateroom of Mrs. Sloane. Accordingly she appears on deck whispering "Beatrith," "Beatrith," in a way to draw tears from the eye of a painless dentist. How Billy atones for his crime, makes his peace with the old lady, and regains his sweetheart, is too clever a climax to divulge.

The cast is composed of Edgar Atchison-Ely, Jane Marbury, Mrs. Stuart Robson, Marion Chapman, Frank Jones, Spottiswoode Aitken and fifteen others.

THE SHOVEL FACTORY

In another column will be found the advertisement of the sale of the premises, goods and effects of the Peterborough Shovel and Tool Co. It is to be hoped that this institution will be taken up by some of our local capitalists and be made a success of or that the premises may be secured for some other purpose. It would be a sad blow to the city to have these excellent premises idle and vacant.

THE PROPOSED NAVY

On Canada's naval preparations the Boston Transcript speaks editorially with good sense. It says;—

"Nor from the point of view of the naval strategist is a Canadian fleet other than a needless extravagance. In the event of Great Britain losing the command of the sea, the new battleships and cruisers constituting the Dominion's contingent would be easily-taken prizes of the victors. A power capable of triumphing over the British navy and so reaching the coast of the Dominion would have such a preponderance on the ocean that Canada's warships would be compelled to seek safety in port, and even there would not be exempt from the activity of an enterprising enemy. The plea of Australia, that its remoteness from the Mother Country renders a local army and a local navy essential as first lines of defence, does not hold good with regard to the Dominion, which is not more than five days' steaming distance from Great Britain, and so normally within the radius of British maritime protection."

It may be added that Australia, like New Zealand, has stretched itself a little further to the point of ordering Dreadnoughts as part of the great central empire-fleet. It has seen the vital necessity of doing so, of acceding to Great Britain's naval plans and to Great Britain's urgent request unless those plans and that request are to be turned down and out, as in the case of Canada, by a refusal to be part and parcel of the British empire. Nothing since Confederation has so aroused the antagonism of all true British-Canadians as Laurier's policy of separation and indefensible naval waste. Because the French-Canadians are determined to remain quasi-independent or as nearly independent of Britain's protecting arm as possible, while taking full advantage of it, are we to stand idly by and see Sir Wilfrid Laurier mar our plans and destroy our hopes and aspirations? Great Britain will not ask twice. We may rest assured of that, and unless this selfish and disloyal act is repudiated it will have committed us to a separation policy which we cannot correct, later on.

FIRST RECITAL OF BRAHMS TRIO

The Toronto News of last night says;—

The first recital of the Brahms Trio, at Conservatory Music Hall last evening, definitely establishes the new organization in Toronto as a highly competent exponent of chamber music. Miss Lina Drechsler Adamson, violin; Mr. George Bruce, 'cello, and Mr. Richard Tattersall, piano, artists of individual repute, compose the Trio, and by diligent rehearsal have made their ensemble work pleasing to a marked degree. There was a very real beauty in the chief work of the evening, Brahms Trio in B Minor, Opus 8, and effectively established the organization's claim to serious attention, and better numerical support than was evident last evening. The novelty of the Hurlstone number appealed rather more than its intrinsic musical composer value, for the works of the late English composer have yet to establish themselves. It afforded Mr. Bruce and Mr. Tattersall, however, a rare opportunity to exemplify their artistic powers, which they did with admirable effect. Mr. Tattersall's fine command of the resources of his instrument was clearly impressed during the playing of the Beethoven Trio in B Flat. It is to be hoped that the present season will witness many more such delightful evenings as the Brahms Trio last night proved themselves capable of affording.

TORONTO BOY MAKING GOOD

James Durkin is a name which is known from coast to coast, this clever man having played leading roles for a number of years, both in stock and on the road, and has also been leading support to some of the best of stars. At the present time he is one of the leading players in support of Theodore Roberts, in "The Barrier." He was for a long time leading man of the Fifth Avenue Stock Co., New York; of the Thanhouser Stock Co., Milwaukee; the College Theatre, Chicago, and was leading man of the New Theatre, in that city when it first started, three years ago. Besides this he has headed his own stock company in various places, always meeting with success, and for a time was with the late Richard Mansfield as his leading support. He is a native of Toronto, Can., although most of his professional career has been passed on this side of the line.

BUSY ON THE LINE

Largely Supplemented Gang Making Repairs to Local Bell Telephone System

The trouble department of the Bell Telephone Company is having a particularly busy time since the disorganizing storm of Monday night and the large gang of about forty men are making excellent progress in the work of repairs. Long distance communication of two direct lines to Toronto, one to Port Hope, one to Lindsay, one Young's Point and one N. A. T. line to Belleville and one to Campbellford also, has been established.

The rural lines are all out yet, but the city lines have practically all been repaired. By to-night all the city phones will be in working order.

The local repair gang is supplemented by twenty-five men or so from outside points.

HAS BEEN PROMOTED TO MONTREAL BRANCH

The following, which will be of interest to many in the city, is taken from the Gananoque Reporter:

Mr. T. W. Harper, for the past four years in the Bank of Montreal here, latterly teller, was promoted this week to the chief branch in Montreal, for which place he left yesterday morning. "Billy" was not only a favorite with the staff and bank's customers, but was generally popular, and his friends, while glad to note his advancement, regret his departure. A number went to the train to see him off, and presented him with a set of pipes. He is succeeded here by Mr. A. S. McMath, of Montreal.

SPORTING NEWS

A GENERAL BONSPIEL AND TWO-CLUB BONSPIEL ALSO

Will be Held by the Peterborough Curling Club This Year—Much Discussion Before Voting on the Motions—The Skips Chosen.

At the meeting of the Peterborough Curling Club called last night in the Bank of Montreal board room for the purpose of choosing skips for the coming year, the main business slated for the evening did not turn out to be the topic discussed at the greatest length. When the skips had been chosen other business of importance came in for consideration.

In the list of matters considered the question of holding bonspiels was prominently discussed, and there was a general controversy in which several curlers gave their opinions concerning the advisability of holding a general bonspiel, one in which outside clubs would compete with the local clubs, or, on the other hand, one or two club bonspiels for the benefit of the home club. Mr. R. N. Merritt made a motion to the effect that two club bonspiels, and as the reporter caught his motion, "without the bonspiel open to outside clubs." Mr. S. T. Medd voiced the sentiments of those favoring a general bonspiel, and when the motions were put to the meeting the first one carried, and there was a tie vote on the second. When the latter motion was again put to the meeting, the president preferring to have it disposed this way, in view of the favorable opinion expressed concerning it after the deadlock, it was carried overwhelmingly, and as a result there will be two club bonspiels and a general bonspiel held here this winter.

President W. G. Ferguson was in the chair, and Mr. J. H. Ferguson, the secretary, took the minutes of the meeting. There was a good attendance.

THE SKIPS SELECTED

The skips chosen were as follows: C. N. Brown, J. A. Connal, Dr. J. Malcolm McCollouch, W. G. Morrow, W. G. Ferugson, T. Brightman, Dr. Greer, R. Hicks, S. T. Medd, D. Davidson, R. Neill, T. F. Matthews, E. B. Clegg, J. H. Ferugson, W. J. Thompson, G. B. Stevenson, D. Fraser, G. H. Giroux, S. Ray, W. M. Laing, J. E. A. Fitzgerald, W. G. Read, W. F. Talbot, Dr. Eastwood, H. Foote, A. Moore, W. D. Campbell, T. Butler Yeates, Dr. Wightman, Rev. E. A. Pearson, R. M. Waddell and W. McIlroy.

The president, vice-president and Dr. Wightman were appointed a committee to look after the choosing of a caretaker.

The Schedule Committee was named as follows: Messrs. Laing, Foote and Giroux.

O'KELLY-CONNELLY MATCH A BEAUTIFUL EXPOSITION

The way of the transgressor is hard, whether it be in wrestling or anything else, and Con. O'Kelly and Pat Connolly certainly transgressed against etiquette of the dainty "rassling" game when they met in New York the other night. The following account of the match by Bob Edgun of the New York World would indicate that a rough and tumble fight would be more scientific:

Remember that old fable of the lion and the mouse—the one describing just how terribly afraid of the little mouse the great lion was, and how he wanted to quit and hide his face from the whole cruel world? Well, that was the way one champion wrestler of Ireland, "Con" (in quotes) O'Kelly, must have felt last night when he bumped against the little Pat Connolly, another claimant for the title—just like the overgrown, cowardly lion. Frank Gotch ought to be able to throw the two in the same ring, or, for that matter, clean out of the country, and never take a short breath in the effort.

"Both men are disqualified for not keeping strictly to Queensburry rules!" announced the disgusted referee, Tom Jenkins, or, at least, that was the way it sounded when he tried to tell us that the bout held last night in hte Grand Central Palace was off. For forty-seven minutes the worst attempts at wrestling ever seen any place in this easy country of ours had been going on beteen the rival had been goin gon between the rival Irish champions, and Tom, who knows the game to a science, could not stand for the weary, droll attempts of the two alleged wrestlers.

Pat Connolly appeared first on the mat. He was covered from neck to ankle in a long overcoat. "Con" followed shortly, clad in a long piece of drapery, usually called a bathrobe. He looked very much as Jim Jeffries did the night he sauntered into the ring to fight Gus Ruhlin. Probably "Con" had heard that Jeff was in the habit of chewing gum whenever he was about to undertake a doubtful job, and had decided to follow the manners of a real champion. Anyway, he had a hunk of gum large enough to choke any ordinary person, and all during the performance he chewed and chewed, just to show how unconcerned he was.

"CON" WAS ON THE SPOT

The first two minutes he spent on the floor in a sitting posture. Always in a sitting posture was "Con" when he connected with the canvas. Even when Pat became irritated at his inability to move "Con" from "that spot" and clouted the large one on the nose—even then "Con" continued placidly chewing his cud. Pat was put out. He grabbed the big duffer by the ear and jerked him to his feet.

"Con" pleaded with deaf and dumb signs to stolid Tom Jenkins, but Tom, who, by the way, is getting to be a great stickler for form ever since he went up to teach at West Point, gave O'Kelly the regular official stare and drove him bac kon to the mat. "Con" objected; he wanted to quit, and only for the pleadings of Manager Harvey would have crawled away from the scene of mimic conflict. At length Jenkins called off the bout.

Post mortem wrestling was again interred last night.

THE EXPECTED HAPPENED AND NOBODY GOT A FALL

As was predicted in yesterday's Review, Frank Gotch didn't win the big bout in Buffalo last night with Zbysco, thus leaving an opening for another match and a gate. A despatch says:

Buffalo Nov. 25.—Frank Gotch, tonight failed to gain a single fall from Zbysco, the Pole, in an hour and thereby lost the match, the conditions of which required Gotch to win two falls within the hour. The Pole displayed tremendous physical strength and an excellent knowledge of the game.

The usual challenges and counter-challenges were issued after the match.

BROKE TOE HOLD.

Another despatch says:

With Zbysco on the defensive, Gotch used up twenty minutes in working for his famous toe hold. When he secured it the foreigner easily broke it. Gotch gave up this effort, and with the Pole hugging the mat for most of the remaining time, tried hard for a hammerlock. He got it twice but the big Pole broke it both times. In the last minute Zbysco assumed the aggressive, but could not get behind Gotch.

Zbysco said:—"I can beat this man in a straight match."

RUNNING

Boston, Nov. 25.—Over rain soaked roads, James H Maloney, of St. Stephen's Total Abstinence Society, of Worchester, won the New England amateur ten-mile championship at Brookline to-day. Raymond Edward, of the Hartford Athletic Club was second of the field of 22 to finish. Maloney's time was 54.33 1-5.

ROLLER HOCKEY TEAM BEATEN AT LINDSAY

The Brock street roller hockey team went to Lindsay last night and played a game with a team from that place. It was a well-contested struggle, the home team winning by 4—1, leading at the turn by 2—0. "Bill" Stoddard refereed the match and gave satisfaction. A large crowd witnessed the game. The teams were as follows:—

Lindsay		Peterborough
	Goal
Primeau		Clute
	Point
Lennison		Godfrey
	Cover
Parrinton		Nelson
	Rover
Higginbotham		Thompson
	Centre
Begg		Smith
	Right Wing
Murray		Halpany
	Left Wing
Scott		Kenneally

The Lindsay team will play a return game here next Thursday evening.

THE RING

San Francisco, Nov. 25.—"If I can't make the middleweight limit any more I'm still champion of the light heavyweights. But I'm not going to meet Jim Flynn for the title. Let Tommy Burns come ahead."

This was the statement made by Stanley Ketchel, who is still worrying over the death of Willus Britt.

"I think I'll take a long ocean voyage," he said "I've not been feeling in the best of shape since Willus died. I believe a good long trip would do me good. McCarey has offered me a bout with Flynn at his club, in Los Angeles, for New Year's afternoon. But I don't think I'll take it. As for the middleweight title, it can go wherever it pleases."

Ketchel says he is especially anxious to meet Burns and show who is really the better man.

"There's been a lot of comment about it taking Johnson longer to knock Burns than it did to stop me," he said, "and I don't think the conditions are understood. I was overtrained and nervous in my go with Johnson. I was far lighter than Burns was when he stepped into the ring with Johnson. If Burns really wants a match for the light heavyweight honors, I'll take it on.

"I won't have any new manager. That's another thing I want to say positively. There's been a lot of talk about my putting myself in the hands of two or three men here. I don't intend to do it. I think I can run my own affairs."

Ketchel has agreed to fight Billy Papke again at 165 pounds ringside.

Just to show how deadly in earnest Jim Jeffries is in the matter of fitting himself to regain the heavyweight title for the white race, the story is told of a little private wager with Cy Myrick, the man who went to Carlsbad and Paris with Jeff, and he has been his "side kick" for many years. He is one of the few men who can advise Jeff with any hope of having the big fellow pay any attention to kindly suggestions.

Myrick knew that Jeff liked sparkling wines, and he also knew that it was the worst possible thing for a man to take who is about to start off on a season of hard training. So Myrick argued the point with Jeff, not forgetting to prod him on his inability to keep strictly away from the bubbling stuff. Jeff made an offer to back his word, and it was finally agreed that Myrick would bet Jeff $500 tha the couldn't keep his pledge, which was to extend from the time they left for Europe until Johnson was put away for keeps.

Jeff grabbed at the bet. Myrick allowed him the privilege of having a single stein of beer at his noon meal, but if he so much as sipped a glass of wine he was to lose his money. Mrs. Jeffries was appointed referee, and Myrick promised her half the wager if she detected her little Jamesie in the act of sneaking a cup of the fizzy stuff.

GAME WARDEN BUSY AROUND FENELON FALLS

Fenelon Falls, Nov. 25.—Constable Jones having reason to believe that illegal trapping and shooting was being done at Burnt River, went out there on Friday to investigate. In one place he visited he found four muskrat skins and in another twenty-one. The skins were confiscated. As game warden during the season Mr. Jones was empowered to impose fines, and he accordingly taxed the possessor of the twenty-one pelts $15, and the other man $10, with costs in each each case of 45 cents. These are light penalties, considering what might have been inflicted had the officer wished to be severe, but they will serve as a warning. Future offenders will be almost sure to get a much heavier fine if caught, and the chances are they'll be caught, as both Constable Jones and the department are determined to enforce the law.

ENGLISH CENSOR IS RETAINED

By the Joint Committee of Lords and Commons

London, Nov. 26.—The joint committee of the House of Lords and the House of Commons, in England, which was appointed in July to inquire into the censorship of the drama, has reported in favor of continuing the censorship and of extending the authority of the censor so as to include also a supervision over music halls.

The report recommends that it shall be legal to perform an unlicensed play, leaving it to the public prosecutor to indict the producers and authors of indecent plays.

The report purposes placing the licensing of theatres and music halls under identical regulations, and the licensing of theatres under the jurisdiction of the London Common Council instead of the Lord Chamberlain.

The effect of the report will be to give much greater freedom in the production of dramas of advanced ideas and to permit plays dealing with religious subjects, which hitherto have been forbidden, on the English stage.

THE PRUDENTIAL HAS THE STRENGTH OF GIBRALTAR
Insuring $1,500,000,000

The Prudential

The Pioneer of Industrial Insurance in America.

The Prudential introduced this form of insurance into this country, and practiced it for four years earlier than the oldest of its competitors.

This system of insurance makes it possible for every healthy person—man, woman or child—between the ages of one and seventy, to obtain a policy of life insurance.

The premiums are collected by the Agents of the Company at the homes of the policyholders, and the payments being small and collected frequently, do not become a burden.

Death claims are paid immediately after due proof of death has been received.

The Prudential has a larger number of policyholders than has any other company of the same age in the world.

It issues the most liberal Industrial policy in this country.

The Prudential in its Ordinary Department, issues policies in amounts of $500 to $100,000, premiums upon which are payable annually, semi-annually, or quarterly.

In this department it issues various forms of Life and Endowment policies, embodying advantages that appeal to the different requirements of the numerous classes of applicants.

The BLACK BAG

By Louis Joseph Vance

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

But the time he took for deliberation was short. He had hoped to find a way to spare her by sparing Calendar, but momentarily he was becoming more impressed with the futility of dealing with her save in terms of candor—merciful, though they might seem harsh.

"I must tell you," he said, "that you have been outrageously misled, swindled and deceived. I have heard from your father's own lips that Mrs. Hallam was to pay him £2,000 for keeping you out of England and losing you your inheritance. I'm inclined to question, furthermore, the assertion that these jewels were your mother's. Frederick Hallam was the man who followed you into the Frognall street house and attacked me on the stairs. Mrs. Hallam admits that he went there to get the jewels. But he didn't want anybody to know it."

"But that doesn't prove"—

"Just a minute." Rapidly and concisely Kirkwood recounted the events wherein he had played a part subsequent to the adventure of Bermondsey Old Stairs. He was guilty of but one evasion. On one point only did he slur the truth. He conceived it his honorable duty to keep the girl in ignorance of his straitened circumstances. She was not to be distressed by knowledge of his distress, nor could he tolerate the suggestion of seeming to play for her sympathy. It was necessary, then, to invent a motive to excuse his return to No. 9 Frognall street. I believe he chose to exaggerate the inquisitiveness of his nature and threw in for good measure a desire to recover a prized trinket of no particular moment, esteemed for its associations, and so forth. But, whatever the fabrication, it passed muster. To the girl his motives seemed less important than the discoveries that resulted from them.

"I am afraid," he concluded the summary of the confabulation he had overheard at the skylight of the Alethea's cabin, "you'd best make up your mind that your father"—

"Yes," whispered the girl huskily and turned her face to the window, a quivering muscle in the firm young throat alone betraying her emotion.

"It's a bad business," he pursued relentlessly—"bad all round. Mulready, in your father's pay, tries to have him arrested, the better to rob him. Mrs. Hallam, to secure your property for that precious pet, Freddie, connives at if she doesn't instigate a kidnaping. Your father takes her money to deprive you of yours, which could profit him nothing so long as you remained in lawful possession of it, and at the same time he conspires to rob, through you, the rightful owners, if they are rightful owners. And, if they are, why should Freddie Hallam go like a thief in the night to secure property that's his beyond dispute? I don't really think you owe your father any further consideration."

He waited patiently. Eventually "No-o!" the girl sobbed assent.

"It's this way: Calendar, counting on your sparing him in the end, is going to hound us. He's doing it now. There's Hobbs in the next car, for proof. Until these jewels are returned, whether to Frognall street or to young Hallam, we're both in danger, both thieves in the sight of the law. And your father knows that too. There's no profit to be had by discounting the temper of these people. They're as desperate a gang of swindlers as ever lived. They'll have those jewels if they have to go as far as murder"—

"Mr. Kirkwood!" she deprecated in horror.

He wagged his head stubbornly, ominously. "I've seen them in the raw. They're hot on our trail now. Ten to one they'll be on our backs before we can get across the channel. Once in England we will be comparatively safe. Until then—but I'm a brute—I'm frightening you!"

"You are, dreadfully," she confessed in a tremulous voice.

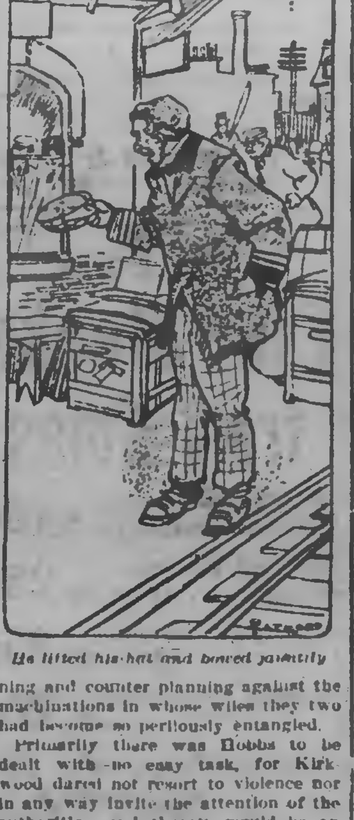
"Forgive me. If you look at the dark side first, the other seems all the brighter. Please don't worry. We'll pull through with flying colors or my name's not Philip Kirkwood."

"I have every faith in you," she informed him, flawlessly sincere. "When I think of all you've done and dared for me, on the mere suspicion that I needed your help"—

"We'd best be getting ready," he interrupted hastily. "Here's Brussels."

It was so. Lights, in little clusters and long, wheeling lines, were leaping out of the darkness and flashing back as the train rumbled through the suburbs of the little Paris of the north. Already the other passengers were bestirring themselves, gathering together wraps and hand luggage and preparing for the journey's end.

Rising, Kirkwood took down their two satchels from the overhead rack and waited, in grim abstraction planning and counter planning against the machinations in whose wiles they two had become so perilously entangled.



He lifted his hat and bowed jauntily

Primarily there was Hobbs to be dealt with—no easy task, for Kirkwood dared not resort to violence nor in any way invite the attention of the authorities, and threats would be an idle waste of breath in the case of that corrupt and malignant little cockney, himself as keen as any needle, adept in all the artful resources of the underworld whence he had sprung, and further primed for action by that master rogue, Calendar.

The train was pulling slowly into the station when he reluctantly abandoned his latest unfeasible scheme for shaking off the little Englishman and concluded that their salvation was only to be worked out through everlasting vigilance, incessant movement and the favor of the blind goddess Fortune.

He saw nothing of Hobbs as they alighted and hastened from the station and hardly had time to waste looking for him since their train had failed to make up the precious ten minutes. Consequently he dismissed the fellow from his thoughts until—with Brussels lingering in their memories a garish vision of brilliant streets and glowing cafes, glimpsed furtively from their cab windows during its wild dash over the broad midcity boulevards—at midnight they settled themselves in a carriage of the Bruges express. They were speeding along through the open country with a noisy clatter; then a minute's investigation sufficed to discover the mate of the Alethea serenely ensconced in the coach behind.

The little man seemed rarely complacent and impudently greeted Kirkwood's scowling visage as the latter peered through the window in the coach door, with a smirk and a waggish wave of his hand. The American by main strength of will power mastered an impulse to enter and wring his neck and returned to the girl more disturbed than he cared to let her know.

There resulted from his review of the case but one plan for outwitting Mr. Hobbs, and that lay in trusting to his confidence that Kirkwood and Dorothy Calendar would proceed as far toward Ostend as the train would take them—namely, to the limit of the run, Bruges.

Thus inspired, Kirkwood took counsel with the girl, and when the train paused at Ghent they made an unostentatious exit from their coach, finding themselves when the express had rolled on into the west upon a station platform in a foreign city at nine minutes past 1 o'clock in the morning, but at length without their shadow. Mr. Hobbs had gone on to Bruges.

Kirkwood sped his journeyings with an unspoken malediction and collected himself to cope with a situation which was to prove hardly more happy for them than the espionage they had just eluded. The primal flush of triumph which had saturated the American's humor on this signal success proved but fictive and transitory when inquiry of the station attendants educed the information that the two earliest trains to be obtained were the 5:09 for Dunkerque and the 5:37 for Ostend. A minimum delay of four hours was to be endured in the face of many contingent features singularly unpleasant to contemplate. The station waiting room was on the point of closing for the night, and Kirkwood, alarmed by the rapid ebb of the money he had taken from Calendar, dared not subject [illegible] to the strain of a night's [illegible] at one of Ghent's hotels. He found himself forced to be cruel to be kind to the girl, and Dorothy's cheerful acquiescence to their sole alternative of tramping the street until daybreak did nothing to alleviate Kirkwood's exasperation.

It was permitted them to occupy a bench outside the station. There the girl, her head pillowed on the treasure bag, napped uneasily, while Kirkwood plodded restlessly to and fro, up and down the platform, addling his poor, weary wits with the problem of the future—not so much his own as the future of the unhappy child for whose welfare he had assumed responsibility. Dark for both of them, in his understanding tomorrow loomed darkest for her.

Not until the gray, formless light of the dawn dusk was wavering over the land did he cease his perambulations. Then a gradual stir of life in the city streets, together with the appearance of a station porter or two, opening the waiting rooms and preparing them against the traffic of the day, warned him that he must rouse his charge. He paused and stood over her, reluctant to disturb her rest, such as it was, his heart torn with compassion for her, his soul imbittered by the cruel irony of their estate.

If what he understood were true, a king's ransom was secreted within the cheap imitation leather satchel which served her for a pillow. But it availed her nothing for her comfort. If what he believed were true, she was absolute mistress of that treasure of jewels, yet that night she had been forced to sleep on a hard, uncushioned bench in the open air, and this morning he must waken her to the life of a hunted thing. A week ago she had had at her command every luxury known to the civilized world; today she was friendless but for his inefficient, worthless self and in a strange land. A week ago, had he known her then, he had been free to tell her of his love, to offer her the protection of his name as well as his devotion; today he was an all but penniless vagabond and there could be no dishonor deeper than to let her know the nature of his heart's desire.

Was ever lover hedged from a declaration to his mistress by circumstances so hateful, so untoward? He could have raged and railed against his fate like any madman, for he desired her greatly, and she was very lovely in his sight. She was to him of all created things the most wonderful, the most desirable.

The temptation of his longing seemed more than he could long withstand. But resist he must or part forever with any title to her consideration—or his own. He shut his teeth and knotted his brows in a transport of desire to touch, if only with his finger tips, the woven wonder of her hair.

And thus she saw him when, without warning, she awoke.

Bewilderment at first informed the wide brown eyes, then, as their drowsiness vanished, a little laughter, a little tender mirth.

"Good morning, Sir Knight of the Somber Countenance!" she cried, standing up. "Am I so utterly disreputable that you find it necessary to frown on me so darkly?"

He shook his head, smiling.

"I know I'm a fright," she asserted, vigorously shaking out the folds of her plaited skirt. "And, as for my hat, it will never be on straight; but, then, you wouldn't know."

"It seems all right," he replied vacantly.

"Then please to try to look a little happier since you find me quite presentable."

"I do."

Without lifting her bended head she looked up, laughing, not ill pleased. "You'd say so really?"

Far down the railway tracks there rose a murmuring that waxed to a rumbling roar. A passing porter answered Kirkwood's inquiry; it was the night boat train from Ostend. He picked up their bags and drew the girl into the waiting room, troubled by a sickening foreboding.

Through the window they watched the train roll in and stop.

Among others alighted, smirking, the unspeakable Hobbs.

He lifted his hat and bowed jauntily to the waiting room window, making it plain that his keen eyes had discovered them instantly.

CHAPTER XXVI.

KIRKWOOD'S heart sank with the hopelessness of it all. If the railway directorates of Europe conspired against them, what chance had they? If the night boat train from Ostend had only had the decency to be twenty-five minutes late, instead of arriving promptly on the minute of 4:45, they two might have escaped by the 5:09 for Dunkerque and Calais.

"Miss Calendar," said Kirkwood from his heart, "just as soon as I get you home safe and sound I am going to take a day off, hunt up that little villain and flay him alive. In the meantime I forgot to dine last night and am reminded that we had better forage for breakfast."

Hobbs dogged them at a safe distance while they sallied forth and in a neighboring street discovered an early bird bakery. Here they were able to purchase rolls steaming from the oven, fresh pats of golden butter wrapped in clean lettuce leaves and milk in twin bottles, all of which they prosaically carried with them back to the station, lacking leisure as they did to partake of the food before train time.

Without attempting concealment (Hobbs, he knew, was eavesdropping round the corner of the door) Kirkwood purchased at the ticket window passages on the Dunkerque train. Mr. Hobbs promptly flattered him by imitation, and so jealous of his luck was Kirkwood by this time grown through continual disappointment that he did not even let the girl into his plans until they were aboard the 5:09 in a compartment all to themselves. Then, having with his own eyes seen Mr. Hobbs dodge into the third compartment in the rear of the same carriage, Kirkwood astonished the girl by requesting her to follow him, and together they left by the door opposite that by which they had entered.

The engine was running up and down a scale of staccato snorts in preparation for the race and the cars were on the edge of moving, couplings clanking, wheels a-groan, ere Mr. Hobbs condescended to join them between the tracks.

Wearily, disheartened, Kirkwood reopened the door, flung the bags in and helped the girl back into their despised compartment. The quicker route to England via Ostend was now out of the question. As for himself, he waited for a brace of seconds, eying wickedly the ubiquitous Hobbs, who had popped back into his compartment, but stood ready to pop out again on the least encouragement. In the meantime he was pleased to shake a friendly foot at Mr. Kirkwood, thrusting that member out through the half open door.

Only the timely departure of the train, compelling him to rejoin Dorothy at once if at all, prevented the American from adding murder to the already noteworthy catalogue of his high crimes and misdemeanors.

Their simple meal, consumed to the ultimate drop and crumb while the Dunkerque train meandered serenely through a sunny, smiling Flemish countryside, somewhat revived their jaded spirits.

ONTARIO'S PROSPERITY UNDER WHITNEY RULE

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Nov. 26.—The Provincial Treasurer announces one of the best financial years under the Whitney government. The receipts for the year ending October 31 exceeded estimates by over one million and a quarter and instead of a deficit for the new ten month year of nearly two millions, deficit will be less than one hundred thousand and there will be a surplus for the calendar year ending December 31 of nearly half a million dollars.

HOMELESS AT AGE OF 86

Unhappy Circumstances of Feeble Minded Woman Who Has Lived Here For 70 Years.

Eighty-six years of age, feeble-minded, with no home and with but two relatives, is the position in which an unfortunate woman by the name of Mrs. Mary O'Brien is placed to-day, although according to statements made at the police court this morning, she has resided in this city for the past 75 years and has owned during that time considerable property. All that is left is $50 held in trust by a nephew to be used to cover the expenses of her funeral, when she passes from this world. For over two years she has been taken care of in St. Joseph's Hospital and those in charge at that institution have treated her with every kindness but for the past six months her mind has become affected and she has caused no end of trouble to the staff. She has not been content to remain in a room, but on several occasions has roamed away to different parts of the city. She has a hallucination, that someone is trying to take her property away from her and has asserted several times that an uncle some time ago left $17,000 to her.

A nephew explained to the magistrate this morning that some time ago a house and lot belonging to his aunt was sold for $350, but $300 of this had been paid for her maintenance at the hospital. Now, that her case is of such a nature, the facilities at the hospital inadequate, those in charge do not care to have her there, although he and his brother were will- to defray the expenses incurred.

ART IN OUR SCHOOLS

Under Auspices of the Women's Art Ass. -- Fraulein Stolle of Boston Lectures to over 600 of Our School Children

Yesterday afternoon was one which will be long remembered by our school children. Over 600 girls and boys assembled in the Collegiate Institute Hall to witness an exhibition of pictures, reproductions of the great pictures of the world.

Fraulien Stolle brought her audience in touch with the great masters of the Italian, Spanish, English, French and German schools. Their works, which she copied from the originals in the galleries where they hang, were presented in colors.

The Theme of Angels from the early Angelicos down to the modern art of Bourme-Jones was taken up; then landscape was studied from the Dutch through the French and German ending with Arnold Boeklin and with a modern Madonna walking in the fields, adored by a little shepherd boy, who presents field flowers to the Christ child. This picture is one by Joseph Scheurenberg, who in it gives the most modern spirit of religious art.

Fraulien Stolle lectures again tonight in the same place, and we would urge the public of Peterborough to take advantage of this opportunity of practically seeing some of the best pictures of the world's great galleries.

Brantford Doctors in Arms

At a recent meeting of the Brantford city council, in discussion on hospital affairs, Ald. Ward made the statement that a doctor had spoken to him of unnecessary butchery at the hospital with no other consideration than that of profit. The remarks of the aldermen have aroused the Medical Association to action, and in a letter to the press, Alderman Ward was charged with malicious slander, and was challenged to make good the name of his medical informant. The doctors may take legal action in the matter. It was pointed out that over 30 per cent. of the operations at the hospital are performed free.

CASH GIRL TO-NIGHT

By Special Arrangement this Musical Offering Will Hold the Boards at the Grand this Evening.

By special arrangement the management of the Grand have secured the appearance of the brilliant musical comedy success, "The Cash Girl," for this evening, to-morrow afternoon and to-morrow evening. The company arrived in the city this morning from London, where it played last night to a most appreciative audience, which persistently applauded the cast for its captivating work.

Miss May Ward, who heads the cast, has won distinct personal triumphs in every city in which "The Cash Girl" has appeared and is said to be exceptionally well supported by a large company of talented musical comedy people. The piece is fairly effervescent with tunefulness of the clinging quality and practically every song is a hit. George W. Meyer, the composer, was in his happiest mood when he contributed the score of "The Cash Girl," which is pronounced quite his best effort.

The story is cleverly written and decidedly original, the comedy lines being unusually bright and witty. Considering the large metropolitan and provincial popularity "The Cash Girl" has enjoyed it should be greeted with large houses at its two night appearance here as well as the special matinee to-morrow afternoon.

PROGRESS ON TRENT CANAL AT HASTINGS

The dredge Little Lake is making good progress eating her way up to the bridge. She is digging down to the solid rock bottom so that the cribwork can be put in for a coffer dam, the cribwork will be used instead of the concrete base. The work up to the bridge has to be done by hand as the dredge cannot go under the bridge, and though this is a cold job good progress is being made with the aid of a cable and drag hitched on to the steam derrick.

The canal engineering staff have moved up to Rice Lake where most of them will put in the season surveying the Lake. They have been laying guide marks all season and as soon as the lake freezes over will commence sounding to complete the survey.—Hastings Star.

BORDEN PROTESTS AGAINST WADE APPOINTMENT IN B.C.

Opposition Leader Says it is Disgraceful That a Man Who Made Unsubstantiated Charges Against the Government Should be Named as Probable Lieutenant-Governor.

Ottawa, Nov. 29.—The first real scrap of the session took place yesterday over the delay in the appointment of the Lieutenant-Governor of British Columbia, and the judges of the Court of Appeal of that province until the result of the election was known.

R. L. Borden describes the tactics as disgraceful and intolerable as regards the proposed appointment of F. C. Wade, one of the defeated Liberal candidates as Lieutenant-Governor. J. D. Taylor said that Mr. Wade, in the course of the recent provincial campaign, had made charges against the McBride Government which could not be substantiated. It was intolerable, he said, that a man who had made such charges should be named as the advisor of the Government, which he had accused. Mr. Taylor, declared that no man should receive a public office as a reward for taking part in a political campaign.

Major Currie introduced a bill to amend the Inspection and Sale Act by fixing the weight of loaves of bread by federal enactment. He said that the Dominion House possesses jurisdiction as to weights and measures and that Parliament has fixed the weights of certain articles and things such as a bushel of grain, a barrel of salt, etc. There was, therefore, no valid reason why it should not do likewise as to the weight of bread. The various Provincial Governments and many municipalities had struggled with the problem, but with indifferent, and, on the whole, unsatisfactory results. Under the provisions of his bill there would be three weights for loaves of bread—one, two and four pounds.

A discussion followed as to whether or not the bill should have been preceded with by a formal resolution, it being a matter which affects trade, and the bill was allowed to stand until the officials of the House could give a decision.

Incidentally Sir Wilfrid Laurier expressed the opinion that the matter of the weight of bread does not come under the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government, but should be dealt with by the Provincial Legislatures.

Hon. William Templeman's bill to amend the inland revenue act was considered in committee. It provides for an increase in the cost of an inland revenue bonding warehouse from $30 to $50, and provides that for the doing up of cigarettes in packages of 25 as well as 20. The bill stood over at the request of Richard Blain (Peel).

On motion to go into supply, J. D. Taylor (New Westminster) brought up the question of the delay in the appointments of the lieutenant-governor of British Columbia, and of the judges of the Court of Appeal. He said it had been freely stated in the press that certain persons who had figured prominently in the provincial election there were to be given these appointments, and ascribed it as disgraceful that this should be possible. He mentioned the case of a man languishing in New Westminster jail because there was no Court of Appeal to which he could take his case.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier deprecated criticism until the appointments have been made. "We shall then be open to censure or approval," he said. "We are liable only for what action we take."

Martin Burrill said that F. C. Wade, who had been mentioned for lieutenant-governor, must necessarily be a partisan, since he took part in the provincial election.

Others whose names had been bandied about in the Liberal press had been mentioned as judges for the Court of Appeal. He mentioned that Mr. Macdonald, the Opposition leader, who was expected to become chief justice, and who had stayed out of politics and was complimented for doing so, had eventually entered in the political campaign as the result of pressure.

R. L. Borden asked how it was possible to be decent in the eyes of the public under the circumstances, that a man who entered into a political campaign and made serious charges against a Government should immediately afterwards be placed on the judicial bench. Nothing more disgraceful or intolerable could be imagined than the case of the man being compelled to languish in jail because wheels of justice must stop because Hon. Mr. Aylesworth had to go to Europe. This excuse for delay in the appointment of judges was absolutely unworthy of consideration. The appeal court should have been constituted in September last.

Hon. Mr. Fielding said Mr. Borden's remarks were unfair to Mr. Aylesworth. The British Columbia Government had shown no haste to have the Court of Appeal constituted.

Mr. Burrill asked if it was not the case that during the time the British Columbia Government delayed there was an appeal court in existence. Now there was none. When pressed to give an answer, Mr. Fielding said he could not do so, but he defended the Government's policy in giving appointments to political supporters.

Mr. Burrill pointed out that Mr. Aylesworth had promised to make the appointments six days after the British Columbia election, thus showing that the result of the elections would determine the personnel of the bench

Collision May Kill Him.

Belleville, Nov. 27.—A lad named Holway was severely injured by another boy, who was sliding down hill on a slippery walk, colliding with him. Young Holway was dashed to the ground and suffered internal injuries.

BODY RIDDLED WITH BULLETS

Meridian, Miss., Nov. 27.—Morgan Chambers, the negro who was taken from Town Marshal Broadway and Deputy Joe Camp at Meehan by a mob, who riddled his body with bullets Thursday night, had earlier in the day beaten and robbed Martin Dressler, an aged citizen of Point, a small station two miles west of Meehan. Dressler was taken to Meehan for medical treatment, and the negro, captured at Chunkey, a few miles further west, was taken to Meehan, where he was positively identified by his victim. After the identification Marshal Broadway and Deputy Camp started with the prisoner for the town prison. On the way they were confronted by the mob, who took the negro by force. Marshal Broadway had his cheek grazed by a bullet in the scrimmage.

MURDER WAS DELIBERATE

Buffalo, N.Y., Nov. 27.—Without explanation or warning, Charles Strohl, an employe of a bakery, walked into the reading-room of the Buffalo public library yesterday, pulled a revolver and shot and killed Franz Stantz. The murderer rushed out and turning into an alley exchanged shots with his pursuers, wounding one policeman, and sheltered by a brick wall, and occasionally firing, he held the crowd at bay for fifteen minutes, until the police surprised him from the rear. He is mentally deranged.

FORMER BANKER IS SENTENCED

Madison, Wis., Nov. 27.—Phil Allen, jr., former vice-president of the First National Bank of Mineral Point, Wis., yesterday, pleaded guilty to four out of 26 counts, and was sentenced to 10 years in the Federal Prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, the maximum under the law of any one count. Allen was charged with embezzling $168,000.

Strange Asphyxiation.

Lynn, Mass., Nov. 27.—A high wind which blew down the chimney and closed the damper of a parlor stove, caused the deaths by coal gas asphyxiation of Chas. Herrick and Miss Ida Lydston, his housekeeper, in East Lynn.

OXFORD, N. S. IS FIRE SWEPT

Amherst, N.S., Nov. 27.—A fire entailing a loss of $50,000 occurred at Oxford, N.S., yesterday morning in the main business section of the town. The fire started in W. R. Slade's building occupied by The Oxford Clothing Co., completely destroying building and contents; spreading to the building of A. S. McIntosh, druggist, Peter Slade's building, occupied by John Hill, general store, Alex Ross' tailoring establishment, and the property of Henry S. Smith, his shop in which was the Canadian Express Co.'s office, insurance office, etc. His residence, barns, and warehouses were in the rear, all of which, with contents were totally destroyed. The insurance is exceedingly small. Hill's loss being total.

GIRL IS HELD ON MURDER CHARGE

Waltham, Mass., Nov. 27.—The mystery attending the shooting of Clarence F. Glover in his laundry last Saturday night, is still unsolved. State, county and city authorities admitted yesterday that their investigations had progressed but little since the arrest on Wednesday of Miss Hattie Leblanc, whom the dying man accused of firing the fatal shots.

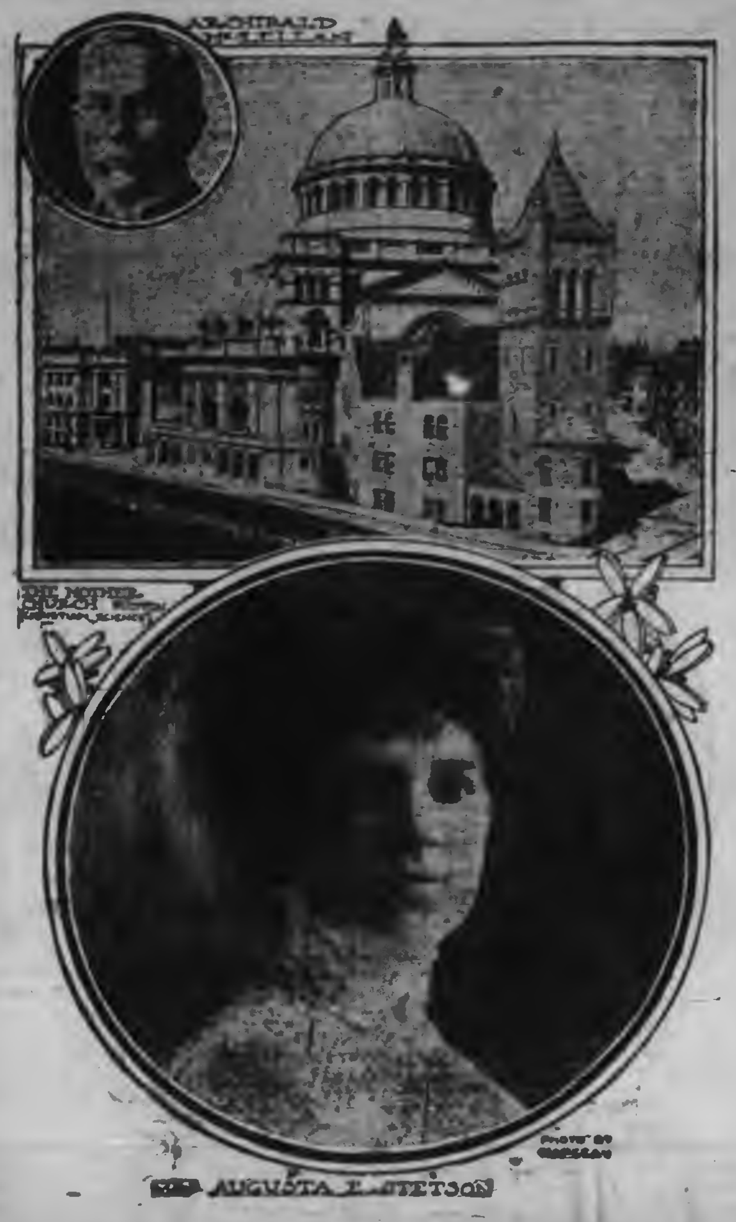
The rigid investigations of the girl's story in which she denied the accusations of her employers, and the examination of Mrs. Glover, the widow, has apparently thrown very little light on the case. The police, however, believed that the two women have not told all they know, and yesterday they again sought the Cambridge jail, where the 16-year-old girl is locked up on a charge of murder.

Boy Hangs Himself.

Des Moines, Nov. 27.—Harold Perkins, 16 years old, hanged himself to his bedroom door Thursday because he had been refused permission to attend a football game. It is said he expected his aunt, with whom he lived, to discover him and cut him down before he died.

Fatal Fight With Burglars.

Bemidji, Minn., Nov. 27.—One of two robbers was instantly killed and Deputy Sheriff Andrew Johnson was fatally shot yesterday in a fight following the dynamiting of a safe in the village of Puposky, 17 miles northwest of Bemidji. The other robber escaped.



[illegible] AUGUSTA E. STETSON

Boston, Mass., Nov. 27.—For nine nine hours or more Mrs. Augusta Stetson, leader of the New York Christian Scientists, was questioned and cross-questioned before the directors of the Mother Church. Looking wan and fatigued after her two days' ordeal, Mrs. Stetson said after adjournment;—"I can do no talking, my information relative to proceedings must come from the directors." Afterward she issued this statement in which she made no mention of the hearing:—

"Our beloved leader, Mary Baker Eddy, has requested us all to unite with those in our church who are supporting the Mother Church directors. I have received a copy of her letter addressed to the trustees of the church.

AERONAUTS ARE KILLED

Berlin, Nov. 27.—Dr. Breneckmann and Hugo Franeke, the two most daring members of the Aero Club, of Berlin, have been killed through the collapse of their balloon Kolmar. Their bodies were found yesterday near Fiume, Austria-Hungary. Near by was their balloon, a huge rent in the envelope telling the story of their death.

Dr. Brenckmann had been the third person to insure his life with the newly-formed company which makes a business of air navigation risks.

CHAIRMEN OF STANDING COMMITTEES

Ottawa, Nov. 27.—The chairmen of the standing committees of the House of Commons were elected yesterday. They are as follows:

Railways, Guthrie (Wellington); banking and commerce, Miller (Grey); public accounts, Warburton (Prince Edward Island); marine and fisheries, Sinclair (Guysboro); privileges and elections, German (Welland); private bills, Ethier (Two Mountains); standing orders, McCraney (Saskatoon); debates, Gervais (St. James); agriculture, Schell (Oxford); mines and minerals, Conmee (Thunder Bay); forests and waterways, Hon. Clifford Sifton.

Government Library Dangerous?

Ottawa, Nov. 27.—Senator Landry, will next week call the attention of the Government to the crowded and dangerous condition of the library of Parliament. He will ask when the Government proposes enlargement or a new library.

Marina Still Active.

Melilla, Morocco, Nov. 27.—Gen. Marina has left at the head of a considerable force of Spanish troops with the intention of surrounding Mount Boni-Biufur and isolating the Riff tribesmen who are still entrenched there.

No Jurisdiction.

Ottawa, Nov. 27.—It has been decided by the Railway Commission that it has not the power to force American railways connecting with the Grand and Canadian Pacific Railways to quote through rates from points in the United States to points on the Canadian Northern in Muskoka.

Tore Up Sidewalk.

Hagersvile, Nov. 27.—Lawyer Aeger and ex-Chief of Police Coates of Simcoe were arrested here yesterday by Constable Rispin on a warrant charging them with stealing pieces of scantling from the sidewalk of this town, to be used as evidence in a civil action on Tuesday.

DR. COOK ILL AS RESULT OF HARD WORK DONE IN PREPARING PROOFS

Portfolio Containing Data is Now on its Way to Copenhagen to be Submitted to the Scientists There—Dummy Was Taken Aboard Steamer as a Blind to Alleged Conspirators.

New York, Nov. 27.—The Herald says: As a result of the mental strain under which he has labored in preparing his records for the Danish scientists, Dr. Frederick A. Cook, discoverer of the North Pole, has suffered a nervous breakdown. He is at the home of an intimate friend in New York, but his condition is such that not even his closest personal friends are allowed to see him.

Looking haggard and ten years old than when he arrived from the Arctic regions in September, the explorer left his hotel, the Gramatan Inn., Bronxville, at one o'clock Wednesday afternoon for a visit to New York. There was such a change in his condition he did not return to Bronxville Thursday night and Mrs Cook joined him here.

Although it was announced that Walter Longsdale, who left New York Thursday on the United States, of the Scandinavian- American line, for Copenhagen, was conveying the explorer's original data and the comprehensive analysis he had prepared in support of his assertion that he was the first to reach the North Pole, it was learned that the data and report in reality were sent to Europe several days ago on a fast steamer and were due to arrive at Copenhagen several days before Mr. Longsdale, who is due at the Danish capital on Dec. 7.

"Dr. Cook's records are in the safe of a transatlantic liner now in mid-ocean," said Henry W. Wack, the explorer's counsel. "The large portfolio which Mr. Lonsdale carried aboard the United States was only a dummy to trap the conspirators, who have resorted to every means to gain possession of Dr. Cook's data. I am convinced that an effort will be made to rob him of the package which he has in his possession before the United States reaches the other side."

OLD RAMESES IN AMERICA

Boston, Nov. 27.—Rameses, King of Egypt, in mummified form, is resting aboard the steamship Aragonia, while the vessel is discharging a portion of her cargo here preparatory to proceeding to New York. The monarch's age is estimated at about 3,000 years. Although the remains weigh but 125 pounds they are so carefully packed in lead, iron and wood that in their case they weigh more than 1,000 pounds. On the outside of the case are the words "Valued at $30,000." The mummy is consigned simply to the Hamburg-American Line, New York

ROBBED MAN WHO WAS IN STUPOR

Parry Sound, Nov. 27.—Robbery from the person of John Hall of Depot Harbor, by G.T.R. Constable Powell, stationed at that place, was the charge tried by Judge McCurry here yesterday. Powell was convicted. The two men were drinking together in Powell's room, and Hall fell into a drunken stupor, from which he awoke to find himself lying across Powell's bed minus his money. Two $10 Bank of Toronto bills, identified by Hall, were found on the constable. He was given two months' imprisonment. Powell came here from Montreal a short time ago.

YOUNG WOMAN KILLS HERSELF

Clothes Found on Edge of River at Niagara Falls.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Nov. 27.—Evidences of what the reservation officer and local police believe to be unmistakably a case of suicide were discovered yesterday. While patrolling his beat along the edge of the river between the foot of Falls street and Goat Island bridge, Reservation Officer Martin found on the brink of the river a woman's coat, a black felt hat trimmed with velvet and a black wing. Pinned to the coat was a card bearing the name of Miss Margaret Callan, trained nurse, No. 269 Glenwood avenue, Buffalo. Two other cards and 96 cents in change were also found.

Miss Callan left her boarding-house on Glenwood avenue Thursday afternoon without saying where she was going. The clothes found are said to answer the description of those worn by her. Miss Callan's friends say she was always of a cheerful mood, and they are unable to assign a motive

VICTIMS NOW NUMBER TWO

Parry Sound, Nov. 27.—Foreman A. C. Jones of the mechanical department here, who was so terribly injured in the explosion of the acetylene gas generating plant Thursday, died last evening.

Assistant Commissioner of Lights Noble of the Marine Department will hold a searching investigation. That the accident had no more serious results seems a marvel when at least six men were within 50 feet of the exploding dryer.

Agent Brais is more hurt than at first reported, having the calf of one leg cut and torn, face and ear cut and singed and blackened by the gas. Smith, another man, has a scalp wound, and another employe, Craven had a thumb torn off.

An inquest on the body of Engineer Kerr will be held Dec. 6.

TWO WERE KILLED IN GAS EXPLOSION

Rochester, N.Y., Nov. 27.—Mrs Margaret Smith, aged 35 years, and Mrs. Minnie Wright, aged 50 years, were killed by a gas explosion in a boarding-house at 122 North street here, yesterday. A jet in their room had leaked all night. The landlady detected gas and traced it to the room. She burst in the door just in time to see flames envelop the room.

COUNTY COUNCIL MEETS TUESDAY

Re-Arrangement of School Districts an Important Matter

The regular fall session of the county Council of Peterborough will open at the Court House here on Tuesday of next week at two o'clock. One of the important matters to come before the Council is the re-arrangement of the school districts in regard to the inspectorates. A deputation from the Victoria County Council will wait on the Peterborough Council in regard to this matter.

Sons of England Banquet

The annual banquet of the Sons of England will be held this year on Friday evening, Dec. 3rd, commencing at seven p.m. and will be followed by musical programme. Past Supreme President James Boxall, of Lindsay, will preside. The committee in charge are confident that the 1909 banquet will excel the excellent one of 1908. Sons of England and Englishmen who are not members of the society are invited to bring their wives and lady friends to enjoy a pleasant evening.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

RUMOR SAYS McBRIDE MAY GIVE RIVAL SEAT IN HOUSE

According to Current Reports Triumphant Premier Will Give up One of His Seats to the Defeated Leader of the Opposition.

Vancouver, Nov. 27.—Premier McBride yesterday received more than three hundred telegrams of congratulation, one message being from D. D. Mann of the Canadian Northern Railway.

John Oliver, leader of the Liberals in Thursday's elections, announced yesterday that he had retired from politics. Speaking over long distance telephone from his Ladner Farm, he said:

"The leadership of the party was forced on me when McDonald resigner. I did not seek this honor. From this time I am out of politics. After Thursday, I will merely be a spectator in the political game. The farm is good enough for me."

There is rumor to-day that Premier McBride, being elected in two places, will ask his constituents of Yale to allow Oliver to take that seat. In spite of his announced retirement, it is likely he would readily agree to sit in Yale. Conservative leaders here declare that Oliver fought a square fight, abstaining from the personalities which characterized the Wade-Tupper end of the campaign.

Oliver is an experienced legislator, too, and many Conservatives openly declare that the House would be all the better for his assistance. Without Oliver, the Opposition would be a joke, and it would require hard work in the House to prevent the proceedings approaching the ridiculous.

Returns received up to a late hour last night, show thirty-eight straight Conservatives elected out of 42 seats in the House.

During the afternoon, Lillooet moved out of the Liberal column, giving 20 majority for McDonald (Con.) as against former member Eagleson, with a couple of unimportant places to hear from.

Jardine is elected as Liberal representative in Esquimault against Harry Helmsken. The latter was formerly a member of the House, but did not stand very high as a party man. Jardine had made a strong fight in the last two or three years against Asiatics and the workingmen of his district stood by him.

Though Alberni returns are not in yet in full, both parties concede that Brewster (Lib.) is re-elected. Two Socialists complete the House.

The House when it meets on Jan. 20 will consist of 38 Conservatives, 2 Socialists and 2 Liberals. It is expected Hawthornthwaite of Nanaimo may claim the first position on Mr. Speaker's left by virtue of seniority in Parliamentary affairs, but this will hardly be conceded in consequence of the established recognition throughout Canada of the Liberal party as the natural opponents of Conservatives.

BURGLARY CHARGE AGAINST HERMIT

Brockville, Nov. 27.—The police have taken into custody George Hoover, an ex-convict who is being held on a charge of robbing summer homes at resorts on the St. Lawrence, between here and Butternut Bay. Hoover made his home in the woods close by, and for a long time baffled the efforts of the officers to catch him. He is a hermit, and since the cold weather, has almost frozen to death on a couple of occasions, being scantily clad. His unkempt hair and beard, grown out of all proportions, gives the prisoner the appearance of a wild man.

Two officers came upon Hoover huddled beside a fire in a clump of hemlocks.

CONGRESSMAN WAS BURNED TO DEATH

Butler, Mo., Nov. 27.—Hundreds of prominent public men of Missouri, and many from outside the state, joined the citizens of Butler yesterday in paying respect to the memory of the late Congressman David A. De Armond, who was burned to death here last Tuesday in a fire that destroyed his home. Congressman De Armond died in a vain effort to save the life of his favorite grandson, David A. De Armond.

The bodies of both victims were buried in the local cemetery in one casket, following simple services at the Methodist Episcopal Church, where the late Congressman had been a member.

ANOTHER WITNESS MISSING AT BARRIE

Barrie, Nov. 27.—The Guthrie fire inquest resumed yesterday morning, and was adjourned until Thursday. Miss Montgomery, who fainted in the witness box at a previous session, fractured a small bone when she fell, and Dr. Lewis stated she would be unable to appear for some time.

Police Chief King exhibited some charred rags and burned matches found in an upper room in the Guthrie house, which could not have ignited from the fire below. Fire Chief Smith corroborated.

Herbert Macdougall, an employe of the Guthries, has left town. Endeavors will be made to trace him. "Miss Meeks" is still undiscovered.

BLOODHOUNDS ON ROBBERS' TRAIL

Bedford, Ind., Nov. 27.—The countryside was aroused yesterday to a pursuit of robbers, when it was found that following the murder of George Moss, in his store near here, on Wednesday night, that the safe in the postoffice at Tunnelton was blown open and cleared of cash and stamps Thursday night. Sheriff Box, with deputies and bloodhounds, with which he attempted to follow the trail of the men that robbed and murdered Moss, went immeditely to Tunnelton.

Musn't Wear False Hair.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 27.—A charge that a young woman contracted leprosy, from a hair switch, has caused a general order from all large employers of women forbidding the wearing of false hair.

George St. Song Service

The song service to be given by the choir of the George street Methodist church to-morrow evening will be as follows:

Anthem, "Cast Thy Bread on the Waters," Reckel.

Solo and chorus, "Why is Thy Harp on the Willow."

Ladies' trio, "Saviour Breathe an Evening Blessing," Harding: Misses Reesor and Sanderson and Mrs. Rehill.

Solo, Selected, Miss Reesor.

VOLUNTEER HANGMAN AT NORTH BAY

North Bay, Nov. 27.—Sam Spanelli, a young Italian, was hanged early yesterday morning. Radcliffe, P.E., failed to attend or send any word in reply to urgent messages, the gap being filled at the eleventh hour by a man who gave the name of Ike Thompson, of Owen Sound, and arrived late Thursday night. Spanelli walked calmly to the scaffold, making no sound or sign.

He was convicted of killing a young Chinaman, in a restaurant brawl at Haileybury, July 30, using a dirk twelve inches long.

Special precautions were taken by Sheriff Varin Thursday night in view of rumors that the prisoner was a black hand leader, and that Italians were coming into town in large numbers to dynamite the jail.

SLAVERY STORIES REPORTED UNTRUE

New York, Nov. 27.—Allegations that slave trade exists in Portuguese East Africa were pronounced as unwarranted fabrications by Col. J. A. Wyllie, Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, England, who arrived on the steamer Teutonic on a two-months' investigation of conditions in Portuguese East Africa.

Col. Wyllie says he found a spirit of friendliness and perfect freedom between the white man and black.

"The African's condition is wonderfully improved as a laborer for the Portuguese in contrast with his home environment in Central Africa," said Col. Wyllie. "They come down the coast, many of them cannibals, and all of them barbarians, and are glad to hire out to the planters to escape tortures of their own tribal barbarities."

PROBABILITIES.

Sunday mostly fair and mild.

TRIPLE TRAGEDY AT JACKSONVILLE

Jacksonville, Fla., Nov. 27.—After he had cut the throats of Burt Woods and John S. Smith, Jesse Altman was shot and killed yesterday by Smith. Altman and Smith first quarrelled with Woods, and Altman slashed Woods' throat, leaving him dead in the street. Smith and Altman made their escape to a suburb, where they also quarrelled and Altman cut Smith's throat. As he fell, Smith snatched a revolver from Altman's pocket and fired, killing him. Altman had twice been arrested for murder, his victims being negroes.

"SPOTTERS" DID NOT SHOW UP

Windsor, Nov. 27.—An echo of the recent wholesale prosecution of Windsor, Walkerville and Essex County liquor dealers, was heard by Judge McHugh yesterday, when Jacob Mailloux of the Colonial Hotel, won an appeal against his conviction and fine of $200 by Magistrate Breault of Sandwich. The Government "spotters" failed to put in an appearance. For the same reason, Magistrate Breault at Sandwich, yesterday afternoon, dismissed a complaint against the prisoner of Lagoon Park Hotel.

Not Guilty of Murder.

Macleod, Alta., Nov. 27.—John Kaleuychi, a Russian, was found not guilty by the jury in the Supreme Court Thursday night on a charge of murdering Angus Ruis, at Frank, Alberta, on 17th July last. A game of cards led to a quarrel, which resulted in Ruis being fatally stabbed.

MY OPINION ON LOCAL OPTION

Note.—The communication follow- ng and which appears over the signa- ure of Mr. B. Laster, is offered for ublication by him, independent of he wishes and objects of either side n the local option campaign, and ithout approval or endorsement by ither party. The space occupied paid for by Mr. Laster, and it is these conditions that the communi- tions appears.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—In following up my letter in our paper some time ago, in regard o my opinion of local option in Pe- erborough, speakers in favor of lo- al option have claimed that local ption will be necessary here, just e it is in the United States. But hat is spreading out all over there! es. I will agree with the speaker hat in the United States, it is a ne- essity, where here, it might be to number of the citizens a calamity; r at any rate absolutely of no bene- t to any one. I cannot under- tand how a local man can go so far s to disgrace the citizens of eterborough, in comparing them to of the outlaw towns of the oth- r side, where there is necessarily lo- al option. Gentlemen, in towns here you can find 10,000 inhabitants aking the law into their own hands, and killing a human beings as hap- ened only two weeks ago in Cairo, ll. to cut off his head, and raise it n a pole, as a show. I am ashamed f the speakers in degrading the in- abiting of this city by comparing to them. As a citizen of Peter- orough, I protest against such in- inuations, directly or indirectly. Be- ides a town like that should not only ve local option, but should be made prison of the whole place, where 0,000 people join in such a spectacle ithout a protest. Such acts can- ot happen in any town under the ritish flag and under British law- biding people. In places like this, ocal option is necessary, and also to eprive people of intoxicating drinks. n those places are those water wagons, and those filled with water, good. But we are surely too far above them, to compare ourselves with them, or to think of bringing local option in here for the same reason. Surely there are more decent ways to help out the little drunkenness we have here. Why don't people who are instigating this movement to limit drunkenness, go the same way about it as the T.A.S., or as the Roman Catholic priests have done, or as the Salvation Army have done, by educating by degrees, their fellow-men, and make another, or join the same T.A.S., and by using their influence with other men, and bring them to join in a peaceful way. I am sure that every sensible man or woman must agree with me, that it will help the people physically, mentally and financially more than a dozen local options, and by that you would not have to deprive a good many citizens of their means of making an honest living. And now, I would like to ask all those local option gentlemen or ladies, who are trying to induce others, (especially those who are going and telling, and ladies principally), those kind of hoodoo stories, and asking them to use their influence with their husbands, brothers or sons, that they should vote for local option. Can they tell me honorably that they believe that by passing local option in Peterborough that they will be able to stop the use of all kinds of liquor in the houses of the rich? I say, and if they like or not, they have to agree with me, "No." Although they are claiming that crimes and misery belongs only to the poorer classes. But if you take and study the statistics of crime, you will find that poverty from drink is in most cases in the poorer classes; but misery and crime you will find in houses who are independent of the open bar, and who have their cellars full of all kinds of liquors. That means by closing the open bar that the rich people will be able to get all kinds of drinks, and more than they want; but will deprive the poor working man, who is working from eight to ten hours a day. In most cases here a workman takes a drink of beer just to give him an appetite, that he should be able to work again, or in many cases where a man takes a drink of liquor to make him rest and sleep well, and be fresh for the next day's work. Now, would you make me believe, or even do you believe yourselves (I don't care who you are, preachers or speakers, or private people) how good your intentions are to save misery and poverty, it is just because there are twenty or fifty men who cannot control themselves in using liquor, and are a nuisance to their neighbors, or if there are a dozen families who are suffering from neglect of their husbands through drink, if by proper ways could be limited, and might be avoided altogether, should in a city of 17,000 inhabitants, by giving the privilege to a small part of the rich, because they can afford to buy in quantities, and have all kinds of luxuries in drink, and the majority of the working class should be deprived of their necessities. Do you believe that such a by-law would be allowed by the majority of the public, who are working and middle class men. I say under these circumstances that local option here in Peterborough is unjust and disgraceful, and not necessary.

S. LASTAR.

P.S.—More reasons why local option should not be carried here will follow.

ABE'S LITTLE FLIER.

The Result of His Desire to Learn a Few New Tricks.

By GRANT THORBURN.

For years he'd been a power in the Flatbrook meeting house—not during church time, to be sure, nor yet at Sunday school, nor week night meetings, nor Epworth league. It was at other times he shone—at the fairs and candy sales and donation parties and school commencements, for he was a prestidigitator, and he was the regular thing at the village entertainments.

But lately his popularity had begun to wane. The Flatbrookers became tired of the same old card and coin tricks, though Abe Hinchman, through long and careful practice, was an adept at them. They longed for the Indian box trick and the juggler's sword tricks of the metropolis. They did not know that down in the cities the blase members of society, if they ever did attend a sleight-of-hand performance, always came in when the card and coin tricks commenced and yawned and went out when the Indian box trick came on.

Abe realized that his popularity was on the wane. Even old Doc Clarkson's daughter had grown a bit distraught and cold. So Abe made up his mind. He drew about two-thirds of his bank deposit and started for New York. He was determined to learn a few new tricks, buy some new paraphernalia and come back and astonish the natives and old Doc Clarkson's daughter. It was early winter, and there was no farming to be done, so there was no better time or opportunity, and he went.

He occupied a seat in the smoker. At a station near the metropolis a well dressed young man boarded the train, looked around for a seat and finally took the one next to Hinchman. He was a sociable sort of fellow and entered into conversation at once. Abe told him all he knew and many things that he didn't. The stranger was not so communicative and confined himself strictly to fiction, although Abe couldn't know that, of course.

"Now, look a-here," remarked this man. "Don't you go to any hotel. You go to a private boarding house. They won't skin you. I know a good one where they'll treat you right. You come with me." Abe went.

The place was situated in a rather obscure street, but the rates were cheap. Abe's companion, by a singular coincidence, boarded there himself.

After supper they went upstairs into the parlor. A caller was announced, a rather seedy personage. He wanted to see Abe's new companion. They talked together in one corner, while Abe sat in another. Then his friend came over to him.

"Say, Hinchman," he began, "do you know anything about diamonds? Any judge of them?" Abe glanced at the other man out of the corner of his eye.

"Somepin," he replied. "Was in a jewelry store up home f'r awhile. Why? What's up?"

"Why, say," continued the other, "here's a friend of mine in a fix. He's got some good diamonds and wants me to loan about $200 on 'em. They're worth $900 anyway. I've seen 'em. Now, I ain't got $200 or I'd lend it to him. S'pose you do it. How much have you got?" This was a superfluous question, for he had discovered on the train that Hinchman had just $250.

"Well, now, here," went on the other; "he says if he don't pay up in a week you can keep the stones. See? He can't pay up, and the stones are the real thing. See? And you'll be in the difference between a couple of hundred and most a thousand. See?"

Hinchman saw. He thought it over and concluded that it was a sound proposition, provided the gems were genuine. He excused himself a moment, went to his room and put $200 in one envelope and something else in another envelope of similar appearance.

They had to go to the friend's room, a few blocks distant, up a dark, dingy staircase. The friend produced the jewels. Abe wouldn't touch them unless they went over to some Broadway jeweler and determined their worth and genuine character. This was fair, and they went. It was really superfluous, for Abe could tell by the merest examination that the stones were the real things. There were four of them. The Broadway jeweler looked at them, said they might sell for a couple of hundred apiece, but that he would give $150 spot cash for each of them. Then the three went back.

"Well, what do you think of it?" asked Hinchman's friend of Hinchman. "They ain't worth as much as we thought, but there's a good clear profit in it for you in case my friend here don't pay, and if he does you get your money back, with good big interest and a bonus besides at the end of a week."

The diamonds were again produced and once more examined. From that time on Abe Hinchman kept his eyes not on the faces of his friends, but on the diamonds.

"I'll do it," he finally announced. He slowly withdrew from his pocket the envelope containing the $250 and a small bag. He counted the money in front of the two men, and they put the diamonds in the bag at his request. After he had counted the money and replaced it in the envelope and once more examined the diamonds and replaced them in the bag, which he did more or less carelessly, keeping up a steady conversation all the time, he laid both upon the table.

"Now, gents," he concluded, "I'm a stranger here, and I rely on your honor not to do me. This here is a fair and square deal on my part, and I s'pose it is on yours. Now, there's your money, and here's"—

There was a loud rap on the door, and a man broke in. He was not in uniform, but he wore some kind of shield, which he exhibited. Behind him were two other men.

"Don't move!" he yelled to the three men around the table. "I arrest the whole gang for robbery!"

Hinchman's two companion's sprang to the table, shoved Hinchman aside, grabbed the bag containing the jewels and the envelope containing the money and made for the door.

"Run for your life!" they yelled to Hinchman. "It's the cops! These stones is stolen!" They waited not, but burst through the men at the door and leaped down the stairs. Hinchman was left to face the three men.

"Well, sir," said the leader severely, "we got you, anyways. What you got to say for yourself?"

Hinchman told the whole story from beginning to end. The three men evidently didn't believe it, but nevertheless they marched him to the corner of the street and there told him they would let him go provided he would appear at the police station in the morning to prosecute the others. He promised, and they left him. He took to his heels and sprinted for his boarding house. Once there, he gathered up his grip, paid his reckoning and jumped on the nearest trolley car. Eventually he fetched up at the Astor House. There he took a room.

Once in his room he slung his grip in a corner, took off his hat and wiped his brow with a bandanna kerchief. Then he drew carefully from his inside pocket first an envelope and then a small bag. In the envelope was Abe Hinchman's $200, and in the bag were four genuine stones. The other men, wherever they were, also had an envelope and a little bag, but in the one was simply a roll of green paper and in the other a few dried beans.

Abe Hinchman had merely played it as low down on 'em as he could, that's all. Legerdemain comes in handy once in awhile. He stopped around and sold two of the stones. The other two he kept.

A week later Abe Hinchman stepped off the train at Flatbrook and sauntered down the street. A diamond stud shone in his shirt bosom. He smoked a 20 cent cigar.

"Pretty flip, Abe," remarked a townsman—the jeweler, in fact—as he inspected the pin. "Where'd you get the dough?"

"Just been taking a little flier in Wall street with the boys," remarked Abe carelessly. Another hailed him.

"Well, Abe," said this one, "you look first rate. What you been doin' down there?"

"Well," returned Abe, "you can just bet that I stood on the steps in front of the Astor House along with the best of them. Yes, sir, I did."

"Here's a little thing for you, Millie," suggested Abe to Doc Clarkson's girl that day—"that is, if you'll say 'Yes.'" It was a magnificent solitaire ring. "Oh, Abe!" sighed the young lady in assent.

A week later Abe Hinchman entertained a select audience with the Indian box trick, the sword trick, the clothes basket trick, the cabinet trick and every trick in the business. It was simply great.

We Cannot Improve It

Taylor's Infants' Delight represents over forty-three years of constant effort along one line—the effort to make a perfect soap.

A liberal reward is waiting for any one who can tell us how to improve it in the slightest. We ourselves believe it to be perfect and can conceive of no way of improving it. The choicest oils from the Orient enter into its composition—olive oil from the first pressing of selected fruits—cocoanut oil, the best the market affords, and that refined with extra care—and with all this just sufficient otto of roses—that choicest perfume from the Sultan's Domain—to impart a delicate, wholesome fragrance to the skin. In we have produced a soap so mild and soothing—so wonderfully cleansing and healing, that it is universally used in homes of wealth and refinement where the best is considered none too good for the toilet.

We ask you to try at least one bar and know that we have not exaggerated its goodness.

Carlyle's Clothes.

Carlyle, like most men of genius, paid very scant attention to his clothes. "Until he came in touch with the society of ladies during the Kirkcaldy period," says R. S. Craig in "The Making of Carlyle." "It may be questioned whether he had ever taken the trouble to be even moderately well fitted in the important matter of clothes. He scorned the unessentials, and he was poor. Miss Welsh sharpened him, but there is reason to believe the improvement vanished with marriage and hard times. At all events, he wrote once ruefully to his wife on one of her absences that the coat she had contrived so cunningly out of a dressing gown was unfit to be seen any longer in the polite society of Rotten row, and he had reluctantly discarded it. Carlyle was then at the height of his fame and was riding daily in the park amid the rank and fashion of London."

Pockets.

"Women's clothes," remarked Mr. Eames, as he watched his wife pin on her hat, "are extraordinary vestments." He paused after having pronounced that unusual word and continued to watch his wife thrust the long steel wire here and there in the endeavor to find the hole it belonged in. Presently she succeeded and, turning on him, said, "What did you say, dear?"

Mr. Eames repeated his remark emphatically, inquiring finally if she were ready to go.

"I am sorry to be so late," she apologized as they went downstairs, "but I was doing some cleaning today that couldn't be put off. I had a dress that had to be done up in moth balls, and one of my hats was in need of a new ribbon, and then"—

Mr. Eames groaned to show that he still thought that woman's vestments were extraordinary.

"And then I cleaned the pockets of three of your suits, dear. There were wads and wads of dust in them. I counted fifteen pockets in each suit—no, there were sixteen in one—and three times fifteen makes forty-five, and one added is forty-six. I turned each pocket inside out and brushed the crease in the lining. You men have such complicated clothes, dear. Why, I never had more than three"—

"All clothes," remarked Mr. Eames, "are foolish. Let us drop the subject."

BUILDING A HOME.

How to Secure the Best Effects at a Small Cost.

Persons of limited means who are uilding houses in the country will nd that better effects may be secured ith soft wood stained with a thin arnish than with inexpensive and adly finished hard woods. For exmple, a cheap quality of oak treatd in the highly glazed fashion one ften sees has nothing to recommend , while soft woods hold most exuisite shades; also the work of ap lying the surface finish may be done y an inexperienced woman after a w trials on odd pieces that give ne an idea about putting on the quid evenly. Soft woods, well seaoned, will not warp, and white ones ake color best. If a water stain is pplied with a wide brush it permits he grain to show through. This may e differently treated when dry if one kes variety. If this finish is carelly rubbed with a dry cloth while et the wood shows a different color ffect than if left to dry without rubing.

Another tone is secured by rubbing he polish after it is dry and then pplying a small quantity of thin rniture oil. A shellac or sizing that ay be fixed by the local painter ill also bring another tone into the ffect.

Green and brown lend themselves o this treatment better than any ther shade, and really astonishingly retty tints may be developed from ither when the wood is treated in is manner. The surfaces should be mooth so that no fancy corners will ppear in doors or windows. This is o loss to a person who possesses ood taste, for the so called ornaents that are turned out by thousnds every day do not add to the oom's attractiveness.

In a small and inexpensive house, here the ceilings are low, wooden oor handles are prettier than glass r metals. They are more in keeping ith a cottage or bungalow plan and re also inexpensive.

Very good raftered ceilings may be ade at comparatively small expense thin beams or rough whitewood are sed. These are laid on edge and tained to match the rest of the oodwork. The ceiling that rests on hem is narrow boards dovetailed gether.

Diamond panes add tremendously the artistic appearance of a small ouse in the country and do not greaty increase the cost of building. The wer sash should contain one big ane, not to detract from the effect of e many small ones above.

Tragic End of a Flirt.

Details of the lynching of a young nd beautiful woman by a crowd of alous members of her own sex are to and from St. Petersburg. The affair ok place recently in the village of olochi, in the Russian Government Volhynia. The victim had incurred e hatred of the other women in the llage by her flirtations with the men the neighborhood, both married d single, and feelings reached a imax when it became known that her account one of the young men the village had broken his promise marry another girl. On coming out the church the other day the woen, both old and young, threw themlves upon the flirt, and in spite of er cries for mercy tore all her clothes f. They then dragged her through e village by the hair of her head, ating and stoning her mercilessly. first the men laughed, but when ey saw how savagely the girl was ing maltreated they attempted to scue her. The infuriated women, owever, drove them off and then aged their unhappy victim, who as by now a mass of wounds, to a rge tree just outside the village, here they hanged her to one of the anches and then lighted a fire of ushwood under her. When the poe arrived on the scene they found e victim of the women's fury lying ad under the tree, blackened to a nder.

How to Avoid Taking Cold.

If a woman is prone to catch cold sily (and the same holds good for abies, children and any one else), it necessary to sleep in a cool room. ever get overheated by wearing othing that is too warm, because erein lies much of the trouble. By tting overheated, perspiring freely, en getting in a draft, the result is more than apt to be a cold, whereas that same draft might not have hurt you if you had not been in a perspiration. Then, too, the judicious use of cold water may help prevent catching cold. After a warm bath in the daytime sponge off with cold water, especially the throat, the chest, back, ankles and feet. This will certainly help to prevent catching cold. This would not be necessary at night if taking the warm bath immediately before getting in bed.

A Question of Usage.

The choir began the hymn. When they came to the line, "Neither are they afraid," the composer of the music had so written it that it had to be repeated first by the soprano, then by the alto and finally by the bass. The soprano seemed to be of conservative taste and sang the line, "Nee-ther are they afraid." Apparently the alto had departed from the usage of her forefathers, for when she brought out the words they became "Ni-ther are they afraid," and it became a serious question which side the bass would take. The bass was an Irishman. Out rolled his rich voice, "Nay-ther are they afraid."

So the question of usage still remained unsettled.

Grecian Jokes on Physicians.

Among the jests of the ancient Greek humorists are many on the physician. Some of them are characterized by an almost modern extravagance. The following are from a popular Greek anthology

"Diophantus dreamed that he saw Hermogenes, the physician, and he never awoke again, even though he wore an amulet."

"Marcus, the doctor, called yesterday on the marble Jupiter; but, though he was Jupiter and though he was marble, his funeral takes place to-day."

Appropriate.

There was a great discussion in progress among the members of the faculty of a certain college. They wrangled long and raised their voices to too high a pitch, each eager to have the measure in question embody his particular variation of the idea. Finally a professor of large mind and calm voice, who had been silent, rose and made a tactful, conciliatory speech. As the effect of his words began to show in the peaceful quiet that settled over the fidgeting members, another professor, who also took things calmly, turned to his neighbor and whispered the line from Kipling:

"The oil can soothes the worrying cranks."

When the speaker had finished the more aggressive members took up the discussion again. Presently the professor who had Kipling in mind leaned over once more and quoted the line from "McAndrew's Hymn:"

"And now the main eccentrics start their quarrel."

Dodd's Kidney Pills Effect Another Grand Cure in Nova Scotia

Mrs. Margaret Brady Tells How They Relieved Her of Rheumatism and Made Her Stronger in Every Way

Green's Brook, Pictou Co., N.S., Nov. 26.—(Special.)—That diseased Kidneys are the cause of the ills from which so many women suffer and that they are cured completely and permanently by Dodd's Kidneys Pills, is once more proved in the case of Mrs. Margaret Brady, of this place.

"For five years," says Mrs. Brady when interviewed regarding her sickness and cure, "I was ill with Kidney and Liver complaint, which caused Rheumatism, Neuralgia and Heart Flutterings. My nervous system was affected and my blood seemed to lack vitality.

"I tried medicines and was under the doctor's care, but I received no benefit till I used Dodd's Kidney Pills and Diamond Dinner Pills. They relieved me of Rheumatism and made me stronger and better in every way. These remedies and no other cured me.

Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure diseased Kidneys, and all diseases that are caused by diseased Kidneys or impure blood.

STEAD'S SPOOK BUREAU

ENGLISH JOURNALIST TELLS OF AMAZING MESSAGE.

Dead Aviator Named Lefebvre Comes to Him and Tells Him to Warn M. Bolotoff Not to Use a Defective Motor—Relatives of Dead Man Are Incensed at Stead For Hurting Their Feelings.

A widespread sensation, not limited to spiritualistic circles, has been caused by the extraordinary story told to The Paris Matin by W. T. Stead, the well-known London journalist, in which he reports a conversation he held on Sept. 16 with the spirit of the French aviator, Lefebvre, who was killed recently in an aeroplane accident. The practical outcome of the spirit's communication was to prevent the Russian aviator, M. Bolotoff, to whom Mr. Stead conveyed Lefebvre's warning, from making an aeroplane ascent at Chalons with a motor which, according to the spirit, would fail to work at the critical moment.

The relatives of Lefebvre, through the mouthpiece of Lefebvre's former employer, the engineer, Lambert, are protesting against the publication of Mr. Stead's article as unfair to the memory of the late aviator and "the outrage by a tactless Englishman upon the feelings of mourners."

Altogether, the elements of a very pretty quarrel have been created by Mr. Stead's amazing tale, which is being discussed with equal passion by aviators, spiritualists and critics of manners.

Mr. Stead, it must be explained, founded some months ago at Torbray House, in the Strand, London, a kind of spiritualistic exchange presided over by a spirit named Julia, who is as eager as is Mr. Stead himself to bring living persons into communication with their departed friends and relatives and build a bridge across the borderland between this world and the next.

The members of this spirit exchange meet every morning at 10 o'clock, with "Julia" in the chair, but she is visible only to the mediums present.

Mr. Stead relates that on Sept. 15 last he had been asked by the Princess Wiassemily to accompany her on a tour to Melon Le Grand, near Chalons, to witness the experiments which her son was going to make with an aeroplane on the following Monday. On Sept. 16, after receiving two brief communications from "Julia," the clairvoyant employed at the exchange said he heard another voice speaking. Mr. Stead enquired who it was, and the answer came:

"I have been dead for some time. Mr. name is Lefebvre."

Mr. Stead, who had been abroad at the time of the fatal accident to Lefebvre, did not recognize the name, which was equally unknown to all the others members of the circle.

Mr. Stead then enquired of the spirit whether it knew Bolotoff's aeroplane.

"Yes," was the reply, "and tell the young man not to be too rash. I do not think there will be an accident, but the motor should be carefully tested. Do not go up yourself. I shall be at Chalons with you, for I write on the subject through your interceding spirit."

In reply to Mr. Stead's questions he said he did not know Bolotoff, but had met him and gave his former profession as a mechanician. On the following day Lefebvre's spirit, with the assistance of "Julia," described to Mr. Stead the accident which had proved fatal to him. He experienced, he said, a sense of falling, but lost consciousness before reaching the ground. He felt no pain or physical discomfort, but it seemed to him that his spirit was projected outward. He had the sensation of rapid rotation, then something seemed to yield, and he found himself in the air looking down upon his own corpse and the smashed aeroplane lying on the ground below. It was not disagreeable. He was aware of the presence of a very powerful being, who calmed him and who desired to write by Stead's hand.

Mr. Stead telephoned the spirit's warning to Bolotoff, who promised to be cautious. The motor which Bolotoff was using was well tried. It was a four-cylinder Panhard, which seemed incapable of breaking down, he thought. But when he mounted in the machine the motor absolutely refused to work. The starting crank broke and the experiments had to be abandoned.

"The Matin" publishes a telegram from M. Colliex, at Chalons, who was Bolotoff's assistant during the above-mentioned experiments, and he declares that not only did the crank refuse to work, but the magneto suddenly returned to its position of maximum advance, with the result that he narrowly escaped serious injury to his arm. He tested the apparatus and discovered that it could not have done this by itself. Lefebvre's family question the truth of Stead's story on the ground that a spirit would certainly have sent messages to relatives rather than to Bolotoff, whom he had hardly known; that in life Lefebvre was not a mere mechanician, but a qualified engineer, that he could not have said he spoke very little English, for he spoke none at all, and furthermore, Lefebvre being "incapable of fear," could not have lost consciousness at the beginning of his fall.

To this excited controversy the Parisian public is listening with open mouthed bewilderment and great amusement.

A Losing Business.

"He sold the mules to buy the automobile."

"Oh, yes."

"And it proved a losing business, for every day or two he has to hire the mules to pull the automobile out of the ditch."

Oak trees live 1,500 years, and the wood and bark of a single tree at times sell for as much as $3,000.

SEWING NEEDLES.

How They Are Fashioned From Coils of Fine Steel Wire.

We are so accustomed to seeing the little steel sewing needle in everyday use that we accept its presence as a matter of course, quite as if it grew on a tree like an apple.

It is true that needles have always been used, but not always in their present form. In times when skins of animals were worn for clothing the needle was made of fishbone, bone or ivory, without an eye and of goodly size and strength, in order to pierce the skins easily.

Since the latter part of the fourteenth century steel needles have been made. Various are the kinds and sizes which are now required for everyday use by a world of people for sewing by hand, by machine, for packing, upholstery and leather work, wonderful needles for surgical purposes and many others.

The material used in the manufacture of the needle consists of fine steel wire, which is supplied in coils. These coils are cut with powerful shears into lengths, each sufficient for two needles.

Several thousand of these lengths are placed together in a bundle, heated to red heat and then quickly straigthened by pressure and rolling.

These straigthened lengths are then pointed at both ends on a revolving grindstone. A grinder will point as many as 100,000 needles in a day, while machinery invented for the same purpose will point three times as many as a skilled workman.

Next comes the eyeing of the needles. You will remember that each length of wire referred to is sufficient for two needles. At the centre of each length, therefore, is stamped the grooved and rounded impression of two needle heads, end to end, and then perforated by steel punches.

Through the double eyeholes thus formed (of say 100 needles at a time) is threaded fine wire, giving an appearance of a two edged comb. The needles are held rigid and then broken apart with comparative ease between the eyeholes.

The needles are next hardened and tempered by being subjected to red heat, plunged into an oil bath, reheated again and gradually cooled.

After this they must be scoured and polished by friction combined with soft soap, oil and emery powder. Washing, drying and more polishing follow. In fact, there seems to be no end to the polishing and finishing processes. But when the work is finally completed the needles are as near perfection as modern machinery and human skill can make them.

The Disappearing Wife.

A woman in Silesia has been hauled into court by her husband because she persisted in growing thin in opposition to his wishes. In his petition for a divorce the Silesian gentleman declared that the lady obtained her husband under false pretences, for when he married her she was full sized and of ample and generous proportions and he had every reason to believe that she would remain so. When slimness became the fashion, however, she began fading away in order to wear the latest empire gown. She rode horseback three hours each morning, played tennis two hours, and then took long fat-reducing walks, while she ate like a bird.

How successful was this strenuous pursuit of slenderness may be judged, for in three months' time she had lost 31 pounds and a portly husband. For the hard-hearted Silesian judge granted the captious husband's plea for a divorce and delivered a fiery attack upon the prevailing styles in feminine architecture. He laid down the principle that no lady has a right to fade away without her husband's consent, and he completely disallowed defendant's plea that half a wife is better than none. The wife is left free to continue her disappearing process. It is hoped that her frugal habits of living will prove useful to her, now that she is deprived of a husband.

Long Canals.

The Grand Canal of China is the longest entirely artificial waterway in the world, extending as it does from Hangchau to Pekin, a distance of almost 700 miles. The part between the Yellow River and the Yangtze is said to have been constructed 500 years before Christ. The remaining portions were built separately at later dates, and Kublai-Khan, whose rule began in 1280, united them and made the continuous canal, which is still used. Much longer continuous waterways, partially natural and for the remainder of their extent artificial, exist elsewhere. Of these the longest reaches from the Chinese frontier to St. Petersburg. It measure 4,472 miles. Another, running from Astrakham to St. Petersburg, is 1,434 miles. Both these were projected and commenced by Peter the Great.

His Nose For News.

A cub reporter on a big daily paper was sent out by the city editor to get a story on the marriage of a young society girl and a man well known in the city.

The "cub" was gone about an hour and then returned and went aimlessly over to his desk, by which he sat down. Shortly afterward the city editor noticed his presence and his evident idleness.

"Here, kid!" shouted the superior. "Why aren't you at work on that wedding?"

"Nothin' doing," replied the boy.

"Nothing doing! What do you mean? Didn't the wedding take place?"

"Nope. The bridegroom never showed up, so there ain't nothin' to write."

The Nebulae.

The discovery of the gaseous nature of the nebulae came about largely through the use of the spectroscope and spectrum analysis. Fraunhofer proved that the spectrum of an ignited gaseous body is "noncontinuous, with interrupting lines," and J. W. Draper demonstrated that the spectrum of an ignited solid is always continuous, with no interrupting lines. In this way it was proved that many of the nebulae are gaseous, illustrating the process of development actually going on.

Deserted.

"Do you say your husband deserted you?" said the judge to a lady applying for a separation order from her husband.

"Yes, my lord."

"Please tell the court as concisely as you can how he deserted you."

"Two months after we had completed our honeymoon he scolded me because he thought I was extravagant in the matter of getting clothes, and I went home to my people."

"Yes. Proceed."

"Well, I waited and waited and waited for him to come and beg me to return to him, and he never did!"—London Telegraph.

Bright Answers.

The following gems are from a collection of examination answers in the possession of a high school teacher:

"A blizzard is the inside of a hen."

"Oxygen is a thing that has eight sides."

"The cuckoo never lays its own eggs."

"A mosquito is a child of black and white parents."

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

HARRY ADAMS

CONTRACT FOR LIGHTING OF THE NEW PUBLIC LIBRARY IS NOT YET SETTLED

The city council had an hour session last night, and cleared up some business that was urgent. Mayor Rush presided.

Ald. Bradburn, chairman of the Property Committee, presented the following report:

Your Property Committee beg leave to report as follows:

1. In reference to the letter from A. E. Dixon, on behalf of E. Green, regarding the settlement of the line of the street or reserve on the water front near Charlotte street, we recommend that this committee consider any offer that Mr. Dixon may make on behalf of Mr. Green for the property owned by the city, which Mr. Green occupies, and that Mr. Dixon be so notified, and in case no agreement is reached, that the matter be placed in the hands of the city solicitor.

2. We recommend that the tender of MacGregor & Reid, for the plumbing, heating and tiling for the new public library, at $2,500, be accepted.

3. We recommend that the tender of F. R. J. MacPherson Co., for the wiring, at $450, be accepted, providing they agree to furnish the certificates of the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association at the completion of the work.

4. We recommend that the architects for the Public Library, J. E. Belcher and W. Blackwell, be paid $300 on account.

Ald. Bradburn moved that the report be adopted with the exception of clauses one and three, the former to go to the whole council, and the latter back to the Property Committee. He explained that there was a misunderstanding about some work which had been done in connection with the lighting equipment at the library, and the Property Committee wished to take the matter up again.

The report was adopted with the two clauses mentioned above exempted.

The following report was presented by the Manufacturers' Committee:

Your Manufacturers' Committee beg leave to report as follows:

1. We gave instructions to have a by-law prepared to grant the Wm. Hamilton Co. a fixed assessment for municipal purposes of $10,000 for ten years, on condition that they employ seventy-five hands.

2. We recommend that the city solicitor draft a bill to amend the Municipal Act to provide that a bonus by-law may become law on a favorable vote of three-fifths of the electors who vote, and that Mr. T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P., be asked to take charge of it in the Legislature.

The report was adopted.

By-laws were passed confirming the contract for the heating, plumbing and tiling of the library, and also the snow-ploughing contracts.

Reports from the Fire, Water and Light Committee, and from the committee of the whole council were also adopted.

APPRECIATIVE AUDIENCE HEARD FRAULEIN STOLLE

The Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute was crowded with a most appreciative audience last evening, when Fraulein Antonie Stolle gave a lecture on "Old Friends and New in the Realms of Art." The Women's Art Association's branch of this city are to be congratulated on the success of the event, and there is no doubt but what a great deal of benefit was derived by the large number of students and art lovers who were present.

The Misses Gladman opened the programme with a bright duet from Carmen, which was much enjoyed. This was followed by a vocal solo by Mrs. Ryerson Ritchie, who came from Boston to be present at the lecture last evening and to sing at the request of the ladies of the Art Association. The solo was a very pleasing one, and was given in a most artistic manner. The accompaniment was played by Miss Helen Davies.

Before introducing the speaker of the evening, Mrs. Arthur Stevenson, president of the local branch of the Art Association, referred to the kindness of the Light and Power Company in allowing the use of their large stereoptican lantern, under the management of Mr. H. A. Fife.

In her opening remarks Fraulein Stolle told of the labor that was spent in copying the famous paintings on the small sizes of glass that would fit the lanterns, and of the task it was to faithfully reproduce the colors so that when the slides were shown on the canvas the colors would be the same as in the originals. Among the famous pictures that were shown were many from the Dresden, Munich, Rome, Leipzic and London art galleries. Many were familiar to most of the audience, who frequently applauded when a well known picture appeared on the canvas.

In the Italian schools there were paintings by Fra Lippi, Angelico and de Vinci, Corregio and Andre del Sarto. Some very fine reproductions of Raphael's works were given, and also some of Titian's. Among the favorites were St. Anthony of Padua by Murillo, Sistine Madonna by Raphael, Dutch Girl by Franz Hals, Holy Night by Correggio, Awakening of Spring by Reuyter and The Gleaners by Millet, and Spring by Corot, the famous French artists.

In the English schools there were paintings by Sir Frederick Watts, Turner, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Gainsboro, and Burne-Jones, while in the Dutch school some wonderful paintings by Rembrandt, the King of Shadows; Rubens and VanDyck were shown.

The programme was concluded with a piano solo by Miss Katherine Burnett, which was very enjoyable.

A vote of thanks to the lecturer and those who so ably assisted in the programme was moved by Mr. L. M. Hayes, and seconded by Mr. Mowatt, public school inspector.

The Womans' Art Association are to be congratulated on the success of the lecture.

Scene from "Billy" the latest Farce Comedy which is playing to big business in Montreal this week and which comes to "The Grand" next Wednesday, Dec 1st. under direction of "The Shuberts", Direct from a long run at Daly's Theatre, New York. Plan opens Monday Morning.

KING EDWARD STREET GIVEN TO THE CITY

Will Run From George to Lock Sts.--Given by Mr. D. W. Dumble

Mr. D. W. Dumble has presented a street to the city which will be known as King Edward street. It runs between George and Lock streets between land owned on the north side by Mr. Dumble and on the south side by Mr. H. Best, and will be about five hundred feet in length. The new thoroughfare will be 66 feet in width, but Mr. Dumble wishes to reserve in his own name a twenty foot strip along the south side. He will give a bond, however, that this reserve will never be built upon.

INTERCESSION FOR MISSIONS

At St. Luke's Church—Special Sermon on Work of W.A.

To-morrow will be observed as a day of intercession for missions by the W. A. at St. Luke's church. Rev. Dr. Langfeldt will preach a special sermon on the work of the W. A. All members of the W.A. and other communicants of the church are requested to attend Holy Communion at 11 o'clock. At the evening service the rector will preach the second sermon of the series on "Churchmanship and Labor." The new hymn book will be used.

COLBORNE RECTOR HERE ON SUNDAY

Will Preach at St. John's Church—Lecture on Monday Night

The Rev. J. Russell McLean, rector of Colborne, will conduct the services at St. John's church to-morrow, Advent Sunday. Mr. McLean was formerly lecturer at Toronto University, and is doing splendid work in the parish of Colborne, and at his first Sunday at St. John's not long ago, quickly made himself at home, spending a most happy day, notwithstanding a hard day's duty. Mr. McLean is a thorough Scotchman, and the Anglican Young People's Association has persuaded him to stay over Monday and deliver a lecture on Scotland, in the schoolroom. A hearty invitation is extended to all to come and hear a native born Scotch Highlander deliver a most interesting description of "my ain countree," which is singularly appropriate, coming on the eve of St. Andrew's Day. The romantic history of church life in Scotland is not any too well known, and it is hoped that a large crowd will assemble to spend a most interesting Scotch evening.

THE MOON AND THE COLOR LINE

The eclipse of the moon early this morning lived up to advance notices. The lunar body had it put all over it and no doubt will draw the color line in the future and refuse to take on any more of the dark stuff. A good many Peterborough people made the eclipse, which occurred early this morning, an excuse to stay out late.

THE HOUSE OF LORDS

When Lord Rosebery suggested that 150 be chosen out of the 400 of the "upper" House for legislative purposes he spoke as a man who was desirous of doing fairly by his country. The Lords is a hereditary and ex-officio chamber. Most of its component parts are know-nothings. Not having risen through their own representative qualities or by the choice of the nation they should not be there. Hence Lord Rosebery's suggestion of culling out the men of sense is a good one. Three-fourths of the Peers pride themselves on neglecting their legislative duties. Such men should not be tolerated. Because some of our Senators took their full term's pay for a few days' work that is no reason for approving of that way of doing things. In England they are not paid but it would be better if they were and then made to do what they were paid for.

AN INFAMOUS DOCTRINE

"In opposing A. E. Lancaster's bill, which would go a long way towards helping the poor man by reducing the number of appeals from the decisions of the railway commission, Hon. Mr. Aylesworth said:—

"In conferring upon a dissatisfied litigant any right of appeal from this Board, I fully conceded an advantage given to the rich as against the poor, but that, after all, is only an advantage which in every walk of life the man of wealth has by reason of his wealth over the man who is without resource. No matter what piece of business a man might desire to enter into, if he is possessed of large means it is a great advnatage to him, and I venture to question whether it would be right to take that advantage from him."

This statement, coming especially from a Minister of Justice, caused considerable adverse comment both in the house and in the lobbies."—Despatch.

It is this infamous doctrine as enunciated by Mr. Aylesworth, that has completely dominated the Laurier Government from the beginning in its railway, land, labor and immigration policy. Money is everything with this administration and as a consequence the Government is only a rich man's government. The poor or comparatively poor and the weak must bow down before the money-lords and to that inexorable fate which proclaims that since, but few can be rich it is up to the rest to thank God even for that mercy. A new meaning is thus given to "the poor ye have always with you." If the people of Canada will tolerate such a doctrine as this they deserve what they are getting.

How different is it with Sir James Whitney, who bade the rich man halt and protected the rights of the people in their own great source of cheap energy at Niagara. The Ottawa administration would have yielded to the power of the "man of wealth," who as Mr. Aylesworth says possesses "a great advantage." He surely does. It is such absurdities as Mr. Aylesworth has given voice to that breed socialism and even anarchy.

WHAT HAPPENED AT THE CONFERENCE

The conference called by Great Britani for devising means for the defence of the Empire failed of its purpose through the unexpected and disloyal action of Sir Wilfrid Laurier himself alone. We have waited patiently for the authentic proofs of his extraordinary conduct, and at last they have come to us through the medium of the offical parliamentary record.

A resolution endorsing the principle of an Empire united for purposes of defence was proposed and enthusiastically endorsed by the representatives of Great Britain, Australia, New Zealand and the South African federation, which includes the late Transvaal and Orange Free State, who came into the Empire with their own entire acquiescence. But not so with Canada. Sir Wilfred Laurier himself arose and addressed the conference, and to the amazement of its members, announced that Canada did not endorse any scheme which included it in a federation for the defence of the Empire. The details of Canada's proposed defence measures were to be spoken to by Sir Frederick Borden and Mr. Brodeur, but the big chief himself was there to announce with all the authority of Canada's first minister, and with all the finality that belongs to such an announcement, that he would "vote against" any measure for united action. Was it any wonder, then, that the Transvaal delegate arose and said that if this were true, then there was their assembling together vain, and the purpose of the conference totally destroyed! The resolution had to be withdrawn to save a crisis. The conversation that ensued between the other members of the conference and Sir Wilfrid Laurier was sharp, short and decisive. But it only determined him the more, and for any such resolution he would not vote, no matter what the experts upon defence might suggest—and he did not. Canada's representatives have disgraced Canada. This separation policy has all the bluntness of the thick edge of the wedge, but it is doubtful if the people of Canada are prepared to back up their Prime Minister in this betrayal. At present there is a calm. It is the calm before the storm that will break forth, we hope, in the House of Commons, when the debate begins. The belief of journalists, not only in Great Britain and Canada, but in other countries, is that a grave crisis has arrived in the British Empire at the very moment when it was supposed to be about to unite against all such contingencies. Germany rejoices. Uncle Sam asks how long we should be part of the Empire if the fleet of Great Britain were defeated upon the high seas. Not long. It is to this point that the Canadian policy is being directed. Are British Canadians alive or dead; or are we dominated by a superior power!

NEW YORK'S OPINION OF "BILLY"

A SHOW THAT WINS THE SOLID APPROVAL OF THE CRITICAL NEW YORK DAILIES MUST BE AN EXCEPTIONALLY GOOD ONE. "BILLY" DID:—

EVENING SUN.—"Can be heartily recommended. If anyone can see it without laughing until his sides ache—well, he ought to see a doctor."

HERALD.—"Audience began to laugh after fifteen minutes and continued until the final scene."

SUN.—"Every promise of proving prosperous."

TIMES.—"Very funny. A capital farce."

TELEGRAM.—"'Billy' is bully. Like a "comfy' little dinner."

GLOBE.—"Fine entertainment for those who go to the theatre to be amused."

TRIBUNE.—"Frolicsome farce, merrily acted. Destined to be a success."

COMMERCIAL.—"Filled with comic situations and funny speeches destined to create a laugh."

TELEGRAPH.—"Literally bit its way into humorland."

AMERICAN.—"A laugh in every line. Audience liked it immensely."

MAIL.—"Cleverly written and well acted. Scenes unique."

WORLD.—"Altogether it is worth while. Produced many a hearty laugh."

"Billy" is due to arrive at "The Grand" on Wednesday, December 1st

EVERYBODY WAS PLEASED

With the Tuneful Musical Comedy Success "The Cash Girl"—A Dainty Play With Many Winning Song Hits.

An audience's opinion of a show can be safely gauged on its reception of the offering. "The Cash Girl," which appeared at the Grand last night and this afternoon was very enthusiastically received, and all the musical numbers—of which there are many—were repeatedly encored.

"The Cash Girl" is a dainty, clean and tuneful play. Miss May Ward, in the name part, proved a sprightly and captivating little actress, and is seen to much advantage in several attractive songs and incidental dances. The rest of the cast took their parts excellently, and found immediate favor with the audience.

The story is based on the infatuation of a young man of good standing for a cash girl in the employ of the Macy Field's store, New York, and his parents show the greatest opposition to him paying attention to her. He invites her to his family's summer home, and there introduces her as a senator's daughter. Her bearing is sufficiently dignified for a while, but her frequent outbursts of a cash girl's line of talk don't get her anything in the way of a boost for her classical education. Of course her real identity is discovered, and the marriage is approved of, as it naturally would be, for if it wasn't how could the play end happily and after the orthodox fashion.

The stage settings are appropriate and descriptive, the first one representing the interior of Macy Field's store, and the second the lawn of his summer home in the Catskills. In the opening of the second act O Mister Moon, a very pleasing number, was sung with excellent effect, the background of the moonlit clouds being very natural and picturesque.

The quartette with the company sang in excellent voice, their rendition of Von Tilzer's popular Take Me Up With You, Dearie, with patter chorus, gaining them a long succession of recalls. Their eccentric clog and step dancing proved the best quartette dancing seen here.

Prominent among the song hits were: The Girl in the Looking Glass, Tale of an Old Rag Doll, If I Told You That I Loved You, O Mister Moon, You'll Come Back, Take Me Up Wity You, Dearie, and I'm a Detective.

Given Up To Die

No. 100 George St., Sorel, Quebec.

"I suffered from womb disease for seven years, with dreadful pains over the front of the body, over the back and down the legs. I had indigestion and chronic constipation and the constipation was so bad that I went sometimes for ten to fifteen days without any action of the bowels. I was ill in bed for one whole year. At one time I was so low that everyone thought I was going to die, and the last Rites of the Church were administered to me. I was treated by six different doctors without any benefit.

MADAME JOSEPH LIRETTE

Then I got a sample of "Fruit-a-tives," but I had no faith in them at all, and I would not have taken them only my husband begged so hard for me to try them. As soon as I began to take "Fruit-a-tives" I grew better, the bloating was relieved, the sleeplessness was cured, my stomach acted, and the bowels were moved, but above all the fearful womb pains were made easier.

I have taken eighteen boxes in all and I am now perfectly well again."

WOMAN WHO WAS INJURED PRESSING SUIT

Mrs. Torpey, of Ashburnham, is pushing her claim against the city for injuries sustained from tripping on a plank in Ashburnham last spring. She has issued a writ for $5,000 against the city.

The matter was considered by the Legal Committee some time ago, and on the advice of the city solicitor it was decided to take no action. Mrs. Torpey had representatives appear before the city council last night and they stated that the claim was going to be pressed if a settlement were not made by the city. It appears that Mrs. Torpey was more severely injured than was thought at first.

Mayor Rush was instructed to take the matter up with the city solicitor.

PAID COSTS OF THE COURT

And Were Allowed to go—Charged With Creating Disturbance in Church

The case of the four young men charged with creating a disturbance in a church in Dummer, came up in county police court yesterday, before Magistrate Edmison. His Worship was of the opinion that some disturbance had been raised, but as the young men were of good standing and respectable, he thought it would not be advisable to register a conviction against them. They were accordingly allowed to go on payment of costs.

Mr. F. D. Kerr appeared for the defendants and Mr. G. N. Gordon acted for the complainant.

CONTRACT FOR WOODSTOCK POWER

Woodstock, Nov. 25.—(Special).—The Woodstock water and light commissioners have awarded the contract for the supply of equipment for the hydro-electric power station here to the Canadian General Electric Co. for $20,000.

Six Lessons on :: ::
:: :: HOW TO SING

By Madame Blanche Marchesi

Most Famous of French Singing Teachers

No. 1.—THE ARTIST'S EQUIPMENT.

Healthy vocal cords and perfect vocal outfit do not necessarily make a great singer.

There have been great artists with the slenderest of vocal equipment and there have been voices of high perfection which could not rouse an audience to enthusiasm.

A great many things are of importance to the would-be singer. Some of these may appear to you as unworthy of consideration, but they all tell in the end and go to make up a great artist.

Nowadays the public is not content with mere perfection of tone. There must be soul and sympathy, intelligence and knowledge behind it.

On the concert stage it is no longer possible for a singer to trill a few pretty little ballads in a sweet manner and let it go at that. Psychology has invaded the concert stage. Each song must be interpreted. The singer must have mastered not only all its vocal difficulties, but he or she must get behind mere words and music of the song into the mood and personality of the writer and composer.

To do all this requires intelligence, learning and careful study.

The concert programme of to-day is an entirely different thing from what it was even five years ago. The public is no longer content with the good old classics and some of the charming modern compositions. Putting together the programme of to-day necessitates endless work and research. There must be something novel. And usually that novelty is found among very old compositions for which archives and libraries are searched. A few year ago I introduced to the public some of the eighteenth century pastourelles which at the time were unknown in France, and which I had found among old music in the National Library in Paris. Since then great quantities of music of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries have been brought to light, mightily modernized as to accompaniment, and are now sold in popular editions in all music-loving countries. And in making up my programmes I turn to different and undiscovered fields.

Another of the would-be singer's requirements is a certain amount of breeding and good manners. The would seem to have nothing in particular to do with an artistic career. Manners have nothing to do with one's tone production; and who cares whether a famous tenor eats macaroni with his fingers in his off hours? Yet the vocal aspirant must endeavor to repair any deficiency in manners and breeding resulting from lack of early training.

But on the concert and operatic stage incidents are likely to occur which show the artist's innate good breeding and his manners. I remember witnessing the performance of an opera in which a young man with a beautiful tenor voice was to be tried in the role of the hero, impersonating a King of Spain. All the rehearsals had gone well; the tenor behaving most satisfactorily and singing like an angel. There was a long scene at which the king-tenor sat at a table and consumed his dinner.

During the rehearsals there had been no food on the table, and the young man contented himself with making a few motions as if eating. At the performance, however, he was served with cream puffs, and what was the horror of the stage manager when from the wings he beheld His Majesty eating cream puffs with a knife!

The other day I assisted with one of your famous critics at the debut of a young American singer. The girl had a charming voice, well trained and flexible. But she had evidently never been taught anything but mere voice placement. The necessity of looking her best, of being well gowned, standing in a graceful and easy position and walking on and off the platform with dignity and a good carriage, had evidently not been impressed upon her.

She dashed onto the stage like a whirlwind, swinging her arms; her frock of fine material was cut too short in front and was not well fitted. When singing she stood either with one hip out or in a strained position, with her shoulders too high. This rigid and ungraceful attitude gave her an appearance of being frightened, while her face, instead of being lighted with a friendly smile, was contorted into a most disfiguring grin. Her whole personality was against her, and she will have to remedy some of her faults of carriage and of deportment before she can hope for a really great success.

For the audience is influenced at once by the artist's demeanor, and the charm of a gracious and graceful personality is part of the equipment necessary to success.

THE LOCAL OPTION MOVEMENT IN THE CITY

The Matter Appearing in This Department is Furnished by the Peterboroug Temperance and Moral Reform League Which Has Arranged for its Publication.

THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND AND LOCAL OPTION

The Anglican Church of Canada is opposed to the bar and in favor of the enforcement of local option by-laws wherever possible. People who state the contrary are not acquainted with the facts. The General Synod is the highest council in Canada of the Church of England. The journal of proceedings of the fifth session of this Synod held in Ottawa, September, 1908, shows that the Synod then placed itself on record as in favor of the adoption of local option by-laws. The portion of the report dealing with this matter that was adopted, read as follows;—

"In glancing over the provinces of the Dominion it is manifest that there is a great consensus of opinion concerning the bar under our present license system, viz., that it is a public menace."

"Your committee recognizes the difficulties which beset the enforcement of any system for the control of the liquor traffic, and are not surprised to find that breaches of the law continually arise, but when local option is enforced they are confident that the younger generation growing up without the inducement of the bar, and the change of sentiment regarding the use of intoxicants in the family will prove immense factors in the promotion of temperance habits."

"One of the greatest evils in connection with the use of intoxicants is the treating habit. To eradicate this evil should be the aim of every man. Your committee look forward to the day when those who feel at liberty to use intoxicants themselves will at least make the rule never to treat or accept a treat of intoxicating liquors."

"Your committee would make the following recommendations;—

1st—That wherever it is not now the case it should be made illegal for minors to enter the bar where intoxicants are sold.

2nd—That where local option does not reign the hours of sale be shortened by the provincial authorities.

3rd—That full advantage should be taken, where practical, of the adoption and putting in force of local option under the present license law.

Answer.—The manufacture of liquor will be stopped, just in proportion as the manufacturers find that they are not making liquor at a profit. The manufacturers of liquor are not the type of men who will make liquor and give it away. When local option was carried in over 20 counties in Michigan within the past year, the liquor manufacturers estimated that the loss in trade to them would be about twenty million dollars.

Since the local option wave has been spreading through Ontario the business of the breweries has been falling off at a rapid rate. Take the case of Owen Sound. Before local option came into force Owen Sound had two breweries. In 1904 these breweries produced an average of 22,113 gallons of liquor per month. In 1905, 24,727 gallons per month. On May 1, 1906, local option came into force. For the first four months the average was 16,094. For the last eight months of 1906 the average was 13,440. For ten months in 1907 the average was 10,111 gallons per month.

WHAT GOOD HAS THE BAR-ROOM DONE YOU?

OTHER OBJECTIONS TO LOCAL OPTION AND ANSWERS TO THEM.

Now that the local option fight is becoming interesting, new arguments are being trumped up every few days, and old ones are being rehashed, often with the idea of fooling the persons hearing them, and who may not be in a position to answer them offhand. The following arguments are being advanced occasionally. Partial answers to them are given;—

THE BREWER CANNOT SELL IN PETERBOROUGH

Objection No. 1.—The local brewery has a Dominion license. If local option carries the brewery will still have the right to fill orders for liquor, and can even canvass around the town for orders and fill the orders later. Local option therefore will only hurt the hotels and benefit the brewery.

Answer.—This is absolutely not the case. Its Dominion charter does not permit it to override the provisions of the Ontario License Act. Breweries are not allowed to sell liquor in any form or style of package in local option districts.

At the last session of the Ontario Legislature the section of the liquor license act governing the sale of liquor by breweries in local option districts was amended by the addition of the following words:—"But no such beers or spirits shall be sold to any unlicensed person in any municipality having a population of less than 4,000, nor shall any such beers or spirits be sold or delivered by or on behalf of any holder of a brewer's warehouse license within any municipality in which a by-law is in force."

After local option carries the law does not permit of a brewer's warehouse license being issued while local option is in force. To make doubly sure that the local brewers will not be permitted to sell liquor in Peterborough after local option carries enquiries were made from the license departments which in answer to a question on this point, has sent the following reply:

"With regard to brewers, no brewer operating his brewery in a local option municipality is permitted to sell his beer to persons residing within the municipality no matter whether the order is received at the brewery or not. He can sell only to persons living outside the local option municipality."

WILL THE LAW BE ENFORCED?

Objection 2.—The law will not be enforced. Liquor will be sold on the sly and in this way more harm will be done than under the present system.

Answer.—This claim has been made in other municipalities where local option contests have been held.

So many hotel keepers and others who have tried to evade the law have been sent to jail that this argument is losing its force. In Owen Sound no less than five men who tried to break the law have been sent to jail. When the local option campaign was in progress in Owen Sound these five men were loud-mouthed in saying:—"The law will not be enforced. You can not enforce it." Since then they have served time behind prison bars for having tried to violate it. Experience in the several hundred municipalities in Ontario where the law is in operation shows that it is being well enforced. The harder and tighter and more severe you make the law regarding the sale of liquor, the less violation you will have.

Our Country's Future Depends Upon Our Manhood and Womanhood, The Bar-room Business is Built up by the Ruin of Both.

COMMERCIAL MEN FOLLOW TRADE

Objection No. 3.—Commercial travellers will not come to a town where there is no open bar in the hotels.

Answer—They won't eh?

Commercial travellers will go wherever there is an order to get if they have to hang by their toes on a clothes line over night.

Commercial travellers go to the town because there is business in it. There will be more business done in a town under local option.

There will be more travellers come and the question of hotel accommodation will not hinder them.

It would never do to have the impression go abroad that commercial travellers are a lot of softies. You will find them up in New Ontario stopping at a one-roomed shack with mud floor. You will find them out west sleeping in an Indian tepee, you will find them in a country village stopping at a licensed hotel full of the vilest odors of stale beer and dirty cooking. You will also find them in local option towns in clean, quiet, orderly, respectable stopping places.

They follow the trade, and trade follows local option.

IT WILL PARALYZE BUSINESS

Objection No. 4.—If local option is carried it will paralyze business.

Answer—How do you know? Prove it. Show us some cities where local option has been carried where business has been paralyzed. The temperance workers in Peterborough have been bringing temperance speakers from cities where there is local option, who claim emphatically, and provide proofs to substantiate their claims, that local option has benefitted, not injured business. Why do not the anti-local option workers bring forth proof of their statements? They cannot do so, or they would. We have published numerous letters in the column to show that local option has benefitted large cities in the United States. Here are some figures to show how local option has paralyzed trade in a few, out of a number of places that might be quoted.

In Southampton a canvass of the business men showed that their opinion was 19 to 3 that local option had been a benefit to business. In Owen Sound a canvass of the leading merchants showed that out of 27 interviewed only four were found opposed to local option. In Brighton 46 business men signed a statement that local option had benefitted their town. Not one would make a contrary statement. And so we might go on. So long as the paralysis is confined to the bar-room, and the evil that emanates therefrom, decent citizens have no right to complain.

THE MORE BAR-ROOMS THE MORE DRUNKENNESS

STOP THE MANUFACTURERS FIRST

Objection No. 5.—There is no use trying to get local option as long as liquor is manufactured, for as long as it is manufactured it will be sold,

A morning glass of puts you right for the whole day. 28

IFTEREST OUTSIDE

The following letter to the president of the City Temperance League shows the interest that is being taken outside the city, and also proves that Lakefield citizens know a good thing when they have it.

Dear Sirs,—A young man from Lakefield, who believes local option will mean much for Peterborough every way, left with me to-day the enclosed to help on the campaign. Kindly hand over same to the secretary of the association and oblige.

Sincerely yours,

W. B.

ALL READY FOR THE S. S. PROCESSION

The Sabbath school procession will start to-morrow afternoon from two points, namely, from George street church and from St. John's church.

Starting from the northern limits, Grace school and Auburn school will arrive at George street church at 2.20. Then forming up at 2.25 the procession proceeds to Water street to St. Paul's church, where St. Paul's school will fall into line at 2.30. The route then is along Murray street to George street again, where at 2.55 Mark street, Bethany Tabernacle and Gospel Hall schools will be added to the ranks. At 3.00 o'clock, proceeding along Murray street the Baptist school will fall in. The procession proceeds to Aylmer street along Aylmer to Brock, where at 3.05 St. Andrew's school joins the main body. The route then is south on Aylmer to Charlotte, taking in the Salvation Army school on the road south. The procession is due at Charlotte street at 3.15.

The procession from the south leaves St. James' church at 2.40, proceeding direct to Park street Baptist church at 2.50. Thence the scholars proceed to Knox church by 3 o'clock, and to Charlotte street via Reid street by 3.10. Charlotte street school falls in in the rear, and the procession proceeds along Charlotte to Aylmer, arriving there at 3.15.

Then the whole procession, headed by the north section, proceeds to the Opera House.

On arriving at the Opera House the men who are leading form up and allow the children and ladies to pass into the building, where they occupy the ground floor. As each school comes up the men will step aside and allow the ladies and children to pass in. When all the ladies and children are in the men will countermarch, and will occupy the first gallery.

Those in the procession will be seated first at the Opera House. No one will be allowed to enter till those in the parade has been accommodated.

A Trip Through Italy

All who wish to enjoy "A Trip Through Italy," are invited to the Y.W.C.A. on Thursday evening next. Rev. E. A. Pearson will conduct the party.

The body of Henry Radcliffe was buried at Kingston after lying two years in a vault.

Alfred Hastings, the Port Stanley hotel porter, met a natural death, the coroner's jury found.

Frank Polley, a mechanist, was killed in the shafting of the Magee pulp mill at St. John, N.B.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

It is officially denied at London that Ambassador Bryce at Washington is to be replaced.

A despatch from Seward, Alaska, says that town was party destroyed by fire yesterday.

Ten more assistant weighers have been dropped by Collector of the Port Loeb from the New York customs service.

Sir George Drummond, who has had a severe cold for two weeks past, is better, and expects to be out in a week's time.

Austen Chamberlain, speaking at Hackney, said his policy included a two-shilling tax on foreign corn, with preference to the colonies.

The volcanic eruptions at Santa Cruz, Teneriffe, are diminishing. One of the craters has ceased activity. The lava is advancing slowly and will not reach Santiago and Tamains for several days.

A new chief accountant of the Marine and Fisheries Department, Ottawa, has been appointed in the person of A. Boyle, formerly agent of the department at Prescott. He succeeds W. Owen, resigned.

It is unlikely that the Duke of Connaught will become Governor-General of Canada. The duke and his family leave for Cairo in January, remaining for some weeks, and then he purposes going to East Africa on a shooting expedition.

The Almonte Knitting Co. mill is shut down by the strike of 26 girl finishers. Three weeks ago they "struck" because a girl was dismissed; then, going back, they struck again when the strike leaders were let go, and, after returning to work they decided yesterday to strike again.

The Quebec Battlefields Commission yesterday awarded the massive gold medals, struck in honor of the tercentenary celebration last year, to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Earl Grey, Sir Louis Jette (then lieutenant-governor), Premier Gouin and Sir George Garneau, mayor of Quebec.

Two Fingers Severed.

Lindsay, Nov. 26.—Albert Quibell, an employe of Carew's large shingle mill, yesterday morning had two fingers completely severed off his right hand.

Miss Grace Dand, school teacher at Norland, near this place, is the only surviving child of the late Mr. and Mrs. Dand, who were burned to death at Collingwood. Miss Dand knew nothing of the death of her parents until a day of two after the catastrophe occurred.

Charged With Perjury.

Barrie, Nov. 26.—In the Police Court yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Theresa Guthrie and her daughter, Clara Guthrie, were formally charged with perjury in their depositions at fire inquests as to their visits to Allandale on Nov. 17 and 18 anent "the Miss Meeks'" trunks, and also as to the contents of the trunks. Their evidence in this regard was contradicted by Baggageman Charles Lowe and Expressman Roy Stone.

The information was laid by Crown Attorney Cotter and the prisoners let out on bail of $400 on the bonds of S. J. Guthrie, to appear at 11 a.m. Monday next.

Attorney W. A. Boys said the prisoners didn't wish to elect or plead until after the investigation, which resumes to-day.

Auto Fatality.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Nov. 26.—Orrin W. Watson, 31 years old, of Hawkinsville, Ga., was instantly killed here yesterday in an automobile accident.

Driving his car about 50 miles an hour, he lost control of it, and the machine crashed against a telegraph pole. Watson's skull was smashed. His companion, Louis Boore, of this city, was severely injured.

A Conservative Convention.

Ottawa, Nov. 26.—A sub-committee of the Conservative caucus has been appointed to consider the time and place of the party convention. Ottawa, Toronto and Winnipeg each has its advocates. The gathering will not likely be held before next summer, the idea of one in January not meeting with much favor.

Josie Carr Dead.

Kingston, Nov. 26.—A report here from the West tells of the death of Josephine Carr, a young girl who four years ago abducted and killed an infant in Toronto.

She spent three years in the penitentiary and was finally pardoned and transferred to the Northwest to begin life anew.

Referred to Canada.

London, Nov. 26.—The invitation from the United States for Great Britain to participate in an international conference with a view to regulate the killing of seals in the international waters of North America, has been referred through the Colonial Office to Canada.

Gets Three Years.

Kingston, Nov. 26.—Hiram Smith, a young Austrian, who pleaded guilty to highway robbery, was sentenced by Judge Price to three years in the penitentiary.

Indians Break Jail.

Hagersville, Nov. 26.—Two Indians of notorious character, Laform and David Goosey, arrested for being drunk, escaped from jail during the night.

A Grain Blockade.

Canora, Sask., Nov. 26.—A grain blockade exists here, all the elevators being full and farmers unable to secure cars.

The Daily Review

SATURDYA, NOV. 27, 1909.

JOHN SANDFIELD MacDONALD

The unveiling of the statue recently erected to the memory of John Sanfield MacDonald, Ontario's first premier, has served to call attention to the fact that though a Catholic in faith, he did much to promote kindly feelings between citizens of all creeds in the days when religious acrimony was at its height. Here in Ontario he demonstrated that it is possible for men to work together for the common up-building of a community whilst cherishing different religious views.—Catholic Register.

If the clergy could be persuaded to keep out of politics it would be as in the days of "John Sanfield" but when governments and administrations are bombarded with letters and clerical threats what can be expected but that the sanctity of the holy office will be ridiculed and the interference of the clergy resented. John Sanfield was not such a man. Like Sir John Thompson he did not obtrude his religious views on the people and it is due to this fact also that the latter, though a "convert," received the votes of his former co-religionists. The lesson then to be drawn is "keep religion out of politics." If a man seeks a position because he is a Catholic or a Protestant, he should because of so doing by that fact be disqualified. The setting of one form of belief up against another in rivalry for office is a contempt of religion as well as of the people. It is dragging down the attributes and dignity of a presumably "exalted office" to the level of ward-politics. When the clergy start out to secure some trifling office or situation for a loyal son of the church he belongs to he is doing what "John Sanfield" resented and it was because of this that the first premier of this province has remained dear to the people of this province without distinction. The amount of harm done by this seeking for office on the grounds of religious belief is so great as to represent in itself, practically, the whole line of cleavage between those of different religious professions. Catholics and Protestants can get along well enough together or with not more than the usual amount of friction between individuals of the same faith, if let alone and if the profession of a belief ceased to be used as a political subterfuge the people would settle themselves down to an evolution of peace and equity that under the present circumstances is impossible.

PUBLIC SPEAKING

Lord Rosebery opened on a most solemn note: "I am oppressed with the awful gravity of the situation, by far the gravest in my lifetime, the gravest since 1832.

"The Budget," he declared, "is crude, vindictive, and threatens to poison the very sources of our national supremacy. It has already spread over the country like a miasma bringing want of confidence, and want of credit."

Hardly had the Unionist cheers died away before Lord Rosebery turned on the serried ranks of titled enemies of Lloyd-George. "But we are aware," he said, "that the hereditary character of this House lends itself to effective satire and criticism when it comes before the people. When I look around on the assembly which makes this claim to exercise supreme power in the state, and observe the youth of some who lack influence and gravity, and others known for their self-chosen abdication from the legislative duties of the majority. I doubt and pause. I want to know with what credentials these men will be able to face the popular hurricane."

The above quotation from the English correspondent of the Montreal Star gives an idea of the style of the greatest of living British orators. In all the greatest of British speeches, the classic style prevails. It is impossible to speak good, effective, idiomatic English without drawing upon the classic style, for the Greek and Latin are a large part of the foundation of the English language. Anglo-Saxon cannot be used for certain august purposes. It was not the language of the cultured or the governing, and whilst beauty in language as in art, may be pooh-poohed by those who do not appreciate it, at first, ultimately it wins its way just as the Metropolitan Museum of Art is now New York's and Chicago's pride. There was a time when the citizens of both places cried as with one voice: "Give us pork and sausages and beer. To h--l with frills!" But the animal cannot always triumph in man. The head is more important than the stomach. The time comes when he must acknowledge the supremacy of the intellectual. To do otherwise is to lay himself at the door of defeat.

To deny the usefulness of the classic is to deny the very men who were the ornament of antiquity. Demosthenes and Cicero were the wonder of their own age, and have continued to be that of succeeding ages. It is true that even Plato has at times suffered eclipse in popular estimation, but there is in humanity a sense of beauty that cannot be denied. Beauty is a combination of all that is useful in just and proper proportion. It is that which characterizes the splendid speeches of Rosebery. He is not flamboyant. Flamboyance or bombast is just as absurd and more so than what is known as the language of plain bread and butter, by which is usually meant a combination of bad grammar and language, only locally understood. It is true that John Bright spoke the language of the Bible (King James' version). But while this language is simple, it is correct, and above all things, dignified and impressive. He read the classic Milton, also.

There is something in the quality of Lord Rosebery's intellectuality that makes him a power and an influence. He flashes occasionally as the flash precedes the storm, but he never short-circuits. He is grave, orderly, pleasant or satirical, as the case requires, and has learned the language where it must of necessity be best spoken at the English universities. Occasionally a man like John Burns will strike us with his directness and force. This style serves best for stating facts. But when it comes to describing subtle influences for good or bad which most affect the state or the individual, and must be described in language shaded to express exactly what is most elusive and hardest to hold, then only the great orators like Rosebery and Gladstone are equal to the occasion. It is they who alone have that prophetic sixth sense which only the really great are ever endowed with. It is that which makes them great.

An artist-genius takes the same materials and produces unequalled beauty. A near-genius will paint and paint well, as scores of others have done, but he will lack in the quality of the imagination, which, being kept well in hand, is the world within the world of the mind where things are perfected before being given back again. It has often been debated as to how a speaker should speak. It is conceded that he must speak so as to be understood. It would be useless to use the language of Milton to a group of miners or to children. But Rosebery is speaking to the intellectual men of Great Britain, and it affords him a scope which he is able to take full advantage of. Beneath it all is that sincerity of purpose and love of truth which gives power and influence to what he says. No man can be great who is either selfish or sinister, for no man can be great without being more or less truly great, and while Napoleon is considered so only because his real greatness overbalances his evil qualities, it must be noticed that the balance in which he is weighed is not that of mere success. It is that of real success. Americans cultivate the epigrammatic style. It is largely that which takes best in Canada at present, also. It is a succession of little pictures, picture-post-cards, which surprise and entertain, but do not differ materially from the methods of the kindergarten. We are speaking of the present day American style. Daniel Webster was of a different mold. We are too much disposed in Canada to approve of what we like, rather than of what we should. No improvement in any direction is possible under such conditions. If a mechanic observed this rule our mechanical advancement would not be possible. "He who would be supreme must deny himself." We must needs take this ancient maxim severely to heart. We are prone to self-indulgence.

FRENCH SCHOOLS

La Patrie, in one of its series of articles on bilingual schools, points out that the Congress of French-Canadians soon to be held at Ottawa will have for its chief object the demanding of bi-lingual schools in Ontario, that is, where the French-Canadian pupils are in the majority, the language used by the teachers in teaching shall be French. As a matter of necessity the English children in the section will have to learn French if they are to go to school at all, or else their parents will have to provide schools of their own at a double tax. This in a British country! It is not likely that Sir James Whitney will agree to the establishment of French schools in Ontario. It is not likely that the people of Ontario will allow the introduction of bilingualism into every branch of its service, as is, in this move, foreshadowed. The official and public language of Canada should be English. As a matter of accommodation and where it is likely to work a serious and unnecessary handicap as in remote districts, the teacher of a school by special permit might be allowed to use French, but it should not be allowed as an established privilege, for a bi-lingual Canada is an absurdity, and in view of historical circumstances an injustice. This country is British, at least up till lately we supposed it was, but now we find that it is as much French as British, if not more. This idea is erroneous, and the sooner it is corrected the better. But the French are using every effort to improve their opportunities. It is really surprising how ambitious and menacing they have become. If those in the U.S. could be persuaded to join the brethren in Canada, as seems likely, they could, in view of the "hands off" to Britain policy of Sir Wilfrid, swamp the rest of us and restore the flag that floated over Quebec before 1763. Facts speak louder than words, but even the words are with us now since no disguisement is offered of a bold and dangerous emprise.

WHAT THE GRANGERS SAY

"The annual meeting of the Dominion Grange commenced this afternoon, with the master, E. C. Drury, in the chair. In the course of his annual address, Mr. Drury recounted the steps taken towards the formation of a National Farmers' Council. Comment was made on the fact that in spite of a strong deputation of the Grange waiting upon and urging the Government during the last session of Parliament to take steps to put a stop to illegal combine and trusts, nothing has been done. "This," the address said, "lends a strong appearance of truth to the whisper that campaign funds are replenished from these sources."

The master was bitter in his reference to the proposed Canadian navy, which he described as a most "regrettable movement." "No more unpatriotic steps," he says, "could be taken," and he continued in this strain, saying that apparently the voice of a few jingoes and interested capitalists was more powerful than that of the real producers of the nation. He emphatically protested against the carrying out of such a scheme before the people had pronounced upon it."

The waste involved in the Canadian navy as well as its unpatriotic character, has aroused the Grange. The "campaign-funds" reference is good and it is good because it is true. Canadian politics is not unlike crap-shooting, and much so it ought to be declared not only illegal, but impossible. The people, who form the toiling masses and producers have to pay for all this rascality. The wrong men are riding in the carriages.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The new Assessment Act exempts the incomes of married men up to $1,500 and of bachelors' incomes up to $600.

The Globe advises calm in the present G.T.P. classification of rock charges. The cause of the chief engineer's resignation is now revealed. Mrs. Snowden Coming.

Toronto, Nov. 27.—Toronto is to be favored with an address by Mrs. Philip Snowdon, the wife of an English M.P., who is considered to be the greatest woman speaker living. Not since Frances Willard has there been an English-speaking woman with such a gift of oratory as this lady, who is the idol of the moderate wing of the suffragist party. She has a wide acquaintance among English legislators, and since her marriage to Mr. Snowdon she has virtually lived in the House of Commons. Shortly after her graduation at Liverpool she became interested in the social conditions of England and led a vigorous crusade against the heavy drinking of those days in labor clubs.

$72,500 For "An Old Jew."

London, Nov. 27.—Lawrence's famous portrait of the Duke of Wellington was sold at auction yesterday for $10,000.

The Agnews have bought in St. Petersburg Rembrandt's portrait of "An Old Jew." The painting was sold to the Agnews by M. Delaroff, a private collector, for $72,500. M. Delaroff bought the picture a few years ago for $20,000 from Countess Adlerberg.

May Go to Asylum.

Chatham, Ont., Nov. 27.—Mrs. Mary Rumble, the woman charged with dynamiting her husband's house in Harwich Township and who comes up for trial to-day, will likely be sent to the London Asylum. Experts have been working on the case, and it is understood that the result will be that she will be pronounced insane.

Graft In German Navy.

Kiel, Germany, Nov. 27.—Extensive financial irregularities have been discovered in the department which furnishes meat for the navy. The discrepancies are especially serious in the division through which torpedo boats are supplied. It is likely that arrests will be made very soon.

Gave $5,000 Reward.

Paris, Nov. 27.—A special to the Figaro from Madrid says that Eugene Higgins, the New York yatchsman, has made a present of $5,000 to the man who rescued him when the Varuna was wrecked on the northwest coast of the Island of Madeira.

Berlin Not Informed.

Berlin, Nov. 27.—It was officially stated yesterday that nothing was known here of the reported financial irregularities in the naval meat supply at Kiel.

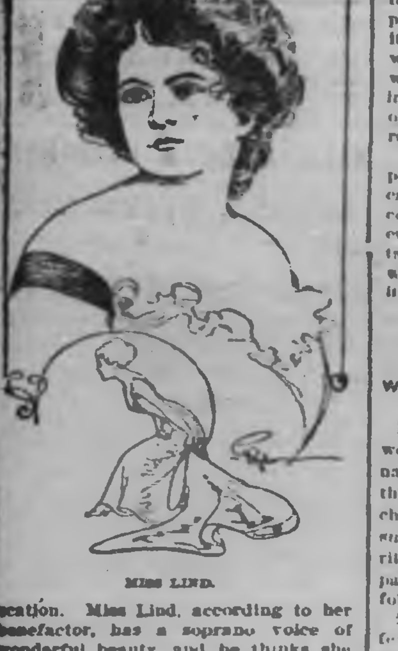
Woman's World

NIECE OF THE FAMOUS JENNY

Another Gifted Singer in Lind Family Who Will Come to America.

A grandniece of the famous Jenny Lind is to visit the United States during the coming winter and sing in a number of cities. This information was given by F. B. Luce of Sunbury, Pa., who discovered that the Swedish girl had a remarkable voice and saw to it that she was given a musical education. Miss Lind, according to her benefactor, has a soprano voice of wonderful beauty, and he thinks she will in the course of a few years become as famous as Jenny Lind. She has already appeared in London and other European cities. In addition to the sweetness of the tones this young woman has a voice of great volume.



MISS LIND.

Closed Doors and Windows.

A schoolteacher asked a dreamy eyed little girl a simple question, but met with no response. The question was repeated, and still the little girl gazed absently out of the window. In righteous indignation the teacher raised her voice and in a severe tone demanded an explanation for such shameful inattention. A dazed look came over the little face, and then the child burst into tears.

When asked why she had not answered at first she said that she had not heard.

"You did not hear me?" repeated the teacher. "Why, I was standing right here beside you."

At this point an older sister raised her hand and said that her sister was hard of hearing at times and could not hear them at home.

With that explanation the teacher understood more than the seeming inattention of the day. She knew why a child who seemed so bright in many ways had proved so often to be hopelessly stupid in her studies.

The child was sent to a specialist and her trouble found to be a simple one easily remedied, with the result that a pupil who had been a constant source of dissatisfaction to her teacher became one of the brightest, most interested children in the class.

It is doubtless too true that many children are not blessed with the mental equipment of others. The mothers and fathers of such children must comfort themselves with the thought that brilliancy is not the only thing to be desired in an individual and be content with what virtues and graces their children possess. But it is surely little enough to ask that parents should satisfy themselves that this is the case before yielding to the inevitable.

The senses have been called the windows of the mind. They are the only means of approach that the individual has to the outside world. Especially is this true of the senses of sight and hearing, and if these be lacking or defective the means of approach is blocked just that much.

No one would expect a person living in a house with barred doors and windows to have much knowledge of happenings on the street, and yet it not infrequently happens that children are called dull because they do not keep up with others who have either seen or heard a third or a half more than they.

The most frequent cases of neglect are of course found among children with only slight defects of sight or hearing. Serious defects are noticeable at once, but a child who misses only a small part of what is going on may be allowed to go for years before this has been noticed.

Week Ends Are Shorter.

It may interest the hostess of today to know that the proper length for the popular week end visit is shorter than it used to be. An invitation for the week end used to mean that a guest was expected to arrive on Friday evening and depart Tuesday morning. Now one goes on Saturday afternoon and returns to town on Monday morning.

Week end entertaining is especially popular with country hostesses, who can hardly ask their town guests to come so far in a single day. The shortened time is without doubt an advantage to both hostess and guest, for, while it signifies no lack of hospitality, it is less of a tax on both.

NEW USE FOR DOLLS.

Well Known Characters In Fiction on Menu Cards.

It cannot be too often repeated that we live in an age of ingenuity, originality and fanciful notions. All through the summer somber looking dollies in chocolate four or five inches high, smartly dressed with the help of gay ribbons and bright colored crinkled paper, delighted hundreds of little folks.

Now the idea has been adopted by a few, clever and enterprising modelers, who somehow have managed to produce in tender tints padded figures of jolly cooks, genial policemen, terrifying Mephistoes, stern statesmen and advanced girls of the period. Each characteristic and full sized portrait, attired in the respective costume, forms a realistic relief when glued on the left side of the elongated cards of the new menus. These conceits, whether hilarious or sentimental, provoke no end of fun and table talk.

Assuming they are accurately carried out, their vogue is, however, likely to be limited on account of the cost and the space required for the proper display on the dining room table of the four or five inch cards ornamented with real little gems of stuff modeling.

Bookbinders of nursery books are imitating this fancy in a simplified form. They carefully select for the covers an attractive printed paper in harmony with the contents of the books and place in the center of each cover a wee real dolly secured merely at the waist. Thus the cover of an album full of sketches of rustic Dutch boys and girls shows outside a three inch Dutch painted doll in plain whitewood and in Dame Nature's free costume. In contrast stands a prim Japanese maiden wrapped in the enveloping kimono of her native land and graciously greeting the readers of some strange or instructive tales from the faroff East, says the Queen.

Would not the representation in these juvenile series of Jenny Wren, the young cripple and industrious doll dresser, one of Dickens' favorite characters, be effective and appropriate on a book devoted to doll stories? Jeanne l'Ouvriere, too, the popular French type of an honest, self contented working girl, notably one following the trade of dressmaker, suggests herself as a suitable ornamentation to instructions on needlework. Either of these two touching and youthful models of the hardworking classes recommends itself to preside at bazaar stalls dealing with dolls and useful articles of needlework.

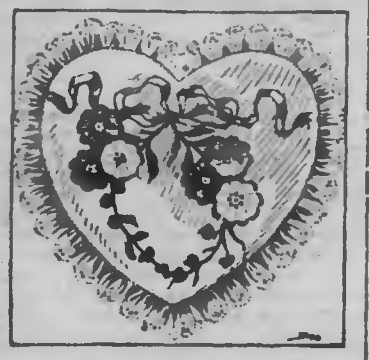
The steamer Frank C. Hall was sunk in Grosse Point Channel off Detroit in a collision.

APPLIQUE WORK.

French Adaptation of the Old Floral Designs in Ribbon.

From France, the land of new ideas, comes a charming suggestion for the clever needlewoman in the form of applique flower embroidery. While closely allied to ribbon work, this new method is quicker than and quite as effectual as the more familiar form of decoration, and the same designs may be used. The applique embroidery is adapted to all sorts of articles from tiny sachets to bags and pincushions. Narrow ribbons, both plain and shaded, enter largely into the scheme of decoration; but, whereas formerly petals of flowers were carried out entirely in ribbons of various shades, their place has been superseded by stamped or cut flowers in soft, fine fabric, which only require securing in place by means of French knots worked in the center of each. This causes the blossoms to stand out in bold relief with charming effect. Stems and leaves are worked with silks, ribbon being employed in the fashioning of knots and bows confining miniature bouquets, or as borders and occasionally as trellises forming a background to floral devices.

Forgetmenots, daisies and pink and white roses are well adapted to reproduction in this form of needlework. The center of each flower has calyx and stamens added in silks of appropriate shades, and upon the deftness with which the colors are blended and the delicate touch of handiwork introduced the success of the design depends in a large degree. This work offers excellent opportunity for the display of artistic skill.



HANDKERCHIEF SACHET.

In the illustration is an example of applique embroidery. The cushion cover of cream moire silk has a delicately formed design of garlands of forget menots and foliage daintily inclosed within a diamond shaped trellis work of pale green ribbon, each little wreath being tied with a bow of the same ribbon.

The handkerchief sachet in turquoise blue is lined with the faintest shade of rose colored silk decorated with the same flowers. The blossoms are arranged in rustic baskets worked in Japanese gold thread. The handles are tied with big bows of the very narrowest shaded yellow ribbon. A border of shaded green ribbon caught down by tiny rosebuds and forgetmenots completes the design. The flowers are in tones of pink, mauve and gray to contrast with the background.

Pickles.

Pickled Figs.—Pickled figs are an unheard of delicacy to many, but make a savory preserve to be served at dinner. To one pound of fruit put three-quarters of a pound of sugar. Drop the figs into the boiling sirup, let them remain until you can penetrate with a straw, then remove and place in jars in layers, between which sprinkle a few cloves and some mace. Then cover the whole with sirup. For three successive mornings pour off the sirup, not disturbing the fruit and spices. Bring to a boil and pour back on the fruit. The third morning after the sirup has boiled add one cupful of strong vinegar to every three cupfuls of sirup. Pour over the fruit and seal.

Grape Catchup.—Wash five pounds of grapes and put them on to stew. When they have cooked for twenty minutes take them from the fire and run through a strainer. Add one pint of vinegar, three pounds of sugar, one tablespoonful of ground allspice, one teaspoonful of ground cloves, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one teaspoonful of black pepper and half a teaspoonful of salt. Boil all together until thick.

If You Would Acquire Poise—

Keep your hands away from the head and face.

Do not slip your rings up and down.

Do not pick up articles over the room and put them down again as you talk.

If you carry a fan do not open and shut it at all times or tap your face or the furniture with it.

Learn to drop the hands in the lap, on the arms of the chair or at your side and do not move them unless it is necessary.

Constant gesturing is foolish. Don't think it is expressive to talk with the hands unless you thoroughly understand the art. A few gestures gracefully and timely made are eloquent. Fidgeting with the hands is stupid.

Cracks In Furniture.

Ugly cracks or splits in furniture can easily be filled in with beeswax so that the marks will hardly show. Furniture dealers cover up many blemishes in this way.

Slightly soften the beeswax until it becomes like putty. Then press it firmly into the cracks and smooth the surface over with a thin knife. Sandpaper the surrounding wood and work some of the dust into the beeswax.

This gives a finish to the wood, and when it is varnished the cracks will have disappeared. Putty is sometimes used in the same way, but it soon dries and falls out, while beeswax will remain in practically forever.

Octoberists want the power of the Russian political police to be curtailed.

MARRYING OF TITLES.

Mrs. Post Gives Reasons For Unhappy Marriages.

Mrs. Emily Post, author of "The Title Market" and other novels dealing with society people, asserted in an interview that American girls must regard marriage as Europeans do before they can be happy as the wives of titled personages. She said:

"Of course not all marriages of American girls to foreign titles prove unhappy, but when they are not it only proves that one of our countrywomen has successfully curbed her natural tendencies—has attained the European manner of regarding matrimony. It is hard, but it can be done, and it has been done.

"But the effort, I think, can best be likened to the effort that is necessary in speaking a foreign tongue when you are sick and tired. The American girl who marries a foreigner must learn to put her thoughts into his language as well as her words.

"Many of the unhappy international marriages are the fault of the girl's mother. The American mother's place is to see that her daughter is not marrying a good-for-nothing creature, devoid of even the social position that she fancies she is attaining. American mothers are blinded by the gallantry with which the European man treats them. They fancy that the superficial chivalry displayed toward them is the quality upon which to found a happy future for the daughter. They are unused to attention and understudy courtesies. In America everything is the American girl. Our men do not have time to be gallant to our mothers.

"Then the American mothers are at fault, too, in the training they give their daughters. If a girl were brought up properly she would not submit to selling herself for a title. But the society girl of America is educated only to be an ornament and is taught that the most desirable attainment is social position. When she goes abroad she falls an easier victim to the title mania than does her mother.

"The European man's God is his family. The woman upon whom he has bestowed his title must be treated with respect in public at least. One of the vilest little titled men of France always treated his wife with the utmost deference in public. Maybe he scratched her eyes out when they were alone, but in society his behavior was the acme of courtesy. In America, you see, a man treats his wife as well or as badly as he loves her. His love regulates his attentions. In Europe there are years and years of tradition respecting what is due the lady of the castle.

"The European man, speaking generally, does not care for the woman of the stage. He prefers women in his own social sphere. In most cases the wife entertains unknowingly the object of her husband's attentions. It may be more degrading, but it is at least less crude."

CONCERNING WOMEN.

Women afraid of being struck by lightning should lie, if possible, on a brass or iron bed, the head of which has a projection for supporting curtains. Such a bedstead forms the most complete lightning protector that can be devised, says an eminent electrician.

Miss Genevieve Clark, daughter of Representative Champ Clark of Missouri, is only fourteen years old, but she is said to be familiar with public questions, about which she can talk intelligently. She goes to the Friends' school in Washington and is described as a very intelligent young woman.

Inez Bower is the name of a twelve-year-old girl of Los Angeles who is preaching sermons in the west. She was "converted at five" and has been delivering sermons to adults for nearly four years. These are described as "clear, logical and as convincing as many a minister of mature age can deliver."

Mrs. George Keppel, who has had much notoriety because of the friendship for her of King Edward, has won that monarch's displeasure, it seems, as the list of persons whom he will be pleased to meet, which he edits himself, does not contain that lady's name, much to the surprise of society people in London.

Miss Nellie G. Robinson of Cincinnati and two women of Columbus, O., all three attorneys, are conferring for the purpose of organizing an Ohio woman's bar association. The association will be formed in Columbus in September. Women attorneys at Springfield, Toledo, Cleveland and Sandusky will be eligible and no doubt will join.

Miss Belle Kinney of Nashville, Tenn., the designer of the monument to the women of the "lost cause," is only twenty-two years old, and her work has been much commended. The central figure is the goddess of fame, and at her right is the reclining figure representing the sacrificing southern women of the war. Miss Kinney was awarded the contract for twenty Igorrotte figures at the Field museum.

Coverlets de Luxe.

The newest thing in coverlets de luxe is a combination of esprit net with flounces and incrustations of cluny lace interrun with a broad chine ribbon to form a center. Less costly, but equally charming in their way, are the hemstitched and hand-embroidered "spreads" of plain white linen, some of them supplemented with insertions, motifs and edgings of cluny lace, others a mass of delicate white embroidery. Then there are the printed cotton spreads, with Indian, flower or conventional designs in fresh, bright colorings, which always add to the cheerful appearance of a room.

A six-months-old Detroit baby was successfully operated on for appendicitis.

BE CHARMING AND JOLLY.

Forget It if You're the Worst Dressed Girl In the Party.

Do not get the foolish notion that you cannot have a good time unless you are dressed for it. Many a girl does herself out of a lot of pleasure because she stays at home rather than appear in clothes that do not meet with her approval.

It is natural to want to be well dressed; it is senseless to deem it the chief good in life. The girl who frets that her hats and gowns are not up to the mark, who stays at home from a party because she must wear a washed frock or who refuses a yachting invitation because her wardrobe will not meet her idea of a yachting costume is "pure silly."

Rise above your environments, even though that soul trying, two-year-old frock could not "cling" if it tried or the hat fairly screams "Home trimmed!" Go in for the fun that is the privilege of youth and forget that you are the worst dressed girl in the party.

Be sure that the girl of shabby clothes who by her merry ways and whole souled charm keeps all the men and boys around her will be envied in her heart by the girl whose clothes came straight from Paquin.

One of the most beautiful and popular women of the day, who is now exquisitely dressed on every occasion, had but two muslin party frocks to see her through her first Washington season. Many a girl would have posed as not caring for society rather than form such a contrast to the women around her, but this girl had more sense. "If people only like me for my clothes they will have to dislike me," she said. "I'm not going to cut myself out of a good time because I look as though I had come from the ark." It takes a lot of courage to forget one's shabbiness. Youth is peculiarly sensitive. When we get older it is easier to down externals, to realize that clothes not only do not "make the woman," but help her less than they are credited.

Don't let your pleasure be marred by your covering. As well say Duse or Ellen Terry could not act without the stage setting, that a diamond is naught but the cutting, that the bur is all there is to a chestnut. The girl who is jolly, agreeable and unhampered by her vanity or false pride will win out popularity despite clothes that are not quite right.

A Curious Custom.

The men of the western nations are said to be not exactly fond of their mothers-in-law, but in certain districts of China fathers-in-law are never on speaking terms with their sons' wives. Never after the wedding day does a man see his daughter-in-law's face. If they happen to meet he hides himself. The curious custom comes down from ancient times, and no one really knows its origin, but it is supposed to have arisen from the savage's desire to avoid even the possibility of the father-in-law falling in love with the woman his son had married.

"Hookworm" Cause for Divorce.

San Francisco, Calif., Nov. 26.—Judge Graham has divorced Anita Coover, from David R. Coover.

"My husband was dull, stupid, lazy, languid, slow," said Mrs. Coover.

"He must have been a victim of the hookworm," said the court.

Killed by a Train.

Hagersville, Nov. 26.—Stewart Donnelly, one of Haldimand County's oldest residents, was killed by a train near Hober yesterday. He stepped from one track to let a freight train pass, directly in front of an express that did not usually run on that track

Taxicab Stock

The Story of the Dollars

The ideal way of earning money is to make your dollars work for you. Make your dollar work where it will earn the most by seeking for the investment that will pay the best.

The dollar that earns but 2 or 3 per cent. is almost as bad as the idle dollar which earns nothing

We advise Taxicab Stock at $6 per share, par value $5.00, for beginning January 1910, it can pay a dividend of 10% per annum or 2½% quarterly.

The Idle Dollar

The dollar that is tied up in bad investments—

—the dollar that is invested in (conservative) low interest bearing securities, usually sold at a high premium—

—the dollar that is not invested anywhere, reposing in the old stocking under the mattress, or in the tin teapot on the pantry shelf—

—the dollar that buys the things that you would be better without—

—this is the idle dollar.

The idle dollar gives no man comfort in holding, keeping, owning or wasting.

The Busy Dollar

The dollar that is working for you all the time—

—the dollar that brings you a big percentage of returns—

—the dollar that is invested in good commercial stocks or industrial enterprises and earns away above the ordinary bank interest—

—the dollar that by quick turns and clear foresight doubles, trebles and quadruples itself—

—this is the busy dollar.

To keep your dollar busy make it work for you and earn big returns.

An investment in Taxicab Stock will prove the best known medium.

The Ideal Investment

An industry that fills a long felt want, which supplies an insistent and growing demand, which has possibilities of great future expansion, is the ideal investment.

Such a one is Toronto's system of Taxicabs, for in barely six months it has proved its big earning capacity.

What it may do in the future, with an outfit increased many times, you can only surmise.

Taxicab Stock has a great future, and the time to buy Taxicab Stock is now.

SUBSCRIPTIONS will be accepted up to 100 shares in the order received at this office.

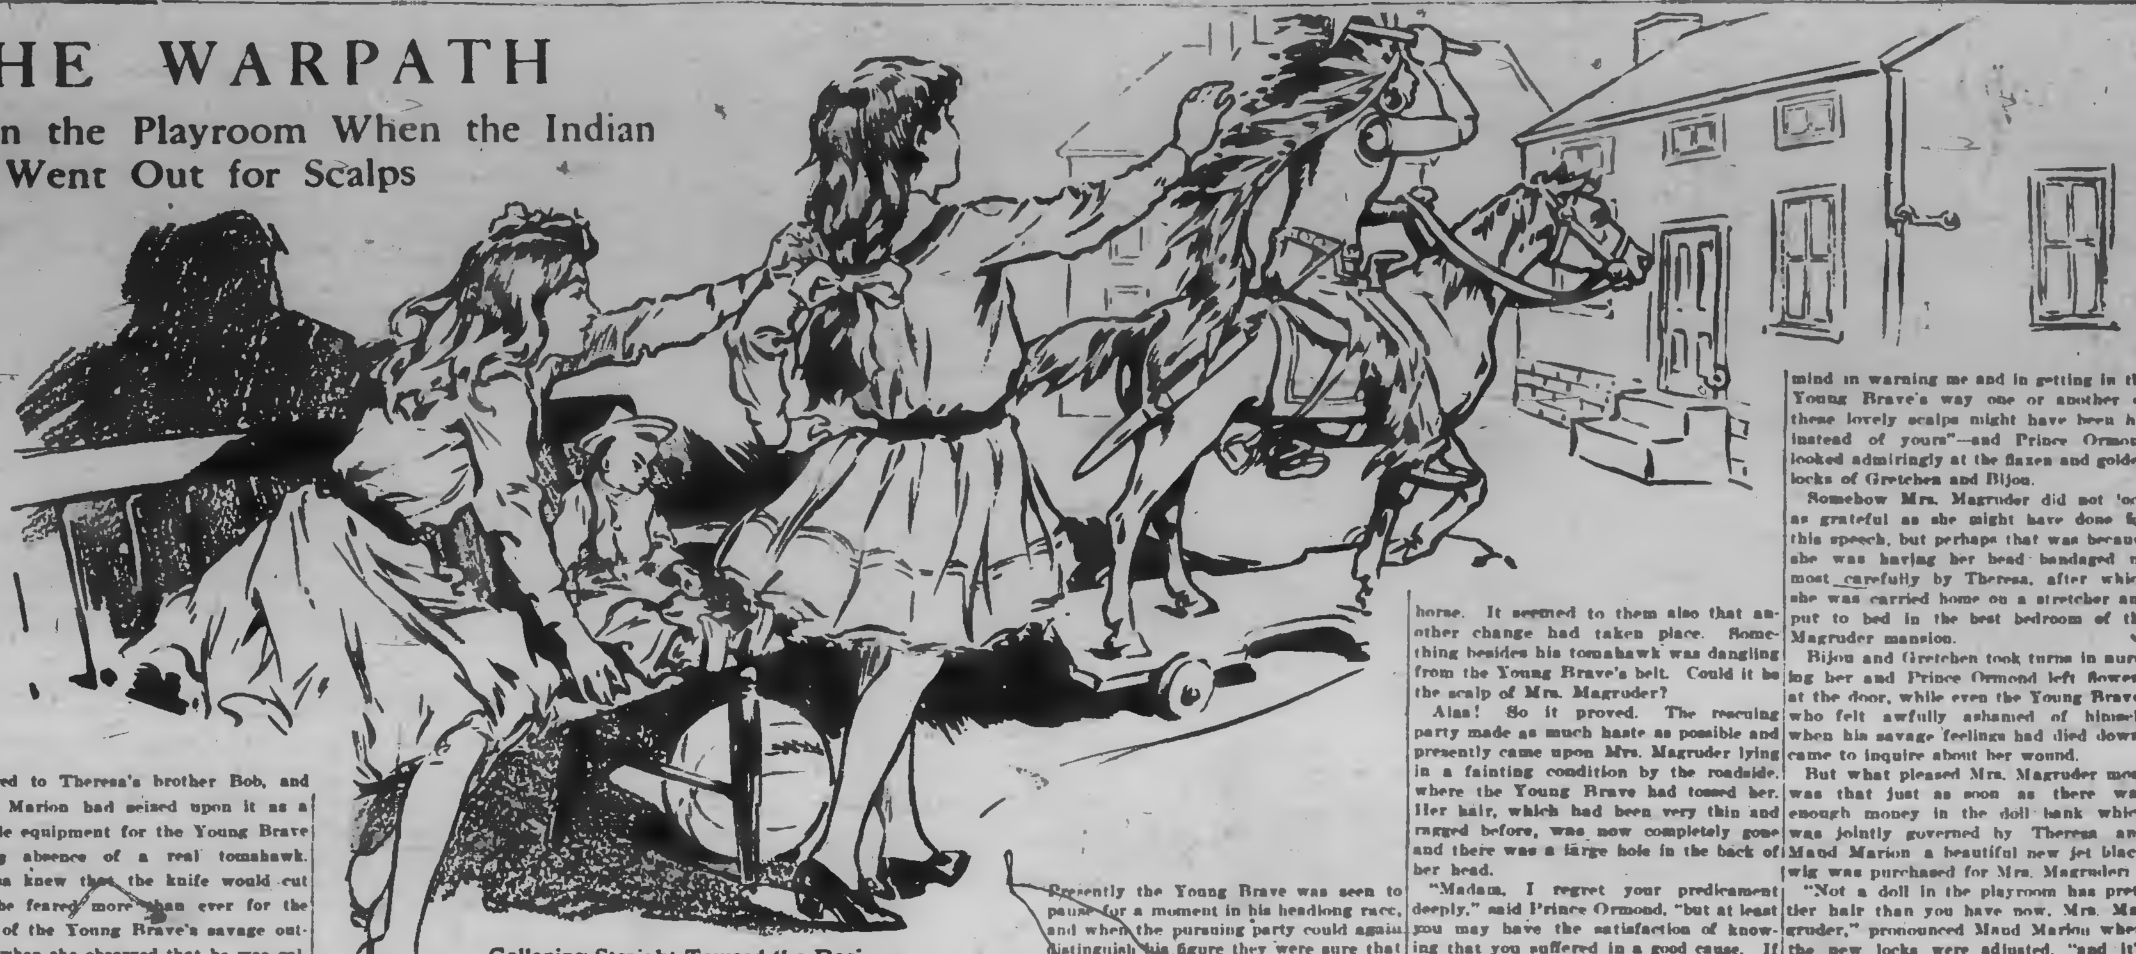
ON THE WARPATH

What Happened in the Playroom When the Indian Doll Went Out for Scalps

(Copyright, 1909, by the New York Herald Co. All Rights Reserved.)



Galloping Straight Toward the Residence of Mrs. Mandeville Magruder

TO begin with, it all came about because it was too stormy to go out to play Saturday afternoon and Maud Marion and her cousin were forced to content themselves with spending the afternoon in the playroom with their large families of dolls. They were very much disappointed at not being able to go out, for their aunt and uncle had promised to take them automobiling if it had been a pleasant day. An afternoon in the playroom seemed rather dull instead of a long ride in the new motor car, and it must be confessed that neither Maud Marion nor Theresa felt very glad to see the dolls. However, Theresa, who was always kindhearted, concealed her feelings politely and greeted them with her usual sweetness. Maud Marion, who was not nearly so careful of the dolls' feelings, said nothing, but sat down on the floor in a discontented heap and stared gloomily at the row of doll houses which constituted the playroom village.

"I suppose," said Theresa, "that we had better start to make the dolls some winter clothes. The winter is nearly here you know, and almost all of them will need something new."

"Yes," sighed Maud Marion, "I suppose there is nothing more interesting to do."

Just at that moment her glance chanced to fall upon the doll bungalow, in which resided Li Hung Chang, the Chinese boy doll, and the young "Brave of the Wabash," as the Indian doll was called.

"Oh," said Maud Marion excitedly, "I've thought of something. You know I've often wanted to have one, and to-day is just the time, because I know the Young Brave is feeling perfectly savage."

"What is it that you've wanted to have," said Theresa.

"A scalping party," explained Maud Marion. "You know the Young Brave perfectly hates civilization, and he thinks a great deal of going on the warpath and bringing home a nice ornamental scalp."

Theresa began to feel a little worried, for she had had more than one experience with the exciting adventures that Maud Marion had carried out with the help of the dolls, and she could not help fearing that the Young Brave's return to savagery would mean genuine disaster for some of the most cherished bisque beauties.

"It sounds as if it would hurt awfully," she remarked.

"Do you mean the scalping," said Maud Marion. "It does, frightfully. Of course they generally die, but that won't matter to the dolls. We'll have to put the Young Brave's war paint on and his feathers in his hair. That's what they always do when they go on the warpath."

Theresa enjoyed this part of the Young Brave's return to savagery very much. There were all sorts of colored crayons besides water color paints in the nursery, and as both girls had made many trips to the Wild West Show they knew exactly how to make the young brave look as ferocious and gaudy as the most savage of his ancestors could have desired.

"There now!" declared Maud Marion. "He's absolutely perfect. We've got to whoop terribly now. You remember how, Theresa, just as they did at the show."

Theresa and Maud Marion both uttered bloodcurdling Indian warwhoops, while Maud Marion helped the Young Brave to dance wildly around on the nursery floor.

"That's the war dance," said Maud Marion, "and next we have to have a feast. It's too bad we haven't more Indian dolls, for it's very hard to have a really good feast and scalping with only one. The Chinese boy will have to come to the feast and dance, too, but he mustn't do any scalping.

Theresa took charge of Li Hung Chang and Maud Marion of the Young Brave at the feast which followed. Then there was more dancing and more whooping and then the Young Brave flung himself upon a small real skin brown pony, which usually served as the saddle horse of Lady Gwendoline Harcourt, Theresa's largest lady doll, and started on a mad gallop across the playroom floor.

He really looked frightfully savage with his face painted in stripes of yellow, red and blue, his body covered with bright vermilion chalk and his war bonnet bobbing fiercely. But even more threatening than his generally ferocious aspect was the fact that at his side there dangled a fairly good sized jackknife. The knife belonged to Theresa's brother Bob, and Maud Marion had seized upon it as a suitable equipment for the Young Brave in the absence of a real tomahawk. Theresa knew that the knife would cut and she feared more than ever for the result of the Young Brave's savage outbreak when she observed that he was galloping straight toward the residence of Mrs. Mandeville Magruder.

Mrs. Mandeville Magruder was a very old doll who belonged to Maud Marion. She had had a very hard life and showed her age very much, and Maud Marion, who was rather careless about the appearance of her doll family, had made no attempt to hide Mrs. Magruder's defects, either by her costuming or by the way she did her hair. Mrs. Magruder lived in a somewhat dilapidated doll mansion with her pretty young niece Bijou, who was Theresa's pet doll, and her charming maidservant Gretchen, a very pretty German doll who belonged to Maud Marion.

It was not for Mrs. Magruder's thin locks that Theresa feared. She felt sure that the Young Brave would pass her by for a more decorative scalp. Whether he would select the flaxen braids of Gretchen or the rich golden curls of Bijou, Theresa could not guess. There was nothing to do but to wait until the fatal moment had arrived.

The Young Brave came on apace. There was no one on the front stoop of the Magruder mansion and the Young Brave leaped from his horse and skulked around the corner, where he could spy in at the front window. Presently with a look of fiendish delight the Young Brave crept softly to the Magruder front door and listened. Then he crouched down behind the steps.

"Mrs. Magruder and Bijou will have to go out to church," said Maud Marion, "and then the Young Brave will find out there are no men at home and will go in the house."

Theresa looked reproachfully at Maud Marion, for she saw now that the beautiful flaxen braids of Gretchen were to fall before the Young Brave's tomahawk. Nevertheless, she opened the door of the doll mansion and brought out Mrs. Magruder and Bijou, whom she assisted along the road to the church which they were supposed to attend while Gretchen was being scalped. Poor Gretchen was alone in the Magruder mansion and at the complete mercy of the Young Brave.

Hardly had Mrs. Magruder and Bijou turned the corner before the impatient savage dashed into the Magruder mansion, brandishing his tomahawk and shouting his horrid Indian warwhoop. In a moment he was out again, dragging the frightened Gretchen by one of her long braids, the end of which Maud Marion had fastened securely to the Brave's arm.

The Young Brave raised his tomahawk to strike, with the assistance of Maud Marion, of course. Gretchen trembled with fear and uttered piercing screams. The end had almost come and her flaxen braids were about to be severed from her head——

When—

Suddenly—

Around the corner dashed Mrs. Magruder, Bijou and——

Prince Ormond.

They had heard Gretchen's screams and had come to her rescue.

Prince Ormond threw himself upon the Young Brave and tore Gretchen from his grasp, while with one arm upraised he shielded the lovely Bijou from the baffled savage. For a moment the Young Brave hesitated, then with a quick, unexpected movement he caught up Mrs. Mandeville Magruder and threw her across his pony and, jumping nimbly on himself, he galloped away before the rescuing party discovered what he was doing.

Prince Ormond, with Theresa's help, started boldly in pursuit, but the Brave's horse was fleet and the rescuing party was afoot. In a few moments the rider had completely outdistanced his pursuers.

Presently the Young Brave was seen to pause for a moment in his headlong race, and when the pursuing party could again distinguish his figure they were sure that Mrs. Magruder was no longer on the horse. It seemed to them also that another change had taken place. Something besides his tomahawk was dangling from the Young Brave's belt. Could it be the scalp of Mrs. Magruder?

Alas! So it proved. The rescuing party made as much haste as possible and presently came upon Mrs. Magruder lying in a fainting condition by the roadside, where the Young Brave had tossed her. Her hair, which had been very thin and ragged before, was now completely gone and there was a large hole in the back of her head.

"Madam, I regret your predicament deeply," said Prince Ormond, "but at least you may have the satisfaction of knowing that you suffered in a good cause. If it had not been for your presence of mind in warning me and in getting in the Young Brave's way one or another of these lovely scalps might have been his instead of yours"—and Prince Ormond looked admiringly at the flaxen and golden locks of Gretchen and Bijou.

Somehow Mrs. Magruder did not look as grateful as she might have done for this speech, but perhaps that was because she was having her head bandaged up most carefully by Theresa, after which she was carried home on a stretcher and put to bed in the best bedroom of the Magruder mansion.

Bijou and Gretchen took turns in nursing her and Prince Ormond left flowers at the door, while even the Young Brave, who felt awfully ashamed of himself when his savage feelings had died down, came to inquire about her wound.

But what pleased Mrs. Magruder most was that just as soon as there was enough money in the doll bank which was jointly governed by Theresa and Maud Marion a beautiful new jet black wig was purchased for Mrs. Magruder.

"Not a doll in the playroom has prettier hair than you have now, Mrs. Magruder," pronounced Maud Marion when the new locks were adjusted, "and it's very lucky for you that you were scalped."

Fashionable New Furs for Miss Dolly.

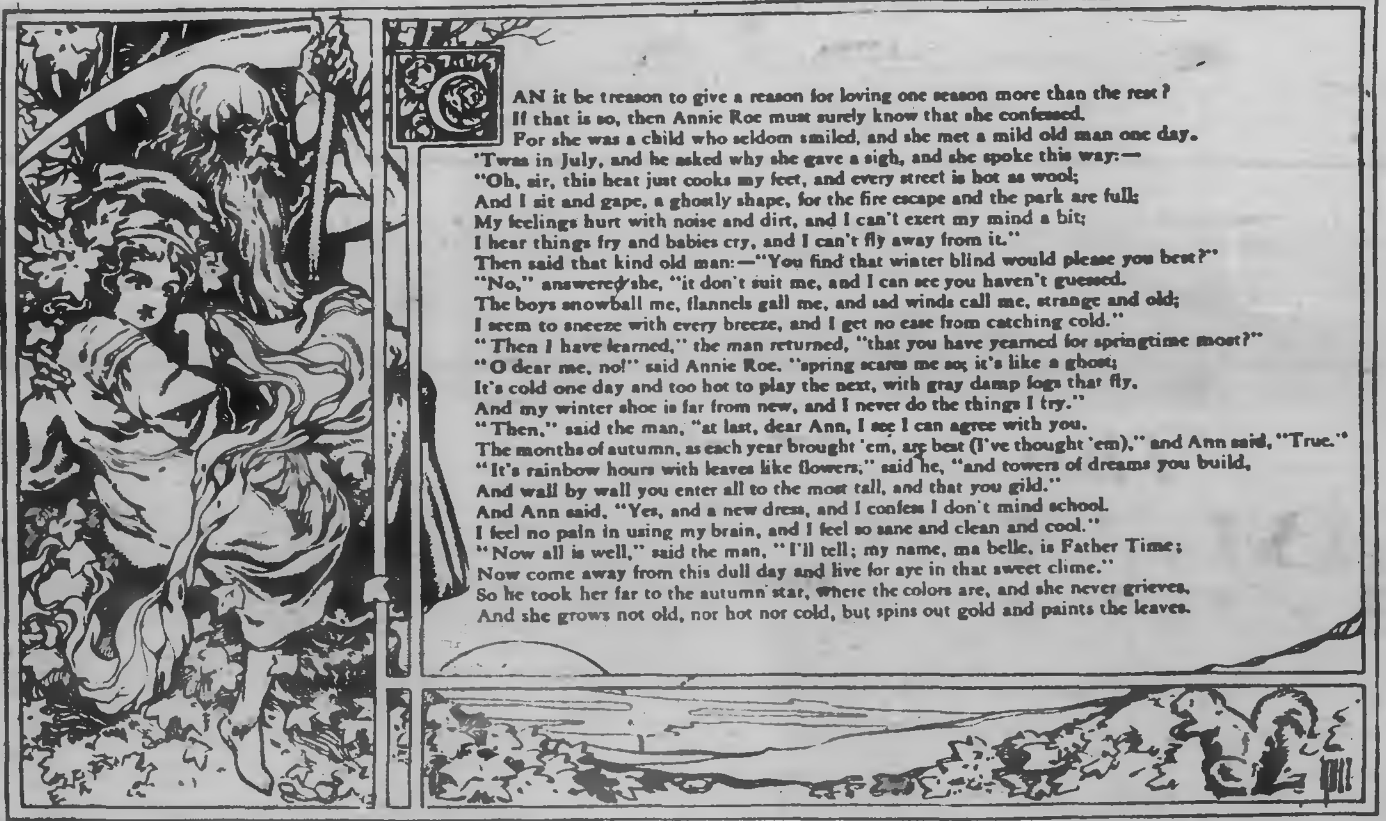
MISS DOLLY must really have some new furs for the winter, and now is the time for her little mamma to start to make them, so that they will be all completed before the winter sets in.

Ermine fur sets are about as easy as anything to make and they are most becoming to Miss Dolly. It isn't at all necessary to make them of ermine; white broadcloth, eiderdown and cotton batting will do just as well. Tiny pieces of black cloth sewed on at intervals make any of these materials look like ermine. The muff this year should be quite large and round and the lining of white satin or silk. The collar may be a shaped one, also lined with silk, or it may be a stole, which is much easier to make. All that is necessary for the stole is a narrow strip of the cloth, with a little padding inside. The edges of the cloth are sewed neatly together on the under side. Of course the broadcloth or eiderdown furs will last longer than those of cotton batting, but then the latter do not take much time or trouble to make.

Swansdown is very lovely for dolls' furs and a very little will go a long way. A muff may be made entirely of the swansdown, or if there is not enough for this the muff may be of velvet, satin or cloth, with edges of swansdown. Cotton is used for an interlining, and inside this there is another lining of silk, satin or silkoline.

White, black or gray eider cloth makes very charming fur sets for dolls. The white makes fox sets, the black astrachan and the gray fox or squirrel, whichever you prefer. Velvet muffs and those of silk or satin are also most attractive, and brown or black plush makes beautiful fur sets.

AUTUMN IS BEST



CAN it be treason to give a reason for loving one season more than the rest?
If that is so, then Annie Roe must surely know that she confessed.
For she was a child who seldom smiled, and she met a mild old man one day.
'Twas in July, and he asked why she gave a sigh, and she spoke this way:—
"Oh, sir, this heat just cooks my feet, and every street is hot as wool;
And I sit and gape, a ghostly shape, for the fire escape and the park are full;
My feelings hurt with noise and dirt, and I can't exert my mind a bit;
I hear things fry and babies cry, and I can't fly away from it."
Then said that kind old man:—"You find that winter blind would please you best?"
"No," answered she, "it don't suit me, and I can see you haven't guessed.
The boys snowball me, flannels gall me, and sad winds call me, strange and old;
I seem to sneeze with every breeze, and I get no ease from catching cold."
"Then I have learned," the man returned, "that you have yearned for springtime most?"
"O dear me, no!" said Annie Roe, "spring scares me so; it's like a ghost;
It's cold one day and too hot to play the next, with gray damp fogs that fly,
And my winter shoe is far from new, and I never do the things I try."
"Then," said the man, "at last, dear Ann, I see I can agree with you.
The months of autumn, as each year brought 'em, are best (I've thought 'em)," and Ann said, "True."
"It's rainbow hours with leaves like flowers," said he, "and towers of dreams you build,
And wall by wall you enter all to the most tall, and that you gild."
And Ann said, "Yes, and a new dress, and I confess I don't mind school.
I feel no pain in using my brain, and I feel so sane and clean and cool."
"Now all is well," said the man, "I'll tell; my name, ma belle, is Father Time;
Now come away from this dull day and live for aye in that sweet clime."
So he took her far to the autumn star, where the colors are, and she never grieves,
And she grows not old, nor hot nor cold, but spins out gold and paints the leaves.

JOURNEYS IN PUZZLELAND

Trip No. 1—Through the United States.

IN the following puzzling journey twelve names of places are hidden. The names of States and cities are used. All the places are within the United States and all are well known. The first one mentioned in the story is "Ohio," which is concealed in the words "oh I owe." The other names are hidden in a similar manner.

Bob and Susie Van Brunt were very lucky children. Their papa was obliged to travel about a great deal because he was an engineer whose work lay in different places. So instead of keeping Bob and Susie in school he resolved to take them with him. Their mamma also went along, and their governess, Miss Lind, as well as their cousins Charlie and Isabel Grant. When they first started out it was to make a journey through the United States.

The first thing Susie did when they were on the train was to get ready some post cards for mailing back to her chum, Violet Driscoll. "Mercy! Susie," said her mamma, "I should think you might wait a little longer before writing to Violet."

"Oh, I owe Violet so many letters and post cards," said Susie, "I want to pay her back as soon as possible."

They had started from New York city, and at Washington Tony, the Italian bootblack, got on board the car and asked if he might black their boots.

"Can Tony go with us out West, papa?" begged Bob, who took a great fancy to the small Italian.

The children's father said Tony's parents would not like this, and so they had to part with their new acquaintance.

Before they had gone much further they noticed a low, elliptical cloud on the horizon, which their father said foreboded a storm. They decided to stop at the next station and stay over night with a friend. When they got off it was pitch dark, but their father pointed to a light in the distance. "Do you see," he said, "that large beacon? Cordial greeting will await us there if we can get that far. Go on as fast as you can and we will presently find ourselves in the home of our friends."

This they did, and presently found themselves in a large old fashioned mansion, being comfortably stowed away for the night.

"For goodness' sake, Bobby, don't bang or knock the furniture," implored his mother. "Remember, you are not at home and you must be careful."

"Are these folks rich, do you think, Miss Lind?" asked Susie.

"Rich? Mon Dieu! but how very impolite, Miss Susie," said the governess, who liked to air her French once in a while. "You must not ask such rude questions."

Next morning they got an early start and asked little Eva, their host's daughter, to go on the train with them.

"When Eva dares to go on a railway train," said her father, "she will be a different girl from her present self. She doesn't like trains or motor cars."

Eva's little brother, looking very anxious, was loitering about, but he said nothing.

"Papa, Ike never has been on a railroad train either," said little Eva, "and I know he would like to go."

Ike's face flushed a pumpkin red and he hung his head sheepishly, but he looked more than delighted when the Van Brunts asked him to go with them on their journey through the United States.

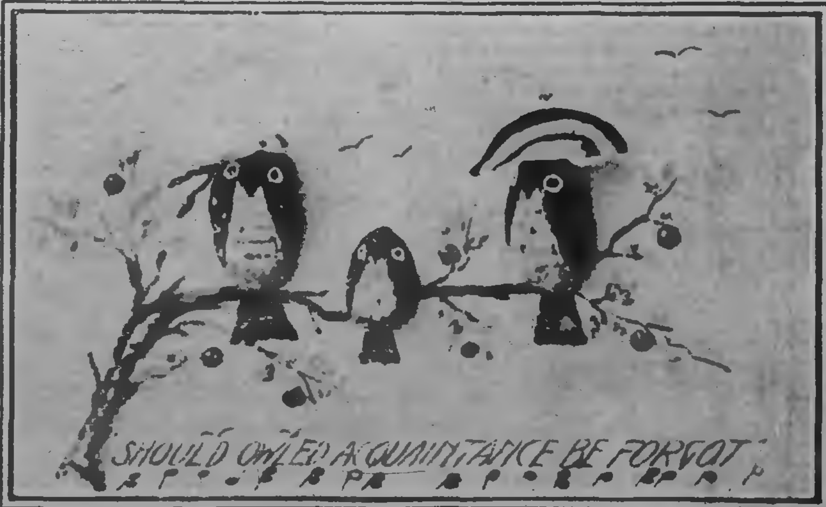
At the next stopping place they saw a large crowd of men and women gathered around a group of horses in the market place. Bob ran off to investigate and came running back breathless. "There's going to be a sale, mamma," he shouted; "I wish you would buy me a pony."

"There isn't any time now for ponies," said his father, "but tell the girls to be ready to start; we intend to go down the Mississippi by boat."

To this plan, however, Mrs. Van Brunt refused to consent. "Go on a Mississippi steam boat!" she cried. "Never! I early resolved that that was a risk I would never take."

It was then decided to continue the journey on the train, and after a pleasant trip through the interesting parts of the middle West the Van Brunts returned to their home in the State of New York.

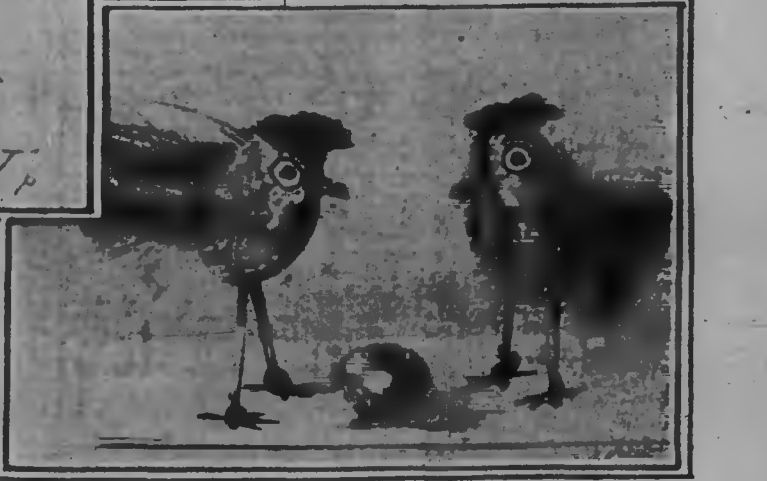
A PECK OF FUN FROM A PINT OF PEANUTS



Three Comfortable Owls on an Apple Tree Bough.

Peanut Birds and Poultry

BY BEATRICE D'EMO



Henry and Henrietta.

HERE are some interesting peanut creations. In last week's children's page you were told how to have a peck of fun from a pint of peanuts, and this week there is more fun to be had with the friendly little nuts.

Henry and Henrietta are two most attractive representatives of the poultry family which are made of peanuts, with small soft feathers for wings. Their legs are match sticks, which can be thrust through the shells. The comb can be made of red paper and the beak of paper pasted on or of a whittled match stick. The eyes are painted and the coloring of the pair may be improved by a few dashes of watercolor paint also. Henry and Henrietta can be made to stand up by thrusting the ends of their legs through flat pasteboard feet. The nest is made of half of a little round peanut and the eggs of small round white candies or of small beans.

The raw peanuts are best to use for making these toys, as the shells of these have not been made brittle by roasting. When picking out the nuts select perfect large and small ones with but a single compartment, also those having two or more compartments in large or small size and any oddly shaped ones which may come to light, for it is much easier to work with a variety on hand. Use good, rather thick glue for pasting purposes and ordinary sable brushes for putting on the water color tint.

Three others of the peanut family are asking "Should Owld Acquaintance Be Forgot?" Certainly not when the acquaintances are three comfortable, happy owls perched high on an appletree bough. To be sure, the owls are only peanuts and the apples are split peas, but that is all the more reason to recognize them as old acquaintances. The hats are circular bits of paper painted and glued to the owls' heads as shown.

The BLACK BAG

By Louis Joseph Vance

Copyright, 1908, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

For a time they laughed and chattered, pretending that the present held no cares or troubles, but soon the girl, nestling her head in a corner of the dingy cushions, was smiling ever more drowsily on Kirkwood. And presently she slept in good earnest, the warm blood ebbing and flowing beneath the exquisite texture of her cheeks, the ghost of an unconscious smile quivering about the sensitive scarlet mouth, the breeze through the open window at her side wantoning at will in the sunlit witchery of her hair. And Kirkwood, worn with sleepless watching, dwelt in longing upon the dear, innocent allure of her until the ache in his heart had grown well nigh insupportable, then instinctively turned his gaze upward, searching his heart, reading the faith and desire of it, so that at length knowledge and understanding came to him of his weakness and strength and the clean love that he bore for her, and, gladdened, he sat dreaming in waking the same clear dreams that modeled her unconscious lips secretly for laughter and the joy of living.

When Dunkerque halted their progress they were obliged to alight and change cars, Hobbs a discreetly sinister shadow at the end of the platform.

By schedule they were to arrive in Calais about the middle of the forenoon, with a wait of three hours to be bridged before the departure of the Dover packet. That would be an anxious time. The prospect of it rendered both Dorothy and Kirkwood doubly anxious throughout this final stage of their flight. In three hours anything could happen or be brought about. Neither could forget that it was quite within the bounds of possibilities for Calendar to be awaiting them in Calais. Presuming that Hobbs had been acute enough to guess their plans and advise his employer by telegraph, the latter could readily have anticipated their arrival, whether by sea in the brigantine or by land, taking the direct route via Brussels and Lille. If such proved to be the case it were scarcely sensible to count upon the arch adventurer contenting himself with a waiting role like Hobbs'.

With such unhappy apprehensions for a stimulant, between them the man and the girl contrived a makeshift counter stratagem, or it were more accurate to say that Kirkwood proposed it, while Dorothy rejected, disputed and at length accepted it, albeit with sad misgivings, for it involved a separation that might not prove temporary.

Together they could never escape the surveillance of Mr. Hobbs; parted he would be obliged to follow one or the other. The task of misleading the Alethea's mate Kirkwood undertook, delegating to the girl the duty of escaping when he could provide her the opportunity, of keeping under cover until the hour of sailing and then proceeding to England with the gladstone bag alone if Kirkwood was unable or thought it inadvisable to join her on the boat.

In furtherance of this design a majority of the girl's belongings were transferred from her traveling bag to Kirkwood's, the gladstone taking their place, and the young man provided her with voluminous instructions, a revolver which she did not know how to handle and declared she would never use for any consideration and enough money to pay for her accommodation at the Terminus hotel, near the pier, and for two passages to London. It was agreed that she should secure the steamer booking lest Kirkwood be delayed until the last moment.

These arrangements concluded, the pair of blessed idiots sat steeped in melancholy silence, avoiding each other's eyes, until the train drew in at the Gare Centrale, Calais.

In profound silence, too, they left their compartment and passed through the station into the quiet, sun drenched streets of the seaport, Hobbs hovering solicitously in the offing.

Without comment or visible relief of mind they were aware that their fears had been without apparent foundation. They saw no sign of Calendar, Stryker or Mulready. The circumstance, however, counted for nothing. One or all of the adventurers might arrive in Calais at any minute.

Momentarily more miserable as the time of parting drew nearer, dumb with unhappiness, they turned aside from the main thoroughfares of the city, leaving the business section, and gained the sleepier side streets bordered by the residences of the proletariat, where for blocks none but children were to be seen, and of them but few—quaint, sober little bodies playing almost noiselessly in their dooryards.

At length Kirkwood spoke.

"Let's make it the corner," he said without looking at the girl. "It's a short block to the next street. You hurry to the Terminus and lock yourself in your room. Have the management book both passages. Don't run the risk of going to the pier yourself. I'll make things interesting for Mr Hobbs and join you as soon as I can, if I can."

"You must," replied the girl. "I shan't go without you."

"But, Dor—Miss Calendar!" he exclaimed, aghast.

"I don't care—I know I agreed," she declared mutinously. "But I won't—I can't. Remember I shall wait for you."

"But—but perhaps"—

"If you have to stay it will be because there's danger, won't it? And what would you think of me if I deserted you then af-after all y-you've done? Please don't waste time arguing. Whether you come at 1 today, tomorrow or a week from tomorrow I shall be waiting. You may be sure. Goodby."

They had turned the corner, walking slowly side by side. Hobbs, for the first time caught off his guard, had dropped behind more than half a long block. But now Kirkwood's quick sidelong glance discovered the mate in the act of taking alarm and quickening his pace. None the less the American was at the time barely conscious of anything other than a wholly unexpected furtive pressure of the girl's gloved fingers on his own.

"Goodby," she whispered.

He caught at her hand, protesting. "Dorothy!"

"Goodby," she repeated breathlessly, with a queer little catch in her voice. "God be with you, Philip, and—and send you safely back to me."

And she was running away.

CHAPTER XXVII.

DUMFOUNDED with dismay, seeing in a flash how all his plans might be set at naught by Dorothy's unforeseen insubordination, Kirkwood took a step or two after her, but she was fleet of foot, and, remembering Hobbs, he halted.

By this time the mate, too, was running. Kirkwood could hear the heavy pounding of his clumsy feet. Already Dorothy had almost gained the farther corner. As she whisked round it with a flutter of skirts Kirkwood dodged hastily behind a gatepost. A thought later Hobbs appeared, head down, chest out, eyes straining for sight of his quarry, pelting along for dear life.

As, rounding the corner, he stretched out in swifter stride Kirkwood was inspired to put a spoke in his wheel, and a foot thrust suddenly out from behind the gatepost accomplished his purpose with more success than he had dared anticipate. Stumbling, the mate plunged headlong, arms and legs a-sprawl, and the momentum of his pace, though checked, carried him along the sidewalk, face downward, a full yard ere he could stay himself.

Kirkwood stepped out of the gateway and sheered off as Hobbs picked himself up, something which he did rather slowly, as if in a daze, without comprehension of the cause of his misfortune. And for a moment he stood pulling his wits together and swaying as though on the point of resuming his rudely interrupted chase, when the noise of Kirkwood's heels brought him about face.

"Ow, it's you, eh!" he snarled in a temper as vicious as his countenance.

"Myself," admitted Kirkwood fairly, and then, in a gleam of humor, "Weren't you looking for me?"

His rage seemed to take the little cockney and shake him by the throat. He trembled from head to foot, his face shockingly congested, and spat out dust and fragments of lurid blasphemy like an infuriated cat.

Of a sudden "W'ere's the gel?" he sputtered thickly as his quick shifting eyes for the first time noted Dorothy's absence.

"Miss Calendar has other business—none with you. I've taken the liberty of stopping you because I have a word or two"—

"Ow, you 'ave, 'ave you?. I've a word for you too! 'And over that bag—and look nippy or I'll myke you pye for w'at you've done to me. I'll myke you pye!" he iterated hoarsely, edging closer. "'And it over or"—

"You've got another guess"— Kirkwood began, but saved his breath in deference to an imperative demand on him for instant defensive action, for a six inch blade of tarnished steel was winging toward Kirkwood's throat with the speed of light.

Instinctively he stepped back, as instinctively he guarded with his right forearm, lifting the hand that held the satchel. The knife, catching in his sleeve, scratched the arm beneath painfully and simultaneously was twisted from the mate's grasp, while in his surprise Kirkwood's grip on the bag handle relaxed. It was torn forcibly from his fingers just as he received a heavy blow on his chest from the mate's fist. He staggered back.

By the time he had recovered from the shock Hobbs was a score of feet away, the satchel tucked under his arm, his body bent almost double, running like a jack rabbit. Ere Kirkwood could get under way in pursuit the mate had dodged out of sight round the corner. When the American caught sight of him again he was far down the block and bettering his pace with every jump.

He was approaching, also, some six or eight good citizens of Calais, men of the laboring class, at a guess. Their attention attracted by his frantic flight, they stopped to wonder. One or two moved as though to intercept him, and he doubled out into the middle of the street with the quickness of thought. An instant later he shot around another corner and disappeared, the natives streaming after in hot chase, electrified by the inspiring strains of "Stop thief!" or its French equivalent.

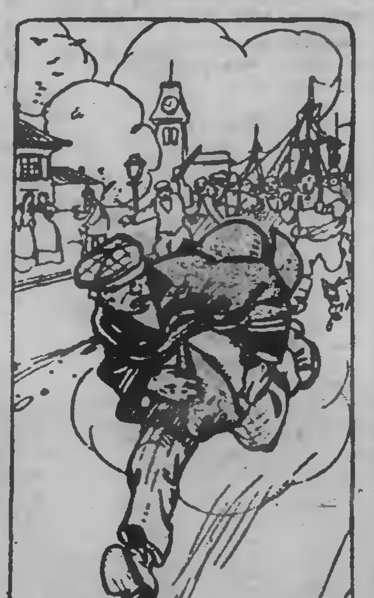
The mob straggled round yet another corner and was gone. Its clamor diminished on the still spring air, and Kirkwood, recovering, abandoned Mr. Hobbs to the justice of the high gods and the French system of jurisprudence. At least he hoped the latter would take an interest in the case if haply Hobbs were laid by the heels and went his way rejoicing.

As for the scratch on his arm, it was nothing, as he presently demonstrated to his complete satisfaction in the seclusion of a chance sent fiacre. Kirkwood, commissioning it to drive him to the American consulate, made his diagnosis en route, wound a handkerchief round the negligible wound, rolled down his sleeve and forgot it altogether in the joys of picturing to himself Hobbs in the act of opening the satchel in expectation of finding therein the gladstone bag.

At the consulate door he paid off the driver and dismissed him. The fiacre had served his purpose, and he could find his way to the Terminus hotel at infinitely less expense. He had a considerably harder task before him as he ascended the steps to the consular doorway, knocked and made known the nature of his errand.

No malicious destiny could have timed the hour of his call more appositely. The consul was at home and at the disposal of his fellow citizens—within bounds.

In the course of thirty minutes or so Kirkwood emerged with dignity from the consulate, his face crimson to the hair, his soul smarting with shame and humiliation, and left an amused official representative of his country's government with the impression of having been entertained to the point of ennui by an exceptionally clumsy but pertinacious liar.



He disappeared, the natives streaming after in hot chase.

At noon precisely, his suspense grown too onerous for his strength of will, throwing caution and their understanding to the winds, he walked boldly into the Terminus and inquired for Miss Calendar.

When at length she appeared on the threshold of the apartment, bringing with her the traveling bag and looking wonderfully the better for her ninety minutes of complete repose and privacy, the relief he experienced was so intense that he remained transfixed in the middle of the floor, momentarily able neither to speak nor to move.

On her part, so fagged and distraught did he seem, that at sight of his careworn countenance she hurried to him with outstretched, compassionate hands and a low, pitiful cry of concern, forgetful entirely of that which he himself had forgotten—the emotion she had betrayed on parting.

"Oh, nothing wrong," he hastened to reassure her, with a sorry ghost of his familiar grin, "only I have lost Hobbs and the satchel with your things, and there's no sign yet of Mr. Calendar. We can feel pretty comfortable now, and—and I thought it time we had something like a meal."

The narrative of his adventure which he delivered over their dejeuner a la fourchette contained no mention either of his rebuff at the American consulate or the scratch he had sustained during Hobbs' murderous assault. The one could not concern her; the other would seem but a bid for her sympathy. He counted it a fortunate thing that the mate's knife had been keen enough to penetrate the cloth of his sleeve without tearing it. The slit it had left was barely noticeable. And he purposely diverted the girl with flashes of humorous description, so that they discussed both meal and episode in a mood of wholesome merriment.

It was concluded, all too soon for the taste of either, by the waiter's announcement that the steamer was on the point of sailing.

Outwardly composed, inwardly quaking, they boarded the packet, meeting with no misadventure whatever—if we are to except the circumstance that when the restaurant bill was settled and the girl had punctiliously surrendered his change with the tickets Kirkwood found himself in possession of precisely 1 franc and 20 centimes.

He groaned in spirit to think how differently he might have been fixed had he not in his infatuated spirit of honesty been so anxious to give Calendar more than ample value for his money.

An inexorable anxiety held them both near the gangway until it was cast off and the boat began to draw away from the pier. Then, and not till then, did an unimpressive, small figure of a man detach itself from the shield of a pile of luggage and advance to the pier head. No second glance was needed to identify Mr. Hobbs, and until the perspective dwarfed him indistinguishably he was to be seen alternately waving Kirkwood ironic farewell and blowing violent kisses to Miss Calendar from the tips of his soiled fingers.

So he had escaped arrest.

At first by turns indignant and relieved to realise that thereafter they were to move in scenes in which his hateful shadow would not form an essentially component part, subsequently Kirkwood fell a prey to prophetic terrors. It was not alone fear of retribution that had induced Hobbs to relinquish his persecution, or so Kirkwood had become convinced. If the mate's calculation had allowed for them the least fraction of a chance to escape apprehension on the farther shores of the channel, nor fears nor threats would have prevented him from sailing with the fugitives. Far from having left danger behind them on the continent, Kirkwood believed in his secret heart that they were but flying to encounter it beneath the smoky pall of London.

BY A. T. ASHMORE.

THE one piece gown, whether on the Empire, Directoire or princess order, has been rather relegated to the background of late, but none the less is it considered essential at this time of year to have a gown with skirt and waist to match in preference to the fancy silk lace or chiffon blouse, with a skirt of different material, if of the same color.

These between season gowns are always attractive and most practical, it is contended, by the woman who makes dress a study—practical, because they can be worn for so many different occasions and also prevent the wearing of the street gown in the house, a most extravagant and foolish act, which was once considered economical and practical. There are many different models for this style of gown, some much more elaborate than others, but each with a distinct charm and individuality. No one material is obligatory, but the lighter fabrics, such as silk, satin, crêpe de Chine, chiffon, voile and lightweight cloth, are, as a rule, chosen in preference to the heavier materials. There is an excellent reason for this, that the gowns are intended to be worn only in the house and should not be made too warm or heavy, and the models chosen are invariably such as are best adapted to the more graceful draped or simpler styles.

The new skirts are most marked in these simple gowns, the round, full skirt being at the moment most popular. It cannot truthfully be stated that these new skirts are either beautiful or becoming, for there is little grace of line in a skirt which just escapes or just touches the floor evenly all around. And yet this is the model which is most in evidence among all the newest French house gowns, and it remains to be seen just how long the fashion will continue to enjoy its present vogue.

But, of course, any model can be always modified, and often only a slight elongation, a few inches, perhaps, in the centre of the back of the skirt, will render the gown at once becoming and of graceful line. It is this knowing how to adapt the exaggerated fads and fashions of the moment to give best effect for the individual without at the same time interfering in any way with the original design of the costume which makes up the art of dress.

The new skirts are indeed curiously different from any skirts hitherto seen in house gowns of any description, and down to the most minute detail are unlike the same style of dress of a year ago. Where the material was scant before it is now employed in extravagant fulness, and where it was formerly the ambition of all to give the appearance of the greatest possible height and slenderness, to-day broad bands about the centre of the skirt break its lines and at once tend to shorten the figure. Once more soft, dainty folds and flounces have taken the place of long, clinging draperies, and the statuesque type of beauty has been replaced by a vogue for the petite.

FORTUNATELY the waist line is once more to be seen in its natural position, for it is a well nigh impossible task for a short skirt that is made on Empire lines to be graceful. Soft ribbon girdles or draped tight belts of the material itself give a pretty finish to the simply draped waists, while below this belt the skirt itself is frequently laid about the hips in plaits, or even shirring, in order to have all the material possible from below the knees, where every skirt must now be decidedly full once more.

After all, there is something peculiarly attractive in a light silk or chiffon texture which is left sufficiently full to fall naturally into soft folds of its own. And this is the effect sought in all grades of house gowns at present. Light but not too thin silks are selected which, if made up in just the right way, will drape themselves gracefully over some plain underskirt and require little, if any, outside adornment. While some of these skirts are very much trimmed, others again depend solely upon the draping of the texture itself and upon the line thus given for effect. Just at present there is to be seen on practically every model a band of satin, of lace, of ribbon, of folded chiffon or perhaps of cloth, which, laid about the centre of the skirt over the knees, just breaks the line, and, unless done with infinite care in the placing, this band effect will tend to make the most charming gown unbecoming to the figure.

One favorite style of skirt consists of an underskirt plain and close fitting, over which are draped two pieces of soft satin or chiffon. One piece, starting in the centre front and falling just below the knees, is caught up loosely at the centre back; the other piece, crossing this in back and front, is looped up on the side in the same way as the other. A draped waist carrying out the same lines, with V shaped yoke back and front of sheer lace, the sleeves also showing the looped up effect over tight fitting lace undersleeves, and the gown finished with a tight girdle of the same soft satin; the whole carried out in an exquisite shade of golden yellow, makes a most simple yet an exceptionally effective gown.

Changeable silks and all queer, unusual shades are much in demand for all styles of house dress this winter. Dark colors predominate, and strange bluish greens, with a suggestion of purple in their composition, seem to be most popular. Dull reds and pinks and [illegible] few shades of yellow, gold and brown are to be seen in cloth, as well as silk and chiffon, but blue is unquestionably the prevailing tone of the winter. [illegible] one color is especially fashionable, new shades of it appear that were hitherto unknown or forgotten, and new combinations are attempted which would at another time have been thought quite too conspicuous, but are now looked upon [illegible] and acknowledged to harmonize well.

Strange to say, however, black is seen more than anything else in combination—or is it contrast?—with the new brilliant and deep blue tones, whose numbers are constantly increasing. In fact, very deep blue trimmed extensively with black bids fair to take the place of the all black gown which only a year ago was considered an essential component of every winter outfit, even of the débutante's trousseau. [illegible] sapphire blue, Japanese blue and a score of other tones as well, in fact, except the too ordinary "navy" blue are now popular, and in this range of color it is surely possible for every one to find some becoming tone, be she blonde or brunette, and no matter what her type.

WITH the absolute change in line and style of dress naturally materials have undergone a change since last year, and in place of the too clinging sheer textures there are silks with some natural thickness and body to them and a return to the old silk poplins, grenadines and heavier crêpes. The lightest weight cloths will still be used this year, but for house gowns and elaborate reception costumes only, since street suits this year are of heavy serge or homespun, while velvet, corduroy, chiffon, velvet and velveteen are all smart for afternoon.

Cloth house gowns, it is true, show but little of the cloth itself, for the waist is composed almost entirely of embroidery, lace and chiffon, while the skirt itself is frequently hidden by an overskirt of draped or looped up chiffon. Many cloth skirts are actually shirred about the waist and hips—a change indeed from the gowns of twelve months back.

Velvet, like cloth, is not a sensible or practical texture for house wear, but with a waist composed to a large extent of chiffon and the velvet or velveteen itself of but very light weight, the new velvet house gown need not be really uncomfortable. Satin charmeuse and heavy qualities of crêpe de Chine, and also the new, somewhat heavy silks in dark shades, are the favorite textures for elaborate afternoon house dresses.

Naturally not every mortal can have her skirts full at the waist line and hips, and the deep yoke skirts with material flaring from below the band about the knees is every bit as up to date as the fullest cloth model, and sure to be more becoming. Full rather than flaring, these new skirts give no effect of the flaring skirt of about five years back, but, cut to just clear the ground or just touch all around, they give to the figure a singularly straight up and down, rather unattractive, round look that is fortunately being rapidly modified and improved upon as each new model is studied and adapted.

FASHION DETAILS THAT EVERY WOMAN SHOULD KNOW

ONE of the conservative models of the season is shown in illustration No. 1. The model shown was in rose voile de soie embroidered in rose, gold and black. A black satin scarf was draped at the back, falling to the bottom of the skirt in long, simple lines.

Noteworthy is the arrangement of the bodice, the material of which is draped from the belt across the bust and then held in with a deep band of the embroidery trimming. The drapery is caught in at one side of the belt with a small gold chou.

The short sleeves are covered entirely with the embroidery and the back of the bodice is practically covered with it, the only plain space being a shallow square at the top, between the shoulders. A very deep band of the embroidery, in which appliqué of satin also enters, trims the skirt around the foot. The skirt is otherwise quite plain and of the fashionable excessive length in front and on the sides as well as in the back.

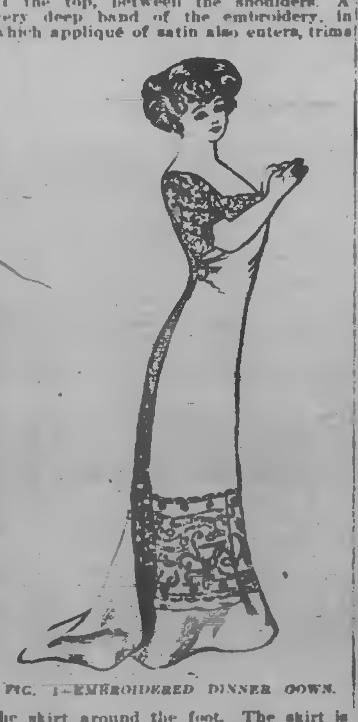

FIG. 1—EMBROIDERED DINNER GOWN.

EXCEEDINGLY graceful is the model for a coat shown in Figure 2. This coat is possible as a separate garment, but should usually be worn with a gown of the same material. In the model shown the costume was of blue prunella cloth in one of the peculiar new shades, the soutache braiding being in the same shade.

One feature of the coat which is worthy of interest is the harmony of the costume design and the design of the braiding. In both long lines, simplicity and a drooping effect are emphasized. The style of the costume would be greatly lessened were the braiding design more elaborate or if the lines were horizontal or rounded rather than vertical in effect.

With this costume is shown a gown of the same color strikingly simple in design—in fact a plain princess, narrowing very much about the ankles and trimmed only with a deep band of embroidery bordering the guimpe, which is of chiffon cloth. The material of the costume is used for the long mousquetaire sleeves, which extend beyond the short, flat, capelike sleeves of the coat.

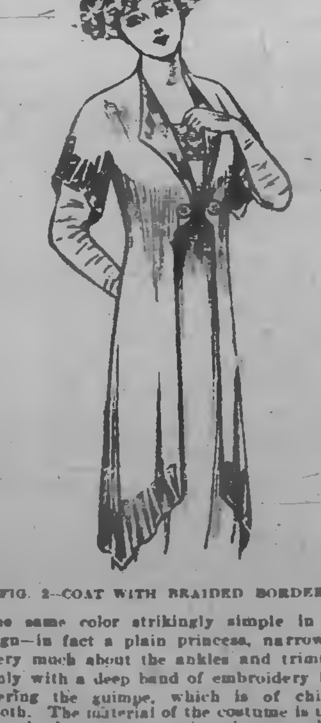

FIG. 2—COAT WITH BRAIDED BORDERS.

BELTS, or rather girdles, are to be seen in innumerable designs, widths and materials on the new frocks. On a crêpe de Chine gown a sash of satin encircled the waist and was tied directly in front, the two broad ends being carried down about to the knees and fastened in to side panels. On another gown of light cloth a straight black velvet belt of medium width and quite stiff looking was finished by two ends at the left side, which fell almost to the bottom of the skirt and ended in long gold tassels.

Crushed, pleated and plain girdles of the material of the gown, or of satin, velvet, embroidery or braided materials in the same color, or in harmonizing or contrasting shades, are all used according to their becomingness to the wearer or their suitability to the costume. The width, of course, is most important in relation to the becomingness of the belt, and thus for once the fashion dictators have kindly left a matter of choice, although the very wide belt, as it creates the Empire effect, is not among the styles that look most novel.

AMONG the models for autumn and early winter street costumes there are few more attractive and fewer still more simple than that of Figure 3. This costume is of the sort which the woman of limited income who wishes to be properly gowned for all occasions finds most useful. It is almost severely plain, so that it would not be out of place for any occasion except one for which a short skirt is absolutely necessary, and yet although it is plain, the model and material are such that with the addition of an elaborate hat and neck fittings it is quite dressy enough for the average afternoon occasion.

Broadcloth is always favorite material for such a costume, and while there are innumerable colors in cloth this season most of which are considered fashionable, the shades preferred for this model are not among the most striking. In taupe, medium blue, dull rose and gray it is most attractive. There is a narrow trimming of soutache on the cloth, edging the lapel and cuffs. The buttons are covered. The skirt is long and plain

TUPPER AND THE NAVY

Sir Charles Writes to London Times Favoring a Canadian Unit

London, Nov. 29.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Times publishes a letter from Sir Charles Tupper to R. L. Borden, dated Nov. 20, on the question of the Canadian navy, which says that all that is required is that the Government of the day should carry out the resolution passed in the House of Commons at Ottawa last session, pledging Parliament to proceed vigorously with the construction of a Canadian navy.

Sir Charles cannot understand the demand for Dreadnoughts and cannot avoid thinking that a fearful responsibility will rest on those who disturb or destroy the compact entered into at the Imperial Defence Conference on this vitally important question.

The Times editorially says: "Sir Charles Tupper's letter should contribute to a strengthening of the concord between Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Borden on the naval question."

The Times also says: "Laurier's speech of the 15th contains the true ideal of imperial unity."

FRENCH GENERAL INJURED BY SHOT

Paris, Nov. 29.—A man believed to have had an imaginary grievance against the war department, shot and seriously wounded Gen. Verand yesterday on the steps of the Hotel Continental, as the general was entering to attend a banquet.

The man aws overpowered and placed under arrest.

Later it was learned that he had mistaken Gen. Verand for Gen. Brün, Minister of War.

Hundreds ran in the direction of the shots, and several of the officers sprang upon Gen. Verand's assailant, who proved to be an Algerian.

He was overpowered with difficulty and was found to be a perfect walking battery of revolvers and daggers.

Gen. Verand received bullets in the neck and forehead, and his condition is considered dangerous.

PARTRIDGE IN COFFIN

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 29.—An attempt to ship 500 partridges in a burial casket from Michigan to Milwaukee in violation of the game laws was frustrated by a keen-nosed hunting dog yesterday.

Deputy Game Warden Harrington was at the railway station at Flatwood when a box was brought in for shipment. The intending shipper, armed with a death certificate, was conversing with the ticket agent when the game warden's dog scented the birds, and came to a "point," focusing his gaze on the box. An investigation disclosed 500 plump partridges instead of a corpse.

The birds were confiscated, and the man who had brought them to the station disappeared.

FARMER IS THE BOSS IN THE WEST

Calgary, Nov. 29.—Grain men find that recent bounteous harvest has placed farmers in a position where they can dictate their own terms and prices regarding grain.

From all sections of the district comes reports that even the price of oats is much in excess of this time last year, still farmers are holding this crop in confidence that they will get the price of fifty cents to sixty cents per bushel as ruling last year will maintain next year. Even wheat is being held by a large number who expect that price next spring will reach $1.50 per bushel for seed wheat.

The argument is that the influx of settlers, even now taking place, will be increased throughout the winter and spring months, and result in a very marked demand for seed wheat.

MME STEINHEIL IS IN ENGLAND

London, Nov. 29.—Mme. Steinheil who recently was acquitted in Paris of the charge of murdering her husband arrived in London yesterday, traveling under the name of Mme. Dumont.

The woman evaded the reporters and proceeded to a hotel.

Traced to this place, she declined to see anybody, and the manager of the hotel, upon learning her identity, requested her to leave.

She took a train, it is believed, for Liverpool.

A SCARE FROM SAN FRANCISCO

San Francisco, Nov. 29.—The failure of an engine in one of the big power houses caused by a low tide shutting off the water from the condenser, interrupted all telegraphic and telephone communication with the outside world for about 20 minutes Saturday night and gave rise to a flood of rumors throughout the country that the interruption had been caused by an earthquake.

HIRED MAN IS ARRESTED; IS IN SERIOUS POSITION

In Fight With Edward Lowrey of St. Davids on Nov. 18, Robert Orr Put Him Down and Lowrey Was Kicked by Horse in Stall.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 29. Charged with assaulting Edward Lowrey, who, since the date of the quarrel (Nov. 18) has not recovered, and is in a precarious condition, Robert Orr was arrested last night by Inspector W. H. Mains and Detective McNamara of the Ontario police. Mr. Lowrey is proprietor of the Queenston Quarry Co. of St. Davids, and is a well-known and wealthy man. Orr is his hired man.

The arrest followed a six hours' examination of the arrested man by Inspector Mains. An operation, which was performed yesterday, which revealed the extent of Mr. Lowrey's injuries, and his serious condition, is believed to have been the determining factor of the arrest.

The operation was trepanning of the skull and was decided on as a final expedient. Mr. Lowrey has been unconscious for ten days. On the morning of the 18th he was in his drive shed, with two hired men. John McGee and Orr. According to the statements of these men, made yesterday, Lowrey directed McGee to do a certain piece of work. McGee refused stating this work did not come within the scope of his duties.

Lowrey became angry at this refusal, and, after a quarrel of words, the two men sprang at each other. McGee held a pitchfork in his hands, but as Lowrey approached he threw it away, and met him with his fists. The struggle carried the men near the horses on the opposite side of the shed; and on the slippery concrete floor the men slipped. Lowrey fell with his back turned to the horse stalls, and while he was struggling to get up, McGee says one of the horses kicked him, knocking him unconscious. Both McGee and Orr agree on this point.

Orr says he was standing near the men during the fight, and went to place the pitchfork where neither of them could get hold of it. He says that as he came back he saw the horse kick Lowrey. Evidently the police believe McGee could not have caused the injuries, for they released him after obtaining his statement. Orr, however, was arrested charged with committing grievous assault with intent. The fact that one of the doctors believe that the injuries were not caused by the kick of a horse but by a severe blow from a hard instrument, and that Mr. Lowrey's recovery is doubtful, places the prisoner in a serious position.

He will appear before Magistrate Fraser to-day.

WOMAN FIRES AT HUSBAND AT BROCKVILLE

Brockville, Nov. 29.—A shooting affray took place yesterday at the Windsor Hotel, on Perth street, when Mrs. Herbert C. Barker, in a fit of rage fired thrice at her husband, one bullet imbedding itself in his thigh.

Barker had been drinking heavily and his wife was doing her best to sober him up. He expressed his intention of going down town and, failing to heed the warning of her intention to shoot, the tragedy was enacted.

Though the police have been acquainted of the affray last night, no arrests have been made. Barker cannot be found and his wife is in a highly excited condition.

The shooting was preceded by a fight, which took place Saturday night in their apartments, where Barker seriously assaulted his wife, whose face is badly marked and bruised in many places.

SHOT GIRL'S FATHER WHILE ELOPING

Camilla, Ga., Nov. 29.—T. J. Sellers, a wealthy farmer, was shot to death in the public road ten miles southwest of here Saturday, just as he succeeded in the pursuit of his daughter, who had eloped with Columbus Huey. Leaving his body in the road, Huey and Miss Sellers, it is alleged, went on, driving rapidly in a buggy, intending to complete the elopement with a wedding.

Huey was captured late last night with the girl several miles from the scene of the shooting. He is in jail here.

The girl declares that they have been married and she will not attend her father's funeral.

She said that her father threatened to kill her unless she should go back home with him, when he caught the eloping couple, and that he put his hand to his pocket as if to draw a weapon.

She says Huey then fired, killing Sellers instantly.

WALTER WELLMAN DOUBTS THE STORY OF DR. COOK

Artic Explorer, Who Planned to Make the Dash by Airship, Says That to Trained Ear Brooklyn Doctor's Stories Are Overdone.

Washington, Nov. 29.—Walter Wellman, whose preparations for a conquest of the North Pole in an airship recently were abandoned, issued last night a statement in which he analyzed the narrative of the two claimants of polar discovery, declaring that of Peary "precise, workmanlike, consistent, credible in every particular," and denouncing that of Dr. Cook as "self-evident, and even deliberate imposture."

"Cook's story is suspicious both in what it does tell and what it does not tell," Mr. Wellman declares. "He is generally vague and indefinite, but like most men of his class, altogether too precise at the wrong place. Nowhere does his story ring true. It is always an approximation of reality itself. This is true of his figures, his descriptions, everything.

"Those of us who have had a share in Arctic work," says Wellman, "and who have felt anxiety that no blot of fraud should stain the proud record of effort and sacrifice, had a first hope—that Dr. Cook would be able to demonstrate his good faith. This has dissolved in analysis of his own story. A second hope—that he was the victim of some hallucination or mental illness, and himself believed he had been to the pole, though, of course, he was not, vanishes in the light of earlier and subsequent events. There remains, though one says it with keenest regret, only the wretched alternative that the journey which he did make, and the report which he gave of it, were deliberately planned from the outset."

The gist of Mr. Wellman's findings is that with his meagre party and equipment Dr. Cook could not possibly have accomplished the feat for which he claims credit, that his astronomical data are too minutely precise to have been made under the claimed conditions in the field, and that the explorer's dash for the lecture platform and his acceptance of "crowns of flowers upon his head by innocent women and children before submitting his field records to scientific examination, all conspire to discredit him."

Mr. Wellman quotes from the records to show that Peary took his ship within 460 miles of the pole, advancing supplies and his party 47 miles closer during the autumn and spring, while Cook, started, from Annotok, 700 geographical miles from the pole, and went 170 geographical miles westward before turning north.

Peary mapped out his plans carefully for the advance and started with fifty or sixty men, 140 dogs and twenty-one sledges. He had four supporting parties, who kept open the back trail. Dr. Cook had no supporting party, says Wellman, except for the first three days. His party consisted of three men, twenty-six dogs and two sledges in the long dash he made.

"That which he claims to have done," declares Mr. Wellman, referring to Cook, "with his equipment and organization, was physically impossible."

Mr. Wellman points out that Cook made 68 miles in three days, despite bad weather, rough ice and the necessity of crossing a big lead, two miles wide, at a time when the sledge loads were heaviest. Cook, he says, thus traveled over a distance 27 per cent. greater at a speed 40 per cent. faster than Peary.

Mr. Wellman is especially caustic in his criticism of Dr. Cook for not turning over the records of his trip immediately to some scientific society. The records, he says, of an Arctice traveler need no revision, for, if they are honestly inscribed, they cannot be subject to revision. Such records are complete and perfect the moment they are written.

CAT IS GIVEN FANCY BURIAL

Windsor, Nov. 29.—A pet cat belonging to Alexander Abar of Sandwich died on the house boat on which Abar and his wife are traveling towards New Orleans, and was sent by express from Lawrenceburg, Indiana, to W. H. Everitt, a Windsor butcher, for interment in the private burial plot, Abar maintains near Sandwich.

The owner of the deceased pet sent a liberal check to pay expenses and Everett carried out the instructions to the letter, depositing the remains alongside of other pets of Abar, that have passed out of life into the happy hunting ground of the animal kingdom.

Strikers' Families Evicted.

Ludlow, Mass., Nov. 29.—The eviction of families of strike operatives of the Ludlow Manufacturing Associates from cottages owned by the concern began Saturday, when a dozen or more families were forced to leave their homes and their goods piled in the muddy streets. A force of [illegible] 300 deputy sheriffs, policemen and detectives were on hand.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

The passengers on the Victorian include Sir Montagu Allan and Sir H. Taschereau.

F. Lea W[illegible], managing director of the Montreal Light, Heat & Power Co., died yesterday after a week's illness, aged 52.

The by-elections held in Birtle, Man., for the Provincial Legislature resulted in the return of G. H. Malcolm (Lib.) by [illegible] majority.

King Manuel of Portugal yesterday received an ovation from thousands of Parisians on the way to mass to the Church of St. Mary Magdalen.

Mrs. Mary Rumble, charged with dynamiting the home occupied by her husband in [illegible], appeared for trial on Saturday. She will be examined as to her sanity.

The Earl of Ranfurly has decided, it is said, to put the town of Dungannon up for auction, and it will be sold in lots in a few days' time. The auction is to take place in Belfast.

Merritt Wiltsie, aged 75, general storekeeper at Derwent, Ont., died from injuries sustained by being thrown from his buggy. He was climbing in when the horses started unexpectedly and he was thrown out, fracturing his shoulder and sustaining internal injuries.

Six Chinese hidden in a canal boat loaded with pulpwood, were found last night at Rouse's Point, New York, by immigration and customs inspectors. All were arrested, together with the captain of the boat, Otto Petersen, who is charged with smuggling Chinese into the country.

A man's body, found in the river under the Waterloo street bridge at Stratford Saturday morning proved to be that of Alex Connolly, of 571 Mornington street, who had been missing since Thursday night. Late that night he was seen going in the direction of the river in an intoxicated condition.

ELECTRIC ENGINES TO ENTER MONTREAL

Montreal, Nov. 29.—The Canadian Pacific will shortly take an important step toward the abatement of the smoke nuisance in so far as it is caused by railway trains being drawn into Montreal.

The means proposed is to transfer power at Montreal Junction from steam to electricity, so that all trains entering the Windsor station will be brought in by high power electric engines.

The time taken to make the transfer from steam to electric power at the junction would be not more than two minutes.

TWENTY JAPS KILLED IN WRECK OF WORK TRAIN

Score Met Death and Fifteen Are Injured When Train Runs Into Destroyed Culvert, Just Outside of New Westminister.

Vancouver, B.C., Nov. 29.—Twenty Japanese were killed and fifteen injured so badly that several will die in the wreck of a work train on the Great Northern Railway, between Vancouver and Westminster, early yesterday.

The train left Vancouver at six o'clock on the way to Sumas. At 6.30, when within a mile of the city limits of New Westminster, the train ran into a washed-out culvert. The engine passed nearly over, then sagged back and Fireman Kent and Engineer Beattiger jumped, escaping injury. Immediately behind the tender was a Japanese bunk car in which 35 men lay, most of them asleep.

The engine settled back until it stood almost on end and the Japanese car was caught and smashed between the engine and tender. It was cut squarely in half. One half was crushed to kindling wood and the remainder smashed in on the sides, and the ends slid further into the gully.

Three flat cars piled on top of each other, while a caboose at the rear remained on the tracks.

Riding on the engine of the train was Geo. W. Kemp, a commercial traveler, a representative of W. H. Malkin & Co., Vancouver. His feet were crushed and he was internally injured. How he happened to be on the train is a mystery to officials.

That the Japanese work train, and not the crowded "Owl" passenger train from Seattle, that met disaster is simply a piece of luck for the passengers of the night express, which otherwise would not have been held at New Westminster.

At the point of the accident a small stream crosses the Great Northern tracks through a four by four foot culvert. A torrent of rain Saturday night swelled the volume of the stream and debris blocked the culvert. When the stream broke its banks, it started to eat through the filling, which carried the railway tracks and the stream forced through the embankment, a large section of fill was carried away leaving the tracks unsupported.

Hurrying to cross the "Owl," waiting at New Westminster, Engineer Beattiger observed nothing wrong with the track and only when the track began to give way under them did he and his fireman jump.

Several city car lines are crippled to-day because of the ravages of streams of rain water. Basements are flooded all over the city, and it is raining harder than ever.

ELIMINATED THE GEISHA GIRLS

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 29.—According to news brought by the Bellerophen, the Japanese Government ordered that Geisha girls be eliminated from entertainments given for Field Marshal Lord Kitchener, owing to an idea that he was a woman-hater.

At the entertainment given at Tokio municipality, the Geisha usually so prominent at such entertainments, were replaced by men in ancient armor, carrying weapons used in mediaeval days.

The girls who usually act as waitresses, were replaced by men for the occasion.

Steamer Is Missing.

San Juan, Porto Rico, Nov. 29.—It is nineteen days since the Herrera line steamer Maria Herrera left Santiago, Cuba, with a cargo of cattle for Ponce, Porto Rico. The steamer is now 17 days overdue and it is believed that she has foundered.

Great Cartoonist Ill.

London, Nov. 29.—Edward Linley Sambourne, who succeeded Sir John Tennie as chief cartoonist for Punch in 1901, is dangerously ill.

HOTELS MUST MOVE AWAY FROM CHURCHES

Buffalo, Nov. 29.—According to a decision handed down by the Court of Appeals, a copy of which reached here yesterday, all saloonkeepers in the state having places of business within 200 feet of any church must move outside of the charmed circle.

The decision says, in effect, that the amendment to exercise law passed last year by the Legislature is valid and binding.

Over 150 saloons and hotels in Buffalo alone are affected by the decision.

Conservative Nominations In Dufferin

Orangeville, Nov. 29.—No time will will be lost by the Conservatives of Dufferin in bringing out a candidate to succeed the late member, Dr. Barr in the House of Commons. President Paul Gallaugher of the Conservative Association of Dufferin has issued a call to the faithful to assemble at Shelburne on Friday, Dec. 10, for the purpose of nominating a candidate for the position.

JEWISH BROKERS ARE UNDER ARREST

Berlin, Nov. 29. The Volks Zeitung publishes despatches from Samesta, Russia, saying that the Russian authorities have suddenly arrested all the Jews of the Stock Exchange.

The wholesale arrests were caused by the local governor, who was seized with the idea that the Jews should not be allowed to do business on the exchange.

The Volks Zeitung also says that an anti-Semitic agitator, delivering a speech from the altar of a church at Optoschek, Russia, inciting the people to massacre the Jews, struck down a priest at the foot of the altar when the clergyman tried to prevent his speaking.

The agitator then continued his harangue with the applause of the congregation.

ENGINE WRECKS WOODEN BRIDGE

Plattsville, Ont., Nov. 29.—[illegible] Battler, a well-known thresher, residing three miles south of Plattsville, met death while returning from New Hamburg Saturday night with his traction engine.

While crossing the wooden bridge on the Wilmont and Blenheim town line, the joice of the bridge gave way, precipitating Battler and his son William, with the engine, to the river below, a distance of about 15 feet.

William fell into the water free of the engine, but his father was pinioned under the debris.

The accident happened at 7.30 p.m., and soon after a large crowd of workers succeeded in extracting the body. The water in the river was about five feet deep and it is supposed that death was caused by drowning.

THE COAL STRIKE HAS BEEN BROKEN

Ottawa, Nov. 29.—F. A. Acland, Deputy Minister of Labor, who investigated conditions in Nova Scotia relative to the strikes at the coal mines, brought by the United Mine Workers of America, says:

"The strike at Glace Bay appears to be practically broken, but the military force is likely to be retained for some time to come. At Inverness the strike is still more definitely broken, but military protection is still considered desirable. There is a considerable number of men on United Mine Workers' relief lists. At Springhill no attempt is made to work the mine and operations are apparently at a standstill for an indefinite period, with the promise of the worst results to the industry and the community concerned."

The Daily Review
MONDAY, NOV. 29, 1909.

AT LAST

No careful and unprejudiced student of tariff affairs in Canada can have failed to observe the change that is coming over opinion as regards the policy of protection. It is true that the Liberal Government, while it lightened the tariff burdens very materially, has continued a tariff that is still protective, and is not for revenue only. It may be true that men who name and call themselves Liberals are protectionists alike in theory and in practice. But it is also true that no sound Liberal regards a high protection tariff as other than an evil which is tolerable only because of untoward conditions. And it is also true that all sound Liberals desire relief from tariff burdens. They agree with the Dominion Grange spokesmen in opposing a campaign in favor of increasing tariffs, and in advocating lower duties on raw materials rather than higher duties on finished products.—The Globe.

The Globe admits, at last, that it is the organ of a protectionist government. But it admits some other things that are not correct. The position it lays down for reasonable-minded Liberals fits reasonable-minded Conservatives equally well, at the very least. But then the Globe cannot do anything quite right. It would never do to admit so much that Conservatives would score a triumph. Hence the Globe takes a drive at them to even things up.

But there is no getting away from the fact that Protection is an absolute necessity in Canada. If other nations would not seek to get the start of us but would content themselves with Free Trade, we should advocate it in Canada. No one denies the correctness of the fundamental principles of F. T. But it is utterly useless if not worse to practise Free Trade when others will not and it is this manner of preaching impossible Free Trade and practising protection by the Globe that has seemed always so absurd to the Globe's readers. The above quotation, however, relieves the situation a bit and restores the Globe to the respect of those who admire consistency and common-sense even if to admire it necessitates the apparent admission that Conservatives are protectionists from greed and spite, while the Liberals are so from necessity and high-mindedness.

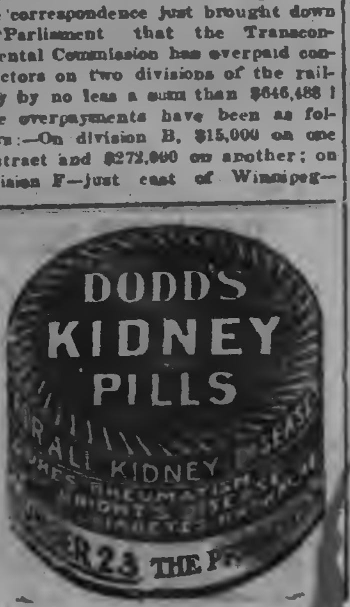
THE SCANDAL MUST BE PROBED

The Mail and Empire.

Mr. Gordon Grant, the present chief engineer of the Government end of the Grand Trunk Pacific, reports in the correspondence just brought down in Parliament that the Transcontinental Commission has overpaid contractors on two divisions of the railway by no less a sum than $646,488! The overpayments have been as follows:—On division B, $15,000 on one contract and $272,000 on another; on division F—just east of Winnipeg—$359,488. These excessive payments are the result of over-classification. Mr. Grant makes this report with regard to but two of the six divisions of the road.

The revelations made by Mr. Gordon Grant lend interest to the history of this over-classification question. Major Hodgins was the first engineer of section F. He was a conscientious officer, and had strict views on the subject of contractors' accounts. He would not permit earth excavation, the price for which was 21 cents a yard, to be paid for as solid rock at $1.50. Nor would he agree to any departure from the specifications. On September 7, 1907, he wrote to Ottawa that he intended to go over his division in order to bring the classification to a uniform basis. He said in another letter htat he "would not allow the introduction of solid rock into cuttings where it does not exist." He also said:—"I notified the engineers that a repetition of this sort of thing would mean their dismissal." On September 12 his resignation was demanded from Ottawa, and he had to submit. Now, his charge of over-classification is sustained by Mr. Gordon Grant, who, although a "liberal-classification" man himself, declares that on this division of the line we have paid $359,488 too much. The statements of Major Hodgins and of Mr. Gordon Grant are endorsed by Mr. Wood, the engineer-in-charge of the interests of the Grand Trunk Pacific. In addition, Mr. Lumsden, the former chief engineer, makes the same allegation. His charge is startling. He says with regard to division F—formerly under the direction of Major Hodgins—and division B, that neither the specifications nor his instructions have been adhered to. "Large amounts of material have been returned as solid rock which should only have been classified as loose rock or common excavation." That is to say, we have been paying $1.50 a cubic yard for work that ought to have been paid for either at 50 cents or at 21 cents. It stands to Mr. Lumsden's credit that he abandoned an honorable and lucrative position rather than be a party to operations of this kind.

What is Parliament going to do about this matter? It ought to give it attention at once. The allegations of Mr. Lumsden, Mr. Wood, Mr. Gordon Grant and Major Hodgins must be probed most carefully, and if the commissioners, who ought to be suspended while the enquiry is in progress, have agreed to or are responsible for the occurrences of which the engineers speak, they should be dismissed.



EDITORIAL NOTES

Eclipses of the moon should be prohibited. They keep people out too late.

The man who comes out for mayor without a definite and progressive electric power policy for Peterborough will be disappointed. The welfare of the city is at stake.

"In 1902, Lord Selborne, First Lord of the Admiralty, laid emphasis on the need of one control in case of war or emergency, and declared that in no sense was the Imperial problem one of local defence. If any Colony followed "this heresy," a country which held to the doctrine of one control would be able to deal with the scattered navies singly and crush them."—Exchange.

It is the grievance of the Conservative press that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is doing most of the talking on the government side. And he is talking to some purpose. His speech on the Canadian navy will be carefully preserved. Eventually it will pass into the school readers for the study of our children.—British Whig.

It is very likely. It is only fit for children.

Rev. Father Hand was glad to know that the Separate School Board was doing splendid work for the education of the 5,000 or more Catholic children in Toronto. He hoped the time would come when in Ontario, as in Quebec, the Catholics would have their own collegiate and normal schools, so that they could show Ontario the excellent education given to Catholic children of the Province.

Inspector Power of the separate schools, Bro. Canning and others also spoke.

The hearty singing of God Save the King brought the very interesting proceedings to a close.—The Globe.

Mr. M. E. Nichols, editor of the Winnipeg Telegram, who is in the city, stated to a Star reporter that the interview with Sir Wm. Van Horne on the naval question was absolutely correct. The interview was printed in the Evening Telegram the day I left Winnipeg," said Mr. Nichols. "It was obtained by one of our most capable reporters and as to the accuracy of Sir. Wm's. utterances there can be no shadow of doubt. I noticed the denials printed in some of the Montreal papers last night, but I have no doubt that it was faked. Sir William's opinions on the naval question as printed in his interview with the Winnipeg Telegram are the opinions he expressed and I do not believe for a moment that he will repudiate them or modify them in any way."—Montreal Star.

We have been asked if we think that the inhabitants of Heaven will be thoroughly satisfied. Of course we cannot say, since we do not know, but of this we are fairly certain, viz., that some will think that others should never have been allowed in, i.e., if we are to judge by the way they feel towards each other here. They will feel that sooner or later the interlopers will pollute and infect the perfect atmosphere, that is if the Almighty has no more power there than many ascribe to Him here below. It is true that God's ways are not man's, but though we repeat, this statement from day to day we are quite convinced that it is not accurate, since we act in God's behalf in such a thoroughly human way. It has been observed, on divine authority, that "all His paths are peace," but humanity often acts as if "peace" should have read "pieces," and proceeds accordingly. No. We are not so sure about the condition of things in Heaven, for if God cannot be wholly trusted here, how shall we trust Him hereafter. The cult of re-incarnation, which just now is affecting minds of a high intellectual order, is, to us, short in one serious particular. Men are supposed to progress from man to future man just as they have prepared themselves for that progress. This presumes that we know what is good for ourselves, which is not always the case. If we should make a mistake and land ourselves in a pig instead of a superman at some later date it would be serious. Our own ideals are not necessarily a safe guide. We must look through them always to God and to be sure must constantly ask for His guidance and above all, must trust Him to do what is right without our interference and suggestions.

MI-O-NA

Relieves Stomach Misery Almost Instantly

If the food you ate at your last meal did not digest, but laid for a long time like lead in your stomach, then you have indigestion and quick action should be taken.

Of course there are many other symptoms of indigestion, such as belching up of sour food, heartburn, dizziness, shortness of breath and sour breath, and if you have any of them, your stomach is out of order and should be corrected.

Mi-o-na tablets have cured thousands of cases of indigestion and stomach trouble. If you have any stomach distress, Mi-o-na will relieve instantly.

But Mi-o-na unlike most so-called dyspepsia remedies, does more than relieve; it permanently cures dyspepsia or any stomach trouble by putting energy and strength into the walls of the stomach, where the gastric juices are produced.

A large box of Mi-o-na tablets costs but 50 cents at Wm. Madill's, the druggists, and are guaranteed to cure or money back. When others fail, Mi-o-na cures. It is a producer of flesh when the body is thin; it cleanses the stomach and bowels; purifies the blood and makes rich red blood.

Part of Wall Falls.

Woodstock, Ont., Nov. 29.—Three men were injured late Saturday afternoon when about fifteen feet of the wall of the Tobin Arms Factory, which is nearly completed, collapsed.

John Scott fell through two storeys to the basement, and is in the hospital suffering from serious injuries. He will recover.

Another workman, W. Book, stuck at the second storey and received minor injuries, as did also a third workman, who was able to walk home.

Softening mortar caused the collapse.

Shot From Ambush.

Lafayette, Tenn., Nov. 29.—Dewey King, a well-known physician was shot from ambush and instantly killed Saturday night, while riding on horseback across the public square. No one witnessed the shooting, though several persons heard the shots.

It is known that King had enemies here who threatened to kill him on account of domestic troubles.

Boys Went Through Ice.

Kingston, Nov. 29.—Elwood Ingram, aged six, and Garrett Ingram, aged 8, sons of Mrs. Richard Ingram, Wellington, were playing on the ice on West Lake when it gave way and both went through. They were speedily pulled out, but Elwood was beyond relief and Garrett's condition is so serious that his life is despaired of.

Ship Founders.

Tillamooth, Wash., Nov. 29.—The steamer Argo foundered in Tillamooth Bay Friday night. Three lives were lost, when a lifeboat capsized in returning to shore.

An unknown man at Kingston brutally assaulted the ten-year-old daughter of Thomas Stanford.

CANADIAN NORTHERN
THE SHORT ROUTE TO Gow Ganda

Getting into Gow Ganda this winter will be made easier, as the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway will in a few days have steel laid to Gow Ganda Jct., which is 31 miles north of Sellwood Jct., 64 miles North of Sudbury and 320 from Toronto.

The Gow Ganda Transport Company are building a good team road from Gow Ganda Jct. that will be much shorter and a great improvement over the road used last year.

Maps of the route, also freight, passenger and express tariffs are in course of preparation and an announcement will be made shortly of the service and all arrangements regarding the handling of the traffic.

HAVELOCK HAPPENINGS

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Nov. 30.—Mr. Thos. McClure has moved into the apartments above Pearce's store.

Messrs. Chas. and Peter White, of Lake, have moved into the residence vacated by Mr. McClure.

We are sorry to report the illness of Mr. Elra Williams.

Miss Carrie McKelvie has returned from visiting friends in Tweed.

Mr. W. H. Hubble, of Marmora, was in town on Friday.

Mr. R. R Graham, of the Prudential Insurance Co., Peterborough, has been in town on business this week.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of St. John's church held their weekly meeting at the residence of Mrs. H. Falkner on Wednesday.

Miss Lottie Chiles is visiting in town.

Miss Daisy Curry has returned from visiting in Norwood.

Mr. Alex. Mathieson, of town, was married to Miss Kidd of Peterborough, in that city on Wednesday.

Messrs. Wm. Hitchins, Walter Vare and W. B Hart, C.P.R. firemen have been transferred to West Toronto.

Mr. Ernest Bennet attended a dance given by the students of Queen's University at Kingston on Friday.

Rev. J. A. G. Sterling was in Peterborough on Thursday.

The High Court case in which Thos. Bennet, on behalf of himself and other shareholders sued the five original directors of the Havelock Electric Light Co., for $5,000, was concluded on Wednesday, but Mr. Justice Britton reserved judgment until Dec. 27th. O'Connel & Gordon appeared for the plaintiffs, Gus H. Porter, K.C., of Belleville, for defendants, Holdcroft & Rose, W. H. Kerr, K.C., of Cobourg, for defendants, Curtis & Evans, R. Ruddy for defendant, Mathison and S. T. Medd for the Company.

Mr. R. W Clarke, of Millbrook, a past president of the Ontario Sunday School Association, will deliver addresses at both sessions of the Belmont Township Sunday School Association convention in the Presbyterian church Havelock, on Wednesday, Dec. 1st. There will be both an afternoon and evening session. The local ministers and others will assist in the programme.

Mr. Wes. Davidson has taken up residence in the house adjoining and east of Jno. G. Garrat.

Mr. Jos. Frost has moved into his residence on Ontario street.

There were a large number of Havelock's citizens in Peterborough during the week as witnesses on the case of Bennett vs. the Havelock Electric Light Company.

On Friday afternoon of last week and on Tuesday of this week a "bee" was held on the grounds of St. John's church, when a number of the congregation gathered to make repairs to the stables and sheds.

The Tiffin Oil and Gas Syndicate under the direction of Manager Davidson are engaged in drilling operations on Jas. Haughton's property near Tiffin siding on the C.P.R.

At the Presbyterian manse, Medicine Hat, Alta., on Thursday, Nov. 11th, Miss Idelle Spring, daughter of Mr. J. Spring, formerly of Newmarket, Ont., was married to Mr. John Flynn, son of Mr. Gilbert Flynn, of Mountain Grove, Ont. Mr. Flynn formerly resided in Havelock and is a brother of Mr. Robert Flynn, of town. His many friends in Havelock will unite in wishing the young couple every happiness.

The announcement has been made this week of the marriage of Miss Lillian Isabella, daughter of Mrs. Jas. Campbell, of town, to Dr. Harry Balfour Andrew, of Toronto.

The wedding took place at Peterborough on Nov. 1st, and was celebrated by Rev. Mr. Potter, of that city.

The bride has resided in Havelock since childhood and has grown up in our midst, honored and loved by old and young alike.

Dr. Andrews has purchased a medical practice and drug business in Sundridge and Mrs. Andrews will join him there next week.

Their many friends join in wishing the young couple a long and happy married life.

Miss M. B. Marshall, niece of Mr. W. J., Seeney, of Rush Point, was united in marriage to Mr. R. Howard of Coe Hill, at Norwood on Nov. 11th, the nuptial knot being tied by Rev. Mr. Tucker, of that place. Miss Violet Meads of town, assisted the bride, while Mr. Robt. Seeney, of Rush Point, acted as groomsman.

Mr. Wm. Cole, who has recently moved to West Toronto is offering his house on Alexander street, for sale.

LIFE SKETCH OF MR. J. W. FLAVELLE

Augustus Bridle in the Globe draws a life-sketch of Mr. Jos. W. Flavelle, part of which is reproduced as follows:—

The farmer who takes between seven and eight dollars a hundred live weight for his pork these edgy autumn days never pauses to inquire into the personality or ideals of the man who pays the price. It happens that the man who, as managing director of the William Davies Company, practically controls the pork market of Canada is the man who is virtually at the head of the Methodist mission movement, is Chairman of the trustees of the Public General Hospital of Toronto, has been Chairman of the University Commission, was until lately proprietor of a big daily newspaper, and is, not the less, President of the National Trust Company, Vice-President of the Robert Simpson Company, and a director of the Bank of Commerce. Mr. J. W. Flavelle is, besides, an enthusiastic patron of the art of music. All which is middling broad-gauge travelling, whereby a man of too much temperament might lose his head, but not so the subject of this sketch.

Mr. Flavelle was born near the city of Peterborough about fifty-two years ago. That particular part of eastern Ontario where begin the highlands resembles in character some of the glens and moors of Scotland. From the same ridge of rocks came Senator Cox, Mr. William Mackenzie and Mr. E. R. Wood.

The story goes—and it bears all the earmarks of truth—that Mr. Flavelle once kept a small flour and feed store in Peterborough, just as Senator Cox once conducted a photograph gallery. And, according to the story, Mr. Flavelle was a man of conscience in flour and feed, as well as in matters affecting drink. He was a temperance man, as he is now; in fact, a prohibitionist. He not only practised, but preached, prohibition. He went on the stump in election campaigns in support of the Scott Act. In so doing he became unpopular with the hotelkeepers, who, being large consumers of feed, got even with Mr. Flavelle by boycotting his store, thereby injuring his business, so that it became easy for him to drift away from the harmless town of Peterborough to the larger field represented by the city of Toronto. So that, if the story be true, an ethical principle or devotion to a cause was the making of a man of mark and of influence in finance, in the Church and in society.

There are some who say that the wand which waved J. W. Flavelle out of Peterborough into Toronto about twenty years ago was in the hands of Senator Cox, who, having grown up with the financial system of Toronto—being in large measure its father—saw a good necessary opening for a man whom his keen eye had counted as a shrewd, constructive mind in business. This, however, is but an episode. The man himself was the prime consideration. The firm of William Davies became a large fact in the world of Canadian business through the personality of J. W. Flavelle. Talking a few years ago to the manager of one of the largest banks in England, I was asked if I knew Mr. Flavelle. * * * *

As Chairman of the University Commission he was something of a paradox. Of the seven men who made that notable commission to find out what was the matter with the University of Toronto, and to provide the remedy, he was the only man besides Mr. Byron E. Walker who had not a university degree. Of actual schooling he had but a modicum. He knew no Latin and nothing of algebra; has never made pretence of being a public speaker—though with plenty of power to deliver his mind of whatever he thinks in the tersest of English, and with a remarkable lucidity and sequence of ideas. But he had been for some years identified with university work; was the founder of a travelling scholarship in Victoria College—besides being Superintendent of Sherbourne Street Methodist Sunday School. He lives in Queen's Park on University land. His house, on which he has lavished some of his wealth, is a model of expensive elegance, and contains a large library, a conservatory and a pipe organ—one of the first, if not the first, domestic pipe organs in Toronto. In fact, Mr. Flavelle seems to have had a sort of natural affinity for the arts. He has some excellent pictures, though he has never become a connoisseur. He reads widely, but has never become either a scholar or a critic. Once on a trip going from Toronto the writer found him absorbed in a book. It was a literary study of Biblical characters.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

CURE
Sick Headache and relieve all the troubles incident to a bilious state of the system, such as Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Distress after eating, Pain in the Side, &c. While their most remarkable success has been shown in curing

SICK
Headache, yet Carter's Little Liver Pills are equally valuable in Constipation, curing and preventing this annoying complaint, while they also correct all disorders of the stomach, stimulate the liver and regulate the bowels. Even if they only cured

HEAD
Ache they would be almost priceless to those who suffer from this distressing complaint; but fortunately their goodness does not end here, and those who once try them will find these little pills valuable in so many ways that they will not be willing to do without them. But after all sick head is the bane of so many lives that here is where we make our great boast. Our pills cure it while others do not.

ACHE

Carter's Little Liver Pills are very small and very easy to take. One or two pills make a dose. They are strictly vegetable and do not gripe or purge, but by their gentle action please all who use them.

CARTER MEDICINE CO., NEW YORK.
Small Pill. Small Dose. Small Price.

WARNING,

Since its introduction into Canada the sales of Parisian Sage have been phenomenal. This success has led to many imitations similar in name. Look out for them; they are not the genuine. See that the girl with the Auburn hair is on every package. You can always get the genuine at Wm. Madill's, the druggist, Peterborough.

Parisian Sage is the quickest acting and most efficient hair tonic in the world.

It is made to conform to Dr. Sangerbond's, of Paris, proven theory that dandruff, falling hair, baldness and scalp itch are caused by germs.

Parisian Sage kills these dandruff germs and removes all trace of dandruff in two weeks, or money back; it stops falling hair and itching scalp and prevents baldness.

And remember that baldness is caused by dandruff germs, those little hard working, persistent devils that day and night do nothing but dig into the roots of the hair and destroy its vitality.

Parisian Sage is a daintily perfumed hair dressing, not sticky or greasy, and any woman who desires luxuriant and bewitching hair can get it in two weeks by using it. 50 cents a large bottle.

THE HOOK

Belleville people believe they saw an airship on Friday night. Time to start a local option campaign there.

There were some people we did not see in the procession yesterday.

The employees of the editorial department of a Peterborough newspaper are being annoyed by the frequent use by a member of the staff of the expression, "I love my lamb, but O you Normalite." Apparently it happened yesterday.

Beats Rosa Fritz's Record.

St. Joseph, Mo., Nov. 29.—H. Otis Blaisdall of New York, who made a new world's record Saturday for 15 minutes copying on a typewriter, made a new record Saturday for an hour by writing 6,184 words, or an average of 103 a minute. The previous record was made Sept. 30 in New York by Miss Rose L. Fritz, 95 words.

Quick Vengeance.

Shreveport, La., Nov. 29.—Two hours after Henry Rachel, a negro, had attempted assault upon a seven-year-old girl here, he was hanged by a mob of 200 men. The negro had been captured by sheriff's posse and bloodhounds and was being taken to prison when the mob overpowered his captors and hanged him.

King Edward For Arbitrator.

Santiago, Chile, Nov. 29.—The request of the Chilean Government to King Edward that he act as arbitrator in the Alsop claim will be made through the charge d'affaires of the Chilean legation at London.

It has not been announced whether or not the request has yet reached his majesty.

Baker Electrocuted.

Vancouver, B.C., Nov. 29.—Charles Pearce, an employe of the Hoy & Sons' bakery, was instantly killed by the death dealing electric current on Saturday evening, as he was delivering bread at Glencoe Lodge. He leaves a wife and two children.

Pearce was entering the backyard of Glencoe Lodge with his wire basket hanging over his arm, when a broken telephone wire struck the basket. The wire had broken earlier in the day, but no person thought sufficiently of the matter to see that it was placed out of reach. Somewhere in its path it had come in contact with a wire of higher voltage.

The mummy of Rameses, King of Egypt, has arrived at Boston.

THE SUPREME TEST.

What the Lovely Maiden Feared the Most.

"Stillingia," said the young man, his voice tremulous with suppressed emotion, "are you going to put me on the puzzle? Is this where I get off?"

Unshed tears were in the lovely maiden's eyes. If she had shed them they would not have been in her eyes. But let that pass.

"I have not said so, Geoffrey," reluctantly she answered, "in so many words. But"—

"Listen, Stillingia," he burst forth impetuously. "Is there any other guy that's got the inside track? Am I playing second fiddle to some snoozer with plastered hair, an ingrowing chin and a pull at the bank? If so"—

"No, Geoffrey, but"—

"Then why the Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego are you stalling me off! I may not be a pampered child of fashion, but I'm on the dead lev. I've never been caught with the goods. Girlie, ever since I was a kid you've been my one best bet, and you know it. I'm Old Faithful from Kleengouville. I've trailed along in your wake like a night police reporter on the track of a lovely holdup or a bug collector after a gorgeous butterfly. All my life I've been building bungalows in the air for you to move into some day. I'd rather look at your tintype than to eat four square meals. You are the niftiest, peachiest dream that ever"—

"Geoffrey," interrupted the beautiful girl, standing erect before him, pale but calm and resolute, "I know you love me, and I am touched as never before by your devotion, but something seems to tell me that we are not truly mated"—

Here her voice faltered.

"Geoffrey," she said, recovering herself, "we must not make a mistake that will wreck our whole lives! I must ask you one question."

"Well?"

"Which side do you take in the north pole controversy?"—Chicago Tribune.

Pleased His Majesty.

The dark monarch from sunny Africa was being shown over an engineering place in Salford by the manager, who, in explaining the working of certain machinery, unfortunately got his coattails caught in it and in a moment was being whirled round at so many revolutions per minute. Luckily for the manager, his garments were unequal to the strain of more than a few revolutions, and he was hurled, disheveled and dazed, at the feet of the visitor.

That exalted personage roared with laughter and said something to his interpreter.

"Sah," said that functionary to the manager, "his majesty say be am berry pleased with de trick an' will you please do it again."—Sketchy Bits.

No Free Admittance.

An aeronaut, leaning over the edge of his car as his balloon was slowly passing over a football field, overbalanced himself and fell plump among the players. When he recovered consciousness he found several of the club officials bending over him anxiously.

"Ah," said the treasurer in a tone of relief, "I'll trouble you for your sixpence now, old fellow."—Tit-Bits.

What He Got.

A good many years ago, in the state of Iowa, there was a small boy hoeing potatoes in a farm lot by the roadside. A man came along in a fine buggy and driving a fine horse. He looked over the fence, stopped and said, "Bub, what do you get for hoeing those potatoes?"

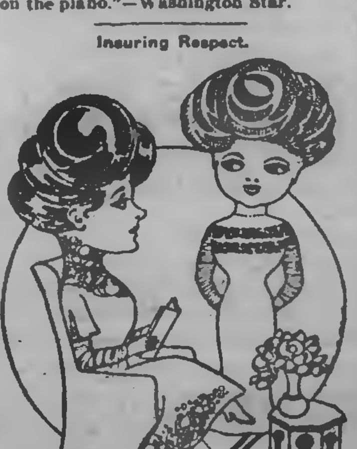
"Nothin' ef I do," said the boy, "and hell ef I don't."—Saturday Evening Post.

Excusable Resentment.

"It's really provoking," said the fond mother, "baby always cries when we have company."

"Well," answered Mr. Groucher, "you can't blame children for disliking company. If it weren't for visitors they wouldn't have to recite or play pieces on the piano."—Washington Star.

Insuring Respect.



"Do you think a diamond engagement ring really makes a girl more thought of by her chums?"

"Well, it certainly is a good thing to have on hand."

Romance In Real Life.

"Was your first meeting with your wife romantic?"

"Extremely so. It occurred at a picnic. I was eating a very ripe tomato, and some of it squirted into her eye."—Kansas City Journal.

The Henpecked Husband.

Children (who have been left in his charge)—Father, we are going back into the park for a little. May you come with us?—Meggendorfer Blatter.

Norway's new railway from Bergen to Christiania was inaugurated Saturday. [illegible]

Special Balloon Gun Fails.

New York, Nov. 29.—An anchored balloon sent up off Sandy Hook on Saturday at a continuation of the army's test of aerial warfare, passed unscathed through a fire from a gun especially designed for the purpose. Twenty shots in all were fired but none hit the bag.

The results of the experiments are being kept a secret, but the outcome of Saturday's test became known last night.

The balloon was fired upon a height of about 500 feet, but whether the failure of the special gun to destroy it resulted from the weapon's inefficiency or poor marksmanship could not be ascertained, because of the secret policy adopted in connection with the tests.

Increase in Price of B. C. Lumber.

Vancouver, B.C., Nov. 29—The coast mills advanced the price of lumber a dollar per thousand on Saturday, and it is reported there will be another rise within a few months.

A millman says that for some time the price of lumber has not been commensurate with the price of logs and they, in fact, have been selling for less than the cost of production. The rise is effective now. Several mills have called in their travelers as their hands are filled until the new year.

B. C. Cabinet Plans.

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 29.—A special meeting of the provincial executive is to be held Wednesday, when it is expected that all the Ministers will be at [illegible] the capital, excepting Dr Young. Arrangements will probably not be announced for some weeks later. There is no authority for the statement that Cotton will become Finance Minister. As matter of fact H. H. Watson of Vancouver may enter the Cabinet, as well as W. R. Ross of Fernie.

Cashier Embezzler Turns Farm Hand

Camden, N.J., Nov. 29.—Wanted on a charge of embezzling about [illegible] while cashier of the Lake City Trust Co., South Carolina, Daniel F. Mattey, was found working for Homer Cuff, a negro farmer, near Woodstown, N.J., and locked up.

Killed by Log Falling.

Belleville, Nov. 29.—David Hamilton was accidentally killed while at work in Wilson Spurr's camp north of Maynooth.

Hamilton was engaged in driving a team, and was standing at a skidway when another team drove up to unload.

The end of one of the logs struck a tamarack stump and broke about 20 feet off the top of it.

Hamilton's companions call to him to run, but thinking that it was his team which was in danger, he sprang for the lines and ran directly under the falling top, which struck him, killing him instantly.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

THREE THOUSAND IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL PROCESSION

Great Turnout in Connection With World's Temperance Sunday—Grand Opera House Packed and Overflow Meeting at Charlotte St. Church—An Imposing Turnout.

It was expected that 1,500 Sunday School scholars would take part in the World's Temperance Sunday procession which took place yesterday. It was a bad guess, for in round numbers there were 3,000 in the line of march. It was an inspiring sight to those interested in the temperance cause. All ages and classes were represented in the parade. There were gray-haired men and women and little boys and girls five and six years of age, and every age between these two extremes was represented. The committee in charge were surprised at the number of men who turned out. They made up nearly twenty-five per cent. of the procession. The ladies also turned out in large numbers. The Sunday Schools that took part in the procession were Auburn, Grace, George Street, St. Paul's, Mark Street, Gospel Hall, Bethany, Tabernacle, Murray Street, St. Andrew's, and the Salvation Army, comprising the northern section, and St. James', Park Street, Knox and Murray Street, comprising the southern section. Each division was led by a section of the Salvation Army band and the starting out of the two divisions of the parade was so well times that they came together at the corner of Aylmer and Charlotte streets, without a minute's delay being caused. From that point, Charlotte and George streets were followed to the Grand Opera House. Marching two abreast the procession was over a mile in length. Everything had been well arranged but the size of the turnout upset all calculations. It was estimated that the opera house could hold all those in the procession, but this was another bad guess. The theatre was packed from pit to gallery and then the rear door was opened and over a hundred persons were accommodated on the stage. There were two thousand people in the opera house and it was a great scene from the stage. There were faces everywhere, only the aisles being kept clear.

When it was seen that the Opera House was not going to accommodate all those in the procession, the committee decided to take the overflow to Charlotte street church, led by a section of the S.A. band, the remainder of the procession, consisting of a thousand persons, marched to Charlotte street church, and when it was filled to its capacity there was still an overflow. Those who were unable to gain admittance to the church went home.

The main procession was led by the Inthon Men's Bible Class of George street Sunday School, who when they reached the opera house, lined up on either side of the sidewalk and protected the children from a crush as they entered the building. Prominent in the procession were banners lettered as follows:—

"A BETTER WORLD HERE AND NOW."

"THE BOY OR THE BAR, WHICH?"

"VOTE FOR US"

"THE HAPPY HOME OR THE BAR?"

"THE BAR OR THE BOY, WHICH?"

"FATHERS, REMEMBER YOUR BOY ON VOTING DAY."

The northern section of the procession started from Auburn Sunday school, and the southern section from St. James' church. Mr. R. F. Downey was the marshall.

Rev. J. R. Webb was chairman at the Grand Opera House, and the singing, led by Mr. G. W. Mulligan, was one of the features. Miss Howell gave a solo in fine voice. The principal item o nthe programme was a temperance chalk talk by Mr. F. B. Bengough, of Toronto. He is an adept at making sketches, and with the aid of the pictures drawn, he brought out many strong points in favor of temperance. His remarks were followed with the deepest interest and were especially interesting to the boys and girls.

Rev. J. J. Ferguson, of Orillia, addressed the gathering at Charlotte street church, and told about the improvement brought about in that place by the introduction of local option there. When Mr. Bengough was through at the Opera House he was driven to the church and repeated the chalk talk there.

AN INTERESTING PAPER AT LITERARY SOCIETY MEETING

Those who were fortunate enough to be present at the ladies' literary at St. Peter's T. A. S. rooms Friday evening, November 26, enjoyed a literary treat of exceptional merit, in listening to the reading of Miss M. O'Connell's ably written paper, entitled "The River St. Lawrence, Its Scenic and Historic Environments."

As Canadians, we should know our own country first and best, and as Canada, especially Old Canada, is inseparable from the St. Lawrence in thought, I shall in this essay try to deal with one phase of this majestic river, its scenic and historic environments.

This lordly river of Canada searches the continent to its very heart, and connects the world's greatest chain of lakes with the Atlantic Ocean, thus forming one of the grandest systems of inland navigation in the world. It extends from the head waters of Lake Superior to Gaspe, a distance of 2,100 miles and with the exception of a few hours during which no land is visible, the traveller luxuriates in magnificent river and coastal scenery all steeped in historic and romantic associations.

Commencing our trip at Kingston, we pass through the Thousand Islands, perfect bowers of beauty, past the spires of picturesque Brockville, the old stone windmill at Prescott, and as the last glimpse of this pretty town fades in the distance, we pass the first vexed waters of the river, the Galops Rapids. These are only a foretaste of what is to come, the Long Sault, Coteau Rapids, about two miles long and very beautiful; Cedar Rapids, Hell's Hole, the Cascades and the Lachine Rapids to Montreal. Forty-five miles from Montreal the Richelieu flows into the St. Lawrence. Continuing our voyage we pass Three Rivers and now the banks begin to show bold, picturesque appearance as we near Quebec, the grand gateway of the St. Lawrence. The lofty fortress looms up before us. The historical battlefield which saw the most momentous struggle in the early history of North America, claims our attention. Let us stop here for a while in old Quebec—of all the cities on the continent, the quaintest.

It is a mighty rock, graded and scraped and made to hold houses and castles, which, by proper natural law, ought to slide off its back. But still they stick. Here is a small bit of medieval Europe, perched upon a rock and dried for keeping. A curiosity that has no equal of its kind on this side of the ocean. Here is the place where the refined luxury of Old France first came in touch with the barbaric wilderness of the New.

Seven miles above Quebec sings Montmorency's Cataract, ruggedly beautiful. Nestling at the foot of Mount St. Anne lies the celebrated shrine of St. Anne de Beaupre. The story of this wonderful shrine, built in honor of St. Anne, is too well known to require mention here.

The next point of interest is Grosse Isle, the scene of the untold sufferings and martyr-like deaths of nearly 6,000 Irish immigrants who, forced to leave their motherland, perished in Black '47.

Our journey onward from Grosse Isle is most delightful, the scenery beautiful beyond description. The mountainous capes and bold banks of the St. Lawrence are covered with pine and spruce and cedar, charming the eye with every hue and blend of green and impregnating the salt air with their wholesome fragrance.

The point where:

"Saguenay's dark waters roll
To swell St. Lawrence's tide."

is soon reached. Here is the old village of Tadousac. This is the most historic in Canada. It was here, in this small corner of the earth, that the French founded their first establishment on Canadian soil. From this centre went forth the first Jesuite Missionart Fahters, whose task it was to convert and civilize the region of the Saguenay and the mysterious north. Historians are not agreed as to where the first mass was celebrated in Canada, but tradition says it was on the spot where now stands the old Mission Church of Tadousac. The history of the old Mission Church covers three centuries.

As our steamer proceeds, great ocean liners are met from time to time, as this is one of the world's great highways of commerce. At Father Point this noble stream is twenty-five miles wide.

Away to our left is the dim outline of Anticosti Island, and on the right the wonderful coast of Gaspe stretches, marked by sublime scenery, lofty cliffs alternating with beautiful bays, and high above all the serrated peaks of the Perce mountains. Calls are made at quaint old-world, little, French fishing hamlets, each with its beautiful Catholic church standing out in contrast to the small white houses. Here is the most striking and impressive sight of the whole voyage—the famous Perce Rock. About it clusters many fascinating legends. The Gaspe coast recalls reminiscences of Jacques Cartier's visit in 1534, when he planted the cross, the emblem of our faith on the lonely coast of the Gaspe Peninsula.

The musical numbers on the programme included vocal solos by Miss Callaghan and Master J. Moher, also a charming instrumental selection by Miss Harriet Pierce.

EXHIBITION OF CHINA PAINTING

Some Pretty Articles, the Work of Miss Claire Flood on Exhibition in Barrie's Window.

In Barrie's window there is on exhibition a number of articles showing some beautiful work in china painting in new designs. These are shown by Miss Claire Flood and have attracted much attention. There is a beautiful jardiniere of large size, done in full blown roses, dark tints and much gold. One of the most attractive pieces is a fern dish in a new oval shape, which is done in a conventional landscape design with a matt base of dull green. A plate in a design of seaweed and shells is also very pretty, also a dinner plate in white roses. A handsome plate is done in conventional design of pink poppies on a gold matt with a monogram in the centre. The largest jardiniere is valued at about $45.00, and is so costly on account of the large amount of gold that is used in the design. It is interesting to know that the best gold that is used in china painting is procured by melting down five dollar pieces. The fluid thus obtained burnishes much better and has a peculiarly soft effect that no other gold paint has.

The belt buckles in miniature design and the large bon-bon dish done in violets and gold, with a dainty figure of a lady are all very pretty.

CAPT. BERNEIR LECTURES HERE FRIDAY NIGHT

Captain Bernier, the intrepid Canadian explorer, who returned a few weeks ago, after spending several months in the far north, will lecture in Peterborough on Friday evening of this week. He is coming here under the auspices of the Royal Astronomical Society, and will appear in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute. The lecture will be illustrated by a large number of stereopticon views of scenes in the Arctic regions. Captain Bernier is being brought here at heavy expense, and the society should be favored with a large audience. The prices of admission will likely be 50, 35 and 25 cents.

OBITUARY

GEORGE SCOTT.

A very sad death occurred early Sunday morning when George Scott passed away at the Nicholls hospital after a brief attack from pneumonia. The deceased was a moulder and was employed at Peter Hamilton & Co.'s foundry. He was a native of Peterborough, and lived nearly all his life here, where he was well known and where he had a large circle of friends. As a workman he was highly regarded by his employers and his untimely demise will be much regretted. The late Mr. Scott, who was 43 years of age, is survived by a wife, one son and one daughter. His mother and three brothers and three sisters also survive. The brothers are Rev. John Scott, pastor of Broadview Presbyterian church, Toronto; Robert, of Orillia; Leslie, of Messina, N.Y., and the sisters are Mrs. John Allen, city; Mrs. Wilson, Spokane, Wash., and Mrs. Thompson, who lives at home with her mother. To the bereaved family is extended sincere sympathy. The funeral will be held on Tuesday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, and interment will take place at Little Lake cemetery. Service will be held at the home at 164 Aylmer street at two o'clock. Rev. H. J. Keith will officiate.

FARM LANDS IN CITIES

Of all the legislative iniquities perpetrated by the late unlamented Ross Government, the worst was that by which farm lands in cities, etc., were required to be assessed as such. A case in Peterborough will suffice to show the wrong involved in it. In the west end of this city a piece of land lately cut up and sold at from $20 to $35 a foot, was assessed for years as farm land for $100 an acre. That this outrage has continued so long upon the statute book is no credit to our legislators. It should have been wiped out long ago. And yet the Globe rejoices in the appropriation of the unearned increment elsewhere, in Great Britain for instance. Not a word of protest was heard from it at the time the act was passed for the especial benefit of Grit speculators who wished to take advantage of a community's growth without paying for it.

THE GOVERNMENT END OF IT

It is wonderful with what persistence the insinuation is kept afloat that if Local Option passes it will only be a pretext in the hands of the government for allowing favourites to break the law when and where they please.

The government is concerned in the carrying out of the law, in seeing that it is enforced, no matter what that law may be. It is for the people to make the laws and for the government to enforce them. This duty the Whitney Government fully recognizes. It is on record as recognizing it, and it is on record as having done good work in enforcing the laws, especially the license-law.

It is, of course, an admitted fact, that the Scott Act was made a farce of by those entrusted with its enforcement. The Ross Government owed its defeat to the temperance question. More than anything else, the Scott Act provided a means for allowing men to sell whiskey and escape with a fine, in that it was not made compulsory upon the authorities to say whether the offence was a first, second or third, and since the prosecutors did not say, a fifth offence was often treated as a first. This evasion of decency and law proved fatal to public respect, and as a consequence, when it came to voting for a repeal the Scott Act was overwhelmingly defeated.

The Whitney Government introduced a change or at least made it law, whereby such abominable hypocrisy and doubledealing became impossible. It cannot be maintained that the Whitney Government "plays favourites," at least in this direction. The records of the police court show that there has been no such evasion of the law as formerly existed. If there is any instance of such it would be well to have it brought forward and criticized at once. If the Whitney Government has done wrong or condoned wrong let it be judged accordingly. The former theory that the people existed for the benefit of a government has gone by the board.

But where the Commissioners, Mr. Kendrey, Dr. Morrison and Mr. Lebrun, with License Commissioner Stewart, have strictly enforced the law, they and the government which they represent, are entitled to a recognition of the fact.

So that in the event of the popular will being that Local Option shall pass, there need be no fear of a betrayal of the people in that respect or of the flourishing of "blind pigs." A few may exist, and some infractions of the law may occur, of course, but the law will be enforced so long as it is upon the statute-book, local option or license, and those who seek to discredit Local Option by discrediting the government and its officials, are saying what they know to be untrue.

MY QUESTIONS NOT ANSWERED

Inquiries Made at the Local Option Meeting Passed over and Ignored by the Chairman

Note.—The communication following and which appears over the signature of Mr. B. Laster is offered for publication by him, independent of the wishes and objects of either side in the local option campaign, and without approval or endorsement by either party. The space occupied is paid for by Mr. Laster, and it is on these conditions that the communications appears.

After reading the local option matter on Saturday night, under the heading "It Will Paralise Business," let me say the temperance people are bringing speakers here to prove how beneficial it is in their cities, and asking why the anti-local option people do not bring forward the proof of their statements—because they cannot do so, or they would. In the face of this, I 'phoned the Rev. Potter and told him if they would let me, that I would convince them that local option is not necessary here. But he fanatically declined, and would not let me speak on their platform, but said if I wanted to ask any questions I should send them to him in writing on the platform, and he would answer them. I declined, and told him that I would demand a hearing at a meeting in spite of him.

When the meeting started, Mr. Potter boldly stood up, and to prevent me from asking any questions, said before the whole audience that he would not allow any discussions, but that he was prepared, as he had a committee of competent men, to answer any questions in writing. When the speaker from Owen Sound stated that Owen Sound was a cleaner, purer and better city since local option passed than it was before, and that before Owen Sound had a reputation for drunkards, and it was known by such a name as the "Cork-screw" town, and that the streets before local option passed were hideous and dangerous, and that boys were taken in and liquor sold to them, and that they were morally disgraceful, or something like it. I sent one question in writing with the usher, and after a while I sent another question, and was waiting for an answer, when the speaker finished. I saw the gentlemen speakers receive my papers with the questions on, and they seemed to discuss what to do. When they had finished and not given me any reply, I simply asked them why they did not give me an answer to my questions. And what do you think Rev. Potter, after about five minutes' discussion amongst themselves, answered! That I should send my questions in plainer English, and that he had nobody to answer such senseless questions, but at some other time when he was prepared he will answer them. Now, let me see, his first objection was, that I should write my questions in plainer English. I must tell him that I do not pretend to be a very good speller in English, but any man could understand it. Then he said he had nobody to answer such senseless questions. That sounds as though he knew what the questions were, as he said also, that he would answer when he was prepared. Then he stated before the meeting that he had a committee that would answer any questions. Now, let us see were those questions senseless, so much so that the whole committee could not answer them. After the speaker from Owen Sound had stated the conditions of the place before local option, I asked him in my first question: "Had Peterborough such a notorious reputation as Owen Sound had before they passed local option? Are our streets hideous and dangerous at the present time, as they were in Owen Sound? Or is there any local hotel man who would take in any boy and induce him to drink liquor?" The second question was: "Are the people in Peterborough morally inferior, at the present time, to the people of Owen Sound since local option? Have we more misery and crime, considering the size of the city, than Owen Sound has at the present time? Did not Peterborough grow larger in population and business than Owen Sound?" These were my senseless questions, and I demand an answer to them. If they did not understand properly before, they understand now. If they would only throw away their fanaticism and come to their senses and see for what reasons they are asking the people of Peterborough to pass local option, and to what class of people they are comparing the patrons of the churches, they ought certainly to be ashamed in pretending to do the work of truthfulness and justice. They are disgracing the city by comparing them to such a class of people as there was said to be in Owen Sound before local option was passed.

It seems to me that your campaign is based on bluff only; and your intentions are, by hook or by crook, under the mask of temperance, to pass local option here. Will you succeed? Well, I doubt it. As to the answer to my questions, I will tell you. You are in a pinch. You did not have man enough in you to say the truth. That Peterborough has not a reputation of drunkards, and that there are only a very few, such as there are in any city. And that in Peterborough there is no danger at any time in the streets, and that in Peterborough there are no hideous conditions, as the speaker from Owen Sound stated existed in that town before local option was passed. Peterborough stands morally not inferior to Owen Sound, nor to any city on the globe, with the exception of a few fanatic temperance men. Peterborough is growing in population and is financially better than any local option town.

In the present state of affairs with such authorities as we have here, who are ready at a moment's notice to enforce the law, we do not need local option here.

B. LASTAR.

AN OWEN SOUND MERCHANT GIVES HIS COMMENDATION OF THE LOCAL OPTION BY-LAW

At the Opera House Mass Meeting—Rev. J. J. Ferguson Tells of the Benefit to Orillia of the No License System—Enthusiastic Approbation of Local Option.

In the evening the speakers were W. K. Ireland, of Owen Sound, Rev. J. J. Ferguson, of Orillia, and Mr. E. L. Bengough of Toronto, who gave a brief chalk talk. Rev. J. G. Potter was in the chair and the gathering of over 1100 took a hearty part in the musical service.

Mr. Ireland comes from the storm centre of the local option discussion —Owen Sound. In view of this his remarks were of particular significance.

"If there's any one man in Owen Sound who should be able to tell you the success of local option in Owen Sound I should be able to do it," said Mr. Ireland, for, he remarked, he had lived there long before and ever since its introduction.

Four years ago last January local option was carried in Owen Sound. That was before the three-fifths clause was introduced into the bill, but nevertheless the by-law was carried by over that majority required now to have it carried.

Owen Sound had had the Dunkin Act which didn't work, an attempt had been made to carry the Scott Act, but local option since it was introduced had been thoroughly successful. The city used to be made hideous by the drunkards on the street and the place had been known as the "Corkscrew Town."

Blue ruin had been predicted upon the passing of the local option by-law but the fact that conditions directly opposite had resulted was unquestionably established in the minds of the audience by the statistics the speaker gave.

They were solid convincing facts and went to show that in spite of all arguments against it, local option had proven a Godsend to the Georgian Bay city, and the place had improved in every way from a moral, civic and economical standpoint.

The speaker said he could cite instances of dozens and dozens who had quit drink since local option came in force in Owen Sound and had invested their money to profitable advantage and had given their wives and children the opportunity of being well dressed and respected like the families of other respectable citizens. Property also, including hotel property, had very greatly increased in value. As a result of local option and the elevation of the moral tone of the city the church attendance in Owen Sound had increased to a most appreciable extent.

Since the introduction of local option there was no street fighting in Owen Sound and no women were to be seen taking home drunken husbands. Figures showed that $220,000 had passed over the bar there while the license system was in force and now that money was diverted into legitimate channels.

In referring to the immense profits the above figures showed the speaker said, "Is it any wonder that the hotel men are fighting against local option?"

Mr. E. L. Bengough gave an entertaining chalk talk and amused the audience by his bright sallies and also by the truth of his serious utterances.

ALL BUT THE BREWERY

Rev. J. J. Ferguson, of Orillia, said that as the hour was growing late he would be forced to speak very briefly. He explained that the local option by-law had been quashed in Orillia owing to the by-law being annulled by the courts on a technicality but said the no license system had proved an excellent substitute and the prosperity of the town had increased immeasurably. Many a life had been sweetened and many a home brightened.

"There isn't a factory in our town that isn't in favor of local option except one, and that's the brewery."

In the construction of the new Tudhope building in Orillia, which had been in progress for nine weeks, Overseer "Teddy" Webb of Peterborough told the speaker on Saturday to give the message to the people of this city that there had not been a single drunken man or a man effected by drink during the work of construction.

BROTHER AND SISTER WERE DROWNED NEAR GRAVENHURST

Special to the Review.

Gravenhurst, Nov. 29.—The first drowning accident of the season occurred at Franklin's Bay, Sparrow Lake, Saturday evening, when Mary Gill, aged fifteen years, and her brother, Daniel Gill, aged thirteen, lost their lives. The two, whose father, Hugh Gill, highly respected, is a farmer, were skating with a number of others on the lake, when the ice gave way, letting them and two more young people, Miss Mary Jones and Cyril Gill, into the icy water. Cyril Gill managed to get out and assist Miss Jones and also his sister on the ice, but the latter broke through again before she got to shore. The bodies were recovered.

HAVELOCK COMPLAINS OF ITS TREATMENT BY ASSOCIATION

In Connection With O. F. A. Finals — The Railway Town Eleven Have Made Great Showing During the Past Season—A Credit to Their Town.

(Review Special.)

Havelock, Nov. 27.—It seems as if no eastern team can expect to obtain justice or a square deal from the officials of the Ontario Football Association. Such is the verdict given by every sensible man who knows the true facts of the case in regard to the finals for the Intermediate Football Championship of Ontario between Havelock and Brussels. The Brussels team have now backed down three times when ordered to play off with Havelock, and are still upheld by the officials of the Ontario Association. Havelock have by rights won the championship, three times by Brussel's default, but still the executive order the dispute to be settled by another match at Havelock next week, and that Havelock has to bear all expenses.

Havelock complied with all conditions in regard to the game that should have come off here last Friday, and when they were not awarded the championship, they considered that they had received enough raw deals from the officials and that they would play no more.

Anyone who saw the Havelock-Brussels game here, when the Brussels team refused to play off the tie, knew that the Havelock team are superior to the westerners in playing the game, and that they could hold their own with them any time if given a square deal. But they might go on playing forever, and paying all expenses, as they would have to do, and no matter if they beat Brussels over and over again, they would never receive the championship from the executive, it seems.

The Havelock team have, indeed made a grand showing this year, champions of the Midland League, of Peterborough county, and by fair methods, provincial champions a a fine record for a team that have never before got any further than the semi-finals in the Midland series. They have only had four goals scored on the during the year, and have only been defeated once, and that on the goal scored on a foul at Brussels that should never have been allowed. Great credit is due the players and management of the team that has brought such honor to its town, and the team is also indebted to the many citizens who have during the year helped them along. The following is the line-up of the old reliables, that can always be depended on to do the trick.

Goal—Wm. Rose.
Backs—H. T. Andrews, K. McKay.
Halves—W. Hitchins, W. McMullen, Dr. Kindred.
Centre—C. Robinson.

VARSITY FOURTEEN WON EASILY FROM OTTAWA

Visitors Were Outplayed Before Crowd of 10,000 Spectators—Game Featured by Work of Lawson and Stronach—Tickets Brought High Prices —Rough Riders Were Good Losers.

Before nearly 10,000 spectators and with weather conditions ideal for football, Toronto Varsity fourteen intercollegiate champions defeated Ottawa, champions of the Interprovincial at Rosedale athletic grounds, on Saturday afternoon. The score was 31—7 and had it not been for the fact that so much depended on the outcome, the game would not, outside the work of Lawson and Stronach, have been very interesting. As it was, many expressed themselves, after the excitement had somewhat deminished, as being greatly disappointed, with the uneveness of the play. Ottawa failed to produce the goods. Some might say the players were unlucky. On many occasions with an apparently fine chance to score, the player with the ball after dodging through the opposing line would slip and fall, while in the case of the Varsity team, everything appeared to break in their favor. The two men who were most conspicuous, throughout the game were, Lawson, for Varsity, and Stronach, for Ottawa. Their work, especially that of of the former, was wonderful. He showed great speed in running, was accurate in punting and his weight allowed him to break through the Ottawa line time and again. Stronach had to work on the defensive the greater part of the time and the battle between him and Lawson was the feature of the game. Seldom did he miss his man. On several occasions he slipped and fell, but regained his feet and overtook his opponent in a manner that called for a deafening uproar from the rooters of both camps. With him off the lineup, Varsity would have run the score up into the three figures, as the rest of the team fumbled the ball, or when they did secure it, ran into College team wings. Williams' work was a farce and the man who was the hero in the game with Hamilton fell down when he was most needed. There was no rough work of any sort by either team, and the losers took their defeat in good spirit.

To those who attended the big event the many incidents in connection with it will be remembered for a long time to come. Early in the morning, the more enthusiastic began to assemble near the gates leading into the grounds and took up a position where they remained until the gates opened. Many were there for five hours. Boxes and boards were used to rest on, but the majority stood all this time. Packs of cards were produced and games played while others laid down on the wet ground and in some cases went to sleep. The sun was shining brightly and by ten o'clock the number had become so large that all were ordered by the policemen on duty to get into some kind of order. The crowd was put into line and the best of order was maintained until the big gates opened. Tickets were sold at all prices from $1 up and those fortunate in getting a supply when they were put on sale, made considerable money. It was reported that as high as $40 was paid for two seats. The spectacle presented inside the grounds was an interesting one. The Varsity rooters club, numbering about 1,500, was the main attraction. Led by a band, they sang and gave yells before and during the progress of the game. A large number in white sweaters were so placed that the word Toronto was formed. The Ottawa rooters were there too, but were not heard to any great extent although they showed a better spirit than that of those of Toronto, who repeatedly hissed any sign of the visitors' colors. At the end of the game, the members of both teams were carried off the field and the celebration lasted until the defeated fourteen and their supporters left for home about midnight

HOW OTTAWA FEELS OVER IT

Numbed by the Overwhelming Defeat of the Rough Riders—Rooters of Noiseless Type

Ottawa, Nov. 28.—All Ottawa received a stunning blow yesterday when news of the Varsity-Ottawa game was received. Ten thousand people stood out all afternoon at the Citizen and Journal offices watching dummy figures playing the game on a wire gridiron. Every play was recorded, but the crowd, although it was in high spirits at the commencement of the match, soon realized that it was all off with Ottawa, and hoping against hope, remained until the very last, every minute making the rout a complete one.

Ottawa football people are dumbfounded and are still trying to explain how it happened. Hundreds of Ottawa money was dropped as the result of Varsity's win, big odds being offered here. Some bets at even prices that Ottawa would double the score were made.

The Ottawa team returned this morning, all the men but Kilt being in good shape. Kilt has a sprained ankle and will be laid up for a few days. "Beaten at every turn," is the explanation of the Ottawa players in connection with their defeat. Tom Clancy states that it was brains, speed and new football against the old style, in which the modern game won a distinct victory. Clancy considers that interprovincial teams must change their style in order to be in a class with the Varsity team.

He considers Lawson the greatest running halfback in Canada and Gall a close second, naming Gall, Williams and Lawson for his all-star team. Hal. B. McGiverin, Harvey Pulford, Dr. Nagle, Bert Stronach, Jack Williams, Dave Mulligan and others all acknowledge the superiority of the Varsity team. "Had it on us at all stages and everywhere" is the the popular expression of opinion. Hal McGiverin states that Harry Griffith has developed the greatest team in the past twenty years. He considers that in proportion to their age, experience and weight, the Varsity wings and scrimmagers did marvellous work against the Ottawa line. All admit that Ottawa had an off day, but it is taken for granted that Varsity were too good to give Ottawa any chance to shine.

The defeat came as a shock after a great season, the Ottawas taking their defeat gamely. Not a kick has been heard against the work of Dr. Hendry, local opinion being that the Ottawas made a tactical error in objecting to him in the first place.

The rooters' club returned without a sound, while the bands stole silently home. All the Ottawa sporting writers who were at the game make it plain in their papers that there was no comparison between the teams, and predict changes in eastern style of play as a result of the remarkable work by the Varsity youngsters.

"OURVANISHING FORESTS" TO BE SUBJECT OF ADDRESS

Mr. James Lawler, the secretary of the Canadian Forestry Association, will deliver an illustrated lecture in the City Council chamber to-morrow evening under the auspices of the Peterborough Board of Trade on the subject of "Our Vanishing Forests." The object of this lecture, which is free to the public, and to which ladies as well as gentlemen are invited, is to show the present state of Canada's forests and what should be done to perpetuate and develop them. The subject of conservation of resources is now becoming a most important one all over the world and particularly in the Dominion of Canada. A large part of the land of Canada is eminently suited for the growth of trees and for nothing else. If these areas are properly handled they will yield a large and growing revenue for all time. On the other hand the ruthless destruction of the forests leads to the spoiling of the streams for power and navigation purposes, seriously injures agriculture and destroys the haunts of game and there creation places of the people. All these points are brought out by the striking pictures which the lecturer will show. The public is cordially invited to this interesting and informative lecture.

TAKING TOO MUCH AT BELLEVILLE

Citizens Stake Their Reputations That They Seen an Airship.

Belleville Intelligencer:— Did you see the airship last night? Many strictly truthful people, including a policeman, claim they saw one about seven o'clock last night. Like young Lochinvar, it came out of the west and went on down towards Montreal. It had a light on the starboard bow. Accounts of its appearance differ. Some say it looked like a bread wagon with wings; others that it cut a figure like a farmer's hay wagon with a balloon over it. But it passed over there's no doubt about that, for at least a dozen people have cricks in their necks to-day, caused by looking up at it.

One dreamer says it circled round the town clock, and that the aeronaut set his watch by that ancient piece of mechanism.

Rumor says the sky pilot shouted down and asked who was going to be police sergeant when Pat Hayes gets the drill shed, but this should be taken with a grain of salt.

But one thing is sure: Many people are ready to stake their reputation on the fact that they saw an airship.

EXTENSIVE PURCHASE OF POULTRY

Lakefield and Indian River have had their "turkey days." The purchasers were Flavelles, Limited, of Lindsay. Mr. P. G. Towns, of Douro, is their agent in this locality, and he superintended the buying. The shipping was done at Lakefield on Tuesday, November 23, and at Indian River on Thursday, November 25, and there was a large amount of poultry brought in at each place. The total amount of money paid out at both places was three thousand dollars, six hundred dollars more being paid out at Indian River than in any past year. The poultry was shipped both alive and dressed.

"WEATHER MAN" TO SPEAK HERE

R.F. Stupart Will Give an Address on "Wind and Weather"

Mr. R. F. Stupart, director of the Meteorological Observatory at Toronto will give an address on "Wind and Weather," at the regular meeting of the Astronomical Society at the Collegiate Institute to-morrow evening. Mr. Stupart might well be described as the "weather man" for he is at the head of the department that turns out the "probs." His address promises to be an unusually interesting one and it is expected that there will be a large attendance. The society has done good work in bringing many prominent speakers here and giving the public the opportunity of hearing them without expense.

THE BANK ACT OF THIS SESSION

The Bank Act will be revised at the coming session. It is therefore a matter of general interest. Mr. McLeod, the general manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia, has written a brochure upon the subject. Of the coming act Mr. McLeod says;

"Announcement has been made that the Bank Act will be revised during the present session of Parliament. This, therefore, seems an opportune time to give some extended consideration to the desirability of adopting in Canada Government inspection of the banks, or the independent audit of banks by other means. I have long been convinced of the needfulness of independent examination, and advocated its adoption at the last decennial revision of the Bank Act. The weakest point in the Canadian banking system is the lack of any check on the direction and general management, and to this defect failures are mainly due. The government examination of the United States, and the independent audit of Great Britain and other countries, in effect investigate the conditions under which each bank is governed. The supervision of banks which is advocated is not experimental: in one form or another it is in vogue in countries transacting more than three-fourths of the business of the world."

At Church of the Sacred Heart—Dr. O'Brien Secures Residence in Parish

There were large congregations at the Church of the Sacred Heart yesterday, Rev. Dr. O'Brien said mass at eight and ten-thirty o'clock and his Lordship, Bishop O'Connor, preached at the evening service. Rev. Dr. O'Brien announced that he had secured a residence in the parish. It is on Wescot street, on the south side, the second house east of Aylmer street. He will take up his residence there in the near future.

The choir did good service, valuable assistance being given by several members of the choir at St. Peter's, among them being Miss Annie Simons and Messrs. Ed. Koen and Harry Quinlan. Mr. John Armstrong is in charge of the organ.

OBITUARY

MRS. F. H. McDONALD

Toronto News:—The funeral of Mrs. McDonald, wife of Mr. Frederick H. McDonald, of 890 Manning avenue, took place this afternoon to Prospect cemetery.

Rev. Canon McNab of St. Alban's Cathedral, conducted the service, and the following were pallbearers: Messrs. W. Carleill Hall, Dudley Landell, Horace Curry, Victor Tyrrell, George Vaughan, and E. S. Caswell.

Mrs. McDonald was Lillian Alexandra Landell. She was born at Rockwood, near Peterborough, but at her death had lived in Toronto for a number of years. She was a gifted musician, a graduate of the Conservatory of Music, and was deservedly esteemed by a large circle of friends.

Mrs. McDonald is survived by Mr. McDonald, an infant daughter, and a brother, Dudley Landell. Her father died six years ago, and her mother passed away two years later.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

As the evening boat train from Dover swung on toward Charing Cross for perhaps the tenth time in the course of his journey Kirkwood withdrew his gaze from the window and turned to the girl, a question ready framed upon his lips.

"Are you quite sure"— he began, and then, alive to the clear and penetrating perception in the brown eyes that smiled into his from under their level brows, he stammered and left the query uncompleted.

Continuing to regard him steadily and smilingly, Dorothy shook her head in playful denial and protest. "Do you know," she commented, "that this is about the fifth repetition of that identical question within the last quarter hour?"

"How do you know what I meant to say?" he demanded, staring.

"I can see it in your eyes. Besides, you've talked and thought of nothing else since we left the boat. Won't you believe me, please, when I say there's absolutely not a soul in London to whom I could go and ask for shelter? I don't think it's very nice of you to be so openly anxious to get rid of me."

This latter was so essentially undeserved and so artlessly insincere that he must needs, of course, treat it with all seriousness.

"That isn't fair, Miss Calendar. Really it's not."

"What am I to think? I've told you any number of times that it's only an hour's ride on to Chiltern, where the Pyrfords will be glad to take me in. You may depend upon it, by 8 tonight, at the latest, you'll have me off your hands—the drag and worry that I've been ever since"—

"Don't!" he pleaded vehemently. "Please! You know it isn't that. I don't want you off my hands, ever. That is to say, I—ah"— Here he was smitten with a dumbness and sat, aghast at the enormity of his blunder, entreating her forgiveness with eyes that very likely pleaded his cause more eloquently than he guessed.

"I mean," he floundered on presently, in the fatuous belief that he would this time be able to control both mind and tongue—"what I mean is I'd be glad to go on serving you in any way I might to the end of time if you'd give me"—

He left the declaration inconclusive—a stroke of diplomacy that would have graced an infinitely more adept wooer. But he used it all unconsciously. "O Lord!" he groaned in spirit. "Worse and more of it! Why in thunder can't I say the right thing right?"

"Dear Mr. Kirkwood," she said gently, bending forward as if to read between the lines anxiety had graven on his countenance, "won't you tell me, please, what it can be that so worries you?"

In exasperation he interrupted almost rudely. "It's only this—I—I'm strapped."

"Strapped?" She knitted her brows over this fresh specimen of American slang.

"Flat strapped — busted — broke—on my uppers—down and out." He reeled off synonyms without a smile. "I haven't enough money to pay cab fare across the town"—

"Oh!" she interpolated, enlightened.

—"to say nothing of taking us to Chiltern. I couldn't buy you a glass of water if you were thirsty. There isn't a soul on earth within hail who would trust me with a quarter—I mean a shilling—across London bridge. I'm the original 'luckless wonder' and the only genuine Jonah extant."

With a face the hue of fire he cocked his eyebrows askew and attempted to laugh unconcernedly to hide his bitter shame. "I've led you out of the frying pan into the fire, and I don't know what to do. Please call me names."

"Oh, poor Mr. Kirkwood! And it's all because of me! You've beggared yourself"—

"Not precisely. I was beggared to begin with." He hastened to disclaim the extravagant generosity of which she accused him. "I had only three or four pounds to my name that night we met. I haven't told you—I"—

"You've told me nothing, nothing whatever about yourself," she said reproachfully.

"I didn't want to bother you with my troubles. I tried not to talk about myself. You knew I was an American, but I'm worse than that. I'm a Californian—from San Francisco." He tried unsuccessfully to make light of it. "I told you I was the 'luckless wonder.' If I'd ever had any luck I would have stored a little money away. As it was, I lived on my income, left my principal in Frisco, and when the earthquake came it wiped me out completely."

"And you were going home that night we made you miss your steamer!"

"It was my own fault, and I'm glad this blessed minute that I did miss it. Nice sort I'd have been to go off and leave you at the mercy"—

"Please! I want to think. I'm trying to remember how much you've gone through"—

"Precisely what I don't want you to do. Anyway, I did nothing more than any other fellow would have done. Please don't give me credit that I don't deserve. We must go to Mrs. Hallam's house first. It's too late now—after 5—else we could deposit the jewels in some bank. Since—since they are no longer yours the only thing and the proper thing to do is to place them in safety or in the hands of their owner. If you take them directly to young Hallam your hands will be clear. And—I never did such a thing in my life, Miss Calendar, but if he's got a spark of gratitude in his makeup I ought to be able to—er—to borrow a pound or so of him."

"Do you think so?" She shook her head in doubt. "I don't know. I know so little of such things. You are right. We must take him the jewels, but"— Her voice trailed off into a sigh of profound perturbation.

He dared not meet her look.

With a jar the train started and began to move more swiftly.

Kirkwood lifted the traveling bag to his knees.

"Don't forget," he said, with some difficulty, "you're to stick by me whatever happens. You mustn't desert me."

"You know," the girl reproved him.

"I know, but there must be no misunderstanding. Don't worry. We'll win out yet. I've a plan."

Glorious liar! He had not the glimmering of a plan.

The engine panting, the train drew in beneath the vast sounding dome of the station to an accompaniment of dull thunderings and stopped finally.

Hurried and jostled, the girl clinging tightly to his arm lest they be separated in the crush, they came to the ticket wicket. Beyond the barrier surged a sea of hats. Beneath any one of these might lurk the maleficent brain, the spying eyes, of Calendar or one of his creatures. Beneath all of them that he encountered Kirkwood peered in fearful inquiry.

Abruptly he caught the girl by the arm and unceremoniously hurried her toward a waiting hansom.

"Quick!" he begged her. "Jump right in—not an instant to spare!"

She nodded brightly, lips firm with courage, eyes shining.

"My father?"

"Yes." Kirkwood glanced back over his shoulder. "He hasn't seen us yet. They've just driven up. Stryker's with him. They're getting down." And to himself, "Oh, the devil!" cried the panic stricken young man.

He drew back to let the girl precede him into the cab. At the same time he kept an eye on Calendar, whose conveyance stood half the length of the station front away.

The fat adventurer had finished paying off the driver, standing on the deck of the hansom. Stryker was already out, towering above the mass of people and glaring about him with his hawk keen vision. Calendar had started to alight. His foot was leaving the step when Stryker's glance singled out their quarry. Instantly he turned and spoke to his confederate. Calendar wheeled like a flash, peering eagerly in the direction indicated by the captain's index finger, then, snapping instructions to his driver, threw himself heavily back on the seat. Stryker, awkward on his land legs, stumbled and fell in an ill calculated attempt to hoist himself hastily back into the vehicle.

To the delay thus occasioned alone Kirkwood and Dorothy owed a respite of freedom. Their hansom was already swinging down toward the great gates of the yard, the American standing to make the driver comprehend the necessity for using the utmost speed in reaching the Craven street address. The man proved both intelligent and obliging. Kirkwood had barely time to drop down beside the girl ere the cab was swinging out into the Strand, to the peril of the toes belonging to a number of righteously indignant pedestrians.

He turned in the seat, twisting his neck to peep through the small rear window. "I don't see their cab," he announced. "But of course they're after us. However, Craven street's just round the corner. If we get there first I don't fancy Freddie Hallam will have a cordial reception for our pursuers. They must have been on watch at Cannon street, and, finding we were not coming in that way—of course they were expecting us because of Hobbs' wire—they took cab for Charing Cross. Lucky for us—or is it lucky?" he added doubtfully to himself.

The hansom whipped round the corner into Craven street. Kirkwood sprang up, grasping the treasure bag, ready to jump the instant they pulled in toward Mrs. Hallam's dwelling. But as they drew near upon the address he drew back with an exclamation of amazement.

The house was closed, showing a blank face to the street—blinds drawn close down in the windows, area gate padlocked, an estate agent's board projecting from above the doorway advertising the property "to be let, furnished."

Kirkwood looked back, craning his neck round the side of the cab. At the moment another hansom was breaking through the rank of humanity on the Strand crossing. He saw one or two figures leap desperately from beneath the horse's hoofs. Then the cab shot out swiftly down the street.

The American stood up again, catching the cabby's eye.

"Drive on!" he cried excitedly. "Don't stop! Drive as fast as you dare!"

"W'ere to, sir?"

"See that cab behind? Don't let it catch us! Shake it off, lose it somehow, but for the love of heaven don't let it catch us! I'll make it worth your while. Do you understand?"

"Yes, sir." The driver looked briefly over his shoulder and lifted his whip. "Don't worry, sir," he cried, entering into the spirit of the game with gratifying zest. "Shan't let 'em over'aul you, sir. Mind your 'ead!"

And as Kirkwood ducked the whiplash shot out over the roof with a crack like the report of a pistol. Startled, the horse leaped indignantly forward. Momentarily the cab seemed to leave the ground, then settled down to a pace that carried them round the Avenue theater and across Northumberland avenue into Whitehall place apparently on a single wheel.

"Good little horse!" he applauded.

A moment later he was indorsing without reserve the generalship of their cabby. The quick westward turn that took them into Whitehall, over across from the Horse Guards, likewise placed them in a pocket of traffic. A practically impregnable press of vehicles closed in behind them ere Calendar's conveyance could follow out of the side street.

That the same conditions, but slightly modified, hemmed them in ahead went for nothing in Kirkwood's estimation.

"Good driver!" he approved heartily. "He's got a head on his shoulders!"

The girl found her voice. "How," she demanded in a breath, face blank with consternation—"how did you dare?"

"Dare?" he echoed exultantly, and in his veins excitement was running like liquid fire. "What wouldn't I dare for you, Dorothy?"

"What have you not?" she amended softly, adding, with a shade of timidity, "Philip"—

The long lashes swept up from her cheeks, like clouds revealing stars, unmasking eyes radiant and brave to meet his own. Then they fell, even as her lips drooped with disappointment. And she sighed, for he was not looking. Manlike, hot with the ardor of the chase, he was deaf and blind to all else.

"I've got a scheme!" Kirkwood declared so explosively that she caught her breath with the surprise of it. "There's the Pless. They know me there, and my credit's good. When we shake them off we can have the cabby take us to the hotel. I'll register and borrow from the management enough to pay our way to Chiltern and the tolls for a cable to New York. I've a friend or two over home who wouldn't let me want for a few miserable pounds. So you see," he explained boyishly, "we're at the end of our troubles already!"

She said something inaudible, holding her face averted. He bent nearer to her, wondering. "I didn't understand," he suggested.

Still looking from him, "I said you were very good to me," she said in a quavering whisper.

"Dorothy!" Without his knowledge or intention before the fact, as instinctively as he made use of her given name intimately, his strong fingers dropped and closed upon the little hand that lay beside him. "What is the matter, dear?" He leaned still farther forward to peer into her face till glance met glance in the ending and his racing pulses tightened with sheer delight of the humid happiness in her glistening eyes. "Dorothy, child, don't worry so. No harm shall come to you. It's all working out—all working out right. Only have a little faith in me, and I'll make everything work out right, Dorothy."

Gently she freed her fingers. "I wasn't," she told him in a voice that quivered between laughter and tears—"I wasn't worrying. I was—you wouldn't understand. Don't be afraid I shall break down or—or anything."

"I shan't," he reassured her. "I know you're not that sort. Besides, you'd have no excuse. We're moving along famously. That cabby knows his business."

Past the houses of parliament, through Old Palace yard, with the abbey on their left, they swung away into Abingdon street, whence suddenly they dived into the maze of [illegible] ways, great and mean, which lie [illegible] the south of Victoria. Doubling, [illegible] twisting, now this way, now that, [illegible] driver tooled them through the [illegible]cate heart of this labyrinth, lea[illegible] the pursuers a dance that Kirkw[illegible] thought calculated to dishearten [illegible] shake off the pursuit in the first [illegible] minutes. Yet always, peering b[illegible] through the little peephole, he saw Calendar's cab pelting doggedly in the rear—a hundred yards behind, no more, no less—hanging on with indo[illegible]itable grit and determination.

Children cheered them on, and policemen turned to stare, doubting whether they should interfere. Minutes rolled into tens, measuring out an hour, and still they hammered on, hunted and hunters playing their game of hare and hounds through the highways and byways of those staid and aged quarters.

The sun was very low behind the houses of the Surrey side when K[illegible] wood became aware that their [illegible] was flagging, though, as compa[illegible] determined, no more so than the [illegible] behind.

In grave concern, the young m[illegible] raised his hand, thrusting open the trap in the roof. Immediately the square of darkling sky was eclipsed by the cabby's face.

"Yessir?"

"You had better drive as directly as you can to the Hotel Pless," Kirkwood called up. "I'm afraid it's no use pushing your horse like this."

"I'm sure of it, sir. 'E's a good '[illegible] 'e is, but 'e carn't keep goin' forever, you know, sir."

Despondent recklessness [illegible] Kirkwood's lips and kind[illegible] pleasant light in his eyes. [illegible] his side pocket. Calen[illegible] was still there. Doroth[illegible] away clear if—if he swung for [illegible]

He bent forward with the traveling bag in his hands.

"We'll have to drop off in a minute. The horse won't last. They're in the same box. I'll undertake to stand 'em off for a bit. You take the bag and run for it. Just as soon as I can convince them I'll follow, but if there's any delay you call the first cab you see and drive to the Pless. I'll join you there."

He stood up, surveying the neighborhood. Behind him the girl lifted her voice in protest.

"No, Philip, no! I won't leave you."

He shook his head in silent contradiction, frowning, but not frowning because of the girl's mutiny. He was a little puzzled by a vague impression.

The hansom was traversing a street in Old Brompton, a quaint, prim byway lined with dwellings singularly old worldish even for London. He seemed to know it subjectively, to have retained a memory of it from another existence.

AULD SCOTIA'S SONS WILL WEAR SPRIG O' HEATHER ON ST. ANDREW'S DAY

The Scot is just a wanderin' bairn,
He wanders whur he may,
But the Scot is aye a Scot again,
On guid St. Andra's Day.

To-morrow is the day. It is the day of all days in the Scotsman's calendar. It is the day when "rank is but the guinea's stamp," and all of the blood gather as one big family of brothers to honor the Land O' the Heather. Then does the Scottish element of Canada's cosmopolitan population, and Scotsmen the world over forget the land of their adoption to revel in the song and story of the hills to the north of the Tweed.

The day will not be observed by any particular event in Peterborough but "sprigs o' heather" will be much in demand.

THE SAINT HIMSELF

Perhaps of all the apostles least is known of the circumstances of the life of St. Andrew. He appears to have zealously fulfilled the mission entrusted to him by his Master, although one of the least conspicuous of the twelve apostles. Of his death it is affirmed he suffered martyrdom in the year 69 at Patrae in Archaia, but having scourged and then fastened by cords to a cross in which position he remained instructing the people all the time until his death, at the end of two days. The cross of St. Andrew as fixed by tradition is in the form of the letter X. In pictures it is shown as two pieces of timber crossing each other obliquely in the centre. Alban Butler (the historian) relates that a part of this cross on which the apostle suffered death was carried to Brussels by Philip the Good Duke of Burgundy and Brabant, who, in honor of it, instituted the knightly order of the Golden Fleece, members of which wear as a badge the figure of this cross which they call the cross of Burgundy.

St. Andrew was first chosen patron saint of Scotland about the year A.D. 369, when a certain abbot Regulus brought thither from Constantinope some relics of the apostle which he deposited in a church that he built in his honor. Many pilgrims from foreign lands resorted to that shrine and the Scottish monks of that place.

Scotland is not alone among the nations that claim the patronage of St. Andrew, for the Russians assert that he preached among them and claim him as a titular saint of the Muscovite Empire. Peter the Great instituted an order of knighthood in his name and the navy of Russia still bears on its flag the blue cross of St. Andrew on a white field.

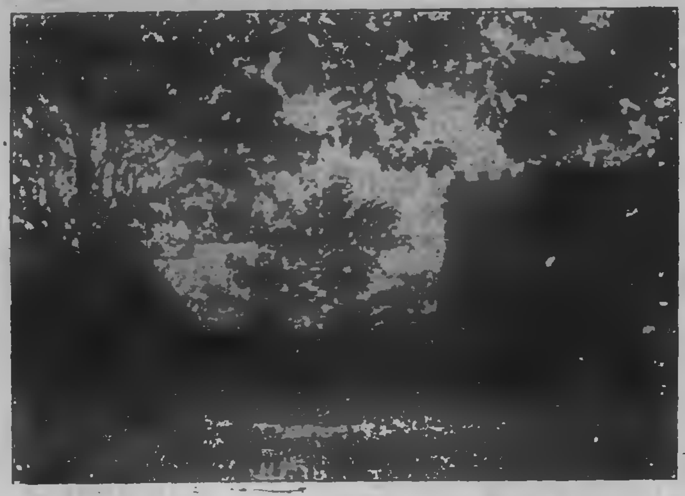
MEMORIES OF LAMPMAN: A VISIT TO RICE LAKE

BY MAUD MILLER WILSON IN THE SATURDAY GLOBE

As the boat leaves the Otonabee river and steams across Rice Lake the village of Gore's Landing appears in sight, and one house more prominent than the others demands attention; in fact, it insists upon notice to so great a degree that one is forced to settle its claims, in order to be free for anything else. It is a large white building surrounded by two rows of white verandahs, each possessing its own white railing—the whole effect being that of a mammoth wedding-cake. What does it mean? To a lover of Dickens the answer at once occurs. During all those years of waiting, while Miss Havisham sat beside her desolate marriage feast, her wedding-cake has grown and grown, until it encumbered England, and at last has been set down here in Canada, where land is plentiful. And this is the Wedding-cake House—at least so the children say.



St. George's Church, Gore's Landing

At a short distance above this stands another house, which also is worthy of interest, a building from whose doors has issued many a well-known Canadian—grey-haired now, but looking back with pleasure to the days spent under this roof, as a pupil of the late Mr. Barron—he, who with the late Dr. Tassie, might have disputed the title—the Dr. Arnold of Ontario.

But now passengers have left the steamers, and we also land and are free to enjoy ourselves—for this is a festal day in the village; former residents have returned, and all the countryside has gathered here to rejoice with the Anglicans of Gore's Landing over the completion of their new church. A climb up the hill brings us to the spot, as a slight acknowledgement of success—I wish to make my bow to that hill, which can hold up its head with any in either Quebec or Duluth and never once blush. Breathless we achieve the summit, and for a moment gaze upon the scene below—the village, green-embowered at our feet, the islands, and the long expanse of shining water, the fear grows upon one that, set amid such surroundings, the building may look tawdry, but this suspicion is dispelled by a nearer view of the church, which is beautiful and satisfies one's conception of propriety. It is built of stone, mostly field-stone, and when the grounds are done up it will harmonise with the environment as if it had grown there.

View on Rice Lake

Once more the wonderful view claims homage from the descending visitors, but these fertile fields clad in different shades of verdure—the wooded islands and the glistening water—are not these gaining an interest that is not theirs in essence? Have not a poet's eyes gazed upon this self-same scene, and did not its beauty become incorporated into his very being? Here—long years ago—when the old church flourished on the site of the present one—it had for incumbent the Rev. A. Lampman—and here, Archibald Lampman, the beloved, spent seven years of his delicate childhood. As if compensation for this ill-health:

Nature—the old nurse—took
The child upon her knee
Saying, Here is a story-book
Which thy Father hath written for thee.

Where but here did the boy learn the meaning of the frog's croak, and saw the yarrow's beauty, and drew inspiration from the millet?

And when spring had come, turning brown and dreary islands to a mass of living green, it is not hard to fancy the lad in an old punt, rowing from one island to another, gathering trilliums and hepaticas, and lying on the sun-soaked sward, looking up to the clouds which he loved and listening to the mysterious forest sounds, and to the coughing of the bitterns in the springtime, and watching the cranes dart by and then utterly disappear in the ledge.

And when autumn returned and the trees became many-tinted did not the remembrance of their glory illumine his desk in Ottawa so that memory prompted that exquisite poem, "The passing of Autumn"?

Silvery soft by the first side—
Wine-red, yellow, rose
The wizard of autumn, faint, blue-eyed,
Swinging his censer—goes.

Listen to this verse, whose repetition would induce rhythmic motion in even an unsympathetic reader, so musical is its swing.

The wizard hath woven his ancient scheme,
A day and a star-lit night,
And the world is a shadowy, pencilled thing,
Of color, haze and light.

As a master of restrained and scholarly English, Lampman stands pre-eminent among Canadian poets. Were he alive to-day when strikes prevail and labor conditions are piteous, one likes to fancy that he might have become a twentieth century Galahad—a champion of the over-worked and the under-paid. That the cause of the oppressed did appeal to him, even when occasion was less imperative, is shown in the following lines:—

Grey sires and burdened brothers,
The old, the young, the fair;
Wan cheeks of pallid mothers,
And the girls with golden hair.
No sound of lute or tabor,
Where singing lips are dump,
And life is one long labor
Till death or freedom come.

Rice Lake is somewhat of a paradise for sportsmen. Maskinonge and black bass are plentiful, especially at the mouth of the river or at the lunge beds at Hatrick's Point. Indeed, almost anywhere on the lake the angler is apt to be rewarded by getting a fine fish, while at the same time he receives proper discilpine in patience, by having to reel in his trolling line perhaps twenty times in a morning in order to divest it of weeds. In autumn the wild duck feed at the rice-beds and the shooting is very good indeed.

The lake itself, long but narrow, is liable to sudden storms, and in a couple of hours white caps may replace the blueness of its surface. When the wind blows from the head of the lake, gathering momentum with each mile of its progress, well, then, expert boatmen make haste to the shore; amateurs, with the recklessness of the ignorant, remain out until the last moment of safety, but the Indians do not change their plans for a blow, and in their canoes can outride any storm.

Would you know of the drives of logs passing through these waters to Lake Ontario and of the precarious lives of the "river drivers"; of the rice-harvest, where squaws do the work (Indian men, alas, being not keen on gallantry), and of the habits of the birds and fishes—has not Mr. Bonnycastle Dale told us all of these, and more?

But should you wish to enter into communion with the spirit of Rice Lake? Then rise early before people are about (for she is a shy Naiad, abhorring flippant conversation and the reek of gasoline) and push your skiff out into the water, over which there broods a tender, pearly mist, and skim softly between the islands, which loom up dim and ghostlike, now for a space over clear water, and then, by a mighty stroke, propel your craft well within the ledge (and to one who loves the marshes this swish of rasping sound is as music to his ear.) A startled hen rises from her watery nest and with a whirr of wings escapes from the intruder, and here, shut off from the work-a-day world, enclosed by reeds as though one were an essential part of all this wildness, you will patiently wait for the spirit of the lake to reveal herself. And, if you are kin of hers she will surely come to you from her home among the sedge; and you will be surprised to find that she is no embodiment of gaiety or smiles, but a sad-eyed woman—

And thus, this Melpomene, makes her lament.

Try to keep a valiant front to be in tune with the joyous summer, but oh there is guilt on my head—and because I have a memory and a conscience I can never be free from grief. Long centuries ago savages dwelt on my borders, men who delighted in cruelty, and of my shores they made their battle-grounds—my green and smiling shores. And once, when the victors tired of torture and slaughter, they drove their captives into my waters—strong men and shrinking women and their children, whose shrieks still ring in my ears and those souls are embodied in these gulls flying overhead. The very skies recollect and scowl upon me, and my waters respond and lash themselves into fury, blind and mad with rage over the injustice of it all, and that they against their own volition should have been made the means of death. And I—how can I be happy and rejoice with the recurring summers, when there is cold in my heart, this load of guilt, this memory of Old, unhappy, far-off things,

And battles long ago!

"Lake Erie shudders and sorrows over her future—when her smooth green waters shall be pierced by rocks and tormented in that awful plunge—bur I—I grieve over my past."

And this is the true spirit of Rice Lake—sought out and found by those who love her.

And now the day is over, but its events and memories haunt one's sleep. A maze of blue flags and rushes and water-lilies, of a winding river, so covered with shadows of elms and overshadowing foliage that the boat seems sailing upon a liquid wood; of the rush of incoming water, as the lock-gates swing painfully apart, and then, back again to a church set upon a hill, and at its base the shining water;—

Where bask the shy and wary teal
Beside the lake's dim edge;
Where water-hens all noiseless steal
Among the waving sedge;
And bitterns in the inmost brake
Stand solitary—like a stake.

DRIVER WAS RECKLESS

And Was Fined $5.00—Young Man Used Knife—Policeman Arrested Gay Woman on Streets at a Late Hour

There was a large attendance of gaol birds at the police court this morning, but nothing of a startling nature occurred, during the proceedings, and all the cases were quickly disposed of.

James Hurd, a resident of Smith, has ten days in which to pay a fine of $5.00 imposed upon him by Magistrate Dumble, at the police court this morning, for recklessly driving about the streets on Saturday without any regard for the safety of others. He pleaded guilty and stated that he was drunk at the time.

FOUND ON THE STREETS.

Rosie Roach, a well-known character throughout the city, was remanded for a week. She was arrested by P.C. Newhall at a late hour and was unable to give a satisfactory account of herself.

USED A KNIFE.

For unlawfully wounding William Sullivan with a knife, Thomas Jenkins, who lives in Smith, was arraigned before the Magistrate. When asked to make his election, the accused decided to be tried before a jury and pleaded guilty. The complainant was called to the witness box, but Chief Roszel asked that no evidence be taken, as he was not ready to proceed with the case. The accused did not apparently understand the nature of an election, and he was advised to secure some one to take his case. The hearing will take place on Thursday morning.

Phil. Allen, jr., former vice-president of a National Bank at Mineral Point, Wis., was sentenced to ten years for embezzlement.

GOVERNMENT MAY REFORM THE PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE

Sir Wilfrid's Reply to Criticisms Indicates That an End Will be Put to the Abuses Prevailing in the House's Most Important Committee.

Ottawa, Nov. 30.—It seems probable from the Premier's attitude yesterday that the public accounts' committee, which ought to be the most important in connection with Parliament, but which has in recent years been degraded into a mere farce, will be reorganized. He indicated that it will have the consideration of the Government.

The degradation of this committee has been brought about chiefly by F. B. Carvell of Carleton, N.B., and F. F. Pardee of West Lambton, who have done much to turn it into a purely partisan committee by adopting an attitude of baulking anything and everything proposed by the members of it. This is purely a people's committee, which seeks to straighten out all matters connected with payments made from the people's money.

When Mr. Wharburton, the new chairman of the public accounts committee, in presenting the first report of that body, moved that the public accounts and Auditor-General's report for the last fiscal year be laid before the committee for consideration, Haughton Lennox said he proposed to discuss the question of the advisability of changing the procedure of business followed in the committee. For certain reasons, enquiries made by the committee were not as complete or satisfactory as they ought to be; that the one conspicuous excuse of failure was the determination of a number of the Government's supporters to prevent a full enquiry. Much more could be divulged than had been possible in the past, if only the proper facilities were afforded. He suggested that the public accounts for the two preceding years should be open to enquiry.

Hon. W. S. Fielding said that his impression of the proceedings of the committee differed entirely. The enquiries, he thought, were very thorough and took a wide range. It was quite the custom of the committee to take into consideration things which did not pertain at all unto the matter under enquiry. Members should remember that the readings and rules of committees were based on those of the mother Parliament, and they should not be departed from. It was undoubtedly true that there were times when it would be advisable for an enquiry to extend over a period of two years. It would be quite safe, however, to leave the decision in these cases to the committee itself.

F. D. Monk dissented. Proceedings in the public accounts committee of the Imperial Parliament were conducted in an entirely different manner. The committee consisted of 11, and, at most, only 15 members, and the chairman is always a member of the Opposition. It was entirely unheard of that one member of the committee would object to questions put by another member, and it was open for any member to ask a member any question.

F. B. Carvel challenged Mr. Lennox to point out one specific instance where be had asked a proper question and was refused the right to put it. All the papers asked for were brought before the committee, and there never had been a refusal to bring a witness to Ottawa. As a mater of fact, thousands of dollars had been squandered in bringing witnesses who were unable to give any information, and in many cases he was quite certain the Opposition members were fully aware of their inability to do so.

Mr. Blain of Peel said that the chief offender in the committee was Mr. Carvel himself. He described it as a partisan committee, and moved an amendment that the public accounts of two years, instead of one year, be open for discussion by the committee.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier indicated that the whole question was one upon which the Government would like to deliberate and suggested that Mr. Blain should withdraw his amendment.

Hon. Geo E. Foster suggested that the committee be reduced to 15 and the members of it more carefully chosen. Blain's amendment was then withdrawn.

CHANGES IN U. S. NAVY

Whole Service Will be Re-organized in Many Essential Points

Washington, Nov. 30.—Secretary Meyer will inaugurate on Wednesday some of the most sweeping changes in the United States navy department since the establishment of the bureau system in 1842.

Summarized the essential changes are:

The selection of four responsible advisors on subjects within the four groups into which duties of the department fall, to be known as the aide for material, the aide for personnel, the aide for operations of the fleet and the aide for inspections.

The grouping of the bureaus into two divisions of material and personnel, according to the nature of their duties.

The establishment of a division of operations of the fleet.

The establishment of a comprehensive inspection system.

The establishment of a modern and efficient coast-guarding system in the navy department at navy yards.

The separation of navy yards' work into two divisions and machinery.

The abolishment of the board of construction and the bureau of equipment.

Henceforth the officers who fight the the ships are to have more influence in the navy department.

DUG A GRAVE FOR LIVE MAN

Kinsale, Nov. 30.—The case of a living man having his grave dug occurred at Salem grounds this past week.

The word was sent down to Mr. Arbuckle from Mimico that a Mr. Crompton had died and to make arrangements for the funeral. Accordingly a grave was dug in Salem burial grounds and the undertaker engaged. Upon arrival at Mimico the man was found to be alive, a mistake had been made by the officials in charge.

WAS WEDDED BY FATHER'S COFFIN

Chicago, Nov. 30.—Standing by the coffin containing her father's body, Miss Juniata C. Howard was married yesterday to Irving Herrott, an attorney. Mr. Howard was a prominent horseman. Last week he was fatally injured by an automobile. His last wish was that his daughter should be married in his presence, but before the license could be obtained he became unconscious.

Conspired to Defraud.

Montreal, Nov. 30.—Shaer and Eliasoph, cloakmakers, who failed twelve months ago for over $30,000, with no assets, were found guilty yesterday of attempting to defraud their creditors.

Fell to Death From Church.

Ottawa, Nov. 30.—Victor Charland, aged 20, fell from the roof of the Sacred Heart Church here yesterday morning, breaking his neck and dying in a few seconds.

POLICEMEN CAPTURED A BANK ROBBER

St. Louis, Nov. 30.—Tom Gallagher, 13 years old, captured after a wagon load of policemen had surrounded the Lafayette Bank, Broadway and Park avenue, yesterday, confessed that he, with another boy, who was acting as lookout, fled when the patrol wagon appeared. Gallagher, who had ascended to the third floor of the building in the effort to get into the bank's quarters, was captured as he came down the fire escape.

"The other boy put me up to it," said the young prisoner. "We were going past the bank to-day and he pointed to a pile of money we could see through the window, and said it would be easy to get that. Then he planned how he and I were to get it.

"He made me go ahead of him, and said he would whistle if he saw anybody coming. But he never did. He just ducked."

Class Will Not Meet.

Dr. Malcolm McCullough will not be able to meet with this class at the Y. W.C.A. this evening.

THE SHIPPING OF COAL STOPS

North Sydney, N.S., Nov. 30.—Coal shipments up the St. Lawrence for the season have been completed, and the imports of coal from Philadelphia by the Dominion Iron & Steel Co. have also ceased. The Dominion Coal Co. is now in a position to supply all the fuel required by the big sister industry.

Since the beginning of the strike in July about 150,000 tons of American coal have been delivered at Sydney for the Steel Co.

NEW COURT OF APPEAL

British Columbia Tribunal Appointed at Last—The Men Who are Selected

Ottawa, Nov. 30.—The new Court of Appeal for British Columbia has been constituted by the appointment of Mr. J. A. Macdonald, ex-Liberal leader in British Columbia, as chief justice; Mr. W. A. Galliher, ex-M.P., and Judges Archer Martin and P. A. E. Irving, who are promoted from the Supreme Court of the province. The places of the last two on the Supreme Court Bench have been filled by the apointment of Messrs. F. B. Gregory of Victoria and Dennis Murphy of Ashcroft, a former member of the British Columbia Government, to the Supreme Court.

Judge Gregory is a son of the late Judge Gregory of New Brunswick.

Chief Justice Macdonald is an old Huron County boy who was educated at Stratford and Toronto. He practiced in Toronto as a member of the firm of Cook, Wallace & Macdonald, but removed to Rossland in 1896. He was elected to the Legislature in 1903, and was soon after chosen leader of the Liberals in the House.

TATOOED A HUMAN EYE

Philadelphia, Nov. 30.—An operation never performed before in this city, and performed only a few times in the world's history, was successfully completed in a clinic at the Medico-Chirurgical College of Pharmacy by Dr. L. Webster Fox, who occupies the chair of ophthalmology.

By the use of six needles, india ink and a vegetable dye the doctor succeeded in tattooing the perfect semblance of an eye on the blind eye ball of a young girl, which was covered with an ugly white blemish.

The operation, Dr. Fox told his class, can never become a common one, as it is seldom that the eyeball of a blind person is in condition to permit tattooing work.

FIVE LETTERS TO A TELEGRAPH CODE WORD

Ottawa, Nov. 30.—Some time since the three telegraph companies operating in Canada filed with the Railway Commission new tariffs under which they proposed to count every five letters contained in a telegraphic message as one word. The present tariffs allow ten letters to a word.

The application of this particular rule is chiefly in regard to code messages. The companies asked that the new tariffs should come into effect on Dec. 1, but the railway board will wait until the manufacturers' associations and other parties interested have been given a chance to be heard in protest.

The change will go into force in the United States Dec. 1.

STRUCK BY TRAIN; WOMAN WAS KILLED

Kingston, Nov. 30.—Miss N. S. Aylesworth, aged 59, of Ernestown, was fatally injured yesterday when about to start on a trip to Boston. At Ernestown station, in alighting from a buggy, she stepped backward on the track and was struck by a fast special. She was thrown against the platform and suffered internal injuries. Hurried to the General Hospital in Kingston, she died in a few hours.

NEW CONTROL FOR THE TRUST

New York, Nov. 30.—Acting for a group of individuals whose identity is not disclosed, Henry P. Davison of J. P. Morgan & Co. has acquired a majority interest in the stock of the Guaranty Trust Co. of this city, an institution with deposits of more than $90,000,000 through the purchase of the holdings of the Harriman estate and the Mutual Life Insurance Co.

CASHIER GONE; BANK CLOSES

Detroit, Nov. 30.—A Detroit Journal special says: The Bank of Vernon, at Vernon, Mich., was closed yesterday. Frank Sergeant, part owner, petitioned the Circuit Court to appoint C. H. McLaughlin receiver. The bank is capitalized at $20,000. N. Sergeant, cashier, and son of the petitioner, is said to have been absent from Vernon since last Thursday.

Slashes His Throat.

Uxbridge, Nov. 30.—Wm. Wallace, a gardener, aged 84, who lives at Sandy Hook, about a mile from here, early yesterday morning slashed his throat, four times. Dr. Shier had to put ten stitches in to close the wounds. The old man says he does not know what made him do the deed. He will likely recover.

Gompers Calls on Taft.

Washington, D.C., Nov. 30.—President Gompers and other A. F. of L. officials yesterday laid before President Taft the resolution of the legislation committee adopted at the recent Toronto convention.

James J. Hiss has offered to give Huron College, Huron, S.D., $50,000 for its endowment fund if the college will raise $200,000 additional within the next two years.

A Polish woman in Winnipeg, who is alleged to have drowned her newborn babe in the lavatory of the hotel where she has been employed, is charged with murder.

At Alma Lake, St. Johns, Que., three children, while crossing the Petite Decharge River, on their way to visit their hare snares, broke through the ice and were drowned.

At Franklin's Bay, Sparrow Lake, near Gravenhurst, on Saturday night about 7 o'clock, Mary Gill, aged 15 years, and her brother, Daniel Gill, aged 13, broke through the ice while skating and were drowned.

As an additional precaution for the safety of the public the Railway Commission proposes to make an order requiring all electric railways under its jurisdiction to instal air brakes as well as hand brakes on their cars.

During the summer Ernest Stanbridge, a servant of the Royal Military College, Kingston, saved three people from drowning. At the college yesterday he was presented with a Canadian Humane Association medal by Hon. William Harty.

SOLDIERS VS. FARMERS IN PEACE TIMES

London, Nov. 30.—Lord Dundonald, addressing the Veterans' Club, said the mind of the soldier should be largely directed to the advantages of colonial life. When the labor market was overstocked ex-soldiers might be given rations and instructions in agricultural farming near a garrison, and then drafted to the agricultural settlements in Canada, those most liable to join the colors being placed nearest the Atlantic seaboard.

TORPEDO BOATS FOR TORONTO FAIR

London, Nov. 30.—George Gooderham, M.P.P., and Dr. Orr hope to secure for the Toronto Exhibition next year a small flotilla of war vessels, consisting of torpedo destroyers and submarines, the object being to give exhibitions on the lake opposite the exhibition grounds. Messrs. Gooderham and Orr left yesterday for Sheffield, Birmingham and Glasgow. Dr. Orr sails on the Celtic Saturday.

One by Acclamation.

Quebec, Nov. 30.—Hon. L. E. Caron, Minister of Agriculture, was elected by acclamation in L'Islet County yesterday.

In Kamouraska, two candidates were put in nomination, Notary Dupuis, Ministerial, and Neree Morin, Independent Liberal.

Encouraged Oratory; Goes to Prison.

Spokane, Wash., Nov. 30.—John Pancher, a leader of the Industrial Workers of the World, convicted of conspiracy to disrupt the peace by encouraging street speaking by Socialists, was yesterday sentenced to six months in jail at hard labor.

Child Fatally Burned.

Brockville, Nov. 30.—News comes from Westport, a small village in Leeds County, of a fatality at the home of Sam McCann, whose infant daughter was practically burned to death by the upsetting of a lamp on a table at which she was left alone for a time.

GUTHRIES ARE SENT FOR TRIAL

Mrs. S. J. Guthrie and Daughter Clara Charged With Perjury and are Committed.

Barrie, Nov. 30.—Mrs. S. J. Guthrie and her daughter, Clara, were yesterday committed for trial before County Judge Wismer on charges of perjury. It is alleged they swore to what wasn't taken in giving evidence at a fire inquest.

The woman will appear for trial on Dec. 14. Wm. Goodwin is on the bail bonds.

Clara Guthrie, aged 17, was convicted on the evidence of Chas. Lowe, Roy Stone and Bert Scott, who testified that she and her mother had been to Allandale station, arranging to ship two trunks belonging to the mysterious "Miss Meeks." Roy Stone said Mrs. Guthrie had said she was Miss Meeks. Miss Guthrie, at the inquest, had sworn she was not at Allandale.

Mrs. Guthrie faced three charges of perjury in swearing that on her visit to Allandale she was accompanied only by "Miss Meeks"; that the trunks she was shipping contained only Miss Meeks' belongings; and that Miss Meeks was with her when she told the express agent to send the trunks to Allandale. She was convicted on the second of the three counts.

FIRST FOREIGN LECTURER IN THE DOMINION

Washington, Nov. 30.—Announcement was made yesterday by Secretary Mitchell Carroll of the Archaeological Institute of America that David G. Hogarth, M.A., curator of the Ashmelean Museum, University of Oxford, will be the first foreign lecturer under the Charles Eliot Norton Memorial Foundation, recently endowed by Jas. Loeb of New York.

Mr. Hogarth begins his lecture tour under the society's engagement at Halifax, N.S., to-night and will address a half dozen societies of the institute in Canada before coming to the United States.

CRIMINAL OFFENCE TO IMPORT LABOR

Washington, Nov. 30.—That the Government of the United States may through criminal proceedings punish persons who conspire to aid alien contract laborers to come into the United States, contrary to the immigration law, was held by the Supreme Court of the United States yesterday in the prosecution of Tilden B. Stevenson and Amede Bellaire of Boston.

TO ELIMINATE LOVESICK LOCK

Bishop and Buchanan Awarded the Contract for New Dam.

Burleigh, Nov. 29.—Bishop and Buchanan, of Owen Sound, and Peterborough, have been awarded the contract for the erection of a new dam at Burleigh Falls. It is stated that the water will be so raised as to almost eliminate Lovesick lock, and create only one level between Buckhorn and Burleigh Falls. This will improve navigation, and allow of a greater head for power development. The cost of the construction work is estimated at between $50,000 and $59,000.

ADVERTISE IN THE REVIEW.

SECRETARY FOR INDIA SPEAKS IN THE HOUSE OF LORDS

He Says That Greater the Majority for Rejection the Greater Will be the Scandal Involved—Vote To-day is a Foregone Conclusion.

London, Nov. 30.—Lord Morley's powerful speech was the event of the budget debate yesterday in the House of Lords. The Secretary of State for India dilated on the importance of the struggle and called attention to the fact that foreign nations were watching anxiously the outcome, to see whether there would be any change to England's fiscal policy.

Lord Morley quoted Burke to the effect that the House of Lords had no right in any sense to the disposition of the public purse, and contended that if there was one thing that could not wisely be submitted to a referendum, it was the budget, with all its complexities. In addition, a referendum would weaken what was most important to maintain, namely, a sense of responsibility in the House of Commons.

As to the Lords' contention that their action would arrest the wave of socialism, he refused to believe that the artisans were predatory or socialistic, but even granting that the misery existing among some classes had produced a movement akin to socialism, it was hardly wise of the Lords to take up a position exposing them to the charge of straining the constitution as champions of the rich against the poor.

"The more triumphant the majority for Lord Lansdowne's amendment," said Lord Morley, "the higher the disparity between the numbers of the opposition, the more flagrant will be the political scandal.

Finally, said Lord Morley, they are throwing out of gear the whole financial machinery for the year. Taxes had been collected on the authority of the House of Commons by custom and not by law, and all went on regularly until an appropriation bill was passed, when the resolution became a law.

Lord Morley concluded his speech with an impressive warning that when the curtain fell upon an empty House to-day they would know that the note had been sounded for an angry, and perhaps a prolonged battle. When the Secretary resumed his seat, the small minority of Liberal peers broke into enthusiastic cheers.

Evidence of this is beginning to show itself in the Conservative press. The Daily Telegraph, which has been a firm advocate of the rejection of the budget, makes the significant admission that the morale of the brilliant debate is not that the House of Lords should not abolish or be shorn of the powers of veto, which is essential to its existence, but that it should be reconstructed, so that its more distinguished members should not be swamped in the lobbies by the peers who have never given proof of political capacity.

Although the result of the division to-day is a foregone conclusion, it cannot be doubted that the House and the country have been greatly impressed with the oratorical skill displayed in the Upper House, and especially by the powerful arguments of the Liberal peers against the course the Lords are pursuing.

SAILORS MAY HAVE A UNION

New York, Nov. 30.—Coolie crews on Pacific mail steamships controlled by the Harriman system and on steamers running from Puget Sound to China, controlled by James J. Hill, will be denounced at the fourteenth annual convention of the International Seamen's Union of America, which opened in New York yesterday.

It is said plans will be discussed to weld the marine workers of the world into a gigantic union. J. Havelock Wilson, leader of the British seamen and member of the English Parliament, presided.

With the perfecting of the international union the seamen contemplate the formation of a series of demands which will be presented to the employers, including: Uniform wage scales for long and short voyages; the number of engine room, and boiler room employes carried on each ship to be regulated according to the coal tonnage of the ship; the selection of every crew to be under the supervision of a representative of the sailors' union.

WOMAN WAS SET ON FIRE

Tampa, Fla., Nov. 30—Marie Acosta, a young widow who was fatally burned in her home at West Tampa Sunday night, declared in an ante-mortem statement yesterday that a rejected suitor, Miguel Comes, had set her afire.

She said that he, with two confederates, forcibly entered her home on Sunday night, bound her hand and foot, and saturated her clothing with gasoline and touched a lighted match to her.

Perished From Exposure.

Sprucedale, Nov. 30.—The body of John Middleton, who disappeared suddenly on the evening of Nov. 15, was found in a field belonging to Charles Brown, three miles east of Sprucedale, by W. Thompson. It is believed that Middleton lost his way en route to Emsdale on foot, perishing in the severe cold on that night. The remains were brought to Sprucedale, and the funeral will be held this afternoon.

FOOD SUPPLIES

Quite a stir has been made in political and commercial circles here this week by a disclosure of the remarkable way in which Argentina is fast taking the place of the United States as the Englishman's bread basket and meat store. The correspondent of the Times at Buenos Aires has forwarded a serious of statistics and statements issued on the authority of the Department of Agriculture of Argentina showing that while the Englishman has gone on imaging the United States to be his great support in the matter of food supplies it is really the Argentine that now occupies that preeminent position. This is a striking confirmation of the forecast of Mr. J. J. Hill that the United States will soon cease to be the exporter of food stuffs but the Englishman is somewhat slow in the uptake and it is only now when the predictions are coming true that he begins to realize their significance and the important bearing they have upon the fiscal problem over which he is now puzzling his head. Argentina statistics show that the British bread eater now receives from Argentina no less than £15,600,000 out of his £58,000,000 worth of wheat that he imports from abroad. It is a case of the Argentine first and the rest almost nowhere. Even in maize, where the supremacy of the United States was thought to be unassailable Argentina sends for the use of British stock raisers and others considerably more than half of that total British importation, while when you come to meat—that is to say frozen beef and mutton—Argentine supplies now reach a value of no less than £8,600,000 out of the total British purchases from abroad of £18,500,000. Thus nearly 41 per cent. of these vitally important British foodstuffs is now supplied by this South American State; of wheat 64.2 per cent.; of maize 64.5 per cent; of frozen mutton 30.8 per cent.; and of refrigerated and frozen beef 60 per cent.—Montreal Star.
